Catalogue of the Pictures in the Dulwich College Gallery, with Biographical Notices of the Painters. By J. P. Richter and J. C. L. Sparkes. (Spottiswoode & Co.)—This is the compound work of two authors. Dr. Richter deals ex cathedra with pictures by the old masters, and Mr. Sparkes treats in a less imperious style the productions of modern painters. Of the modest and useful work of the latter it is only needful to say that it is sufficient for its purpose. The shortcomings of the former contributor are so considerable that the Governors of the College, who are "patrons" of the Catalogue, had better withdraw this edition, abolish the pedantic spelling, and revise the work generally. A revision, containing the greater part of the Catalogue, would be acceptable enough. Dr. Richter is apparently unacquainted with the state of artistic literature and the knowledge possessed in this country of the history of art, and he seems willing to revise nearly the whole of our spelling of artists' names for the benefit of the natives who, after all, have done honour to most of the old masters by, without any violence, naturalizing their names into the language. What will Englishmen gain by reading of "Antonius Van Dyck," of "Cuyp," of "Elshaimer," "Wynants," "Van Huijsum," "Pijnacker," "Ruydael," and so on, according to a custom of the Low Countries which was never adopted here, because the true sound of these names is fully conveyed by our ordinary mode of spelling them? Moreover, some of these very painters, Ruysdael and Van Huijsum to wit, did not always follow the spelling affected by Dr. Richter. The absurdity is heightened by the spelling of the names of cities according to English modes, when, for consistency's sake, Dr. Richter ought to write Wien, Roma, Firenze, Torino, Venezia, Mechelen, Dornick, and the like. No Englishmen, and but few Frenchmen, recognize "Gaspere" or "Le Guspere" Poussin. We do not understand the meaning of the following on Rembrandt—we beg Dr. Richter's pardon, "Rembrandt Harmensz van Rijn."—"He gave the greatest artistic perfection to chiaroscuro, in applying it chiefly for the modelling of the human forms, thus enhancing their pictorial effect, and at the same time imparting through it a refined expression to internal life" (p. 126). How can Carlo Maratti's "scheme of colour" be said (p. 95) to be "blooming, but without originality"? The phrase is meaningless. And what is the reader to understand by the description (p. 75) of Van der Heyde's "colouring" as "somewhat anxious"? Dr. Richter has done better service by adding to his text various notes on engravings, copies, and authorities, than by sending Londoners to school again and respelling proper

THE PRIVATE COLLECTIONS OF ENGLAND.

No. LX.—NORTH PRINCE, WARFIELD.

By Elsheimer is a landscape, of the greatest delicacy and most exquisite finish and beauty of draughtsmanship, representing an extensive view, with trees gathered on the bank of a calm river, the surface of which magically reflects the masses of the overhanging foliage, and a warm sky of pure blue, with golden clouds. A farmhouse, which looks as if it were Dutch, and is thus somewhat out of keeping with the classic feeling of the landscape proper, is on the further side of the river. The story of Tobit and the Angel is illustrated by small figures, introduced in Elsheimer's animated, yet sedate, manner of design in the near middle-distance. A slight excess of bluish coldness in the foliage is not less characteristic of the admirable master (whose paintings are rare in this country, and not common anywhere) than the fineness, solidity, serene repose, and breadth of the remainder of the picture.

An equally beautiful example of the same master, and, like it, a small oblong panel, placed "landscape way," enriches that bed-chamber at Nostel in which we found the above. The "subject" of the little figures is Hagar and Ishmael; the view comprises rich groups of trees in the middle distance, among which are a lofty, stately Lombardy poplar, many "plumy" elms and darker pines, the boughs of which, to use Spenser's term, do not "sail" in the steadfast air, for all the land is still, and the velvety foliage, the peculiar texture of which characterizes Elsheimer's art in all cases, has not a sign of movement. This foliage and other verdurous forms throughout the delightful work are ineffably beautiful in all respects and qualities. A ruined tower is on our right, two storks (favourite subjects with this painter) are on our left in the foreground. Another gem of the same class represents, on a cabinet canvas, placed "landscape way," 'St. John in the Desert,' by means of a little figure in a red robe kneeling before a consecrated nook on our left, between masses of dense foliage. We have here a pure and rather cold sky (no infrequent quality in Elsheimer's art), with a glimpse of a plain and hilly country, seen in a finely composed vista. This is a work of great beauty and, in art, peculiarly precious.

By J. Ruysdael is a small landscape of high merit and value, comprising many figures with carts near a river; above the last are two low cliffs, crowned with trees; rolling cumuli form arches over all. The coldness of these vapours mars the picture, and makes the landscape appear to be bleak, as if a chill October effect had attracted the painter. On the other hand, the airiness of the clouds and the sky of which they form parts is one of the chief charms of Ruysdael's work. This beautiful example is finished with amazing delicacy and care, and remains in perfect condition. The illumination lacks nothing. The execution has more than usual of that crisp touch which we more often recognise in Hobbema's productions than in those of Ruysdael. Another landscape by the same painter has an unusual charm and numerous fine qualities. It exhibits a wide, smooth stream, which is a perfect mirror, and flows under trees that grow by a road on our left; the water, as is not uncommon in the painter's works, suddenly slides in shallow furrows and in frothy turbulence, and tumbles in foam and glassy slopes out of sight in the front. Figures are on the road; a church and its spire are seen between the trees. This is an extremely fine and solidly painted specimen of its class, modelled with rare care, and remarkable for the purity of the sky, the masses of clouds in which have been very fortunately disposed in reference to the foliage. The characteristic "juiciness" and luminosity of the darker and middle tint portions are most enjoyable.

By 'Velvet' Breughel are two highly characteristic river views, painted on copper, and representing many figures in his fine, masterly, and delicate mode, comprising cattle, carts, boats, and mounted men. In one of the pictures is a very lovely atmosphere, over the vista of the blue river, but the distance is, as usual with the artist, cold, though clear. The sky is, on the whole, equal to that of a Wouvermans. By Wouvermans are two paintings. One of these represents his favourite subject, a halt of horsemen at a settler's tent, a ragged, aqualid, but picturesque affair, the gable end of which is judiciously employed as an important element of the composition. This instance looks very like a repetition of the famous example of which probably the best version is in the Dulwich Gallery. In the other Wouvermans appears a man mounted on a piebald horse, with other figures. These are both excellent specimens of one of the most prolific and laborious painters the world has known. By A. Cuyt are two pictures, one of which has that familiar subject of his, a grey horse, saddled, and standing in a stable; a goat is near the horse. It is very rich in colour, clear and deep in tone, and warm throughout. The second Cuyt shows a dappled, or nearly white, horse, with a dog near. The horses are vis-à-vis, so that the pictures were evidently intended to form "a pair." The latter horse has a yellow rug on his back, and is painted with uncommon smoothness and delicacy. Cuyt's peculiar olive tint enriches the very dark backgrounds of both paintings. Each subject is a stout, small-headed Flanders gelding, with much bone and more muscle, and in perfect condition. There exist several variations of these companion paintings. By Jacob Cuyt is a capital, but rather blackish, picture of horses and cows in a meadow. It has suffered in the distance.

By Verboom, the Dutch Claude, is a very fine and sunny landscape, with ruins on our right, a rich, glowing evening effect in the distant sky, which is delicately painted and extremely luminous. The figures comprise a man on horseback, a woman is in the foreground near him. This work is noteworthy for the golden lustre of the distance and its pure, clear, not hard illumination. The handling lacks nothing of precision and freedom. Another Verboom, not so good as the above, shows a farmhouse, with cattle and trees. It has features which remind us of a Ruysdael, with additional fineness of touch and less "juiciness."

By Rembrandt, or attributed on doubtful grounds to him, but at any rate a meritorious instance, is the bust of an old woman wearing a black veil, and seen nearly in front face; a jewel is in the head-dress. It has darkened greatly, and is remarkable for firmness of touch and brush power, proofs of considerable interest. Signed "Rembrandt f. 1641," is 'The Portrait of a Burgomaster,' the half-length likeness of a man in a Dutch hat, a wide white collar trimmed with lace, and a black dress; the left hand is placed on a table, the right hand is in front holding gloves. The face is in three-quarters view to our right, the light is from our left, the hair is moderately long; the countenance, an expressive one, is rather thin; there is a red spot on the cheek, the nose is hooked. It is a fine specimen of the second period of the master's work, very rich in golden tones. The face is relieved on a yellow background, comprising a window opening.

An anonymous portrait of a young lady in a white dress trimmed with black fur, embroidered with black in the Milanese manner with oak leaves and acorns, hangs not far from the last-named picture. The lady wears a white ruff and laced head-dress; her hair is brown. In the earring is a black thread, a sign of mourning (!). The whole is beautifully and most carefully drawn, and modelled in a sound but somewhat over-smooth mode of handling, and exhibits a delicate grey and pearly tone, which in some degree reminds us of Zuccheri. The general style of the picture, the costume, and certain details incline us to think that Cornelius Jonson had to do with this excellent picture. A work which bears the name of Jonson recalls to our minds not a few of the characteristics of German portraiture, and is placed next the last. It is a half-length portrait of a man in a large black hat and grey doublet, holding a pair of compasses in his right hand on a piece of paper. White bands are about his neck; his hair and beard are black, his flesh is reddish. The handling is highly finished, with very learned and competent treatment; the modelling is admirably sound; this is the distinctive mark of a well-trained and observant artist. The illumination is restricted, so that the shadows are exceptionally defined at their edges, and very dark. A Cornelius Jonson is a life-size, whole-length portrait of a youth in a rosy dress, not unlike a portrait of Cavendish the navigator (or said to represent him) which is at Chatsworth. The dress is laced with silver, the stockings are grey. He is bare-headed; one hand is uncovered; a sword is at the side of the figure, which cannot well be that of Cavendish, although it is seated at a window which opens on to the sea and shows shipping. The face is that of a lad of sixteen or seventeen, with a very sweet and ingenuous expression, and is beautifully painted, with uncommon soundness and finish.

In the manner of G. Dou, and probably by him, is a capital picture of a man seated at a table, leaning his head on one hand; a bird-cage hangs near. The light proceeds from a window direct on the figure. This picture bears the name of Rembrandt, and some of its qualities testify to the force and value of the influence of that master. The carnations have the clear, somewhat yellowish, golden tint which we find in such pictures as 'The Dropsical Lady' by Dou, which is in the Salon Carré of the Louvre; this tint occurs in several portraits by Rembrandt's clever pupil. On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that the touch of this likeness has but little of the juiciness and freedom of a Rembrandt, not much of the smooth crispness and delicate precision and even manipulation which distinguish the well-instructed but not very bold Dou.

In the Drawing-Room we noticed a half-length, life-size portrait of Queen Henrietta Maria in profile to our right, and wearing that warm pearl-white dress which was her favourite until the brilliancy of her complexion and the smoothness of her contours were faded and shrunken. Over the dress is a scarf of pale purple silk; a knot of pale blue ribbons is on the flat and partly covered bust of the queen. Her hair is trimly curled in "whiskerettes," as usual, a fashion the foolishness of which is always offensive to taste, and the abuse of which, as in this case, gives a marked artificial look to the portrait, and so deeply affects the expression of the features as even to add to those frigid lineaments a cold and furtive look, which is the less graceful and agreeable the more it is studied. She wears the well-known necklace of large pearls so often present in her portraits. This is an intensely interesting likeness; in it the upper features and the mouth are coarser than is ordinarily seen in Van Dyck's rendering of the face of that by no means generous employer of his, she who so cruelly "cut down" his bill for painting royal portraits. On the other hand, there is unusual force of expression and character in this not attractive visage. There is more vigour and less of that cold shallowness which is seldom or never absent in the likenesses of Henrietta Maria; the lewd look, which is deeply marked in her eyes, is noteworthy, and no novelty in such works; the nose is firmer, and has more than is common of the masculine form and expression; the eyes are very intelligent. This is a capital example of Van Dyck's best manner of treating the carnations. The complexion is pure, and very precious on account of its pearly tints; the modelling is soft; the impasto is solid; the handling is at once firm and free. There is another profile of her Majesty at Turin, which differs from this one. In the former the queen is holding flowers. Another Van Dyck at Nostel represents a child in a life-size figure. It is said to be a portrait of Henrietta, afterwards Duchess of Orleans, but this the dates will not allow to be the case with regard to the youngest daughter of Charles I. and a picture by Anthony Van Dyck. At any rate it is a fine and very attractive piece of painting, charming in its animated look, and its expression of energy and joyfulness. The carnations are pearly, and more rosy than is common with respect to the manner of this artist. The damsel wears a laced cap and collar, and a blue dress; a necklace is well painted. Another Van Dyck is a capital study of three leopards playing with two little boys, intended as a sketch for the leopards and attendant boys of Bacchus. Full of spirit as the whole is, the rolling boy in front is the most spontaneous element of this design. The modelling attests the careful attention of the painter to his subject.

By Van der Helst is the three-quarters length, life-size figure of a Dutch gentleman dressed in black, and wearing a stiff, down-pointing, flat ruff of white. A hat is on the head, the right hand is on the hip, gloves are in the left hand. He looks at us with a serious air, with wide and steadfast eyes; the face has Jewish features, a big nose, a curiously underhung jaw, and a small black moustache turned up at the ends. An escutcheon is at the corner of the panel. The flesh has lost much of the ruddy tint it might have possessed originally, and is now somewhat like ivory. By the same hand is a capital portrait of the wife of the gentleman, a companion picture to the last. She wears the common huge, millstone-like white ruff with lace at the edges; a white coif is set back, in the true Dutch mode, on her forehead, and leaves the ears exposed. The dress is black, embroidered with gold. In the bare right hand is a black feather fan; the other hand, which is gloved, holds a glove. The qualities of this work are equal to those of its fellow. In this gallery there is a good portrait of Lord Howard of Effingham, very similar to that which was exhibited, if we mistake not, lately at the Royal Academy.

By W. Van de Velde is a 'Storm at Sea,' which is not so well placed as we could wish. It shows a galliot running before the wind in the front of the picture; a three-masted vessel shows Dutch colours on our right, and there are other ships. Huge cumuli rest on the water, and their expression is so effective as to give profound solemnity to the view, and make apparent a grand motive, which is no very common achievement of this painter's. An opening in the clouds allows a flood of light to pour on the scene. Although rather hard and dry, this picture is distinguished by sentiment and dignity. By Van Harp is 'The Interior of a Cottage or Shed,' with an old woman vigorously at work "cleaning up." A boy enters at the doorway, bearing a cabbage; heaps of vegetables are on the floor; a girl is milking a cow in the background. This is a good example of the mode of the artist, rather smooth in handling, simple in its motive, skilfully painted, and lacking strength rather than anything else. By Berchem are two capital pictures. One of these shows a favourite subject of his, being a tower, part of a ruined fortress, on a rock on our left; a cottage is near it. The rock rises abruptly from a plain, through which a calm river is running. Peasants, cattle, and sheep loiter while they cross the stream at a ford in the foreground. In the distance a hilly landscape lies in the glowing light of a late afternoon effect, which is rendered with unusual felicity, not to say power, in dealing with the sentiment of the subject. The castle and the rock which it supports are majestic in the simple severity of their bulk and outlines. On the whole this picture offers a striking contrast to the Gaspar Poussin, its neighbour, to which we have already referred. The second Berchem is a 'Woman milking a Cow,' a small picture of very glowing effect, great richness of painting, and much clearness. Karel du Jardin produced 'A Landscape,' a large example, with a bridge of one lofty arch; in the middle distance is a tower; there is another tower in ruins. Under the arch of the bridge is a vista of great extent, showing a calm and shining river. A woman with cattle is in the front. We have a strong impression that this painter made a capital sketch of this design, but we cannot distinctly refer to the print.

With some pleasure we noticed a painting by

W. Mieris, representing a nymph seated on the knees of her lover and holding a wreath, while he, who wears a tiger's skin, points smilingly to an inscription on the bark of a tree; his pipe is near his side. Dr. Waagen gave the subject of this picture as 'Angelica and Medoro,' from Ariosto. The subject is not a common one in the hands of painters of this class. The execution is, of course, hard, the surface is smooth, and the manner apparent throughout is rather crude and laboured. The motive of the figures is artificial, not to say affected; the landscape recalls the texture of porcelain, but it is very tenderly graded in front and finished marvelously. This extraordinary finish occurs in the draperies of both the figures, which are jewel-like in the richness and luminosity of their tints. In respect to finish no portion surpasses the group of iris-flowers and docks, which, on our left in front, grow by the side of a little pool. Another Mieris represents a much commoner subject of his delicate, artificial, and wonderfully labouring pencil. It gives us a young man with a jug at a window, having sculptures on a tablet below the sill. A red terracotta pot of flowers is on our left in front, with an earthenware bottle placed for a bird's nest above the opening. Near the window appears Mieris's invariable, somewhat metallic vine foliage, together with his indispensable birdcage, which is at the side. The figure is rather below the average in quality for the painter; the flesh shadows are brown to excess; the modelling is hard. Netcher painted a young gentleman playing on a lute before a music sheet, and singing with great animation of expression. This is a good, characteristic, somewhat hard, smooth, and dark picture, which deserves considerable attention, and will reward the student who deals with it carefully.

Five-Fri Gossig.

A NEW name has been added to the Catalogue of Pictures in the National Gallery: it is that of Boucher, and refers to a small, not important, nor highly meritorious example of the artist's peculiar taste and manner.

THE private view of the Exhibition of the Photographic Society of Great Britain is appointed for to-day (Saturday), at the gallery of the Society of Painters in Water Colours. The gathering will be opened to the public on Monday next, and continue open until the 13th of November.

THE church of St. Pancras, Euston Road, which has undergone an extensive process of decoration at the hands of Messrs. Grace, will be opened for use to-morrow (Sunday).

M. RAJON is preparing an etching from the famous and beautiful portrait of 'Master Crews as Henry VIII.' by Reynolds, which belongs to Lord Crews, and is preserved at Crews Hall. This picture was mezzotinted by J. R. Smith in 1776, and exhibited at the Royal Academy in the same year.

MR. WILLIAM F. DE HAAS, the well-known marine painter, died a few weeks since on board a Dutch steamer bound from the Azores to Rotterdam. He was buried at sea. The best known works of the deceased are 'Sunrise on the Susquehanna,' 'Fishing Boats off Mount Desert,' 'Evening at Halifax,' 'Narragansett Pier,' and 'White Island Light.'

THE Semper Museum, lately opened in Zurich as a memorial to the great architect, owes its foundation to a committee of his scholars and admirers. Thanks to the generous contributions of officials, private collectors, and societies, the collection is already rich, and contains the greater part of the sketches, drawings, and plans of the works executed by him whilst living in Switzerland. Another memorial is being prepared, in the shape of a complete edition of his architectural and other artistic writings, which will be illustrated by 130 copper-plate engravings.

In addition to copies of his famous buildings in Dresden, Vienna, Zürich, and Winterthur, it will contain sketches of some of his less known works, and of some of his designs which were never executed. His son, Manfred Semper, is charged with the editorship.

MUSIC

Musical Gossip.

A NEW series of Promenade Concerts, conducted by Mr. Weist Hill and Herr Josef Gungl, will be commenced this evening at Covent Garden Theatre.

THE prospectus of the Crystal Palace Saturday Concerts, which has been issued during the past week, is even fuller of interesting promises of novelty than usual. Nineteen works are announced as for the "first time." Among the most important of these are Raff's latest symphony, 'Summer' (which is to be given at the first concert); a Suite for Orchestra by Bizet; Liszt's symphonic poem 'The Ideal'; Goetz's Pianoforte Concerto in a flat; a symphony by Bandini, which gained the prize offered at Turin last July; a symphonic poem, 'My Fatherland,' by Smetana; ballet airs from 'Le Due Gemelle,' by Ponchielli; an overture by Saint-Saëns, an early symphony by Schubert, and a serenade for strings by Mozart. The claims of English musicians will, as usual, receive full consideration. Mr. Sullivan's new cantata 'The Martyr of Antioch,' to be produced this month at Leeds, is in the programme, and Mr. Gade's dramatic cantata 'Columbus' is also promised. Besides this are announced overtures by Mr. T. Wingham and Mr. Walter Macfarren, and a Scottish Fantasia for orchestra by Mr. A. C. Mackenzie. The first concert takes place next Saturday, when, in addition to Raff's symphony, already mentioned, Wagner's 'Walkürenritt' will be given, and Madame Montigny-Réaumur will play Schumann's Concertatuck in G.

THE triennial musical festival at Wolverhampton was held last week, under the conductorship of Mr. W. O. Stockley. The chief works performed were Rossini's 'Stabat Mater,' Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang,' and 'Hear my prayer,' and Gade's 'Crusaders.' The principal soloists were Madame Albani, Miss Anna Williams, Madame Patey, Mr. Joseph Mass, and Signor Foli.

AN orchestral association has just been established in Wolverhampton, conducted by Mr. Henry Hayward.

MR. EDWIN HOLLAND has been appointed one of the professors of singing at the Royal Academy of Music.

M. JACOBI, the conductor at the Alhambra Theatre, is at present in Paris, superintending the rehearsals of the ballet in the new piece, 'L'Arbre de Noël,' which is to be shortly produced at the Théâtre Porte St. Martin. The piece is written by MM. Mortier, Leterrier, and Vanloo. M. Lecocq has supplied the vocal music, and the ballet music is composed by M. Jacobi.

ANTON RUBINSTEIN has completed a new symphony, which will shortly be published by Herr Bartholf Seuff, of Leipzig.

MISS AGNES ZIMMERMANN will revisit Germany at the end of December, to fulfil engagements she has accepted to play in concerts there, including the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, on January 20th.

A NEW comic opera in three acts, 'Don Pablo,' by Herr Theobald Rehbaum, was produced at Dresden on the 16th ult. The music is said to be pleasing, but wanting in dramatic power.

THE Marquis d'Ivry, composer of 'Les Amants de Verone,' is just completing another opera, entitled 'L'Armurier de Roi,' the libretto of which is from his own pen.

M. CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS, accompanied by the violinist M. Paul Viardot, is making a concert tour in Spain, where he is to conduct several of his works and play his pianoforte concertos.

AT the Opera at Rio de Janeiro the director lately produced Mozart's 'Don Giovanni.' The music, however, was too good for the Brazilian taste. At the first performance the work was coldly received; the director, however, ventured on a repetition, but, in spite of an excellent rendering, the opera was hissed.

MR. W. REEVE announces the following works:—'Robert Schumann's Music and Musicians,' edited by F. R. Ritter, second series; 'Reveries Musical Directory, 1881'; 'Life and Works of Henry Smart,' by Dr. Spark; 'Musical Acoustics' (the Student's Helmholtz), by J. Broadhouse; 'Reminiscences of Tompkins and Malibran, with Original Letters and Anecdotes,' by W. H. H.; 'Exercises in General Elementary Music,' by Miss Paige; and 'Life and Works of Handel,' by Whittingham.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLIS LENSES AND MANAGER, MR. HERVEY IRVING.
'THE COMICIAN BROTHERS,' Every Night at 8.30. LOUIS AND FANNY DES FRANCHES MR. IRVING AS THE BYRONES, by A. W. PERRY. Doors open at 7. SPECIAL MORNING PERFORMANCE of 'THE COMICIAN BROTHERS,' SATURDAYS, October 24, 1880, 2nd and 3rd, at 2.30.
Box Office (Mr. Irving) open 10 to 6 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

Hamlet, Prince of Denmark: Tragédie en Cinq Actes de William Shakespeare. Traduite en Prose et en Vers par Théodore Reinach. (Hachette & Co.)

AMPLE amends for the neglect with which Shakspeare was once treated in France are now made, and translations of the principal dramas tread upon each other's heels. Since Ducis burlesqued Shakspeare in a fashion not much less atrocious than that in which English translators from Ozell downwards burlesqued Molière, a dozen versions of 'Hamlet' have been published, among which two or three, by M. Paul Meurice, M. Alcide Cayrou, and M. François Victor Hugo, have solid merits. The translation of M. Reinach differs from most of its predecessors in being, like the original play, partly in prose and partly in verse. It is inferior to none in correctness, and it shows not only in the rendering of the text, but in the prefatory matter and in the choice of notes, taste and judgment together with a close and intimate knowledge of the subject. As the English text is printed on opposite pages to the French, it is easy to judge of the success that has attended M. Reinach's efforts. Where the language is most elevated and poetical the rendering is most satisfactory; it is chiefly in the conversational passages, which, in fact, defy translation, that shortcoming is perceptible. To read the translation of 'Hamlet' is a far less difficult task for a Frenchman than is to an Englishman of average education the perusal of the original. In the passages in which archaic words are employed and in those in which the meaning is doubtful the French version supplies a reading which, whether correct or incorrect, is at least simple and intelligent. To take a single instance: a song of the first gravedigger, divided into two stanzas, runs thus:—

In youth when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet,
To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
O, methought, there was nothing meet.

But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me into the land
As if I had never been such.

This for most readers is difficult enough.
M. Reinach, however, bids bravely for a meaning, and translates it:—

Aux jours joyeux de ma verte jeunesse,
J'étais heureux quand j'aimais, quand j'aimais,
Mais de jurer que j'aimerais sans cesse,
O serviteur! jamais! jamais!

A pas de loup est venu le vieil âge;
Sa griffe, hélas! m'a saisi, m'a piégé!
Il m'a jeté sur une triste plage
Comme un qui n'a jamais aimé.

The translation of these verses is free throughout; that of the last line is pure conjecture. Still, there is at least a meaning of some sort.

Among the passages in which the full significance or suggestion of the original cannot be preserved are those employed by Ophelia when dealing out to those around her the flowers she has gathered. "There's rosemary, that's for remembrance: pray, love, remember; and there is pansies, that's for thoughts," loses much of its grace and tenderness when it appears as "Voici du romarin: c'est la fleur du souvenir.
Souvenez-vous, je vous en prie, mon amour!
Et voici des pensées: c'est la fleur de la réflexion." Not less is lost by "Oh, you must wear your rue with a difference," when it appears as "Oh! vous porterez la vôtre avec une marque distinctive." The last phrase François Victor Hugo translates, "Elle doit avoir à votre main un autre sens qu'à la mienne," which is nearer, but not exact. In the earlier passage the translation of Hugo is weaker than that of
M. Reinach: "Voici du romarin: c'est comme souvenir: de grâce, amour, souvenez-vous; et voici des pensées, en guise des pensées." A phrase like

He smote the sudded Polack on the ice is not fully rendered in the

Il fit tomber un jour sur le marais glacé
Le Polonais du haut du traîneau qui l'emporta of M. Reinach, nor in the "Il écrase sur la glace les Polonais en traîneaux" of Hugo.

"A little more than kin and less than kind"
is in M. Reinach

Un peu plus que mon oncle, un peu moins que mon père;

in Hugo "Un peu plus que cousin, et un peu moins que fils." "Pièces pour attraper les bécasses," as M. Reinach has it, is more faithful as a rendering of "Springes to catch woodcocks" than "Pièces à attraper des grues" of his predecessor. In the passage of almost crucial difficulty, "When the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw," which Hugo translates, "Quand le vent est au sud je peux distinguer un faucou d'un héron," M. Reinach, so to speak, throws up the sponge, and says,
"Quand le vent est au sud je ne prends point des vessies pour des lanternes."

In the opening of the closet scene M.
Reinach loses the powerful effect produced by Hamlet when he slightly alters his mother's phrase:—

QUEEN. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

HAMLET. Mother, you have my father much offended.

These lines being very weakly rendered:—

LA REINE. Vous avez offensé votre père, Hamlet.

HAMLET. Ma mère, à votre époux vous avez fait offense.

Neither translator is able to deal with the passages between Hamlet and the gravedigger in which both play upon the word
"lie": "I think it be thine, indeed, for thou liest in it," &c. It is, of course, impossible to preserve in French the verbal quibble on which so much depends.

In the preface to the present volume M.
Reinach defends against the objections of recent critics the well-known view of Goethe, that Hamlet is like an oak planted in a precious vase. In this part of his work he shows both ingenuity and erudition. His translation is creditable as workmanship, and is, on the whole, one of the most accurate, fluent, and agreeable renderings of 'Hamlet' that have been given to the world.

THE WEEK.

VAUDEVILLE (Reopening).—The Guv'nor, a Farcical
Comedy in Three Acts; and Auld Lang Syne, a Drama in One Act, by Joseph J. Dilly.

PRINCE OF WALES'S (Reopening).—Forget-Me-Not; and
'In Honour Bound,' a Comedy in One Act, by Sydney Grundy.

POLLY (Matheson).—Revival of 'Dot,' a Version in Three Acts, by Dion Boucicault, of 'The Cricket on the Hearth.'

Two more theatres have now reopened, and the winter season may be held to be fairly established. So short is the period during which the Vaudeville has been closed, memories of 'The Guv'nor' and of the admirably comic performances of Mr. James, Mr. Thorne, Miss Larkin, Miss Bishop, and other members of the company, are still fresh.
One or two comparatively unimportant changes have been made in the cast. Mr.
Grahame plays the part of the younger Macolesfield, originally assigned Mr. Har-bert, and is inferior to his predecessor in being unable to give the performance on the pianoforte, which, by leading to the erroneous supposition that he is a music master, contributes to the development of the plot. Mr.
Lestocq replaces Mr. Bradbury as the groom Gregory. Mr. Dilly's domestic drama of 'Auld Lang Syne' is not too happily named.
It is a slight but fairly sympathetic piece, showing the growth of coldness from a series of misconceptions between husband and wife, to which a happy if rather commonplace incident brings a termination at the moment when separation is imminent.
Miss Bishop played the wife with much tenderness and feminine charm; Mr.
Grahame was acceptable as the husband;
Mr. Maclean gave a careful and accurate picture of a physician; and Mr. Lestocq presented as a certain Richard Butts a clever sketch of character.

Upon the revival of 'Forget-Me-Not' at the Prince of Wales's, Miss Geneviève Ward's performance of Stéphanie proves to have lost none of its hold on the public. It remains a striking and very powerful display of acting. Mr. Forbes Robertson, who resumes the character of Sir Horace Welby, which he created, presents it with fidelity to nature and with distinction; and Mr. Beerbohm Tree, who takes the rôle of Prince Malleotti, allows a vein of genuine comedy to show itself in a performance which is in some respects amateurish. Mrs. Leigh Murnay, Miss Kate Pattison, and Mr.
Flockton resume their original rôles. 'In Honour Bound,' a comedietta by Mr.
Grundy, which was played for the first time, has been suggested by 'Une Chaine,' a famous comedy of Scribe. It is a freshly written and dramatic work, which develops towards the close a strong, natural, and healthy interest. Mrs. Bernard Beere, who is rapidly becoming an admirable actress, plays finely as the heroine; Miss Kate Pattison is natural and unaffected in style; and Mr. Edgar Bruce assigns a very distinct physiognomy to a certain Sir George Carlyon, Q.C., M.P. This ingenious trifle met with a deservedly warm reception.

Complete success attended the revival at the Folly Theatre of 'Dot,' Mr. Boucicault's version of 'The Cricket on the Hearth.'
Some pains had been bestowed upon mounting this piece, and the decorations and spectacular effects, if not always very happy, were at least elaborate and ambitious. The interest of piece and performance centres in the representation by Mr. Toole of the character of the old toymaker, Caleb Plummer. This familiar impersonation is now greatly improved, and the presentation of tremulous old age may claim to be superior to anything in its class that has been recently seen. In the get-up and in the acting Mr.
Toole shows an artistic care and a delicacy of finish which assign the whole distinct value, and the effect of the bowed, worn figure, the pale, meagre face, and the thin, quavering voice is remarkably good. That the performance is in too low a key may be maintained, the result being that a sense of monotony is produced, which the cheeriness of John Peerybingle, well played by Mr.
Billington, and the excellent performance of Tilly Slowboy by Miss E. Johnstone, are unable to combat. With a little acceleration of time the whole will probably go.
The feminine parts are fairly sustained.
Miss Liston, who plays Bertha, the blind girl, should learn that a fixed stare is not an indispensable, or even a frequent, attribute of blindness.

Dramatic Society.

A FOUR-ACT play, entitled 'Trust and Trial,' is to be brought out by Mr. F. W. Macklin on Saturday next, at a Matinée at the Gaiety.
In this Mr. Calmour, the author, will appear, together with Mr. Macklin, Miss Blanche Heari, and other artists.

A COMEDY by Mr. Frederick Hay, in which Messrs. Vernon, Anson, D. Fisher, and Dacre, and Miss Carlotta Addison will appear, is to be produced at the Olympic, which house will open on the 16th instant under the management of Mr. Baker.

The recommencement with 'Britannicus' and 'Tartuffe' of the classical performances at the Odéon shows the recent acquisitions of the theatre. Madame Devoyod, formerly of the Comédie Française, Madame Rancourt, M.
Chelles, and M. Albert Lambert, who played satisfactorily the rôle of Nero, are among the most noteworthy of them.

THE Ambigu Comique has reopened with 'Les Mouchards,' in which M. Dally reappears.
Two débutants, M. Montbazou and Mlle. Jeanne
Théry, failed to win a favourable verdict.

'LE VOYAGE EN AMÉRIQUE,' a four-act revendeville of MM. Bouchoron and Raymond, has been produced at the Théâtre des Nouveautés in Paris.
A parody of the 'Marseillaise' in the third act, which M. Brasseur was indiscreet enough to permit, provoked a storm, and almost caused the shipwreck of the piece.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—F. de L.—W. A. P.—E. B.—G. O.
(Madras).—A. J. B.—P. F. G.—S. N.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

GRIFFITH & FARRAN'S NEW AND IMMEDIATELY FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

TO BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

A LIFE'S ATONEMENT: a New Novel. By D. Christie MURRAY. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

The GUESTS of FLOWERS: a Botanical Sketch. By Mrs. MEETKERKE. With Prefatory Letter by Dr. THEODORE KÖRNER. Cloth, small 4to. 2s. 6d.

The CRUISE of ULYSSES and HIS MEN; or, Tales and Adventures from the 'Odyssey' for Boys and Girls. By C. M. BELL. With 7 Illustrations by P. Priolo. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

BELLE'S PINK BOOTS. By Joanna H. Matthews, Author of the 'Bessie Books.' With 16 Coloured Illustrations by Ida Waugh. Cloth elegant, 9s.

The LETTER H, PAST, PRESENT, and FUTURE. Rules for the Silent H, based on Contemporary Usage, and an Appeal in behalf of WH. By ALFRED LEACH. In cloth limp, fcap. 8vo. 1s.

MUDGE and HER CHICKS: a Story of Children's Home Doings. By a BROTHER and SISTER. Cloth elegant, with 15 Illustrations, 3s. 6d.

HILDA and HER DOLL. By E. C. Phillips, Author of 'Bunchy,' 'The Orphans,' &c. With 14 Illustrations, cloth elegant, 2s. 6d.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF

The BIRD and INSECTS' POST-OFFICE. By Robert Bloom-FIELD, Author of 'Rural Tales,' &c. Illustrated with 35 Wood Engravings. Crown 4to. paper boards, with Chrome Side, 3s. 6d.

The SIX SHILLING EDITION may also be had.

NEW BOOKS JUST OUT.

The OTHER SIDE: How It Struck Us. Being Sketches of a Winter Visit to the United States and Canada. By C. B. BERRY. Demy 8vo. cloth, 9s.

HEROES of HISTORY and LEGEND. Translated by John LANCELOT SHADWELL, from the German 'Charakterbilder aus Geschichte und Sage,' by A. W. GRUBE. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

DESIGNS for CHURCH EMBROIDERY and CREWEL WORK, from Old Examples: a Set of 18 Plates, containing upwards of 60 Patterns, with Descriptive Letter-press. Collected and Arranged by Miss E. S. HARTSHORNE. In handsome cloth case, 5s.

A DARING VOYAGE ACROSS the ATLANTIC, by Two Americans, the Brothers ANDREWS, in a small Boat, "The Nautilus." The Log of the Voyage by Captain WILLIAM A. ANDREWS. With Introduction and Notes by Dr. MACAULAY, Editor of the Boys Own Paper. Crown 8vo. with Illustrations, cloth, 2s. 6d.

TWO ROSE TREES: the Adventures of Twin Sisters. By Mrs. MINNIE DOUGLAS. With 16 Illustrations, cloth elegant, 2s. 6d.

The HOUSE on the BRIDGE, and other Tales. By C. E. Bowen, Author of 'Among the Brigands,' &c. Crown 8vo. with 13 Illustrations by A. H. Collins, cloth, 2s. 6d.

NIMPO'S TROUBLES. By Olive Thorne Miller, Author of 'Little Folks in Feather and Fur.' Illustrated by Mary Hallock and Sol. Eytinge. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

J. R. BLAKISTON'S
GEOGRAPHICAL READING BOOKS.

In order to satisfy the requirements of the Education Department as to the amount of matter and the topics required in books used for teaching Geography next year, Supplementary Chapters are now in the press adapting 'Glimpses of the Globe' for the use of Standard II., and 'Glimpses of England' for that of Standard III.

The enlarged Editions will be issued in a few days so as to meet the wants of Schools to be inspected in October, 1881, and will very shortly be followed by 'Glimpses of the British Empire,' for the use of the Upper Standards.

The first Two Books cover the whole of the knowledge required to secure a Class Grant for Geography in Standards II and III, and each one contains materials for Eighty Lessons, or a School year's work in Reading.

GLIMPSES of the GLOBE. A First Geographical Reading Book. By J. R. BLAKISTON, M.A., Author of 'The Teacher,' &c. Cloth, 1s.

GLIMPSES of ENGLAND. A Geo- graphical Reading Book. By J. R. BLAKISTON, M.A., Author of 'The Teacher,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. price 1s.

A few Copies of the Supplementary Chapters may be bought separately for the use of Schools already using these books.

By the same Author, to appear shortly,

GLIMPSES of the BRITISH EMPIRE.

A First Geographical Reading Book for the Upper Standards. Will be issued in time for Schools teaching Geography as a Class subject in the School year ending 30th September, 1881.

For the use of Schools, in which it is desired to give Three Courses of Geography to the Upper Standards, the following will be issued in due season:

GLIMPSES of the OLD WORLD (EUROPE, AFRICA, and WESTERN ASIA). By the same Author.

GLIMPSES of the NEW WORLD (EASTERN ASIA and the AMERICAS). By the same Author.

The division of matter has been carefully considered and approved. All five books will be modelled so as to meet the requirements of the Education Department.

SPECIAL SUBJECT READING
BOOKS.

HISTORY AS A CLASS SUBJECT.

Messrs GRIFFITH & FARRAN have the pleasure to announce that they will issue in a few days the first of a new series of HISTORY READERS.

Especially adapted to the requirements of the Education Department, as expressed in the Circular to H.M.I. No. 181. They will be written by Mr. H. MAJOR, who is well known as the author of many popular series of School-Books, and will place the utmost confidence in their suitability to the purpose.

HISTORY READER. Part I.

By H. MAJOR.

BRITISH HISTORY, FROM B.C. 55 TO A.D. 1066.

With Descriptions of Manners and Customs, Biographies, and Pictures of former states of life as contrasted with the present. Arranged in 40 sections, each containing sufficient matter for a Reading Lesson of due length. For Standard II. in Elementary Schools and Juniors in Public and Private Schools. Uniform with Mr. BLAKISTON'S 'Glimpses of the Globe.' Cloth, price 1s.

GRIFFITH & FARRAN,
WEST CORNER OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW LIST.

Now ready, by the Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,'
'John Holdsworth, Chief Mate,' &c.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 51s. 6d.

A NEW WORK FOR ART STUDENTS.

A TREATISE ON ETCHING.

Texts and Plates by MAXIME LALANNE.

Translated by S. R. KOEHLER. With Notes.

Royal 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. 6d.

PRACTICAL BLOWPIPE ASSAYING.

By GEORGE ATTWOOD, F.G.S. Assoc. Inst. C.E.
F.C.S. Mem. Am. Inst. M.E., &c.

With 74 Woodcut Illustrations.

1 vol. post 8vo. 12s. 6d.

[Now ready.]

NEW NOVEL, NOW READY,

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GINK'S BABY,'

L I S A L E N A

By EDWARD JENKINS.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

FORTY YEARS' RECOLLECTIONS:

Literary and Political By THOMAS FROST, Author of 'The Secret Societies of the European Revolution,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, price 10s. 6d.

JACK and JILL: a Village Story.

By LOUISA M. ALCOCK, Author of 'Little Men,' 'Little Women,' &c. Small post 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, 4s.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, price 10s. 6d.

EVERY-DAY ENGLISH. By Richard

GRANT WHITE. It treats of Speech, Writing, Grammar, Words, and Phrases, pointing out the errors which abound in our common use of English; and, by its happy combination of learning and humour, makes a book which all intelligent persons can read with equal profit and enjoyment.

Now ready, small post 8vo. cloth extra, price 5s. 6d.

MOUNTAIN and PRAIRIE: a Journey from Victoria to Winnipeg, via Peace River Pass. By the Rev DANIEL M. GORDON, B.D., Ottawa. With Maps and Illustrations.

The HEIR of KILFINNAN: a Tale of the Shore and Ocean. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON. An entirely New Story. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, with Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

DICK CHEVELEY: his Adventures

and Misadventures. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON. An entirely New Story. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, with Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

The TRIBULATIONS of a CHINA-

MAN. New Work. By JULES VERNE. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, illustrated, 7s. 6d.

BEATRICE MELTON'S DISCI-

PLINE. By MAUD JEANNE FRANC, Author of 'Marian,' 'Marian's Mission,' &c. Small 8vo. cloth gilt, price 4s.

Now ready, demy 8vo. cloth extra, price 14s.

The AUSTRALIAN ABROAD.

It traces the Main Route round the World. Ceylon, India, and Egypt. By JAMES HINGSTON. With many fine Illustrations. Uniform with the First Series.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON,
Crown Buildings, 188, Fleet-street, E.C.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yeiçept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."
Quarterly Review.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d. of all
Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary
Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES
ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,

Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,

Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,

More especially of English Authors, with
Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous
Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK- LORE,

Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,

Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes
on our old Poets.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY,

Including Histories of Old Families, completion
of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES,

On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPO-GRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MIS-CELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS,
PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN FRANCIS, 20, Wellington-street,
Strand, W.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and News-vendors.

HODDER & STOUGHTON'S LIST.

Now ready, for OCTOBER, price 6s.

THE

BRITISH QUARTERLY REVIEW.

No. CXLIV.

Contents.

1. TENNYSON'S POEMS.
2. The LORD'S SUPPER HISTORICALLY CONSIDERED.
3. The ART of SINGING, PAST and PRESENT.
4. A DUTCHMAN on SOUTH AFRICA.
5. LATHAM on EXAMINATIONS.
6. SIR JAMES OUTRAM.
7. EXPLORATION and MISSION WORK in AFRICA.
8. The PRACTICE of an ARCHITECT.
9. CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE.

NEW BOOKS, NOW READY.

I.

This day, crown 8vo. 2s. with Two Portraits.

THE BROTHERS WIFFEN:

Memoirs and Miscellanies.

Edited by SAMUEL BOWLES PATTISON.

"The reader will find the two Wiffens to have been men whose deep and yet wide views and graceful thoughts, in advance of their generation, are worthy of permanent record for the future use and pleasure of society."—Preface.

II.

Now ready, in crown 8vo. price 6s.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

A Metrical Translation, with Introduction and Notes.

By HENRY JAMES CLARKE, A.R.C.,

Vicar of Great Barr, late Theological Lecturer at King's College, London.

III.

This day, crown 8vo. price 5s.

THE ATONEMENT,

And other Discourses:

Being a Second Series of "Plain Pulpit Talk."

By THOMAS COOPER,

Author of 'The Purgatory of Suicides,' 'The Bridge of History over the Gulf of Time,' &c.

IV.

Second Edition, Enlarged, price 3s. 6d.

THE VOICE AND PUBLIC SPEAKING.

A Book for all who Read and Speak in Public.

By J. F. SANDLANDS, M.A., Vicar of Brighthelm.

Mr. GLADSTONE, writing to the Author, says:—"I thank you for your kindness, and I receive your work with great interest and satisfaction. An effective cultivation of the great office of preaching is perhaps the most crying want of the Church of England. I am truly glad that you are calling public attention to these matters."

V.

NEW AND CHEAP EDITIONS OF THE CHRISTIAN EVIDENCE LECTURES.

Delivered at the request of the Christian Evidence Society

MODERN SCEPTICISM. 552 pp. cloth, 2s. 6d.; paper covers, 2s.

FAITH and FREE THOUGHT. 488 pp. cloth, 2s.; paper covers, 1s. 6d.

CREDENTIALS of CHRISTIANITY. 302 pp. cloth, 1s. 6d.; paper covers, 1s.

POPULAR OBJECTIONS to REVEALED TRUTH. 206 pp. cloth, 1s. 6d.; paper covers, 1s. 3d.

STRIVINGS for the FAITH. 302 pp. cloth, 1s. 6d.; paper covers, 1s.

A List of the Lectures in each Volume may be had on application. The Lecturers include the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of Gloucester and Bristol, Carlisle, and Worcester, the Deans of Canterbury and Ely, Canons Barr, Birks, Cook, and Mozley, Sir Bartle Frere, Prof. Rawlinson, Dr. Gladstone, Dr. Allen, Dr. Lindsay Alexander, and many others.

London:

HODDER & STOUGHTON, 37, Paternoster-row.

THE VICTORIA UNIVERSITY.
THE OWENS COLLEGE CALENDAR for the Session 1880-81. Price 2s.; by post, 2s. 6d.
 Manchester: J. R. Cornish. London: Macmillan & Co.

Tenth Edition, post free, 1s.
DR. WATTS ON ASTHMA: a Treatise on the only Successful Method of Curing this Disease. By ROBERT G.
 WATTS, M.D. F.R.S., F.R.C., &c. 1, Balgownie-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.
 London: J. Mitchell & Co. Red Lion-square, Fleet-street.

Second Edition, One Shilling, or thirteen stamps by post.
SKIN DISEASES TREATED HOMŒOPATHI-CALLY By WASHINGTON WATTS, L.R.C.P. One Hundred Cases, including forty distinct varieties of Skin Diseases.
 London: James Nispe & Co. 42, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Fleet-street.

E V E R Y D A Y.
 "It tantalizes us."—Full Mail Gazette.
 "In it, throughout, a touch of culture, and a catholic taste for what is good."—Pan.
 "Present, and by no means dull."—Quart. Journal.
 Cloth, 2s.; boards, 1s. 6d.
 Remington, 7, Arundel-street, Strand.
 Just published.

ETERNITY: What Does the Bible Say of It? A Concordance of Texts on the Subject. The object of the book is simply to bring into a small compass all the information needed for a careful personal study of this great question. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
 "No Bible student's library should lack this valuable manual."
 "A new and valuable contribution to Biblical literature."—Bookman.
 8, Daguerre & Sons, 15, Paternoster-row, London.

MRS. FORRESTER'S NEW NOVEL.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

ROY AND VIOLA. By Mrs. Forrester,

Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' 'Rhona,' &c.

"'Roy and Viola' is an admirable tale; told by one who can vividly describe and incisively comment on the manners and personnel of modern society. The dialogue is easy and natural, and the writing fresh."—The World.

HURST & BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NOTICE.

NOW READY,

VOL. I. SIXTH SERIES,

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Copious Index, price 10s. 6d.

JOHN FRANCIS, 20, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

THE NEW SEASON.—NOTICE.

The attention of all Readers of the best Literature is respectfully requested to the List, revised for the New Season, of the Books recently added to Mudie's Select Library.

The prosperity of the Library is in great measure due to the cooperation of those Subscribers who chiefly require Books of sterling interest and merit. In the selection of Books great care is taken to study their wishes, and to make the Library not only 'Select,' but comprehensive.

The best Works in History, Biography, Religion, Philosophy, Travel and Adventure, and the Higher Class of Fiction, continue to be taken in large numbers on the day of publication, and fresh Copies are added as the demand increases.

Arrangements have again been made with the Leading Publishers for an ample supply of the principal Works already announced for the New Season, and of all other Forthcoming Books of general interest as they appear.

* * The GREAT HALL of the Library, which has been closed for a few days for repairs and decoration, is now open for Subscribers, with improved arrangements and additional facilities for the Exchange of Books.

NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, October 2nd, 1880.

THE HAMNET SHAKSPEARE. Edited by ALLAN PARK PATON Vol. I. price 12s.; and Part II. COR-OLANUS, price 2s. 6d. now ready.
 London: Longmans & Co.

Now ready, 4s. 6d. 46s.
APPENDIXES TO YOUNG'S ANALYTICAL CONCORDANCE. Containing Hebrew and Greek Lexicons.
 Views, Maps, Proverbs, &c. Price to Subscribers, 12s. 10d. half-maroon, 12s. 6d. cloth, 12s. 6d. sewed, post free.
 P.O. payable to G. A. Young & Co. 18, Nicolson-street, Edinburgh.

MR. SPENCER'S DESCRIPTIVE SOCIOLOGY.
 Now ready, folio, boards. No. VII. price 21s.
HEBREWS AND PHŒNICIANS. Classified and Arranged by HERBERT SPENCER. Compiled and Abstracted
 by Dr. R. SCHEFFIG.
 Williams & Norgate, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; and 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh.

Among the brand, post free, 6s.
ARTISTIC CONSERVATORIES.—About FORTY
 PHOTO-LITHOGRAPHS and LETTER-PRESS, from Designs by
 R. W. GODWIN, F.S.A., and MAURICE E. ADAMS, on Manuscript &
 Co.'s Patent System of Construction.
 R. T. Batford, 22, High Holborn.

CHAS. LALANDE'S MINERAL SYSTEM OF THE ANTIQUITY LYRICAL.
 Two Shillings nett.
HORACE'S 33rd Ode, 1st Book, Ad CHLOEN:
 Latin text, for Hartmann and Tupper, in F and G.—CATULLUS'S 3rd Ode LUCTUS in MORTE PASPHERIS Latin text, for Tupper and Gopman.—"Quite worthy of the composer of 'I arise from dreams of thee'."—Review. "The idea is a happy one, and the execution satisfactory."—Standard. London: Novell, Swan & Co.

TINSLEY BROTHERS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

TINSLEYS' MAGAZINE,

For OCTOBER, price 1s.

UNION ST. PAUL'S. By Richard Dowling. Author of 'The Mystery of Kilnart,' 'The World's Secret,' &c. Part III. Chapters 10-15.
THE CRACK SHOT. Adapted from the Russian of Pouchkin. By John Augustus O'Shea.
THE EVICTION OF RALLYHEAD. A Sketch.
LOVE MURMURS. By Richard Dowling.
WAIT and WIN. By Anselm Gray. (Conclusion.)
TOYS. By Georgeville Gibney.
A CHAT ABOUT MUSIC HALLS and HARMONY ROOMS: Music
 Halls of the Past. By Hal Leather.
AFTER MANY DAYS. By Byron Webber.
PRINCE'S PORTRAIT. Students. By Helen Group.
A SUMMER'S IDYL. By Rita. Author of 'Vivienne,' 'Like Dina's Kim,' 'Countess Daphne,' &c.
LOVE. By Anna K. Phillips.

Ready this day, in 3 vols. crown 8vo.

STUBBLE FARM; or, Three Generations of English Farmstead. By the Author of 'Ernest Straggles; or, the Comic Incidents and Anecdotes of a Farmstead in Connection with the Life of a Station-Master.'

RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS of an
 OLD ACTOR. By F. BELTON. 1 vol. 8vo.
 "One of the most amusing books we ever came across."—Figure.
 "A more amusing book has not appeared for a long time."—Globe.

LONDON TOWN: Sketches of London Life and Character. By MARCUS FALL. Illustrated by Harry Furness. Now ready, in 3 vols. crown 8vo.
 "A few of his less stereotyped characters, such as, for example, 'the man of many engagements,' 'the man that wants an idea,' occasionally remind us of Thackeray. There is nothing to mislead, and something to gratify, the idle reader."—Review.

In KENT with CHARLES DICKENS.
 By THOMAS PROCTER. Author of 'The Life of Lord Lytton,' 'Secret Societies,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo.
 "We are grateful to Mr. Proct for his 'In Kent with Charles Dickens.'"—Graphic.

FROM the WINGS. By B. H. Burton,
 Author of 'Jungle of the Frontier,' 'Hill-On and Off the Stage,' &c.
 3 vols.

A PEAL of MERRY BELLS. By
 LEOPOLD LEWIS. Author of the Drama of 'The Bells.' 3 vols.
 "There is a ring of solid metal in 'A Peal of Merry Bells.'... Abounding in action and incident."—Daily Telegraph.
 "Remarkable for humor and vivacity."—Quart. Journal.

The SPORT of FATE. By Richard
 DOWLING. Author of 'The World's Secret,' 'The Mystery of Kilnart' &c. 3 vols.
 "The three volumes contain a more than ordinary amount of interesting reading—some of it is Mr. Dowling's happiest work."—Daily News.

SOCIETY'S VERDICT. By Annie
 THOMAS (Mrs. Fender Cullip). Author of 'Doyle Dumas,' &c. 3 vols.

ARNOLD LEIGH: a Tale of Ireland
 of To-day. By Mrs. DUDLEY-LODGE. Author of 'Fatal
 1 vol. crown 8vo.

WHAT WILL SOCIETY SAY? A
 Story of Society and the Stage. By H. C. COFFEY. Author of 'The Ringwood of Ringwood,' &c. 3 vols.

The SILENT SHADOW. By Jessie
 HALL LLOYD. Author of 'The Hush-hush Mystery,' &c. 3 vols.

INNOCENCE at PLAY. By Jean
 MIDDLEMARE. Author of 'Dressed by a King,' 'Wild Georgia,' &c.
 3 vols.

WINGED WORDS. By Henry Spicer,
 Author of 'Judicial Drama,' &c. 2 vols.

LARRY LOHENGRIN. By William
 WESTALL. Author of 'Tales and Traditions of Saxony,' &c. 3 vols.
 (Shewell).

HONOR. By Miss Alford, Author of
 'Nethermost-on-Sun,' &c. 3 vols. (Shewell).

Just ready, price 7s. 6d.

FREE LANCE: A New Volume of Romances. By CHARLES J. DUNFRIE. Author of 'Sweet Sleep,' 'Wildfire,' &c.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Railway Stalls,
 PRICE ONE SHILLING.

SEASIDE MAIDENS.

The Summer Number of TINSLEYS' MAGAZINE.

By G. A. HENTY.

Ten pages of Illustrations by Harry Furness.

TINSLEY BROTHERS, 8, Catherine-street, Strand.

Now ready.
T. J. & J. SMITH'S CLERICAL, PROFESSIONAL, COMMERCIAL, POCKET, and SCHOLARSHIP DIARIES for 1881
 To be had of all Book-sellers and Stationers, and at the Railway Bookstalls.
 Published by T. J. Smith, Son & Co. 63, Queen-street, Chesapeake.

PROFESSOR DELITZSCH'S NEW WORK.

This day is published, in demy 8vo. price 1s.
MESSIANIC PROPHECIES.
 Lectures by Professor FRANZ DELITZSCH, Leipzig.
 Translated from the Manuscript by Professor S. J. KENTON.
 Edinburgh T. & T. Clark. London Hamilton, Adams & Co.

Now ready, crown 8vo. 462 pages, with Coloured Map of the District, 12s. 6d.
FLORA OF PLYMOUTH: an Account of the Flowering Plants and Ferns found within Twelve Miles of the Town. With Brief Sketches of the Topography, Geology, and Climate of the Area, and History of Local Botanical Investigation. By T. M. ARCHER BRIDGES, F.L.S.
 John Van Nostrand, 1, Paternoster-row.

Just published, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 2s.
AN INTRODUCTION to GEOMETRY, for the Use of Beginners. Consisting of Euclid's Elements Book I, accompanied by numerous Explanations, Questions, and Exercises. By JOHN WALMSLEY, B.A., Author of Plane Trigonometry and Logarithms, &c.
 London C. F. Hodgson & Son, Oughton-square, Fleet-street.

Now ready, demy 8vo. half paper, price 1s.
AN ANECDOTAL HISTORY of the BRITISH PARLIAMENT,
 From the Earliest Periods to the Present Time.
 With Notices of Eminent Parliamentary Men, and Examples of their Conduct.

Compiled from Authentic Sources by GEORGE HENRY JENNINGS.
 Contents: Part I Rise and Progress of Parliamentary Institutions. Part II Personal Anecdotes of Thirty-nine Members of Parliament. Part III Miscellaneous. I. Elections. II. Forty-four Examinations of Members. Publication of Debates. III. Parliamentary Speeches, &c. &c. Appendix: (A) List of the Parliaments of England and of the United Kingdom. (B) Members of the House of Commons. (C) Prime Ministers, Lord Chancellors, and Secretaries of State from 1713 to 1870.—Index.
 Post-office (where no Cheques payable to Mr. Horace Cox, Law Times Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.)

THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN BANKING COMPANY (Limited).
 PAID-UP CAPITAL, 1,000,000.
 Having Branches or Agencies at Alexandria, Cairo, Cyprus, &c., affords exceptional facilities to Travellers to Egypt and the Nile.
 Head Office: London, 27, Clement-street, Lombard-street.
 Alexandria Branch: A. E. SIMON, Manager. Cairo Branch: STELL SMITH, Manager. Agencies at Larina and Nicola (Cyprus).

SUN FIRE OFFICE
 Threadneedle-street, E.C. 4, Chancery Lane, W.C.
 Oxford-street (corner of Vere-street), W.
 Established 1710.
 Home and Foreign Insurances effected.
 Sum insured in 1879, £283,493,000.
 FRANCIS B. KELTON, Secretary.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY.
 75, FLEET-MALL.
 For LIVES ONLY ESTABLISHED 1807.
 Accumulated Funds £1,943,843.
 Also a Subscribed Capital of more than £1,800,000.
 Reports, Prospectuses, and Forms may be had at the Office or from any of the Company's Agents, post free.
 GEORGE RUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY
 HEAD OFFICE: RUMSEY-STREET, NORWICH.
 LONDON OFFICE: 50, FLEET-STREET, E.C.
 Amount Insured £15,000,000.
 Claims Paid £1,040,000.
 Norwich, Sept. 25th, 1880. C. E. HIGGOLD, Secretary.

GUARDIAN FIRE AND LIFE OFFICE,
 11, LOMBARD-STREET, LONDON E.C.
 Established 1821. Subscribed Capital, Two Millions.

DIRECTORS
 Chairman—ALFRED H. HAYDON Esq.
 Deputy-Chairman—JOHN G. TALBOT Esq. M.P.
 Henry Miller Esq.
 Henry Bonham-Carter Esq.
 Charles Wm. Curtis Esq.
 Charles P. Dyer Esq.
 Sir Walter R. Farquhar, Bart.
 Alban G. H. Gibbs Esq.
 James Jackson Esq.
 Thomas Huxley Esq.
 Richard M. Harvey Esq.
 Mr. H. John C. Hubbard M.P.
 Frederick H. Jackson Esq.
 G. J. Shaw Lefevre Esq. M.P.
 Isaac Montagu W. Lubbock Esq.
 John L. Martin Esq.
 Henry John Norman Esq.
 David North Esq.
 Henry Vane Esq.
 Manager of Fire Department—F. J. Marden.
 Actuary and Secretary—T. G. C. BROWN.
 Reserve Capital at present paid up and invested £1,000,000.
 Total Funds available £1,100,000.
 Total Annual Income nearly £250,000.
 The Fire Policies which are issued at 10s. 6d. per £100 should be renewed at the Head Office or with the Agents on or before the 15th day of October.

LOSS OF TIME IS LOSS OF MONEY.

ACCIDENTS CAUSE LOSS OF TIME.
 And may be prevented against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY.
 The Oldest and Largest Accidents Assurance Company.
 Right Hon. Lord KENNEDY Chairman.
 Subscribed Capital £1,000,000. Moderate Premiums.
 Sum paid in thousands of Pounds sterling.
 A fixed sum in case of Death by Accident and a Weekly Allowance in case of disablement.
 ONE MILLION and a HALF has been paid as COMPENSATION.
 A to the Clerks at the Railway Station the 1st of January, or 6d. Cornwall, London. WILLIAM J. VIAN Secretary.

THE SPECIAL ATTENTION OF THE READING PUBLIC IS CALLED TO THE FACT THAT THE GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY

ALLOWS
 TWO VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS for a Subscription of ONE GUINEA per Annum.
 FOUR VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS, with FREE DELIVERY, for a Subscription of TWO GUINEAS per Annum.
 SIX VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS, with FREE DELIVERY, together with all the CLUB PRIVILEGES of the Institution, for THREE GUINEAS per Annum.
 CLUB MEMBERSHIP ONLY, TWO GUINEAS per Annum.
 N.B. Sets of Books are divided to meet the convenience and wishes of Subscribers. Specially Advantageous Terms offered to Country Subscribers.—The Public are invited to inspect the READING, WRITING, and NEWS ROOMS, the LADIES' DRAWING-ROOM, REFERENCE LIBRARY, &c.—Full particulars forwarded promptly on application to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, Grosvenor Gallery Library (Limited), New Bond-street.

NEW NOVEL—JUST READY.

In 3 vols.

LIFE'S SEVEN AGES: A NOVEL.

By Mrs. HIBBERT WARE,
 Author of 'The King of Bath; or, the Days of Dean Nash,' &c.
 "And one man in his time plays many parts,
 His acts being Seven Ages."—As You Like It.

CHARLES J. SKERT, 10, King William-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW WORK BY LIONEL S. BEALE.

Now ready, demy 8vo. pp. 330, price 5s.

SLIGHT AILMENTS: THEIR NATURE AND TREATMENT.

By LIONEL S. BEALE, M.B. F.R.S. F.R.O.P.,
 Professor of the Principles and Practice of Medicine in King's College, London.
 J. & A. CHURCHILL.

Now ready, crown 8vo. price 1s.

SKETCH OF THE HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE.

By C. J. LYALL, M.A. C.I.E.,
 Of Balliol College, Oxford, and of the Bengal Civil Service.
 Edinburgh: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK.

On WEDNESDAY, 13th OCTOBER, will be published,

*The New Volume of Mr. KINGLAKE'S HISTORY of the INVASION of the CRIMEA, Vol. VI.—
 "The WINTER TROUBLES," 8vo. price 16s.*

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW, FOR OCTOBER.

IRISH RENTS, IMPROVEMENTS, and LANDLORDS. By Marrough O'Brien.
 A CENTURY OF ENGLISH POETRY. By A. C. Swinburne.
 CATTLE RANCHES in the FAR WEST. By W. Bullitt, 10hman.
 COUNTY CONSTITUENCIES—A PLAY OF REFORM. By Rev. T. W. Fowler.
 ARE WE ENGLISHMEN? By Grant Allen.
 POLITICAL ECONOMY in the UNITED STATES. By T. E. Chittenden Leslie.
 THE TRAGIC COMEDIANS. Chapters I—4. By George Meredith.
 HOME and FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

JAPANESE POTTERY; being a Native Report. Edited by A. W. FRANKS, F.R.S. F.S.A. With numerous Illustrations and Maps. Large crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [This day]

BRITISH BEE-FARMING: its Profits and Pleasures.
 By JAMES F. ROBINSON. Large crown 8vo. 5s.

The CLERK of PORTWICK. By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN.
 3 vols. [This day]

BELLES and RINGERS. By Captain HAWLEY SMART.
 1 vol.

CHAPMAN & HALL (LIMITED), 193, Piccadilly.

NEW STORY.—Just published, price 5s.

CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

A TALE OF FRANCE IN 1802.

By ESMÉ STUART.

Author of 'Mimi,' 'The Good Old Days,' &c.

With a Frontispiece, introducing NAPOLEON I. and another Character in the Story

MARCOUS WARD & Co. 67, Chandos-street, Strand, W.C.

NEW CHILDREN'S TOY BOOK.

THE TWO BEARS;

Or, THE BEARS AND THE BEES.

Illustrated by CHARLES A. DOYLE, with Borders and Devices Illustrative of the Story by WILLIAM B. BLACK.
Printed in Colours, 4to. price 1s. [Immediately.]

Recently published, 4to. price 1s.

HOW THREE LITTLE PIGS WENT TO MARKET.
THE THREE LITTLE NAUGHTY BOYS.
SQUIRE FOX WENT OUT IN A HUNGRY FLIGHT.

GEORGE WATERSTON & SONS, London and Edinburgh; and all Booksellers.

JUST AS I AM. By Miss Braddon.

THE NEW NOVEL BY FREDERICK TALBOT.

Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE:

A NOVEL.

By FREDERICK TALBOT,

Author of 'Bophile Crews,' &c.

London: JOHN & ROBERT MAXWELL.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.

Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.

JUST AS I AM:

THE NEW NOVEL.

BY THE

AUTHOR OF 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

London: JOHN & ROBERT MAXWELL.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE. By Mr. F. Talbot.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

MATHEMATICAL and PHYSICAL PAPERS.

By GEORGE GABRIEL STOKES, M.A. D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S., Fellow of Pembroke College, and Lucasian Professor of Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. Reprinted from the Original Journals and Transactions, with Additional Notes by the Author. Vol. I. demy 8vo. cloth, 15s.

The BACCHAE of EURIPIDES. With Introduction.

Critical Notes, and Archaeological Illustrations. By J. E. SANDYS, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Public Orator. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

An ANALYSIS of CRIMINAL LIABILITY. By

E. C. CLARK, LL.D., Regius Professor of Civil Law in the University of Cambridge, also of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

SUBJECT FOR CAMBRIDGE LOCAL EXAMINATIONS, 1880.

The FIRST BOOK of SAMUEL. By the Rev.

A. F. KIRKPATRICK, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Price 3s. 6d.

London: CAMBRIDGE WAREHOUSE, 17, Paternoster-row.

EPPS'S
CHOCOLATE
ESSENCE.

Product of a special refining process. It is Chocolate devoided of its over-richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of Coffee. An Afternoon Chocolate. Each packet is labelled

JAMES EPPS & CO.

Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

PHENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET and CHARIING CROSS, LONDON.—Established 1783.
Prompt and Liberal Loss Settlements.
Insurances effected in all parts of the World.
JOHN J. KIDDOUMFIELD, Secretary.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S

STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT on
MORNER'S NINE SYSTEM.
The Original Plan, and most Liberal.

No extra charge for time given.

Illustrated Price Catalogue with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MORNER, 250, 251, 252, Tottenham Court-road; and 10, 11, and 12, Newmarket-street, W.C. Established 1821.

F. MORNER begs to announce that the whole of the above premises have recently been rebuilt, specially adapted for the Furniture Trade, and now form one of the most commodious Warehouses in the metropolis.

Bed-room Suites from 8s. 6d. to 60 Guineas.
Drawing-room Suites from 12s. 6d. to 45 Guineas.
Dining-room Suites from 15s. 6d. to 40 Guineas.And all other Goods in great variety.
F. MORNER, 250, 251, 252, Tottenham Court-road; and 10, 11, and 12, Newmarket-street, W.C. Established 1821.

WILLIAM S. BURTON, General Furnishing

Ironmonger, by appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,

BENIN & CATALOGUE GRATIS and POST PAID.

It contains upwards of 600 illustrations of his unrivalled Stock, with Lists of Prices, and plans of the 30 large Show-rooms, at 20, Oxford-street, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, Newman-street, 4, 5, and 6, Fanny's-place, and 1, Newman-yard, London, W.

FENDERS, FIRE-IRONS, STOVES, RANGES, &c.

REGISTERED STOVES	from	2s. 6d.	to	45s. 0d.
CHINA-TILED SIZES	2s. 6d.	to	25s. 0d.
DOG-STOVES	2s. 6d.	to	25s. 0d.
FENDERS Braced or Black	2s. 6d.	to	10s. 0d.
IRON STEEL and ORNAMENTAL	2s. 6d.	to	20s. 0d.
FENDEE FRAMES for TILE HEARTHES	1s. 0d.	to	10s. 0d.
MARBLE SIZES SIZES	2s. 6d.	to	10s. 0d.
PIENCED BRASS FENDERS	2s. 6d.	to	10s. 0d.
PIECE-IRONES bed of Three	2s. 6d.	to	10s. 0d.
IRONES for TILE HEARTH 10s. per Pair	0s. 12d.	to	15s. 0d.

GAS and HOT-WATER WORK.—ESTIMATES FREE.

BEDSTEADS, BEDDING, and FURNITURE.

BEDSTEADS of Best Make only from 10s. 6d.

BEDDING of every description made on the Premises, and guaranteed of pure materials and good workmanship.

AMERICAN WALNUT machine-made CABINET FURNITURE.

A large stock of CHEAP, USEFUL, and SOUND FURNITURE of the above make on view at prices usually charged for ordinary goods.

FURNITURE for BED, DINING, and DRAWING ROOMS, and every article necessary for HOUSE FURNISHING.

EASY TERMS of PURCHASE.—Special Arrangements made by WILLIAM S. BURTON with reference to CREDIT without in any way altering the system of PLAIN FIGURES and FIXED PRICES, thus enabling the PURCHASER to all the advantages of prices arranged for NET CASH.

OILS, OIL, highest quality 2s. 10d. per gallon.

KEROSENE, Five Gallons and upwards 12s. 6d.

WILLIAM S. BURTON.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG PHEASANT BASKETS.

ALLEN'S REGISTERED ALBERT DESPATCH BOX.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE of 400 Articles for Continental Travelling, post free.

27, West Strand, London.

APOLLINARIS WATER.

"Laurat domus Apollinaris."—Hermes, Book IV. Ode 2.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

ANNUAL SALE, 5,000,000.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY Limited, 19, Regent-street, London, S.W.

M. R. G. H. JONES,

DENTIST,

27, GREAT RUSSELL-STREET, LONDON

(Opposite the British Museum).

Will be glad to forward his Pamphlet on Painless Dentistry, free, enclosed by post, which explains the most unique system of the adjustment of Artificial Teeth without pain.

Consultation free, from 10 to 12.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have approved of this Pure Solution as the best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION; and as the safest Aperient for delicate Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

OLD Dr. JACOB TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.—The best Antimonial Medicine for the Head, Scorbatic Disorders, Gout, and all Skin Diseases. In bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 10s., of all Chemists. Chief Depot, 31 Fleet-street, E.C.

DEAN STEEL & Co.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

Glycerine in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the mouth they are carried by the act of sucking, becomes actively absorbed, and acts on the system by its own action.

A letter received—Gentlemen.—I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit, whether with or without medical treatment; in almost all forms of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm. Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, M.D., F.R.C.P., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary.

MESSRS. C. KEGAN PAUL & CO.'S LIST.

NEW BOOKS.

FOUR CENTURIES OF ENGLISH LETTERS.

A SELECTION OF 350 LETTERS BY 150 WRITERS, FROM THE PERIOD OF THE PASTON LETTERS TO THE PRESENT TIME.

Edited and Arranged by W. BAPTISTE SCOOLES.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s.

"The reader can hardly open a page without finding something curious, or amusing, or edifying."—Athenæum

"No one who takes the slightest interest in English history, English literature, or in human nature, can fail to receive increase of delight from the perusal of this volume."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE PULPIT COMMENTARY.

I SAMUEL.

By the Very Rev. R. P. SMITH, D.D.

With Homilies by the Rev. DONALD FRASER, D.D., Rev. Professor CHAPMAN, and Rev. R. DALE.

Price 15s.

[Now ready.]

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By W. B. BROWNE, M.A.

With Preface by the Rev. J. P. NORRIS, D.D., Canon of Bristol.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

THE NEW TRUTH AND THE OLD FAITH,

ARE THEY INCOMPATIBLE?

By a SCIENTIFIC LAYMAN.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

THE NEW WERTHER.

By LOEY

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s.

THE CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP:

A SPANISH LEGEND IN TWENTY-NINE CANCIONS.

By Colonel COLOMB,
Author of "Donington Castle" (a Royalist Story), &c.

Large post 8vo. parchment antique, bevelled boards, price 6s.

MARY MAGDALENE: a Poem.

By Mrs. RICHARD GREENOUGH.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A LOVE'S GAMUT, and other Poems.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: a Drama.

THE PARCHMENT LIBRARY.

Choicely printed on hand-made paper, limp parchment antique, with Frontispiece, price 6s. each; vellum, 7s. 6d. each.

TENNYSON'S IN MEMORIAM.

TENNYSON'S THE PRINCESS: a Medley.

POEMS SELECTED FROM PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY.

Dedicated to LADY SHELLEY
With Preface by RICHARD GARNETT.

OF THE IMITATION OF CHRIST.

By THOMAS À KEMPIS.

A Revised Translation.

[Nearly ready.]

THE

POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN KEATS.

[Preparing.]

SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS.

With Notes and Introduction by EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D.

[In the press.]

THE EDUCATION LIBRARY.

HISTORY OF EDUCATIONAL THEORIES.

By OSCAR BROWNING, M.A.

[In the press.]

COMENIUS.

By Prof. SIMON LAURIE, M.A.

[In the press.]

BY THE REV. SIR GEO. W. COX, BART.

A HISTORY OF GREECE. 2 vols. 38s.

MYTHOLOGY OF THE ARYAN NATIONS.

2 vols. 28s.

A GENERAL HISTORY OF GREECE.

7s. 6d.

TALES OF ANCIENT GREECE. 6s.

SCHOOL HISTORY OF GREECE. 3s. 6d.

THE GREAT PERSIAN WAR. 3s. 6d.

A MANUAL OF MYTHOLOGY. 3s.

POPULAR ROMANCES OF THE MIDDLE AGES. 6s.

BY THE REV. STOPFORD A. BROOKE.

SERMONS. First Series. 6s.

SERMONS. Second Series. 7s.

THE FIGHT OF FAITH. 7s. 6d.

CHRIST IN MODERN LIFE. 5s.

THEOLOGY IN THE ENGLISH POETS.

F. W. ROBERTSON'S LIFE AND LETTERS.

6s., 7s. 6d., and 12s.

SCIENCE.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 1s.

THE ATOMIC THEORY.

By Professor AD. WURTE.

Translated by R. CLEMINSHAW, F.R.S.

"Vol. XXX. of 'The International Scientific Series.'"

Second Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

THE BRAIN AS AN ORGAN OF MIND.

By H. CHARLTON RASTIAN, M.D. F.R.S.

With numerous Illustrations.

"Vol. XXXIX. of 'The International Scientific Series.'"

"The fullest scientific exposition yet published of the views held on the subject of psychology by the advanced physiological school."—Athenæum.

With numerous Illustrations, 2 vols. large post 8vo. cloth, price 35s.

THE HISTORY OF THE EVOLUTION OF MAN.

By Professor ERNST HAECKEL.

"The appearance of the present fascinating work in an English dress will aid the cause of science in this country. Persons who wish to understand the real significance of their own structure should read the book, and such a desire should be felt by all educated men."—Athenæum.

3 vols. Second Edition, post 8vo. cloth, price 32s.

THE HISTORY OF CREATION.

By Professor ERNST HAECKEL.

Translated Revised by Professor R. EAY LANKFESTER, M.A. F.R.S.

With Coloured Plates and Genealogical Trees of the various Groups of both Plants and Animals.

"The author has discharged a most difficult task with conspicuous skill and marvellous ability."—Science Gossip.

"A rich mine of facts for all biological students."—Reverberator.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

FREEDOM IN SCIENCE AND TEACHING.

From the German of ERNST HAECKEL.

With a Prefatory Note by T. H. HUXLEY, F.R.S.

Second Edition, large post 8vo. cloth, price 9s.

ENGLISH PSYCHOLOGY.

By Professor TH. RIBOT.

A Revised and Corrected Translation from the latest French Edition.

"We can cordially recommend the volume."—Journal of Mental Science.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, price 9s.

HEREDITY:

A Psychological Study on its Phenomena, its Laws, its Causes, and its Consequences.

By Professor TH. RIBOT.

"Facts and opinions are brought together from all quarters, and methodically dealt with in a clear and vivid style, which will carry the reader on without much weariness through the perusal of the book."—Journal of Science.

Fifth Edition, illustrated, 8vo. cloth, price 12s.

THE PRINCIPLES OF MENTAL PHYSIOLOGY.

By W. R. CARPENTER, M.D. &c.

With their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.

"Let us add that nothing we have said, or in any limited space could say, would give an adequate conception of the valuable and various collection of facts bearing on morbid mental conditions, the learned physiological exposition, and the treasure-house of useful hints for mental training which makes this large and yet very amusing as well as instructive book an encyclopædia of well-classified and often very startling psychological experience."—Spectator.

2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, price 32s.

MIND IN THE LOWER ANIMALS IN HEALTH AND DISEASE.

By W. LAUDER LINDSAY, M.D. F.R.S.E.

Vol. I. MIND IN HEALTH. Vol. II. MIND IN DISEASE.

"In the present volumes all that the author attempts is to put the subject of mind in the lower animals to illustrate their possession of the higher mental faculties as they occur in man, of reserve as contrasted with those from mere instinct."—Introduction.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 6d.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM.

PHYSIOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS ON RUDOLF HEIDENHAIN.

Professor of Physiology in the University of Breslau.

Translated from the Fourth German Edition by L. C. WOOLLEDGE.

With a Intro. by G. H. ROMANES, F.R.S.

"The research of which this treatise is the outcome is in every way worthy of its distinguished author for it serves not only to present a considerable and systematic body of carefully-observed facts but also to lead the way for an indefinite amount of further inquiry along the lines that it has opened up."—Mr. G. H. Romanes in the Nineteenth Century.

1, PATERNOSTER-SQUARE.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, 38, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.

Printed by E. J. FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Took's-court, Chancery-lane, E.C.4; and Published by JOHN FRANCIS, at No. 30, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Agents: Sir Rowland, Messrs. Bell & Sons, and Mr. John Denton, Edinburgh;—See LONDON: Mr. John Robertson, Dublin.—Saturday, October 3, 1880.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1880.

UNIVERSITY HIGHER LOCAL EXAMINATIONS LENDING LIBRARY for the use of Candidates for the above established by the Women's Education Union. Annual subscription 10s. of Books sent to Members living at a distance.—Frequently open to be obtained from the Secretary, 1, Grosvenor Street, London, E.C. 4.

Next week, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. handsomely bound and gilt, price 6s.

THE THIRD AND COMPLETELY REVISED EDITION

OF

THE STORY OF

THE DIAMOND NECKLACE,

TOLD IN DETAIL, FOR THE FIRST TIME

By the aid of Contemporary Memoirs, Original Letters, and Official and other Documents,

AND

A SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF THE COMTESSE DE LA MOTTE, FETTERED COUSIN OF MARIE-ANTOINETTE, WITH PARTICULARS OF THE CAREERS OF THE OTHER ACTORS IN THIS SENSATIONAL DRAMA.

By HENRY VIZETELLY.

Illustrated with an exact representation of the Diamond Necklace and a Portrait of the Comtesse de la Motte, Engraved on Steel.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Mr. Vizetelly's tale has all the interest of a romance which is too strange not to be true.....His summing up of the evidence, both negative and positive, which exculpates Marie-Antoinette from any complicity whatever with the scandalous intrigue in which she was represented as bearing a part, is admirable."—Saturday Review.

"We can without fear of contradiction describe Mr. Henry Vizetelly's 'Story of the Diamond Necklace' as a book of thrilling interest. He has not only executed his task with skill and faithfulness, but also with tact and delicacy."—Standard.

"It is particularly desirable in the interests of history and literature that such a book as Mr. Vizetelly has, with infinite care and evidently great labour, produced, should exist. The story is marvellous in its intricacies and complications, arranged as Mr. Vizetelly has arranged it in its curious sequences, and summed up as he has summed it up with remarkable lucidity. It would be difficult to praise too highly the plan on which Mr. Vizetelly has constructed his story, and the ability with which he has analyzed the contending evidence."—Morning Post.

"Let us say at once that Mr. Vizetelly has performed his work admirably. He has diligently searched, patiently studied, and collaborated with rare discrimination all the contemporary evidence bearing in any degree on the subject of 'the greatest lie of the eighteenth century.' Mr. Vizetelly's two volumes are absorbing in their interest, and after a perusal of them the best novels are dull."—Daily Telegraph.

"Had the most daring of our sensational novelists put forth the present plain unvarnished statement of facts as a work of fiction, it would have been denounced as so violating all probabilities as to be a positive insult to the common sense of the reader. Yet strange, startling, incomprehensible as is the narrative which the author has here evolved from the mass of documents published and unpublished, original letters, memoirs and pièces justificatives, every word of it is true."—Notes and Queries.

POPULAR FRENCH NOVELS.

TRANSLATIONS OF THE BEST EXAMPLES OF RECENT FRENCH FICTION OF AN UNOBJECTIONABLE CHARACTER.

ONE SHILLING EACH.

Two New Volumes of the Series are just ready.

WAYWARD DOBIA, and the GENEROUS DIPLOMATIST. By HENRY GREVILLE.

A NEW LEASE OF LIFE, and SAVING A DAUGHTER'S DOWRY. By EDMOND ABOUT.

VIZETELLY & Co. 10 Southampton-street, Strand.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

THE NEW SEASON.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY was established in 1842, in order to meet the growing demand of the age for a Higher Class of Books than could then be readily obtained on moderate terms from the ordinary Circulating Libraries.

From its commencement the original purpose of the Library has been kept steadily in view. The best Books of every shade of opinion, on all subjects of general interest, have been taken in large numbers—Hundreds, and in some instances Thousands, of Copies of the Leading Works of every Season having been placed in circulation on the day of publication.

In the selection of Books, great care is taken to study the wishes of Subscribers, and to make the Library not only "Select," but comprehensive.

. The following List will serve to indicate the character of the whole Collection, which now comprises considerably more than One Million Volumes:—

Life of H.R.H. the Prince Consort, by Sir Theodore Martin—The Life and Work of St. Paul, by Canon Farrar—Memoirs of Mrs. Tait-McCarthy's History of Our Own Times—Life of Bishop Wilberforce—Memorials of Frances Ridley Havergal—The Letters of Charles Dickens—Senior's Conversations—Memoirs of Madame de Rémusat—History of the Zulu War, by Frances Colenso—Memoir of Sir James Outram—Memoir of Rev. Henry Venn—Siguin's Country of the Passion Play—Memoir of Etienne Dolet, by R. C. Christie—Blues and Bugs, by Arthur Mulla—Island Life, by A. R. Wallace—Essays, by Lady Violet Greville—In Gypsy Tents, by Francis H. Groome—Memoir of C. A. C. de Boissville, by Thomas Constable—Knight's Travels in Albania—Gustav in Private Life, by Madame de Witt—Sister Dora—A Ride in Petticoats and Slippers, by Capt. Colville—The Old Régime, by Lady Jackson—Life in the Rocky Mountains, by Isabella Bird—Thoughts in My Garden, by Mortimer Collins—Our Home in Cyprus, by Mrs. Scott-Stevenson—Two Worlds are Ours, by Hugh Macmillan—Memoirs of Edward and Catharine Stanley—Life and Work of Mary Carpenter—Browning's Dramatic Idyls—Political Questions of the Day, by S. C. Buxton—Parables of Our Lord, by Dr. Calderwood—Ephphatha, by Canon Farrar—Five Weeks in Iceland, by C. A. de Fonblanque—A Trip to Manitoba, by Mary Fitzgibbon—Byron, by John Nichol—A Tramp Abroad, by Mark Twain—Stoughton's Introduction to Historical Theology—Heroes of the Cross, by W. H. D. Adams—Bellon's Recollections of an Old Actor—Ingram's Life of Edgar Allan Poe—Baird's Rise of the Huguenots—Mrs. Bracey's Voyage in the Mediterranean—Mackenzie's History of the Nineteenth Century—Deep unto Deep, by Rev. Sir Emilius Bayley—Gillmore's Ride Through Hostile Africa—The Ode of Life—The Philosophy of Religion, by Professor Caird—History of Catherine of Siena—Sketch of the Life of Elihu Burritt—Autobiography of Sir Gilbert Scott—Goethe's Faust, by Professor Blackie—The Other Side (America), by C. B. Berry—Literary Frivolities, by W. T. Dobson—Credulities Past and Present, by W. Jones—Life of Dr. Duff—Life of Bishop Selwyn—Italy and her Invaders, by Thomas Hodgkin—Green's History of the English People—Ruskin's Notes on S. Prout and W. Hunt—Watson's Sketches in the Hunting-Field—Renan's Hibbert Lectures—The River of Golden Sand, by Captain Gill—Sibree's Madagascar—Cyprus as I Saw It, by Sir Samuel Baker—A Study of Shakespeare, by A. C. Swinburne—Hellenica: a Series of Essays—Campaigning in South Africa, by Capt. Montague—Glimpses Through the Cannon-Smoke, by Alexander Forbes—Early Man in Britain, by W. Boyd Dawkins—Rest Awhile, by Dean Vaughan—Autobiography of Prince Metternich—Lectures on Art, by E. J. Poynter—Chronicles of Chelsea, by Rev. A. G. L'Estrange—Manley's Notes on Game—Forty Years' Recollections, by Thomas Frost—Gipsy Life, by George Smith—The Collects of the Day, by Dean Goulburn—Food and Feeding, by Sir Henry Thompson—Life and Letters of Cicero, by Rev. G. E. Jeans—Round About a Great Estate—The Ocean as a Health Resort, by W. S. Wilson—and all the Best Recent Works of Fiction.

Additional Copies of all the best New Works in History, Biography, Religion, Philosophy, Travel, and Adventure, and the Higher Class of Fiction, continue to be added as the demand increases; and arrangements are made with the Leading Publishers for an ample supply of the Principal Works already announced for the New Season, and of all Forthcoming Books of General Interest as they appear.

FIRST-CLASS SUBSCRIPTION, ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM,

For a Constant Succession of the Newest Books.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM,

For the Free Delivery of Books in every part of London.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM AND UPWARDS, according to the Number of Volumes required.

BOOK SOCIETIES SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Revised Lists of Works recently added to the Library, and Catalogues of Surplus Copies withdrawn for Sale at greatly reduced prices, are now ready, and will be forwarded, post free, on application.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (Limited), New Oxford-street.

CITY OFFICE: 2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

The ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA.

Edited by Prof. T. SPENCER BAYNES, LL.D., assisted by upwards of 500 Contributors, and illustrated with numerous Engravings on Wood and Steel. Price 30s. in cloth; or 36s. half-russia.

VOLUME I. A—ANA.
 " II. ANA—ATH.
 " III. ATH—BOL.
 " IV. BOL—CAN.
 " V. CAN—CLE.
 " VI. CLI—DAY.

VOLUME VII. DEA—ELD.
 " VIII. ELE—FAL.
 " IX. FAL—FYZ.
 " X. G—GOT.
 " XI. GOU—HIP.

VOLUME XII. in the press.

BLACK'S GENERAL ATLAS of the WORLD.

A Series of 56 Maps of the principal Countries of the World, with Descriptive Letter-press and an Index of 68,000 Names. In folio, half-marocco, 3l. 3s.

The WAVERLEY NOVELS. Illustrated Edition, in 48 Volumes, fcap.

8vo. containing 1,000 Wood Engravings, and 96 Steel Plates.

Price, complete in cloth, paper labels, 6l.

Price, complete in cloth, lettered tops, 7l. 7s.

Price, complete in half French morocco, marbled edges, 8l. 8s.

NEW ISSUE of the WAVERLEY NOVELS. Centenary Edition (Copy-right). In 25 vols. crown 8vo.

This popular Edition of the Waverley Novels, edited by the late DAVID LAING, LL.D., contains several Notes by Scott which are to be found in this Edition only, and is enriched with 158 Steel Plates.

VOLUMES I. to XII. now ready. Price 3s. 6d. each.

DE QUINCEY'S WORKS.

The COLLECTED WORKS, in 16 vols. crown 8vo. price, in cloth, 3l. 12s.; or in Roxburghe binding, gilt tops, 4l. 4s.

VOL. 1. CONFESSIONS of an ENGLISH OPIUM-EATER.
 " 2. RECOLLECTIONS of the LAKE POETS.
 " 3. LAST DAYS of IMMANUEL KANT.
 " 4. The ENGLISH MAIL-COACH.
 " 5. Dr. SAMUEL PARR, &c.
 " 6. RICHARD BENTLEY, &c.
 " 7. PROTESTANTISM, and other ESSAYS.
 " 8. LEADERS in LITERATURE.

CONTENTS.

VOL. 9. The CÆSARS, and other WRITINGS.
 " 10. STYLE and RHETORIC.
 " 11. COLERIDGE and OPIUM-EATING.
 " 12. SPECULATIONS, LITERARY and PHILOSOPHIC.
 " 13. LETTERS, CONVERSATION, &c.
 " 14. AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCHES, 1790—1808.
 " 15. BIOGRAPHIES.
 " 16. SUSPIRIA de PROFUNDIS, and GENERAL INDEX.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS. Complete Edition. Edited by John

H. LINGK. In 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Memoir and Index, price 14s.

1. TALES GROTESQUE. 2. TALES ARABESQUE. 3. POEMS. 4. CRITICISM, &c.

FARRAR'S SCHOOL TALES.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, in 3 vols. illustrated with Frontispieces and Vignettes, viz.—ERIC; or, Little by Little, price 5s. JULIAN HOME: a Tale of College Life, price 5s. ST. WINIFRID'S; or, the World of School, price 6s. 6d.

ALEXANDER RALEIGH'S WORKS.—(1.) QUIET RESTING-

PLACES. Ninth Edition. Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d. (2.) The STORY of JONAH. Fcap. 8vo. price 3s. 6d. (3.) The LITTLE SANCTUARY. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s. (4.) The BOOK of ESTHER. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d.

MUSICAL STUDIES. By Francis Hueffer.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE: a Sketch.

By C. J. LYALL, M.A. C.I.E. Crown 8vo. sewed, price 1s.

Edinburgh: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK.

Digitized by Google

MR. MURRAY'S LIST OF FORTHCOMING WORKS.

LIFE and LETTERS of LORD CHANCELLOR CAMPBELL. Based on his Autobiography, Journals, and Correspondence. Edited by his Daughter, the Hon. Mrs. HARDCASTLE. With Portrait. 2 vols. 8vo.

INDIA in 1880. By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart. late Governor of Bombay, &c. 8vo.

MEMOIR of the PUBLIC LIFE of the Right Hon. J. C. HERRIES, during the Reigns of King George III. and IV. William IV., and Queen Victoria. Founded on his Letters and other Unpublished Documents. By his Son, EDWARD HERRIES, C.B. 2 vols. 8vo.

CHRISTIAN INSTITUTIONS: Essays on Ecclesiastical Subjects. By the DEAN of WESTMINSTER. 8vo.

BAPTISM.

The EUCHARIST.

EUCHARIST in the EARLY CHURCH.

EUCHARISTIC SACRIFICE.

REAL PRESENCE.

BODY and BLOOD of CHRIST.

ABSOLUTION.

DOCTRINAL VESTMENTS.

BASILICAS.

The POPE.

The LITANY.

BELIEF of the EARLY CHRISTIANS.

JAPAN: its History, Traditions, and Religions. With the Narrative of a Visit to Japan in 1879. By Sir EDWARD J. REED, K.C.B. M.P. With Map and Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo.

ILIOS: a Complete History of the City and Country of the Trojans. Including all Recent Discoveries and Researches made on the Plain of Troy. By Dr. HENRY SCHLIEMANN, Author of 'Mycenæ and Tiryns.' With Maps, Plans, and Illustrations. Royal 8vo.

UNBEATEN TRACTS in JAPAN. Travels of a Lady in the Interior, including Visits to the Aborigines of Yezo and the Shrine of Nikko and Ise. By ISABELLA BIRD, Author of 'A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains,' &c. With Map and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

The PERSONAL LIFE of DAVID LIVINGSTONE. From his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence. By W. G. BLAIR, D.D. With Portrait and Map. 8vo.

The MANIFOLD WITNESS for CHRIST. Being an attempt to Exhibit the Combined Force of Various Evidences of Christianity, Direct and Indirect. The Boyle Lectures for 1877-78. By CANON BARRY, D.D. 8vo.

Mrs. GROTE. A Sketch. By LADY EASTLAKE. Post 8vo.

SKETCHES of EMINENT STATESMEN and WRITERS, with OTHER ESSAYS. Reprinted, with Additions and Corrections, from the Quarterly Review. By A. HAYWARD, Q.C. 2 vols. 8vo.

Contents.

TIERS.

BISMARCK.

CAVOUR.

METTERNICH.

MONTALEMBERT.

MELBOURNE.

WILKINS.

BYRON and TENNYSON.

VENICE.

ST. SIMON.

SÉVIGNÉ.

DU DEFFAND.

HOLLAND HOUSE.

SHAWNEAT HILL.

A POPULAR ACCOUNT of PERUVIAN BARK, and its Introduction into British India, Ceylon, &c., and the Progress and Extent of its Cultivation. By C. R. MARKHAM, C.B. With Maps and Woodcuts. Post 8vo.

A HISTORY of GREEK SCULPTURE. From the Earliest Times down to the Age of Phidias. By A. S. MURRAY, of the British Museum. With Illustrations. Royal 8vo.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE and EVENTFUL CAREER of the DUKE of SALDANHA, Soldier and Statesman. With Selections from his Correspondence. By the CONDE DA CARNOTA. With Portrait. 2 vols. 8vo.

The POWER of MOVEMENT in PLANTS. By CHARLES DARWIN, F.R.S., assisted by FRANCIS DARWIN. With Woodcuts. Crown 8vo.

SIBERIA in EUROPE. A Naturalist's Visit to the Valley of the Petchora in North-East Russia. With Descriptions of Birds and their Migrations. By HENRY HEEBOHM, F.R.G.S. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

The PSALMS of DAVID. With Notes Explanatory and Critical. By the DEAN OF WELLS, CANON C. J. ELLIOTT, and CANON F. C. COOK. Medium 8vo. (Reprinted from the 'Speaker's Commentary'.)

MADAME DE STAËL: a Study of Her Life and Times. The First Revolution and the First Empire. By A. STEVENS, LL.D. With Portraits. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

RAMBLES among the HILLS in the PEAK of DERBYSHIRE, and on the SOUTH DOWNS. With Sketches of People by the Way. By LOUIS J. JENNINGS, Author of 'Field Paths and Green Lanes in Sussex.' With Illustrations. Post 8vo.

The GARDENS of the SUN; or, a Naturalist's Journal on the Mountains and in the Forests and Swamps of Borneo and the Sulu Archipelago. By F. W. BURBIDGE. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

HISTORY of EGYPT UNDER the PHARAOHS. Derived entirely from the Monuments. With a Memoir on the Exodus of the Israelites and the Egyptian Monuments. By Dr. HENRY BRUGSCH. Second Edition, Revised, with New Preface and Notes by the Author. Maps. 3 vols. 8vo.

ENGLISH STUDIES. By J. S. BREWER, M.A., late of the Record Office, Professor of Modern History, King's College, London. 8vo.

NEW SOURCES of ENGLISH HISTORY.

GREEN'S SHORT HISTORY of the ENG-LISH PEOPLE.

The ROYAL SUPREMACY and the HIS-

TORY of its INTRODUCTION.

HATFIELD HOUSE.

The STUARTS.

SHAKESPEARE.

HOW to STUDY ENGLISH HISTORY.

ANCIENT LONDON.

The HUGUENOTS: their Settlements, Churches, and Industries in England and Ireland. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL.D. New Edition. Crown 8vo.

A SMALLER MANUAL of MODERN GEOGRAPHY, for SCHOOLS and YOUNG PERSONS. By JOHN RICHARDSON, M.A. Post 8vo.

DUTY. With Illustrations of Courage, Patience, and Endurance. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL.D. A Companion Volume to 'Self-Help,' 'Character,' and 'Thrift.' Post 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

On Tuesday next will be published,
A NEW NOVEL, IN THREE VOLUMES,

ENTITLED

ADAM AND EVE.

By Mrs. PARR,
Author of 'Dorothy Fox.'

NEW WORK BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

JOHNNY LUDLOW.

SECOND SERIES.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD,
Author of 'East Lynne,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE FIRST VIOLIN.'

THE WELLFIELDS.

By JESSIE FOTHERGILL,
Author of 'Probation' and 'The First Violin.'

3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A well and powerfully written novel."—St. James's Gazette.
"This is the best of the author's three books in point of construction; and the character of Jerome Wellfield is more finished and more consistent than any she has yet attempted."—Athenæum.

MR. R. M. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL.

Immediately, in 2 vols. crown 8vo.

A RED RAG.

By R. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON,
Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c.

NOTICE.

A SECOND EDITION OF

THE MUDFOG PAPERS,

By CHARLES DICKENS.

Is now ready at all Booksellers, in crown-8vo. price 2s. 6d.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS,

MISS FITZGIBBON'S

TRIP TO MANITOBA.

In demy 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

TWO NEW ADDITIONS TO 'BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.'

In crown 8vo. price 6s. each.

1.—PROBATION.

By the Author of 'The First Violin.'

2.—CHERRY RIPE!

By HELEN MATHERS,
Author of 'Comin' Thro' the Rye,' &c.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW WORKS.

MONSIEUR GUIZOT in PRIVATE

LIFE (1791-1874). By his Daughter, MADAME DE WITT. Translated by Mrs. SIMPSON. 1 vol. 8vo. 15s.

"This book was well worth translating. Mrs. Simpson has written excellent English while preserving the spirit of the French."—Times.
"Madame de Witt has done justice to her father's memory in an admirable record of his life. Mrs. Simpson's translation of this admirably interesting book is in accuracy and grace worthy of the original and of the subject."—Saturday Review.

AN ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip,

IN THE NARRATIVE, AND DESCRIPTIVE FROM THE RECOLLECTIONS OF AN ACTOR IN AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, CALIFORNIA, MEXICO, CENTRAL AMERICA, AND NEW YORK. By EDMUND LEATHES. 8vo. 15s.

TALES OF OUR GREAT FAMILIES.

SECOND SERIES. By EDWARD WALFORD, M.A. 2 vols. 21s.

THE VILLAGE OF PALACES; or,

CHRONICLES OF CHILSEA. By the Rev A. G. L'ESTRANGE. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

CHEAP EDITION OF YOUNG Mrs.

JARDINE. By the AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALLIFAX.' Forming the New Volume of HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY in 8vo. and illustrated.

THE NEW NOVELS.

STRICTLY TIED UP. 3 vols.

ROY AND VIOLA. By Mrs. Forrester.

Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' &c. 3 vols.
"An admirable tale; told by one who can vividly describe and judiciously comment on the manners and persons of modern society. The dialogue is easy and natural and the writing fresh."—The World.

LORD BRACKENBURY. By

AMELIA B. EDWARDS. Author of 'Barbara's History,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

"Lord Brackenbury" is a very readable story. The author has well conceived the purpose of high-class novel writing, and succeeded in the small measure in attaining it. There is plenty of variety, cheerful dialogue, and general nerve in the book.
"A story that can be read with not a little interest. The plot is constructed with much skill and in the double hero and heroine the reader is provided with a great deal of both exciting and tender reading."—Saturday Review.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By

SHERLEY SMITH, Author of 'His Last State,' &c. 3 vols.

"There is freshness and variety in this story, and some of its characters are very prettily conceived. The book is well worth reading."
"A novel of no common merit. It is brightly and vivaciously written; it abounds in sprightly cleverness and shrewdness, and it contains a great deal of dialogue at once lively and natural, at once spontaneous and amusing."—Pall Mall.

THE TENTH EARL. By John Berwick Harwood, Author of 'Lady Flavia,' &c. 3 vols.

A VERY OPAL. By C. L. Pirkis.

"A novel of considerable merit. There is a minuteness of observation and at times a kind of quiet humour which reminds one of Jane Austen."—Advertiser.

FORESTALLED. By M.

BETHAM-EDWARDS, Author of 'Kitty,' 'Bridget,' &c. 3 vols. 15s.

"An original, interesting, and carefully written story."—Spectator.

DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of 'ST. OLAV'S,' &c. 3 vols. [Just ready.]

CHEAP EDITIONS.

Each Work complete in 1 vol. price 1s. (any of which can be had separately), elegantly printed and bound, and illustrated by Mr. J. GILBERT, MILLAIS, HUNT, LEITCH, FRYNTER, POSTER, TENNIEL, SANDYS, E. HUGHES, RAMBOURN, &c.

HURST & BLACKETT'S

STANDARD LIBRARY

OF CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR MODERN WORKS.

Best Short's Nature and Human Nature. John Hallifax, Gentleman.

The Crescent and the Cross. By Elliot Warburton.

Metastasis. By Miss Kavanagh.

A Woman's Thoughts about

Women. By the Author of

'John Hallifax.'

Adam's Education. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Sam Nick's Wine Saw.

Cardinal Wiseman's Pope.

A Life for a Life. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Liege Hunt's Old Court Sabers.

Margaret and her Bridesmaids.

Sam Nick's Old Judge.

Durand. By Elliot Warburton.

Sir S. Burke's Family Resonance.

The Laird of Newlaw. By Mrs.

Oliphant.

The Englishwoman in Italy.

Nothing New. By the Author of

'John Hallifax.'

Freer's Life of Jeanne d'Albret.

The Valley of a Hundred Firs.

Bata's Romance of the Forum.

Adèle. By Miss Kavanagh.

Studies from Life. By the Author

of 'John Hallifax.'

Grandmother's Memory

Jefferson's Book about Doctors.

Matron and Maid. By the Author

of 'John Hallifax.'

Les Madelonnetes. By Victor Hugo.

St. Olave's.

Lost and Saved. By the Hon. Mrs.

Norton.

15, Great Marlborough-street.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

Crown 8vo. 370 pp. cloth, 12s. 6d.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WORLD,

IN ARTS, AGRICULTURE, COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, INSTRUCTION, RAILWAYS, AND PUBLIC WEALTH, SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE PRESENT CENTURY.

By MICHAEL G. MULHALL, F.R.S.

Author of 'The English in South America,' 'Handbook to the River Plate Republics,' 'Handbook to Brazil,' &c.

"The work must have cost Mr. Mulhall a vast amount of research, for there is scarcely any department of industry upon which he has not touched. The various classes of statistics are so strung together by the author's own remarks as to render the book extremely interesting and instructive reading. The work, as a whole, seems to us to be remarkably impressive and full of instruction and probably illustrates as no other method could the almost incredible progress of the world as a whole since the beginning of the present century."—Times.

Large post 8vo. with Illustrations and 21 Maps, cloth, 12s.

PHYSICAL, HISTORICAL, POLITICAL, AND DESCRIPTIVE GEOGRAPHY.

By KITH JOHNSTON, F.R.G.S.

Editor of the 'Africa' Volume in 'Stanford's Compendium of Geography and Travel'; late Leader of the Royal Geographical Society's East African Expedition.

"It is a text-book of geography, revealing in its every page the author's thorough knowledge of the subject he deals with. It can be warmly recommended for the use of schools and may be perused with profit and pleasure also by those whose school-days are passed, and whose knowledge of geography has grown somewhat rusty and antiquated but who, for these very reasons, are desirous of refreshing their memory, and of obtaining within the limited time at their command a general idea of the extent to which we are at present acquainted with the earth's surface features. Very ample details are given of the natural and industrial productions, and a set of maps very much enhances the interest of these descriptions, and conveys at a glance what even the best of letter-press would fail to render equally clear."—Advertiser.

Post 8vo. with 40 Illustrations and Maps, cloth, 1s.

GEOGRAPHY FOR LITTLE CHILDREN.

By ANTONIA ZIMMERN.

"The language is simple, the type large and clear, while the pages are enlivened by some good maps and many illustrations. These, we are sure, cannot fail to prove very welcome to all such little folk as 'Dolly Puddle' and 'Too Too,' to whom this little volume is dedicated."—Saturday Review.

Second Edition, crown 8vo. with 17 Illustrations, cloth, 1s. 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY OF NATURAL SCIENCE.

AND OF THE PROGRESS OF DISCOVERY FROM THE TIME OF THE GREEKS TO THE PRESENT DAY. For the Use of Schools and Young Persons.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY.

Author of 'The Fairy Land of Science,' 'Detailed Tables for the Use of Junior Students.'

"It is an admirable book, written with a fulsome and accuracy which is rarely to be found in compendiums of this sort. Any one who reads carefully to the end will have got a fair general notion of the progress of physical science, and the means of pursuing more completely any special region of it which may be desired. It is an excellent book for young people, and one not to be despised by their elders."—Guardian.

Second Edition, Revised, demy 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, cloth, 3s.

THE GREAT ICE AGE,

AND ITS RELATION TO THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

By JAMES GEIKIE, LL.D. F.R.S., &c.

Of N.M. Geological Survey of Scotland.

"This book shows everywhere the marks of acute observation, wide research, and sound reasoning. It reveals from the cold and featureless of the Great Ice Age, and illustrates them very amply from those great tracks of Scotland in which glaciation has left its most distinct and most enduring marks."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE FRENCH GRAMMAR.

For the Use of Students preparing for the Local and other Examinations.

By V. LAURENT, B.L.,

Of the University of Paris, French Teacher at the Walsall and Lichfield Grammar Schools.

"It may safely be said that any student who can answer all these questions for himself without reference to the key at the end of the book has fairly mastered all the elementary part of the French language, and may forthwith enter himself as a candidate in this subject for a Local without fear of a disastrous result."—Examiner.

London:

EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1880.

CONTENTS.

LITERARY FRIVOLITIES	457
SATYRE ON THE SCIENCE OF LANGUAGE	458
GROOME'S ACCOUNT OF THE GIPKINS	460
A DU BOIS ON THE ENGLISH REFORMATION	461
NOVELS OF THE WEEK	462
THEOLOGICAL BOOKS—SCHOOL BOOKS	463-464
LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	464-466
A NEW EDITION OF WORDSWORTH; THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, THE KHITA LANGUAGE; THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AT EDINBURGH	466-467
LITERARY Gossip	467
SCIENCE—SWINSON'S INSECT VARIETY; SATURN'S RINGS; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES, MR. W. LAMMEL; MASTINGS; Gossip	468-469
FIVE ARTS—OVERBECK'S GEMMICHTE DER GEMMICHISCHEN PLASTIK; THE ROMAN REMAINS AT SANDOWN; 'SIR THOMAS MORE AND HIS FAMILY'; THE SITE OF THE ANCIENT PHAROS AT ALEXANDRIA; M. JULES FREDERICK JACQUEMART, THE NATIONAL COLLECTION OF COINS AT ATHENS; Gossip	470-473
MUSIC—M. OFFENBACH; Gossip	473
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip	474

LITERATURE

Literary Frivolities, Fancies, Follies, and Frolics. By William T. Dobson. (Chatto & Windus.)

THIS is a pleasant and amusing little volume. It contains a great deal of curious information, and shows a very creditable amount of research. But 'Literary Frivolities' is a name at once harsh and misleading; it should have been 'Literary Ingenuities,' or rather 'Poetical Ingenuities,' for the book deals almost exclusively with verses, and with verse which is full of ingenuity and careful pains. The chapter on "Literary Misfortunes" is distinctly out of place, and should have been omitted, and room might have been found for a chapter on the rebuz, which Camden honours with a corner in his collection. It is odd, too, that no space should be given to the double acrostic, which is the one form of "literary frivolity" that holds its own to-day. Bouts-rimés are out of fashion, centones are neglected, no one writes echo verses or lipograms, but double acrostics are produced with the same vigour as when they were first introduced, now many years ago. Literary dictionaries have been published to aid the anxious solvers, and every week some hundreds of half-idle people are working away at the "uprights" and the "lights." Occasionally these double acrostics are varied by triple acrostics, and now and then they have, strangely enough, been known to admit of two distinct solutions.

The first "frivolity" to which Mr. Dobson introduces his readers is "Alliteration," and he gives a number of curious instances in which alliteration has been carried to excess. But, wisely used of course, "apt alliteration's artful aid" is of real service to the poet and the rhetorician. It is often a distinct ornament, and from William Langland down to Mr. Swinburne it has enhanced the charm and melody of many a poet. Prose writers also find it serves to make a sentence memorable by giving it a sort of epigrammatic force; and whether it is Tacitus who says that the German tribes are divided "mutuo metu aut montibus," or Mr. Froude who speaks of "pluralities, prebendal stalls, and pony-gigging parsons," it is clear that the alliteration has added considerable strength to the phrase. When, however, alliteration is used only for its own sake, it soon lapses into absurdity, and the 'Pugna Porcorum' in Latin and 'The Siege of Belgrade' in English are perhaps the most notable productions of alliteration run riot.

On "Alphabetic Curiosities," which comes next in Mr. Dobson's book, we have nothing special to remark, unless it be that we rather wonder at the omission of the very best modern alphabet—C. S. C.'s "A is an angel of blushing eighteen."

Certainly the most childish of all forms of verse is the "Lipogram," which is the writing of a poem with one particular letter dropped. No grace or character is gained by this grotesque effort. It is merely labour lost, for it can give no pleasure to either the composer or the reader. Isaac D'Israeli tells the following story of a lipogrammatic poem:—"A Persian poet read to the celebrated Jami a gazel of his own composition, which Jami did not like; but the writer replied it was, notwithstanding, a very curious sonnet, for the letter Alif was not to be found in any one of the words. Jami sarcastically replied, 'You can do a better thing yet—take away all the letters from every word you have written.'"

Bouts-rimés were once as much in vogue as double acrostics are to-day. Rhymes were given, and the verses had then to be filled up. There were public competitions of bouts-rimés at Bath, under the patronage of the blue-stocking Lady Miller, and all the rank, beauty, and fashion of the place—the beaux and belles, old dandies and reigning toasts—entered into the contest, and the successful competitor was crowned with myrtle. Mrs. Delaney, too, was addicted to bouts-rimés, and very different people—Dr. Priestley and Mrs. Barbauld (then Miss Aikin)—worked at them in the spare evenings of their Warrington Academy life. In many bouts-rimés there was much cleverness, and this form of literary amusement is now, perhaps, unduly neglected. Mr. Dobson gives this noted instance by Horace Walpole on the words "brook, why, crook, I":—

I sit with my toes in a brook;
If any one asks me for why,
I hit them a rap with my crook;
"Tis sentiment kills me," says I.

"Macaronics," which come next, almost rise into a serious branch of literature. M. Delepierre's 'Macaronéana' shows how the idea of blending two languages into one has caught the fancy of men of almost every country and every period of letters. The effect produced is invariably comic, and occasionally some very happy lines are struck off in this curious form of versification. Mr. Dobson does not quote the best known of all English macaronics:—

Patres Conscripti took a boat and went to Philippi,
Trumpet unus erat, qui coatum scarlet habebat,
Sturmum surgebat et boatum overest-ebat, and the rest of it. The account here given of macaronics is, however, very good, and Mr. Dobson is quite right in reminding his readers that the fun of the thing depends less on the mere jumble of words than on the way in which a word of one language is given with an inflection taken from another. Italy is said to have produced the greatest amount of macaronic literature, and England comes second. Passing by "Chronograms," which are really too insane to amuse any rational creature, we get to "Echo Verses," which are sometimes most amusing. Mr. Dobson gives some excellent illustrations, especially one written by a Royalist in the time of the Great Rebellion. The latest good echo verses we have seen are attributed to an echo that haunts the Sultan's palace at Constantinople. Abdul Hamid is supposed to question it as to the intentions of the European powers and his own resources:—

L'Angleterre? Erre.
L'Autriche? Tiche.
La Prusse? Rume.
Mes principautés? Otées.
Mes caïmanes? Amen.
Mes Pashas? Achats.
Et Saléman? Ment.

"Jesuitical Verses" "are designed to give two very different meanings, according as they are read downwards or across," and they had, therefore, generally a political or religious significance. "Monosyllable Verses" are merely verses written (almost as if for children) in monosyllables, and one of the finest examples in our language is from Phineas Fletcher's 'Purple Island.' When we come to "Nonsense Verse," of which the charm consists in the nonsense sounding so like sense, the best illustration may be found in Pope's well-known 'Song by a Person of Quality.' What can be more delightful than

Mild Arcadians, ever blooming,
Nightly nodding o'er your flocks,
See my weary days consuming,
All beneath yon flowery rocks.

"Centones" (or mosaics) are perhaps the most ingenious of all these fantasies of literature. A whole poem is made up of detached lines taken from some other poet. Virgil seems to have been the great storehouse for centones, and Ausonius in early days and in later ones Capilupus distinguished themselves by their facility in adapting detached lines from Virgil to a new poem of their own. As in the case of macaronics, M. Delepierre is the great modern authority on the cento, in papers first communicated to the Philobiblon Society.

The history of "Anagrams" has been treated by Camden (to whom, however, Mr. Dobson does not allude), and in a separate volume by Mr. Wheatley. Anagrams, the only "frivolity" with which verse has nothing to do, have an almost historic interest. The story of Dame Eleanor Davies and the two anagrams, "Reveal, O Daniel," and "Never so mad a lady," is well known, and was not without its effect in the times that immediately preceded the great struggle between King and Commons. Indeed, the fancy that the rearrangement of letters in a name might indicate some future destiny has been common enough, but unfortunately the future has generally been known before the indication has been discovered. Thus Horatio Nelson forms "Honor est a Nilo," and Florence Nightingale "Flit on, cheering angel." Mr. Gladstone's name has often lent itself to the anagrammatist, and so, for the matter of that, has Tichborne's. Of course, in a perfect anagram the number of letters will be exact, and there should be neither excess nor defect. The famous anagram "Révolution Française," which is said to make "Un Corne la finira," is obviously incomplete.

The "Palindrome," which Mr. Dobson next mentions, is a line which reads, letter by letter, the same either backwards or forwards. "Able was I ere I saw Elba" is a palindrome which Napoleon may be supposed to have uttered. But here, as in other cases, the ingenuity is all, and the palindrome seems devoid of use or charm.

"Literary Misfortunes," as we have already said, is a chapter entirely out of place, and "Shaped Poems," or poems formed into the shape of wings or bottles or crosses, are too fantastic to give the slightest pleasure, even when George Herbert uses them.

"Prose Poems" are the last subject of which Mr. Dobson treats, and this is the poorest part of the book. Accidental versification is sometimes very singular, and we all recall instances from Cicero and from the English Bible. Occasionally, too, when the verses are purposely introduced they are effective, and Dickens has on more than one occasion brought them in with singular felicity. Mr. Dobson quotes these, but he also quotes a number of pieces from some American book, of which the feeble humour is not heightened by the mere fact that it takes the outward form of prose, whereas it is really the most obvious verse. A good prose poem should mislead by its stops and pauses, and be capable of reading into tolerable prose. One rather celebrated prose poem is not mentioned here, and a few lines of it may bear repetition. It is Dr. Maginn's description of Disraeli, who was then scarcely more than a boy, and whose portrait had been taken by Macbride:—

"O reader dear, do pray look here, and you will spy the curly hair and forehead fair, and nose so high, and gleaming eye, of Benjamin Dis-ra-e-li, the wondrous boy who wrote 'Alroy' in rhyme and prose, only to show how long ago victorious Judah's lion-banner rose."

Among Macaulay's letters there is one that begins in well-hidden verse. It is to his sister Hannah:—

"My Darling,—Why am I such a fool as to write to a gipsy at Liverpool, who fancies that none is so good as she if she sends one letter for my three? A lazyabit, whose fingers tire in penning a page in reply to a quire! There, miss, you read all the first sentence of my epistle, and never knew that you were reading verse."

We may end as we began, by commending "Literary Frivolities" as a capital book of its sort.

Introduction to the Science of Language. By A. H. Sayce. 2 vols. (C. Kegan Paul & Co.)

In these two volumes Mr. Sayce attempts "to give a systematic account of the science of language, its nature, its progress, and its aims, which shall be at the same time as thorough and exhaustive as our present knowledge and materials allow." He defends himself from the charge of having treated some parts of his subject at unnecessary length—more especially the historical sketch of the science given in his first chapter. For that chapter no defence is needed; a better summary was never written.

The tendency of each section of philologists is stated clearly and criticized briefly but effectively. At the same time it must be confessed that the book is occasionally redundant. We find in different chapters the same argument recurring with the same examples, as though a very large commonplace book had been reduced to chapters at different times and for different purposes. The conclusions of chapters i. and ii. (pp. 68 and 162) are almost identical. Sometimes, on the other hand, we find inconsistencies, e.g., at i. 381 the Chinese language is spoken of as "instinct with the progressive intelligence and cultivated life of the people," whereas at ii. 229 it is "a timeworn and decaying form of speech." Generally the book suffers from a plethora of illustration, which makes the argument difficult to follow. Examples are hurled upon the reader from every least-known language in the world. Now we agree with Mr. Sayce in holding that valuable aid may often be obtained from savage dialects; but if the help can be got from better-known languages, it is as well to obtain it nearer home. When the reader is taken, e.g., to Dayak for the proof of a principle, he feels that he should grasp the argument better if he knew a little of that language, and that he should be thankful if it could have been illustrated from the more familiar Greek, Latin, or Sanscrit. Mr. Sayce will see in this the very spirit which he most condemns—that which would draw all philological arguments from the Aryan languages alone. But there is a danger in running too far in the opposite direction, and there is sound sense in the old principle that you cannot argue effectually from any family of languages unless you know one of them thoroughly. In saying this we by no means wish to depreciate Mr. Sayce's accuracy; and the extent of his knowledge probably exceeds that of any other English philologist.

The theories which underlie the present work have been already set forth, Mr. Sayce says, in his "Principles of Comparative Philology." Against some of those theories we protested in reviewing that book, and as we are still unconvinced of their truth, we must protest again. Mr. Sayce says in his preface that it matters little for the present work whether those theories be right or wrong; that an introduction has to deal mainly with "the statement and arrangement of ascertained facts." But this cannot be admitted. The facts are "arranged" to suit a certain hypothesis, and some are taken, some are left; the same facts would produce a different effect in a different combination; and, lastly, those facts will inevitably seem to a philologist the best "ascertained" which fit best into his own theories. Mr. Sayce is apt to bring forward such "facts" without any hint that they are not at all universally accepted. As a single instance, a particular view of the history of case-suffixes is laid down on the ground that "Bergaigne has made it clear" (i. 85), or "M. Bergaigne has shown," &c. (i. 119). Now M. Bergaigne is an able man, and his researches are interesting, but his view is not the only view of the history of the cases, and from the very nature of the question there can be no criterion by which it can be determined to be even more probable than other views. It is not, therefore, quite right in an 'Introduction to the Science of Language' to bring forward such a view as certain and ignore all others.

We come now to some of the main points on which we differ from Mr. Sayce. First and foremost is his doctrine of the "sentence-word." According to him "language begins with sentences, not with words" (i. 111). "All language must be significant; but until the whole sentence is uttered, until the whole thought which lies behind it is expressed, this cannot be the case." The sentence is the unit, which may be broken up; but that is done by the grammarian, not by the speaker. As an example we have the sentence "Don't do that," which, we readily concede, we generally pronounce as one word; it is the "grammarian" who consciously breaks it up into the four words, Do not do that. "Sentences may be any length; they may consist of a single syllable, like go or yes, or they may have to be expressed by a large number of separate words"; but "unless the sounds we utter are combined into a sentence, they have no more meaning than the cries of the jackal or the yelping of the cur." "The sentence, in short, is the only unit which language can know, and the ultimate starting-point of all our linguistic inquiries" (i. 113). "All the facts at our disposal tend to show that the roots of speech, or, at all events, the earliest sentence-words, out of which the later languages of mankind have sprung, were polysyllabic" (i. 118). "The first utterances of mankind were polysyllabic, though not, perhaps, of such monstrous length as the sentence-words of Esquimaux or Algonquin" (i. 119). Consequently the origin of language may best be studied in the polysynthetic dialects of America. In these "the words that make up a sentence are stripped of their grammatical terminations, and then fused into a single word of monstrous length and appearance. Thus the Algonquin would say wut-ap-pé-nit-tuk-gus'-sun-noo-wet-unk'-quok if he wished to express the sentence 'he, falling on his knees, worshipped him,' and this cumbersome compound denotes exactly what we split up into seven words. These polysynthetic languages are an interesting survival of the early condition of language everywhere."—I. 123.

We do not think that Mr. Sayce ever describes very fully the way in which he conceives that these "undifferentiated sentence-words" developed into the different forms of human speech. If we understand him rightly, the early man compared these great polysyllables with each other, and by degrees those parts in each which were the same attached themselves to some one idea, and so became by degrees the term by which that idea was denoted. The development differed with different peoples: one language became polysynthetic, another isolating, another agglutinative, another inflectional, according to "antecedent circumstances" (so Mr. Sayce somewhat mysteriously, but no doubt wisely, puts it at i. 378), which "combined to produce a certain conception of the outward world and the relation of things to each other and to the mind, altogether unlike the conception which grew up in other cases"; and hence the different character of their languages. A little reflection showed us that this was Mr. Sayce's way of saying that the causes why they differed must remain unknown. Inflectional languages were produced by the rise of similar terminations—the ends of sentences which were ground down till they became meaningless—something like the rudimentary tail of the human skeleton, if the comparison be not irreverent, of which we shall have more to say anon.

We believe and hope that we have set forth Mr. Sayce's doctrine fairly and clearly. It must be conceded that at first it looks very absurd; but that is because it is utterly opposed to the ordinary practice and to the ordinary views of philologists. It is a tenable view. We will put forward as briefly as we can a few reasons to show why we think it wrong. To discuss the whole of Mr. Sayce's chapters and state fully our disagreement with them would take up much more space than can be allowed to an article of this nature.

1. Together with his doctrine of the original sentence-word, Mr. Sayce holds that "the origin of language is to be sought in gestures, onomatopœia, and, to a limited extent, interjectional cries." In this we quite agree, though we should give the third more importance. But as the original sentence was polysyllabic it follows that the onomatopœic words and the cries must have been polysyllabic also. New onomatopœic words are almost exclusively also reduplicated, that is, they consist of one and the same syllable twice or thrice repeated. The interjectional cry is presumably monosyllabic, but, supposing that it were polysyllabic, is it likely to have been anything but the same syllable repeated? Mr. Sayce abstains from giving any imaginary specimen of a sentence-word, but it is only possible to test his theory by imagining one. Does he, then, suppose that any speechless savage who wanted (as he certainly must have often wanted) to say "Don't do that," would have put the same number of different syllables into his polysyllabic howl? The savage might have said "Kā," or "Gā," or what not; if very excited he might have said "Kākākā"; in fact, he would have used reduplication. Neither onomatopœia nor interjection supplies us with any probable variation in the "original polysyllable." Mr. Sayce here provides us with evidence; at ii. 312 he mentions some interesting observations made by M. Taine on his daughter's attempts at utterance in the first months of her life: now all her articulate sounds are reduplications with two exceptions, which are monosyllables. The probability here is all against Mr. Sayce, and he has given no evidence on the other side.

2. We assume a certain uniformity in speech as in other things, that the same causes which operate now have operated universally from the beginning, and that they led then to like results. We combine (whatever Mr. Sayce may say) our words now into a sentence: the child attaches some meaning to each individual word before it combines it with others. This Mr. Sayce admits for the beginnings of Aryan speech; he believes, e.g., that yuddh, to fight, is made up of yw, to join, and dhs, to set. We believe that the Mexicans and North Americans also combined from the beginning separate sound-complexes (call them "words," "bases," or "roots," or what you will) into their polysynthetic sentences—not that they decomposed those polysyllables into the separate words. Mr.

Sayce allows (at ii. 279) that in Mexican the component words are distinct from the complex; it is true that he thinks that they have become so, not that they were originally; at ii. 218 the same is granted for the Greenlanders. In the passage about Algonquin quoted above Mr. Sayce speaks of "stripping the words of their original terminations and then combining them." Is this a mere slip? or, if not, what claim has his Cherokee example (ii. 218) nat-ah-l-in-ah, "bring us the boat," to be older than the component parts, nat-ah, to bring; ah-l-in-ah, boat, and ah, we? Did the Mexican say ah-ah-l-in-ah, "I flowers look for," before the time when ah conveyed to his mind the idea of a "flower"? We require more evidence than we now have to make us believe that. Certainly Mr. Trumbull's investigations do not seem to favour the view. We refer especially to his article 'On the Algonkin Verb,' in the Transactions of the American Philological Association for 1876.

3. Mr. Sayce (i. 377) argues thus: "If the object of language is to express thought, that thought should be expressed as a whole, as in a picture." Hence he infers that the polysynthetic is the most natural, if not the clearest, expression of thought. But everything here depends on what we mean by "thought." "I want food" is a thought; and here we know that a single word sufficed to a Roman, and probably a single syllable sufficed to the original savage. "I strike him with a sword to kill him" is another thought. Must all this be expressed polysynthetically? Or, since the two parts "with a sword" and "to kill him" can be detached, and yet leave a complete "thought," is there any reason why that thought as expressed in language should not have been from the first equally divided?

4. It is noteworthy that Mr. Sayce is no disbeliever in roots. He constantly refers to them. At i. 160 he says that "beyond the barrier of roots the science of language cannot pass." Yet his sentence-words lie far beyond that barrier. A root is contained implicitly in each of them; but at that sentence-word itself we cannot get. It seems inconsistent to say "the sentence-word must be the ultimate starting-point of all linguistic inquiries."

We hold it probable that articulate language arose out of interjectional cries, and to some extent onomatopœias. One such cry might by degrees come to express the idea of "want," though at first it indefinitely expressed "I want food," or the like. Another such cry, more or less different, would similarly come to express "food," "eating," &c. Here we agree with Mr. Wedgwood, Canon Farrar, and others. But we think they are wrong when they attempt to fix upon certain roots as the natural exponents of certain ideas, forgetting the immense time which must have elapsed between the beginnings of speech and the Aryan root-period, and the consequent changes in form which the so-called roots must have undergone. To do this is a great error. But Mr. Sayce seems to be guilty of a parallel one when he leaps from the beginnings of speech to polysyntheticism. Between the two is a great gulf.

On Mr. Sayce's other great heresy we must be more brief. If any one ever maintained that all languages must pass through the usual evolution from isolating to agglutinative, and from that to inflectional, Mr. Sayce's protest will not be without its use. He maintains that each language must abide within its own type. An Ethiopian may change his skin as easily as the character of his language, which is due to the "antecedent circumstances," &c. But the fact that Chinese has never changed from the isolating stage is really no proof that other languages could not change. Mr. Sayce's view of the origin of inflections has been already mentioned. They are the ends of long polysynthetic words which have by degrees become meaningless. He is, of course, well aware that many suffixes, such as our -ly and -ness, or -mi, -si, -ti, the old personal endings of the Aryan verb, had originally a meaning. But he boldly maintains that if the meaningless suffixes which are the essence of the inflectional system had not been previously in use, such forms as -ly and -ness could never have come into use; they only followed the analogy of other suffixes which were unmeaning from the very beginning. But this seems contrary to fact. Such suffixes did not come into use all at once. Men surely still were conscious of the meaning of such words even after they had begun to employ them as suffixes. But this would be impossible on Mr. Sayce's principle that a suffix must be meaningless. Whether is the more probable—that all suffixes were developed out of words which once had a meaning, as many of them (it is universally allowed) were developed, or that certain syllables, from the first meaningless, and therefore naturally little noted, should yet have been able to establish themselves as the exponents of rather definite grammatical relations? There does not seem to us much doubt about the answer. Indeed, Mr. Sayce is sometimes driven by the facts into a little inconsistency. Despite the theory that agglutinative must be always agglutinative and inflectional inflectional, we find mention at ii. 164 of a "certain dualism" in Aryan speech; we are told that "Aryan speech entered upon its agglutinative stage," and comp. ii. 186; also contrary cases are allowed where "the agglutinated word has become a fiction" (i. 393). Surely if these things could be the leopard might change its spots, and language might vary its type. Aryan languages have commonly changed from synthesis to analysis. Is the change from agglutination to inflection a greater one?

At i. 216 an attack is made on the doctrine of an originally common Aryan language, on the ground that "as far back as we go, we find ourselves in the presence of allied dialects, never of a single tongue." The evidence is (1) the existence of varying forms like Greek θυγάτηρ and Sanscrit duhitār—but such need not show anything more than that a common word has suffered phonetic change in one of the languages; and (2) the existence of two pronominal stems, as and ts—but why should there not be two?—they were complementary in use. It would be as much to the point to say that the Romans had two verbs, fero and tuli. Then surely the term "dialect" is meaningless except as a dialect of a language. We speak of dialects of English, which differ as much as any dialects of the original speech can be shown to have done, but we regard them as dialects of one English language. The theory that dialects or languages tend to fall into each other by the influence of civilization, and that so we pass from variety to unity of speech, rests on a confusion. Civilization needs a common speech, but that common speech is one dialect, which has supplanted the rest by virtue of literature or some other cause. Devonshire has not assimilated to Cumberland because we have one literary language in England, and still less has either of them passed into literary English. No doubt in time each of those dialects may die out, and one language alone be spoken in England. But that is a very different thing. It is no result of natural development of language. The original Aryan language (real or supposed) is another point on which Mr. Sayce seems hardly consistent with himself. At i. 216 he writes, "Fick's dictionary of the parent-Aryan is as much the creation of the comparative philologist's closet as Schleicher's 'restoration' of its grammatical forms." Yet the "parent-Aryan" is often elsewhere referred to by him as something real and known (e.g. i. 291, &c.), and at ii. 214 we have a full account of the original civilization of the race, avowedly based on the very records of language which Fick's dictionary contains. Yet the language and the civilization stand or fall together. We know both or we know neither.

The chapter (iii.) on "Change in Language" is good excepting the few pages (i. 185-193) in which "emphasis" is described as one of the causes of change. Here the examples are sometimes wrong, sometimes uncertain. An odd illustration is taken from Carlyle's use of "the four airts" instead of "the four cardinal points"; the argument would require that Carlyle had invented the word, or at least used it in a new sense, which after him became permanent. But in truth emphasis is far too special and individual ever to be put by the side of ease of articulation as a principle of change in language. Further on in the chapter (205-208) we have a description of "women's languages." Mr. Sayce has said (202) that "laziness" has much to do with the origin of dialects; then he goes on to say that dialects spring up rapidly among savage tribes, and so he gets to women's languages. But surely they are no illustration of laziness as a cause of change. Here, as elsewhere, Mr. Sayce is led away by his superabundance of illustration, to the detriment of his argument.

We have dwelt so much on the points in which we differ from Mr. Sayce that we have left ourselves no room to say where we agree with him. The sixth, seventh, and eighth chapters, dealing with the classification of languages, and describing at some length the peculiarities of the different types of speech, seem to us very good, except where the heresies which we have tried to combat peep in. The following chapter, on "Comparative Mythology," is clear and moderate. Throughout the work the facts of language seem to be very accurately given.

In Gipsy Tents. By Francis Hindes Groome. (Edinburgh, Nimmo & Co.)

MR. GROOME is exceptionally qualified to describe gipsies, having lived much among them and gained their confidence to a remarkable extent. His account of their manners and customs, therefore, is a valuable contribution to the materials on which the future historian must draw for a picture of their life and a summary of their opinions. A large amount of information is contained in it, partly gathered from the lips of English gipsies, and partly gleaned from books and articles which have been devoted, abroad and at home, to Romani matters. But this has been kept for the most part in the background, being often relegated to the region of foot-notes, the author's main desire having evidently been to produce a book which might attract readers of all kinds, bringing before their eyes various types of gipsy life, and allowing the characters who figure upon his stage to speak to a great extent for themselves. He has tried to represent the gipsies, he says, as he has found them, taking neither the best nor the worst of their tribe, but those whom he has longest known; and into their mouths he has put such tales and traditions characteristic of their race as he has been able to collect from many sources, blending them with their simple chat as they sit at tea or smoke their pipes in front of their tents. The romantic element in gipsy life (on which too much stress has often been laid) he has wisely all but ignored. It figures, however, in the anonymous 'Gipsy Experiences' (pp. 322-371), reprinted from the Illustrated London News, in which those articles appeared nearly thirty years ago, contributed, if we are not mistaken, by the late Mr. Tom Taylor.

Several of Mr. Groome's gipsy acquaintances appear in his book under their real names, and of two of them lithographed portraits are given. The one is Sylvester Boswell, the author of a paper on 'Romani,' read not long ago at one of the meetings of the Manchester Literary Club, and also of a charming certificate of his own merits, dictated by him to Dr. Smart, joint author with Mr. Crofton of that excellent work, 'The Dialect of the English Gipsies.' According to his own testimony, he is "a well-known and popular gipsy," and "one of the best characters that ever was known in the name of a gipsy, which he is true bred and born"; in addition to which he is "a man which is most trustworthy with any amount of property in his care, also possessed of learning according to what he has been taught, also knowing a little of every profession in life according to honest industry." But his principal reason for thinking well of himself is that "no other man found in no nation by proof of learned men can be found for his great knowledge of understanding and grammar of the original gipsy true language." The other is the Welsh harper, John Roberts, "a hale old man of middle stature, with keen grey eyes, sharp-cut intelligent features, and snowy hair, who, to look at, might be a divine, a poet, or a legislator—anything rather than a 'stancient Romani chaf.'" There is no trace of the Bohemian to be recognized in John Roberts, if his portrait can be taken as evidence of his personal appearance. Nor is it a very unusual thing for gipsies to succeed in life, or to assume the appearance of the people among whom they move. One of them, for instance, drives a hansom cab in London, and another is proprietor of thirteen cabs. With horse-dealing gipsies have long been connected, and in the western states of America, where no constable calls upon them to move on, many of their number possess great herds of horses, and have acquired much money. Mr. Leland affirms that no pure gipsy ever finds difficulty in producing ten or even twenty pounds if it is needed, and the rents which are paid to the owners of fields by the various families who encamp in them, if they could be added together, would amount yearly to a considerable sum. It is the half-breed class, composed for the most part of tramps who have little if any Romani blood in their veins, which has of late years brought discredit on the gipsy name in England, and to that class ought to be confined the opprobrious language which Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, has levelled at the English gipsies in general, and which has stirred up so much wrath in Mr. Groome's mind that the opening of his preface has been rendered nearly incoherent. Mr. Smith's charges were so exaggerated that they were scarcely worthy of being seriously answered; but they will have done good if they lead to any amelioration of the gipsies' lot. With respect to the means of bringing about this change for the better, Mr. Groome recommends that "a nominal census should be taken of Romani dwellers in tents and caravans." This, he thinks, might be accomplished within a year by a couple of men acquainted with the Romani tongue, who would visit the great race-meetings, the chief fairs, and the other places to which gipsies are in the habit of resorting. It seems that the police force could furnish competent census-takers, or such gipsies as John Roberts and his sons might be employed upon the task. And Mr. Groome does not disapprove of Mr. George Smith's plan of registering and numbering "all tents, shows, caravans, auctioneers' vans, and like places used as dwellings," and placing them under the supervision of the sanitary inspectors and School Board officers in every town and village. The education of the children might then be ensured, for "a book similar to the half-time book," in which their names and attendance at school could be entered, might be taken about the country as they travel, and be endorsed by the master of the school nearest to their halting-place. Our author does not think, however, that the interference of the sanitary inspector is by any means needed; for the open-air life of the gipsy is as conducive to health as the confined existence of the dweller in city slums is provocative of disease. In confirmation of this statement he cites the evidence afforded by the families of some of his gipsy friends, such as:—

"Bazens Clifton (16 children, 15 living); Silvanus Lovell (13 children, 12 living); Sylvester Boswell (8 children, 7 living); Noah Boswell (14 children, 13 living); Edward Taylor (13 children, 10 living); Elijah Smith (9 children, 8 living); Ezekiel Boswell (6 children, 4 living); John Wood (7 children, all living); and Harry Organ, half-breed (6 children, all living)."

That gipsies are usually long-lived is well known, though too much weight must not be accorded to such evidence as that of the tombstones in Turvey churchyard to the memory of "James Smith, who died May 10th, 1822, aged 105 years," and "Widow Elizabeth Robinson, died January 20th, 1825, aged 105 years." Mr. Groome has himself known two gipsy great-grand-mothers, and has spoken with Betsy Letherlund, who claimed to have been christened at Chinnor in 1763, and who died at Tring in 1874. With regard to gipsy burial Mr. Groome has collected a number of interesting statements. He has never met a gipsy, he says, "whose forefathers, to his knowledge, had ever had other than decent Christian burial," and he adds in a note:—

"Burial in Christian churchyards was first conceded to the Montenegrine gipsies under Prince Danilo (1851-60), and it had probably been denied to the forefathers of those gipsies, who made their appearance in Western Europe in 1417. If so, one can understand why gipsies should to this day set such high store on Christian sepulture, token of their escape from the degradation, it may be from the bondage, of untold centuries."

Mr. Groome supplies a summary of the opinions recently expressed by various scholars on the subject of the period at which gipsies made their first appearance in Europe, but wisely refrains from making any rash assertions with regard to it. He comments to the notice of English archaeologists "M. Bataillard's theory that prehistoric Europe gained from the gipsies its knowledge of metallurgy," against which, he remarks, "history has nothing to object, our earliest certain knowledge of gipsies in Europe showing them as slaves in Wallachia in 1372, and as obtaining a renewal of privileges at Nauplia in 1398." As to whether their language points to an early or to a late migration from India philologists differ:—

"Prof. Ascoli, in his 'Saggi Indiani' (1876), vol. ii. pp. 312-17, is led by the 'peculiar Sanskrit integrity' of Romanes to conclusions according with the prehistoric theory. Its ablest opponent, Dr. F. Miklosich, fixes the first appearance of gipsies in Europe at 810 A.D. (art. 'Zigeuner,' in Meyer's 'Conv.-Lexikon,' 1878). And in Brockhaus's 'Conv.-Lexikon' (1879) Prof. Pott judiciously opines that the date of such appearance is unknown. In favour of the theory we have the negative testimony of the Byzantine annalists, who are silent as to any gipsy immigration; and there is the positive fact that our modern gipsies are the chief, often the only, farriers, coppermiths, bell-founders, and armourers in Hungary and throughout the Balkan peninsula."

In Montenegro, it seems, the smith's craft is held in such bad repute "that when, in 1872, the Government established an arsenal at Riska, no natives could be found to fill its well-paid posts." It is going rather too far to say that "certain it is that Montenegrin independence was saved by weapons of gipsy workmanship," but for a great deal of useful work the inhabitants of the Black Mountain have long been undoubtedly indebted to gipsy hands. That no great amount of gratitude has been evinced in return is not surprising. In the east of Europe gipsies for the most part bear an evil name, and are not undeserving of it. It is unfortunate that we do not possess fuller accounts of the first gipsy immigrants into our own country. Some excuse might possibly be pleaded for the apparently unreasonable ferocity of the enactments against "Egyptians," if it could be shown that those nomads, when they first landed upon our shores, were as degraded a race as their far-away cousins in Hungary or Wallachia, whose descendants are now divided by so wide a moral gulf from the well-behaved wanderers with whom Mr. Groome makes us familiarly acquainted in his instructive and entertaining book.

Catherine d'Aragon et les Origines du Schisme Anglican. Par Albert du Boys. (Paris, Victor Palmé.)

DEDICATED to Cardinal Newman, this work is avowedly written for the purpose of showing that the English Reformation was brought about by tyranny and violence. The proposition is, on the face of it, not easy to dispute, yet it may be stated in such a manner as to provoke controversy. M. du Boys tells his readers, in fact, not that the English Reformation but that the English Church was so established, and those who agree with him in regarding Henry VIII. as that Church's founder must, of course, accept his conclusion. Cardinal Newman himself in a letter to the author puts the case in a still more undeniable way when he says that "the Anglican Church became the established religion by the application of tyrannical force"; and we may cordially agree with his Eminence in the hope "that now there are very few of its members who wish to use such means of upholding it." The only criticism that can be made on such a humane and excellent sentiment is that it seems to involve a slight confusion of ideas. If we were told that certain animals had acquired a variety of curious accomplishments owing to an unsparring application of the whip, would it not seem rather superfluous in any one kindly to express a hope that very few of them would desire a continuance or repetition of the process? There were certainly not many members of the Church of England even in the days of Henry VIII. "who wished to use such means of upholding it"; and the real question is whether the tyranny of that very despotic king succeeded in driving the Church into a false position, or whether, severe and painful as it was, it exerted an influence that was upon the whole purifying and beneficial.

Into that question, of course, it is not our business to enter. We are only concerned with the historical facts of the case as set forth by M. du Boys. And if it be a point gained, as it certainly is, for historic truth and justice, that men should at length have a clear view of the odious tyranny and wrong in the midst of which the Reformation was cradled, the book before us leaves on that point little to be desired. The materials for drawing the picture have of late been accumulating fast, and M. du Boys has not neglected his opportunities. More revelations may, perhaps, even yet be expected; but the despatches and State papers already published, including not only those described in the late Prof. Brewer's Calendar, but also those edited by Don Pascual de Gayangos from the Spanish archives, afford the most unquestionable evidence that the acts which first led to the separation of England and Rome were due simply to lawless passion and unbridled despotism.

All this M. du Boys makes sufficiently apparent; and yet it is impossible to say much of his work as an historian. We do not by any means impeach his candour, but it is clear he has not made himself master of the facts except within such a very limited range that his book is more an historical argument than a history. To a philosophical historian some questions might occur as to the predisposing causes which made it possible for despotism in the sixteenth century to bring about a revolution which it could never have effected at any earlier period. Who can imagine a pope like Clement VII. in the thirteenth century? Compare for a moment such a pontiff, striving in vain to steer his course in safety between the imperious wills of kings and emperors, with the lordly Boniface VIII. admonishing the sovereigns of the earth with his paternal Ausculda, fili. How came popes to have become so weak and sovereigns so strong? We need not expect M. du Boys to answer this inquiry; it has probably never occurred to him. But even within the strict limits of his subject his reading is evidently very imperfect, and the errors to which he has committed himself are sometimes extraordinary. Thus he gives a particular account of the betrothal of Henry VIII. to Catherine in 1504 at the palace of the Bishop of Salisbury, when objections were alleged against the marriage by one divine and replied to by another. This was, according to the date given, five years before Henry came to the throne. But the fact is there is no warrant for stating that such a ceremony ever took place at all. The authority adduced for it is seen in a foot-note:—"Les papiers de Hardick [sic], 1-13, cités par Hallam"; so that it would seem the statement is taken second-hand. But on reference to the Hardwick State papers themselves we find that Hallam is mistaken; for the document is not even a description of anything that was actually done; still less does it refer to the betrothal of Henry and Catherine. It is simply a programme of proceedings intended to be held in connexion with Catherine's first marriage to Prince Arthur, so that it has absolutely no bearing on Henry's engagement at all.

Again, in connexion with this early part of Catherine's history M. du Boys has to give some account of the negotiations between Henry VII. and Ferdinand of Arragon, and he takes occasion to tell the reader in a foot-note that Henry, notwithstanding his "prétendu machiavélisme," was the dupe of Ferdinand's superior skill. In proof of this he cites a passage from Mignet's 'Rivalités de François I. et de Charles-Quint,' in which he actually misreads "Henri VII." for "Henri VIII.," and attributes to the former the disastrous expedition to Guienne, which the wily Ferdinand induced the latter to undertake for the sole benefit of Spain! It seems scarcely conceivable that a writer who undertakes to tell the story of Catherine of Arragon, and ventures to pass judgment on the policy of Henry VII., should be so exceedingly ignorant as not to know that this expedition was sent out by Henry VIII. and not by his father. Yet even if his reading was so very limited, he might have been set right by the very words of the passage which he has quoted from Mignet, who says Henry thus assisted his beau-père to gain possession of Navarre. It was a piece of simplicity that marked the youth and inexperience of Henry VIII. at the very commencement of his reign, as unlike the policy of Henry VII. as it was unlike the later policy of Henry VIII. himself.

In the later portion of his narrative M. du Boys is preserved from committing blunders equally gross by the fact that all the available information is contained in the Calendars of Prof. Brewer and Don Pascual de Gayangos, so that it is absolutely unnecessary to go further. Yet even here he cannot walk quite steadily, but his imagination is continually haunted by some antiquated view of the subject which recent researches ought surely to have effectually dissipated. Thus, after the lucid discussion of the question in Prof. Brewer's last introduction, it seems strange to find any one still adhering to the old belief that it was Wolsey who put the scruple into the king's head as to the validity of his marriage. Wolsey, we are told, suggested this scruple with the purely political object of drawing the king over to a French alliance; and Henry VIII. at first rather repelled the idea, and warned Wolsey of the very serious responsibility he incurred by bringing it before him. For statements so improbable as this it is simply futile to quote the authority even of contemporary writers like Polydore Vergil and Tyndale, who had no better means of judging than the world at large, and were besides notoriously hostile to Wolsey. Cavendish, who knew the cardinal better, states precisely the reverse. It was the king who first broached the matter to the cardinal, and it was the cardinal who, on the very first suggestion of it, fell on his knees and implored the king to beware of a step so hazardous and in every way impolitic. That this was the real state of the case it surely requires no deep penetration to comprehend. Wolsey could not have been the great practical statesman that he was if he had actually himself originated that project which was the cause of his final overthrow. In short, wherever he is not following closely in the track of contemporary documents, there is no security that M. du Boys will not lose himself in a fog. For the history of three or four eventful years he has such full and perfect guidance in the Calendars that it is hardly possible for him to go wrong; and yet, even in relation to the divorce question itself, we see that he cannot help occasionally taking his eyes off his guides and allowing himself to stumble into the ditch by the wayside. There are also some strange touches here and there which betray an ignorance or forgetfulness of elementary truths altogether extraordinary in one who has studied history in State papers. English agents are described in one place as representing to the Pope the popular feeling "in Great Britain" (p. 260). Elsewhere Wolsey's suppression of the small monasteries, whose endowments he applied to his colleges, is said to have made him unpopular "with the Catholics" (p. 237). M. du Boys knows that Protestants dislike monasteries at the present day, and seems, therefore, to think that any movement for the suppression of religious houses must have been resented by a Catholic party even before the Reformation. He forgets that this suppression was expressly sanctioned by the Pope himself, and was carried out by the authority of Papal bulls, so that those who opposed it might rather be considered enemies than friends of the see of Rome. However Wolsey may have merited the name of a Reformer,—at least in intention,—it was certainly not he who broke up the ancient system or government of the Church.

But with all its defects and blemishes this work is an honest history, and may be read with profit by those who desire to take a dispassionate view of a subject which has been far too often treated in a spirit of blind partisanship. Happily the essential facts of the story are now too manifest to be impugned.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

Johnny Ludlow. Second Series. By Mrs. Henry Wood. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)
Black Abbey. By M. Crommalin. 3 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)
Roy and Viola. By Mrs. Forrester. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

THREE more volumes of stories by "Johnny Ludlow," with much of the freshness and all the simple pathos of the original series, will be a welcome gift to any reader who can dispense with plot and sensation in return for those less exciting charms. Mrs. Henry Wood does herself mere justice by throwing off the disguise under which she has hitherto figured before the public, and it would not be fair to deprive her of the credit which she legitimately won for herself under cover of her pseudonym. The stories now printed are not at all below the average of those first published; and if the earlier contributions of "Johnny Ludlow" to the Argosy were received with somewhat of the unstinted favour generally accorded to good work from an anonymous and, presumably, a new writer, Mrs. Wood deserves to retain her laurels for having struck out such a thoroughly distinct and pleasant path in fiction. The best characteristic of these short tales—there are nineteen in the three volumes—is the manner of their relation, quiet and yet vigorous, combining humour with pathos, and artlessly avoiding the temptation to exaggerate. If it were not for virtues of this kind, perhaps the majority of them would seriously merit the title borne by one of the series, as being 'Hardly Worth Telling.' But, as it is, they are all worth telling, or rather "Johnny Ludlow" is always worth listening to. If the action turns upon the loss of a five-pound note there is a drama wrapped up in it, and yet not more than the plan of the story fairly allows, but enough to be really interesting without ceasing to be natural and lifelike. The thread which connects the entire series of tales, moreover, is strong enough to bear them; Johnny and his relatives continue to interest us in their own story, which develops pace by pace with the history of the people amongst whom they live. On the whole, Mrs. Wood has made a welcome addition to the list of contemporary works of fiction, for which her readers will be grateful.

'Black Abbey' is decidedly superior to the ordinary run of novels, and deserves a good word from all who can discriminate between careful workmanship and inertistic looseness. It is a great thing in these days if a writer of romance knows the meaning of words, and, still better, the meaning of expressions and actions. It is a great thing if, knowing this, he is at pains continually to make his characters talk and act as real men and women might be expected to do. The author of 'Black Abbey' behaves more than fairly well in these respects, and the result is a book which can be read smoothly and with satisfaction. The plot is not involved, the drama is enacted within a narrow compass, and yet so well do the various personages perform their parts in the representation that the stage never seems to be bare, and the interest of the spectator is rarely allowed to flag. Black Abbey is a village—and also a mansion—in the north of Ireland, where the scene of the story is almost exclusively laid. The characters are an absentee landlord, who only shows himself about once in six months, staying just long enough to make everybody miserable; his two grandchildren, Hector and Ailie, with a little ward, Nannie White; a Presbyterian minister, his nephew, Luke Cosby, and his grandchild, Bella Hawthorn. The master of Black Abbey, Mr. de Burgo, is a repulsively selfish and cruel old man, and the author describes somewhat too minutely the severity of the treatment which he accords to the little girls. He is perhaps the least natural character in the book. The children grow up together, and Hector manages to win the love of both Nannie and Bella, whilst Ailie captivates Luke Cosby. It is with the love story of the two first-mentioned girls that we have principally to do; and this story is as pathetic as any one could wish it to be. The real heroine of the book, Nannie White, is charmingly drawn, and we are engrossed in her good and evil fortunes to the last page. Bella Hawthorn is a handsome Delilah, who successfully tries her wiles upon the simple giant Hector, to the great grief of the scrupulous old minister. She is less distinctly sketched than her rival Nannie, but still there are signs that the author has devoted a good deal of labour to the portraiture of the two girls. 'Black Abbey' cannot claim to be a novel of the highest class, whether it is regarded as a study of character or as a narrative; but it is a book that may be read with pleasure, and that will hold its own amongst nine-tenths of the fiction of the day.

There is not much in 'Roy and Viola' to justify the time which must be wasted in its perusal or which may have been spent in its production. Yet the tone is healthier than in most of Mrs. Forrester's novels. There is no sensational infraction of the seventh commandment, no lively descriptions of the demi-monde, none of that peculiar flavouring which renders this author's works so palatable to a certain class of readers. On the cover of the book there are four violets, and a band with the names of the hero and heroine inscribed thereon. Were these four violets and band intended to illustrate the divisions in the heroine's life and her final union with Sir Douglas Roy? If so, it must be owned that there was not the same monotony in the life of Viola as is typified on the binding. The hero, Sir Douglas Roy, is a pattern man, almost without defect—at least, the reader has only to judge of him by the deeds and words which meet the eye. Roy does not allow his passionate love for Viola to overcome his principles, though to obtain a certain end there is a laxity in his morals not quite satisfactory to himself, his friends, nor the reader. Still the book, with the exception of one short episode, is an uninterrupted exposition of morality suitable for most drawing-rooms of the present day. Two charming and beautiful women, belonging to and loving what is called the world, surrounded by flatterers and temptations, remain virtuous, and resist all attacks that are made upon them. Two most attractive men of the same class, who are not the husbands of these two excellent women, fall in love with them. They restrain their passions. They meet their reward notwithstanding the machinations of a frisky but jealous widow, and the opposition of a charming and affectionate old mother, the best drawn character in the book. The husbands die off most conveniently, and money matters are made pleasant all round. Wives and mothers will learn something of themselves in this fashionable writer's sentences. They will find that "They [women] can rarely choose for themselves. The life of most of them is devoted to men whom they would never have chosen had the choice been left to them." Again, "Women are like cats: habit is very strong with them." This is an unfortunate simile, as cats are domestic, and not personal, in their attachments. In an interesting comparison between the love of a mother and that of a wife, in the second volume, the following sentence occurs: "The woman who has the strongest maternal instinct is, as a rule, the one of lowest intellect, the nearest akin to the animals." 'Roy and Viola' will not weary the reader, and may interest those who do not require novelty in the plot, much wit and humour in the dialogue, and are satisfied with fashionable small talk.

THEOLOGICAL BOOKS.

Acta Joannis, unter Benützung von C. v. Tischendorf's Nachlass. Bearbeitet von T. Zahn. (Nutt.)—The apostle John is the subject of many early traditions. He has been shrouded in mythical and legendary vestments by the pious hands of admiring writers, eager to enlarge his earthly life with deeds and words that border upon the marvellous. The Scripture notices of this disciple are brief and fragmentary; but potestum has supplied a store of others, so that he has not been left without peculiar witnesses to a singular biography. Prof. Zahn has undertaken a work which will be welcomed by the students of apocryphal literature. Supplying what Thilo and Tischendorf had designed and partly prepared, he gives a goodly volume of more than four hundred pages descriptive of the acts of John. It contains the narrative of Prochorus, and the wanderings of the apostle according to Leucius Charinus. The age of Prochorus cannot be determined exactly, but he is put with some probability by Zahn at about 800 A.D., and is supposed to have belonged to the Syrian Church. He introduces himself as one of the seventy disciples and seven deacons at Jerusalem. Though his narrative is little else than a romance, he seems to have incorporated in it various current traditions, some of which had been already committed to writing. Our author dates the treatise of Leucius as early as 130 A.D., ranking it among the oldest Christian apocrypha, contemporary with the Acts of Thelke, the Protogospel of James, the Kerygma of Peter, and the Gospel of the Infancy attributed to Thomas. The copious prolegomena treat of all matters relating to the writers and their apocryphal productions, including a description of the MSS. consulted or collated, with the early and later notices of Prochorus and Leucius in patristic and modern literature. The learned editor has executed his task in a scholarly way, having spared no pains in procuring a text as accurate as his sources would justify. He is less happy in his efforts to reproduce and estimate Leucius than in those relating to Prochorus; but the latter exists only in fragments. We believe that he attributes more historic value to this apocryphal author than he really possesses, that he puts him too early, and takes statements of him as historical which are mere legends. The section of the prolegomena entitled "Geschichtliche Gewinn" should be read with caution. Prof. Zahn is a careful textual critic, but his sagacity in the higher department of criticism is not great. His book, however, is meritorious, and must be acceptable to scholars interested in the rich apocryphal literature which Christian antiquity produced. Various points of interest find some elucidation in Prochorus, and especially in Leucius. These are not omitted in the prolegomena, though they need a different treatment from that which they receive. Notices about the origin of the fourth gospel, the quartodecimanism of John, his banishment to Patmos and doings in that island, his age when he died, his four years' abode in Rome according to the Paris MS. of Prochorus, are curious, and may be partly founded on fact. Zahn's object was not to dilate on all their bearings; it was enough for him to notice them, though we occasionally perceive the influence of fixed opinions with which it is impossible to agree. It should be added that the volume has three good indexes, and that no student of ecclesiastical history can dispense with it, though the romanticising authors deal in fictitious and marvellous stories, to the glorification of an apostle who needs no such praise.

Das Geburtsjahr Christi, ein chronologischer Versuch u.s.w. Von Florian Riess. (Freiburg im Breisgau.)—Roman Catholic writers are not insensible to the progress of modern thought, nor to the strong attacks that are made upon the old faith which it is their duty to maintain intact. They publish works on Biblical criticism and interpretation, defend established tenets, and essay the exhibition of new views on questions which do not injuriously affect the dogmas of their church. The "Catholic Leaves" called 'Voices from Maria-Laach' have been in progress of publication for some time, and supplementary Hefte, or small volumes, have also proceeded from the same confraternity, the latter containing discussions of a more learned or less popular character than the "Leaves" supplied to the people. The present volume is labelled as the third supplementary one, and contains two Hefte relating to the year in which Christ was born, with a synchronism on the fulness of the times and twelve mathematical excursions. It has been usual to put the death of Herod the Great in the year 750 A.U.C., but Herr Riess dates it 753. The year of the death of Christ he fixes in 786 A.U.C., arriving at these dates by courses of argument which show that he has carefully read the literature belonging to the subject, and is well able to reason upon it. But his discussions do not lead to better results than some of his predecessors' in the same department. He is too uncritical to be a satisfactory guide; so that the new conclusions can scarcely be accepted by the cautious student. The weakness of his reasoning is pretty clear in what is stated about the edict of the Emperor Augustus spoken of at the beginning of Luke's second chapter, the visit of the Magi, and other topics. The ready belief of the Jesuit father is of an unquestioning kind in relation to every statement of the sacred writers. Hence the first three chapters add nothing to the results already obtained by Protestant critics, but rather disturb them unnecessarily. The writer's ability appears best in the mathematical tables and the accompanying remarks which form the last portion of the volume. Here many details are furnished about the Passover, new and full moons in the public life of Christ, the eclipse of the moon mentioned by Josephus ('Antiq.' xvii. 6, 4), which Whiston calculated long ago by the rules of astronomy, the Easter canon on the statue of Hippolytus in the Vatican, with times and cycles bearing upon the age of Christ. It is gratifying to see Jesuit fathers of the present day occupied with topics of this nature rather than controversial divinity, though the sagacity and learning displayed contribute little to the advancement of our knowledge.

Par Palimpsestorum Dublinensium. The Codex Rescriptus Dublinensis of St. Matthew's Gospel (Z.), first published by Dr. Barrett in 1801. A New Edition, Revised and Augmented. Also Fragments of the Book of Isaiah in the LXX Version, from an Ancient Palimpsest now first published. Together with a newly discovered Fragment of the Codex Palatinus. By T. K. Abbott, B.D. With two Facsimiles. (Dublin, Hodges, Foster & Figgis.)—Students of the Greek Testament are not likely to forget the contemptuous, almost ferocious, manner in which Lechmann, more than thirty years ago, commented on Dr. Barrett's edition of the famous Dublin Palimpsest. The renowned German critic was so angry at the inaccuracy of an editor who had but few qualifications for the work he had undertaken, that he actually attempted to rob Dr. Barrett of the credit of having deciphered the MS., and attributed the merit of the work to the engraver alone. Though nobody accepted the theory, or believed that Lechmann himself could have been serious in propounding it, yet no one was satisfied with the editio princeps of Codex Z., and when Dr. Tregelles published his collation of the MS. in 1863, correcting Barrett and supplementing his deficiencies in more than two hundred passages, critics were very grateful that the work had been done again and believed that it had at length been done once for all. But nothing on earth seems ever done once for all; everything sooner or later is found to require correction, completion, or restoration. It now turns out that Tregelles was no more infallible than his predecessor, and he in his turn has been set right in upwards of four hundred instances by another labourer in the same field. Dr. Abbott has explained how he as an editor had everything in his favour; and the magnificent edition which he has brought out of this precious MS. will probably be the last that will ever be called for. The collation has not been made by a mere visitor to the University Library, pressed for time and watched by librarians, but by a man of learning who had no need to hurry, and who was at home with his own books around him. "If," he says, "I have succeeded beyond what could have been expected in discovering letters and marks which escaped Dr. Tregelles, it is because, being resident in Trinity College, I was able literally nocturna versare manu verana diurna this important codex." We have, therefore, here presented to us a transcript of a document of the sixth, or it may be the fifth, century by a specialist who has had not only a very careful training, but has spared no toil and no effort to ensure complete accuracy, and who has succeeded as no other man is likely to succeed again. It need hardly be said that the volume is for scholars, and indeed advanced scholars, and therefore to attempt to give the general reader an analysis of the elaborate introduction would be out of place in our columns. We must not omit, however, to draw attention to the exquisite fac-similes which illustrate Dr. Abbott's volume, for dexterity of tint and perfection of finish we have never seen anything to surpass them. They bear no craftsman's name, but if they are of Irish workmanship they prove plainly that we have no monopoly of Irish skill on our side of the Channel.

Dr. J. v. Pflugk-Hartung has sent us two monographs of his, the one called Diplomatisch-historische Forschungen, the other entitled Acta Pontificum Romanorum Inedita: Vol. I. Urkunden der Päpste, A.D. 748-1198. These works give evidence of much serious and well-directed labour in a field which German historians have made their own. In the first work Dr. Hartung, starting from an inquiry into the privileges granted by Pope Zacharias to the great Abbey of Fulda in the eighth century, has been led to enter on a much wider area of investigation. His book begins with an excursus on the nature of the exemptions granted to ecclesiastical foundations in general. He proceeds to illustrate his remarks by a more detailed examination of certain collections of records, those of St. Denis and St. Martin of Tours in France, and of Hersfeld, Corvey, Quedlinburg, and others in Germany. He brings together a large number of instances showing the various ways in which Papal bulls and other documents were copied, forged, or manufactured in the Middle Ages. The results of these inquiries he applies to the records of Fulda, separating the true from the false, the original from the copy, the documents really emanating from the Papal Court from the forgeries which never saw the southern side of the Alps. Hence he deduces a history, or at least materials for a history, of the Abbey of Fulda, based on the securest foundation of historical truth. Detailed remarks on all the most important of the Fulda records taken singly conclude the volume. When it is remembered how closely the network of Papal politics is interwoven with the history of mediæval Germany, how large a part the great ecclesiastical foundations play in the history of every country, a systematic inquiry into the manner in which the wealth and influence of those foundations were built up cannot fail to have great interest for the historical student. Moreover, the way in which the inquiry is conducted, the scrupulous regard for truth and accuracy by which it is distinguished, and the thoroughly scientific character of the investigation, make the book an example which the English student may well take to heart and imitate. In the course of these investigations, and as a consequence of them, Dr. Hartung has been led to devote special attention to the nature, form, and contents of Papal bulls and other documents emanating from the Papal See in general. The results of a large portion of his labours lie before us in the second of the above-mentioned works. It is a collection of transcripts of Papal documents, hitherto unpublished or difficult of access, ranging from the times of Pope Zacharias to those of Innocent III. The book may be regarded as a most useful supplement to the well-known collections of Jaffé and others. The documents are given in full, and an explanatory system of notes and signs is adopted, whence the external form, the abbreviations, the mistakes, and other peculiarities of each document may easily be detected. The period covered is, it is needless to say, one of the most important in the history of the Papacy. The volume before us is only a first instalment, and we hope that Dr. Hartung may be able eventually to complete a collection of materials so valuable not only for the history of the Papal system, but for the understanding of mediæval history in general.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

The German Declensions: a Practical Course, with Easy Reading and Writing Lessons, and a Synopsis of Strong and Irregular Verbs. By J. Essner. (Williams & Norgate.)

There will be found anything but an easy book for beginners. The author has rather singular ideas of arrangement. Thus he puts his explanation of the pronunciation of the letters after the reading lessons. He first arranges German nouns in five groups, according to the formation of the plural, and then in five other groups, according to their case inflexion. There are thus two independent classifications, and this necessarily occasions a good deal of complexity and difficulty. The reader is bewildered by frequent references not only to what has been previously stated, but also to matters that do not occur till many pages after.

The First German Book: Grammar, Consecration, and Translation. By A. L. Becker. (Hachette & Co.)

It is not often that so perfectly satisfactory a first book as this comes in our way. Though it is strictly confined to the essential elements of the language, these are so clearly stated and so admirably arranged that, provided the lessons are, as the author requires, "thoroughly mastered," a good practical knowledge may be acquired. The classification of the nouns and verbs is at once theoretically correct and practically easy. The brief chapter explaining the philology of German and English, and that on the interchange of letters in the two languages, will be found interesting and useful. This neat little volume is printed in clear, bold type, and may be had for the moderate price of one shilling.

The British School Series.—The Sixth Reader. Edited by T. Morrison, M.A. (Edinburgh, Gall & Inglis.)

If reading lessons, as their name imports, are to be exercises in the art of reading, it would seem desirable that they should consist of extracts from the best authors in every variety of composition. This 'Reader' is founded on a different principle. It aims chiefly at the communication of every sort of knowledge, and contains a heterogeneous heap of scraps of history, physical geography, natural history, geology, astronomy, optics, mechanics, hydrostatics, meteorology, political economy, constitutional law, and technology, with some passages of poetry, mostly of an inferior stamp. The knowledge gained from such a medley of morsels must be superficial and confused, even with the utmost distinctness and strictest accuracy of statement, which are not to be found here in every case. A young reader will be more puzzled than enlightened to find it stated, without explanation of the technical meaning of "value," that "the value of water to a man placed on the bank of a river depends on the labour necessary to raise it from the river to his lips." The best feature of the book is the abundance of excellent explanatory and illustrative notes, which both throw needful light on the lessons and incidentally supply useful information.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

At a meeting held in February last at the Mansion House to consider the best means of commemorating Lord Lawrence's services, Lord George Hamilton suggested that a cheap biography of the illustrious pro-consul should be written, in order that the masses might become acquainted with his career. To this suggestion is due the readable book by Capt. Trotter which Messrs. Allen & Co. have sent us. It is necessarily only a sketch, but it is a sketch in which little of moment is omitted.

The Committee of the Birmingham Free Libraries has at last printed another Report, no Report having been issued last year, as most of the records of the work of 1878 were lost in the fire of January of last year. A large part of the new Report is taken up with the plans for rebuilding the library. The Committee seems even now hardly to realize that the Shakespeare Library was of no great value, and that the greatest loss was the Staunton collection, which can never be replaced. Among those who have come forward to help the Committee with gifts of books are the London publishers, who have been generous contributors. Mr. Quaritch stands first, having sent books to the value of one hundred pounds; Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. gave 136 volumes; Messrs. Chatto & Windus, 58 volumes; Messrs. Bentley & Son, 50 volumes; and Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Messrs. Dean & Son, Messrs. Routledge, Messrs. Spon & Co., and Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. also contributed. Within eight months of the fire the Central Lending Library and the Reference Library were re-opened, thanks to the activity of Mr. Mullins, the former with 17,000 volumes, and the latter with about 12,000 volumes.

At Cambridge the Library Committee reports that during the past year the libraries have been enlarged by the addition of 1,180 volumes. To the University of Oxford the Committee is indebted for a selection from the publications issued from the Clarendon Press to the value of fifty pounds.

The first nine parts of Vapereau's Dictionnaire Universel des Contemporains, fifth edition, have been issued, and bring the work to "Tennyson." We have carefully examined a large number of the biographical notices, and regret to say that the word "universal" had better have been omitted from the title, for the non-French biographies are as full of error as in the earlier editions. To say this is to pronounce severe blame indeed.

We have on our table Gracie Darling: her True Story (Hamilton),—The National Thrift Reader, by Mrs. Lankester (Allman),—The Gaelic Kingdom in Scotland, by C. Stewart (Edinburgh, Macleachlan & Stewart),—The Cottage Cookery Book (Ward & Lock),—How to Manage Poultry (Ward & Lock),—Fancy Pigeons, Parts V. and VI. ('The Bazaar Office'),—British Dogs, Parts XIV. and XV., by H. Dalziel ('The Bazaar Office'),—Irish Distress and its Remedies: a Visit to Donegal and Connaught in the Spring of 1880, by J. H. Tufts (Ridgway),—The Testamentary and Succession Laws of the Republic of Chile, edited by W. Grain (Sweet),—Health Primers: The Heart and its Function (Bogus),—The Skin in Health and Disease (Ward & Lock),—Animal Magnetism, by R. Heidenhain (Kegan Paul),—Transactions of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, Manchester Meeting, 1879 (Longmans),—Proceedings of the Royal Colonial Institute, Vol. XI. (Low),—Who is your Wife? by W. H. Phillips (New York, E. J. Hale & Son),—A Daring Voyage across the Atlantic Ocean, by the Brothers Andrews (Griffith & Farran),—Dresden China, by F. E. Weatherly (Diprose),—The Centennial: Poems, by A. B. E. (S. Tinsley),—Fragments of Verse, by H. A. Duff (Marcus Ward),—Love-Songs, by G. Barlow (Remington),—Chrestos: a Religious Epithet, by J. B. Mitchell (Williams & Norgate),—Deaconesses in the Church of England (Griffith & Farran),—David, by E. S. G. S. (Whittingham),—Out of the Deep, from the writings of O. Kingsley (Macmillan),—Christ the Divine Man, by the Rev. H. E. von Stürmer (Hamilton),—Jésus-Christ d'après Mahomet, by E. Sayous (Paris, E. Leroux),—Der Heilige, by C. F. Meyer (Leipzig, Haessel),—and Syriac Grammar of the Mar Elias von Tirhan, by F. Baethgen (Leipzig, J. C. Hinrich). Among New Editions we have Grammaire Béarnaise, by V. Lespy (Nutt),—Ile de Rhodes, by V. Guérin (Trübner),—and Elements of Chemistry, Vol. III., by W. A. Miller, revised by H. E. Armstrong and C. E. Groves (Longmans). Also the following Pamphlets: Political and Financial Requirements of British India, by J. Ducosta (Allen & Co.),—Notes on some Disputed Points in Indian Finance and Taxation, by H. S. Cunningham (Allen & Co.),—The European Slave Trade in English Girls, by A. S. Dyer (Dyer Brothers),—The New Burial Act: What it Does, and What it Does Not Do, by the Rev. A. T. Lee (The Church Defence Institution).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

RELIGION.

Theology.

- Attkin's (Rev. E.) Pamphlets on Church Reform, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Bowser's (Rev. G. S.) In Prospect of Sunday, cr. 8vo. 3 cl.
 Browne's (W. R.) The Inspiration of the New Testament, with Preface by Rev. J. P. Norris, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
 Cambridge Bible for Schools: First Book of Samuel, by Rev. A. F. Kirkpatrick, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 Cruden's Concordance and Bible Student's Handbook, illustrated, royal 8vo. 10/6 cl.
 Delitzsch's (F.) Kleinere Propheten, translated by S. I. Curtis, 8vo. 5 cl.
 Hamaker's (Dr. A.) History of New Testament Times, The Time of Jesus, Vol. 2, translated by C. T. Foynting and F. Quenzer, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
 Holy Bible (The), translated by B. Sharpe, 8vo. 4/6 cl. swd.
 Malleson's (Rev. F. A.) Jesus Christ, His Life and His Work, cr. 8vo. 3 cl.
 New Truth and the Old Faith, by a Scientific Layman, 10/6 cl.
 Toke's (R.) Age of the Great Patriarchs, Vol. 3, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Fine Art.

- Lalanne's (M.) Treatise on Etching, Text and Plates, translated by S. E. Koehler, roy. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
 Robinson's (Rev. J. H.) Elementary Treatise on Geometrical Drawing, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 South Kensington Museum Handbooks: Japanese Pottery, by W. F. Franks, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Heath's (G.) Poems, with Memoir by J. Radford, Memorial Edition, cr. 8vo. 6 cl.
 "Jammed," and other Verses, cr. 8vo. 5 cl.
 Macaulay's (Lord) Lays of Ancient Rome, with Ivory and the Armada, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 6 cl.
 Thompson's (T. O.) Hanna, a Play in Five Acts, 12mo. 3/6 cl.

Philosophy.

- Aids to the Schools, Questions and Exercises on Aristotle's Ethics, Books 1-4 and part of 10, by a Graduate, 2/6 swd.
 Capes's (Rev. W. W.) Stoicism, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
 Wallace's (W.) Epicureanism, 12mo. 2/6 cl.

History and Biography.

- Fox (C. J.), Early History of, by G. O. Trevelyan, 8vo. 18/6 cl.
 Gore's (Rev. E.) Leo the Great, 12mo. 2 cl.
 Jones's (W. H.) Diocesan History of Salisbury, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 Man Worth Remembering: William Wilberforce, by J. Stoughton, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Nelson's Life, by Southey, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Urian's (R. D.) The Churchman's Life of Wesley, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Wilkin Brothers (The), Memoirs and Miscellaneous, edited by S. E. Pattison, cr. 8vo. 9 cl.

Geography and Travel.

- D'Alberville's (L. M.) New Guinea, What I Did and What I Saw, 3 vols. 8vo. 42 cl.

Philology.

- Eve's (H. W.) School German Grammar, cr. 8vo. 4 cl.
 Kelly's Keys to the Classics: The Poets of Ovid, Books 4, 5, and 6, translated by R. Morgan, 12mo. 2/6 cl., Poets of Ovid, complete, 12mo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

- Harding (J. E.) and Roberts's (L. F.) Glimpses of Bird Life, folio, 42 cl.
 Balfe's (C. H.) Demonstrations in Physiological and Pathological Chemistry, 12mo. 5 cl.
 Swinton's (A. E.) Insect Variety, its Propagation and Distribution, cr. 8vo. 10 cl.

General Literature.

- Ballantyne's (R. M.) The Lonely Island, cr. 8vo. 5 cl.
 Braddon's (Mrs.) Just as I Am, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Camp of Refuge (The), edited by S. E. Miller, cr. 8vo. 5 cl.
 Craik's (G. L.) Pursuit of Knowledge under Difficulties, 5 cl.
 End of the Coil, by Author of 'Wide, Wide World', 3/6 cl.
 Penn's (G. M.) The Clerk of Portwick, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Fortunes of Hassan, being the Strange Story of a Turkish Refugee, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Greenough's (Mrs. E.) Mary Magdalene, 8vo. 6 cl.
 Horses and Roads, or How to keep a Horse sound on his Legs, by 'Free Lance', cr. 8vo. 6 cl.
 Intermediate Education Act (Ireland), the Examination Papers issued at the Second Examination, held in June and July, 1880, with Answers and Solutions, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Answers and Solutions only, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Irving's (W.) Little Britain, together with Spectre Bridgroom and a Legend of Sleepy Hollow, illus., 10/6 cl.
 Lamb's (R.) Thoughtful Joe, and how he Gained his Name, small 4to. 2/6 cl.
 Lyster's (A.) Chrysis's Hero, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Lyster's (A.) My Lonely Lassie, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Macleod's (A.) The Gentle Heart, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 My New Toy-Book, 4to. 4 cl.
 Nash's (R. L.) Short Inquiry into the Profitable Nature of our Investments, cr. 8vo. 5 cl.
 New Werther (The), by Lohr, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Parker's (T.) Combination Telegraph Code, 2to. 2/6 swd.
 Patmore's (O.) Our Pets and Playfellows in Air, Earth, and Water, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 Paul's (Mrs. H. B.) Ethel Graham's Victory, cr. 8vo. 7 cl.
 Barent's (G. E.) Philip Gainsford's Profit and Loss, 3/6 cl.
 Shipley's (M. E.) Bernard Hamilton, Curate of Stowe, 3/6 cl.
 Shelton's (J.) The Crooked Meg, a Story of the Year One, 6 cl.
 Stuart's (F.) Caught in a Trap, a Tale of France in 1802, 5 cl.
 Stubbs Farm, or Three Generations of English Farmers, by Author of 'Ernest Strangers', 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 12 cl.
 Symington's (R. M.) The Last King, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Talbot's (F.) The Scarecrow Peering, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Townend's (M. E.) Steffan's Angel, and other Stories, 2/6 cl.
 Ward & Lock's Home Book, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

FURNISHING.

Theology.

- Bühler (Chr.) Der Altkatholismus, 8m. 50.
 Hartmann (E. v.) Die Krisis d. Christenthums in der Modernen Theologie, 2m. 70.
 Liber Proverbiorum, Textum Masoreticum Illustravit S. Buer, prefatus est F. Delitzsch, 1m. 30.

Law.

- Corpus Juris Canonici recognovit Em. Friedberg, Parts 2 and 10, 8m.
 Fournier (P.) Les Officiels au Moyen Age de 1180 à 1280, 7fr. 50.
 Rabinowicz (Dr. I. M.) Législation Civile du Talmud, Commentaires et Traduction, 100fr.

Drama.

- Lacour (L.) Trois Théâtres—Émile Augier, Alexandre Dumas fils, Victorien Sardou, 2fr. 50.

Music.

- Fougis (A.) Supplément et Complément à la Biographie Universelle des Musiciens de P. J. Fétis, Vol. 2, 3fr.

Philosophy.

- Bresson (L.) Idee Modernes—Cosmologie, Sociologie, Mr. Hartmann (E. v.): Zur Geschichte und Begründung d. Pantheismus, 3m.

History and Biography.

- Forneron (H.) Histoire de Philippe II., 15fr.
 Giesbrecht (W. v.) Kaiser Friedrich der Rothbart, Part 1, 8m. 60.
 Mährlich (E.) and Meiser (H.) Deutsche Pilgerreisen nach dem Heiligen Lande, 30m.
 Soltau (W.) Die Altchristlichen Volksversammlungen, 10m.

Geography.

- Delaborde (M. E. F.) Chartes de Terre Sainte provenant de l'Abbaye de M.-D.-de-Joseph, 5fr.

Philology.

- Brugsch Bey (H.) Hieroglyphisch-demotisches Wörterbuch, Vol. 1, Part 1, 64m.
 Untersuchungen Philologische, edited by Klemm and Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, Part 2, 3m.

- Martin (E.) Die Tertiarischen auf Java, Palaeontological Division, Part 11, General Series, Part 61, 44m.
 Rühlmann (R.) Die Mechanische Wärmetheorie, 7m. 30.

General Literature.

- Bouvier (A.) Maternelle Beau-Sourire, 3fr.
 Urbach (L.) Le Tapis Vert, 3fr. 50.

A NEW EDITION OF WORDSWORTH.

We understand that Prof. Knight, of St. Andrews University, is about to edit a library edition of the works of Wordsworth, extending to ten volumes octavo, which will be published by Mr. Paterson, of Edinburgh. It will be somewhat similar in form to the editions of Burns, Moore, and Cervantes which Mr. Paterson has published. The specialties of this edition will be: 1. The poems are, for the first time, arranged in the chronological order of publication; 2. Every variation of the text in the successive editions published in Wordsworth's lifetime, and with his sanction, will be given in full in foot-notes to the poems; 3. Many new readings, founded on MS. notes of the poet, and not hitherto published, will be given in a separate list; 4. The Fenwick notes, dictated by Wordsworth, will be prefixed to each poem; 5. Topographical notes, embodying the substance of Mr. Knight's book on the Lake District, but containing a good deal of fresh material, will be appended to the poems; 6. Part of the prose works, including the prefaces and appendices to the poems, the 'Guide to the Lakes,' &c., will be added; 7. Some hitherto unpublished memorials of Wordsworth will be appended; 8. A new life of the poet and critical essay will conclude the series of volumes; 9. Each will contain an illustrative drawing by Mr. MacWhirter, of such places as Cocker-mouth, Dame Tyson's house at Hawkshead, Alfoxden, Dove Cottage, Blea Tarn, Rydal Mount, &c.

This edition, undertaken some time ago by special arrangement with the Wordsworth family, is quite distinct from the work which the Wordsworth Society, founded last week at Grasmere, will address itself to. The Transactions of the Society, published in its own name and in the name of individual members, may traverse the same ground to a certain extent; but the work of the Society is much wider and more varied. The inaugural meeting at Grasmere was an interesting event in many ways. The Bishop of St. Andrews presided. The following resolutions were proposed by Prof. Knight, and seconded by the Principal of Bransford College, Oxford, viz., I. That a society, to be called "The Wordsworth Society," be formed for the following purposes: 1. As a bond of union amongst those who are in sympathy with the general teaching and spirit of Wordsworth; 2. To promote and extend the study of the poet's works; 3. To collect for preservation, and, if thought desirable, for publication, original letters and unpublished reminiscences of the poet; 4. To prepare a record of opinion in reference to Wordsworth from 1793 to the present time. II. That the officials of the Society be an Honorary President, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, with an Executive Committee, and that an annual meeting be held at a place and date to be fixed by the Committee. III. That it be in the power of every member to transmit communications bearing upon the work of the Society to the Secretary, to be read and considered at the annual meeting.

The Society already numbers eighty-six members, including the following: The Lord Chancellor and Lady Selborne, Lord Coleridge, the Bishops of Lincoln and St. Andrews, the Dean of Salisbury, Mr. Robert Browning, Mr. John Ruskin, Mr. Leslie Stephen, Mr. J. Russell Lowell, Mr. Aubrey de Vere, Mr. Stopford Brooke, Prof. Dowden, Fraser, Nichol, Caird, Carpenter, Meiklejohn, Mr. Alfred Hunt and Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. A. Webster, Mrs. E. Pfeiffer, Lady Richardson, Mr. J. MacWhirter, Mr. R. H. Hutton, Mr. A. Ainger, &c. Prof. Knight is Secretary, and Mr. George Wilson, Murrayfield House, Midlothian, Treasurer. Any one desirous of joining the club may intimate the fact either to the Secretary or the Treasurer. The Grasmere meeting was the starting-point of what may prove a valuable and interesting society.

THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE.

Derby House, Ecdess.

Will you permit me to continue the dissection of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle which has been partially published in your pages?

There are seven codices of the Chronicle extant, known as A., B., C., D., E., F., and G. We will now consider shortly Codex E., whose character has been well described by Mr. Earle. This codex, from its former possessor, is known as the Laud MS., and is No. 636 among the Laud MSS. in the Bodleian. Every author known to me has derived this codex from Peterborough, and that it was written there is most obvious. The author of an anonymous work, 'A Regular Dissection of the Saxon Chronicle,' who according to a MS. note in my copy was named English, says he thinks Laud had it from Peterborough in 1634, op. cit. 189, and I have little doubt that it is the work known in Wheloc's time as the Peterborough Book, or 'Annales Saxonici Petriburgensis.' It is in one hand to the end of 1121, as remarked long ago by Ingram and confirmed by Mr. Earle, therefore no part of it was written before that year. As Mr. Earle says: "Its existence is probably due to a disastrous fire that occurred in Peterborough on Friday, August 3rd, 1116, in which the minster was entirely consumed, and all the buildings around, except the chapter-house and dormitory; most of the town was burnt also. Probably they lost their books, and it may have been in consequence of this loss that we find a new Chronicle started in 1121." Again, speaking of certain insertions, the same author says: "In these inserted pieces we find a confirmation of the date of E.'s compilation. A comparison of these with the language of the continuation, after 1121, places it beyond doubt that the work was compiled at the date where the first hand stops" (op. cit. xlv).

Ingram says: "The ten years from 1122 to 1132 rather exhibit different ink than a different writer. From A.D. 1132 to the end of A.D. 1154 the language and orthography became gradually more Normanized, particularly in the reign of King Stephen, the account of which was not written till the close of it." With all this I cordially agree, but this implies much more. The work has in fact no claims to be an Anglo-Saxon Chronicle at all in the sense in which some of the other copies are. It is a compilation which ought to be compared with Florence of Worcester, Simeon of Durham, William of Malmesbury, &c., and differs from these merely in the fact that its author is unknown and that it is written in the vernacular and not in Latin. It is an extremely interesting specimen of English as spoken in 1121 at Peterborough. It is, as Florence of Worcester's compilation is, a most valuable mine of original matter, but is not to be compared with the English Chronicle proper, and it is, I think, misleading to print it along side of, and to compare it with, the other chronicles, instead of with the Latin compilations with which it was so nearly contemporary. We will, therefore, put it aside at present altogether. Let us now turn to Codex F. This is a MS. of the same type as the last. "Both E. and F.," says Mr. Earle, "are scrap-books of history, and they belong to that class of compositions which attained its full development in the Latin Flores Historiarum" (op. cit. li). There can be no doubt that it is quite a late production. Mr. Earle expresses the opinion of all inquirers, I believe, when he says it must be ascribed to the twelfth century, the abrupt ending at 1066 affording no token of date. It marks, he adds, by its bilingual arrangement, the transition period from the use of the vernacular to the use of the Latin in English history. From the use of the French prud in our modern sense of "proud" in the year 1006, Mr. Earle implies that it belongs to an advanced decade of the twelfth century (id. lii). This copy, then, we may also put away as a companion to the compilations so frequent in the twelfth century, and having nothing to do with the English Chronicles proper.

Discarding Codices E. and F., therefore, we have left five copies of the Chronicle, namely, A., B., C., D., and G. These may be divided into sections or classes according to their dialect. A. and G., as I showed in my former letters, are both written in the Mercian dialect. The remaining three copies, B., C., and D., are all written in the same dialect, which was probably the dialect of Wessex. We will now limit ourselves to these Southern copies. B. is written in one hand to 977, when it ends. It had formerly a genealogical frontispiece, terminating with the reign of Edward, the son of Edgar, which, as Mr. Earle says, corresponds perfectly with the date of 977, at which the annals terminate, and everything tends to render it probable that this was the true date of this compilation. As I have said in a former letter, I believe it to have been made at Winchester, the capital of the kingdom of Wessex. In this copy alone do we meet with a famous emendation in the year 643. Where the other copies have "the church at Winchester" this copy is altered to "the old church at Winchester," which alteration would occur, as Mr. Earle says, to a copier in 977, when Bishop Ethelwold's church was building, and would occur, as I think, to a Winchester scribe only.

Now in 977 the see of Winchester was occupied by perhaps its greatest bishop. Famous as a great reformer of church discipline, as the introducer of regulars into the old English foundations, whence his name of Father of Monks, famous also as a patron of the arts, and himself an artist, and also for his patronage of literature, his school became the fountain whence most of the scholars of the next age proceeded. He was himself a good scholar, but what apparently he mainly delighted in was the old English tongue. "Dulce namque erat ei adolescentis et juvenis semper docere, et Latinos libros Anglice eis solvere, et regulas grammaticas arte ac matris rationis tradere, et jocundis alloquiis ad meliora hortari. Unde factum est ut per plures ex discipulis ejus fierent sacerdotum atque abbatum, et honorabiles episcopi, quidam etiam archiepiscopi, in gente Anglorum," are the words of his biographer Wolstan, and his Anglo-Saxon version of the rule of St. Benedict is still extant. We can well believe, therefore, that he was exactly the person under whose patronage it was fitting an English Chronicle should be written out, and who would favour the work as a suitable addition to the library of his new minster at Winchester. I have no doubt that MS. B. was produced under his patronage, and it may be that it was actually the work of his own hands. It is in curious accordance with these facts that we find in one of the closing paragraphs of this codex a reference to Abingdon.

Abingdon, as is well known, was the monastery over which Ethelwold presided before he was made Bishop of Winchester.

I would therefore refer to this copy of the Chronicle as the Winchester or St. Ethelwold copy. The one usually connected with Winchester, namely, Codex A., has no claims of any kind to a connexion with the old capital of Wessex.

Let us now turn to Codex C. This is known as the Abingdon Chronicle. When Joceline wrote, about 1570, this MS. was in the possession of Mr. Boyer, the Keeper of the Records in the Tower, and afterwards passed into the collection of Sir Robert Cotton. Joceline named it the Chronicon Abendonis, and this conclusion that it was written at Abingdon is most reasonable. This we gather from internal evidence.

In the years 981 and 982 we find two paragraphs in C. not found in any of the other copies of the Chronicle, in both of which there is a reference to Abingdon, and thus is directly after C. quite company with B., as I shall point out presently.

In 968 we have an entry of the appointment of Edwin as Abbot of Abingdon entered in C., and only found in E. among the other copies, and there put under the year 963.

In 990 C. alone mentions the death of this abbot, Edwin, and the accession of his successor, Welfgar.

In 1044 we have mention in C. of Seward's transference from the abbey of Abingdon to the primacy, and the appointment of Æthelstan as his successor.

In 1047 we have mention made in C. alone of the death of Æthelstan, Abbot of Abingdon, and again another reference to Abingdon in 1048, where the return of Seward there from Canterbury is mentioned.

This list of idiosyncrasies in C., which has comparatively so few peculiarities, makes the conclusion generally held, and adopted by Mr. Earle, almost certain, that C. was composed at Abingdon. The first handwriting in this copy of the Chronicle stops at the year 1048. Wanley and Mr. Thompson both agree in this in opposition to those who date the change in 1046. There can be little doubt, from the style and other considerations, that Mr. Earle's conclusion is right, that this is the date of the transcript of this copy. Let us now consider on what authorities it was based.

As far as the end of the year 975 this copy follows B. verbatim, save such small literal differences as inevitably occur in copies, and it is universally held (see 'Mon. Hist. Brit.', 76; Hardy, 'Cat. Brit. Hist.', 456) that C. as far as 977 was a copy of B. or of a chronicle like B. Another argument for the close relations of B. and C. is found in 902, where a premature entry of the death of Ealhwid, which must have originated in a blunder, appears in B. and C. only (Earle, op. cit. lxxix).

After 975 the entries in C. are very valuable for tracking out the history of the various codices of the Chronicle. Mr. Earle argues that the subsequent entries have been derived from Codex D., but this is incredible. D. is much more full than C. The chronology of D. follows the Northern chronicles, while C. follows the Southern. It also contains several paragraphs not in C., and not likely to have been omitted wilfully: further, it incorporates the famous Northumbrian Chronicle, not found in C., which has given us so much new matter on the eighth century; and, lastly, as I shall show presently, D. was certainly written after C., which is conclusive.

For these reasons, therefore, I cannot think that C. has been copied from D. The occurrence of several passages in C. not in D. makes it equally difficult to suppose that C. was the mother MS. of D. Now, although these two MSS. differ in several paragraphs, the great body of their material is not only alike, but alike verbatim et literatim. This concurrence extends to the end of the first sentence in the year 1043, where the two part company. As there is no break in the handwriting at this point, and it is unlikely that either MS. was a copy of the other, the only alternative that remains is the one I have no hesitation in adopting, namely, that there was once in existence a copy of the Chronicle ending in the year 1043, which was the common mother of C. and D., and which comprised the matter common to these two MSS. With this MS. and MS. B. before him, the Abingdon chronicler in 1048, and therefore during the abbacy of Seward, who had just returned from Canterbury, and probably taken a transcript with him, proceeded to write out Codex C., adding to the copies before him a few notes of his own. These notes consist of a notice of a famine in 976, of several paragraphs comprising the annals from 978-983, in two of which, as I have said, there are references to Abingdon, and notices under the years 1016, 1022, 1030, 1038, and 1039.

It is not improbable that a copy of the Chronicle above named, ending in 1043, may have come from Canterbury, where Seward went from Abingdon in 1043, returning to Abingdon again in 1048, proving that while archbishop he still retained his ties with his old abbey. Let us now turn to Codex D. This is known as the Worcester Chronicle, having been so named by Joceline. I do not see any absolute reason for disputing this, although from internal evidence, from the way in which the Archbishop of York is referred to, and from the fact of its adopting the Northern chronology and incorporating the Northumbrian Chronicle, it is far from impossible that it was written somewhere within the limits of Northumbria. The first handwriting in D. ends in 1016; but this is clearly a break in the scribe, and not in the script, for it occurs in the very middle of a sentence, "Dhæc ahte Cnut aige" being the last clause of one writing, and "and gefæht him wið calle engla theode" the first of the next. As the sentence is quite complete, and runs on freely in C., it is clear that this break in the handwriting marks no break whatever in the authorship, unless we postulate what, as I have shown, is hardly credible, that C. was a copy of D. I am very glad to say that this view, which I had arrived at without seeing the MS., is amply corroborated by Mr. Thompson, of the British Museum, than whom I cannot quote a better authority, and who has made a careful examination of the MS. for me. He says the writing breaks off not only in the middle of a sentence, but in the middle of a word, and he is most positive that the break referred to is entirely in the script and not in the author. He says the first break in the author is in 1062, and, strangely enough, on turning to Wanley's Catalogue of the Cotton MSS., I find that he also marks the first break in 1062.

This copy, therefore, and Codex C. were written within a few years of one another. As I have said, down to the year 1043 it agrees remarkably with C., but the variants make it imperative to postulate that the two were copied from a third copy, which ended in 1043, and to which each added certain facts not in the other. This hypothetical codex, which is no longer extant, I would refer to as X., the unknown quantity. At this point I may fitly break off my analysis, hoping to continue it in a further letter.

HENRY H. HOWORTH.

ON "IN KITTA.

22, St. George's Square, N.W.

THE signification of the three lines in the third and fourth characters of King Tarkondemos, which are also found in Carchemish, are of interest, as they affect the characters of the words to which they are attached.

Three, under some circumstances, as in Chinese, West Chinese, Egyptian, Khita, and Vei, represents what is understood as a plural, but more properly a collective form.

Thus in the Tarkondemos inscription, ΔΔ for "country" is more usually paleogeographically represented ΔΔΔ, and this is evidently not plural, but collective, whether the marks represent "mountains" or no. Although it has been suggested that the symbol consists of "mountains," this is very uncertain.

[] with " ", applying to one man, Tarkondemos, cannot be a plural, but Timme (demos), in the defined sense of "offspring," then "the emblem of "child," is duplicated as " ", "grandchild." The symbol, therefore, gives further extension, as "descendant." The signs for Tar(a), Ko(nu), are the animal totems of the kingly race, from which the king in question derived his claim. In this inscription they are found in pairs, and it is very remarkable that in Capt. Gill's MS. from Western China, which I regard as Kitai or Cathay, the heads are generally in pairs. It is easy to assign a reason, the same reason for which the inscription is repeated to the right and left of King Tarkondemos, and that is to form a pair, as a good omen.

With regard to the three strokes on F, what may be regarded as the emblem of "king," they would not be a plural, but give the extension of "all," and make "All-king." Three strokes joined as a triquetra make "all, we."

There is a further application of three in the second character, where three strokes above the head stand for the hair, and three below for the beard. This conventionalism is well shown in the Carchemish and also in the Western China MS. This latter, I have little doubt, is a copy of rock-cut inscriptions in the neighbourhood, made by Buddhist priests, and sold for purposes of fortune-telling.

My version of the inscription would, therefore, be "[The] Tarkond-descendant, All-king of the region of —."

HYON CLARKE.

THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AT EDINBURGH

THE first day's proceedings passed off well. Mr. Small, Librarian of the University and Vice-President of the Association, was called to the chair, and in an address of some length reviewed the history of the society from its beginning. After a brief notice of the libraries in Edinburgh (which contain together 700,000 volumes) and of the facilities they offer to readers of every station, he described the efforts that had been made, first, to convert the Advocates' Library into one of a national character comparable to that of the British Museum; and, secondly, to establish for the use of the people a rate-supported free library. A grant from the Consolidated Fund is needed for the first-named scheme; for the latter object a penny rate would produce about 6,000*l.* a year, a sum more than adequate for the purpose.

The report having been adopted, and other formal business completed, Mr. Clark, Keeper of the Advocates' Library, read a carefully written paper, entitled "Notes on Early Printing in Scotland." The subject was admirably illustrated by an exhibition, subsequently visited by the members of the Association, of books printed in Scotland, and arranged chronologically from the earliest known product of the Scotch press in 1508 to the present time. The first specimen of stereotype, invented by William Ged—a small Sallust, dated 1739—was exhibited, together with one of the plates, from which Mr. Clark had struck off some copies for distribution. Owing either to the paper or the ink, or perhaps to both, the modern impression looked sharper and clearer than the old one. A short notice of the Benedictine Library at Fort Augustus was read by the Secretary. The monastery is a resuscitation and incorporation of two ancient religious communities on the Continent—the old Scots Abbey of St. James at Ratisbon, and the celebrated English Abbey of Lanseperg, in Hanover. Mr. W. Black's paper on 'Some Eminent Librarians of Edinburgh' glanced at the history of Ruddiman, the grammarian; of David Hume; of David Irving, the historian of Scottish literature; of Samuel Halkett, the accomplished linguist and draper; and of David Laing, whose memory is still green among librarians.

Mr. Mason's paper, on 'The Free Libraries of Scotland,' and that by Mr. MacLachlan, entitled 'How the Free Library System may be carried out in Scotland,' were followed by a lively and extended discussion, in which Edinburgh's deficiencies with regard to free libraries were commented on with as much—perhaps even a little more—frankness as politeness would allow. Useful remarks on itinerant libraries in Wales and elsewhere, on Allan Ramsay's circulating library, and on the classification adopted in the Glasgow University Library, occurred during the discussion.

Mr. Lonnax's paper on 'The Classification of History' seemed to owe its origin to the difficulties of making an absolutely precise classification of the subject-matter of books, and gave the impression of being somewhat wire-drawn. The visits to the College of Physicians (where they were received by the President), to the Advocates' Library (where Mr. Clark gave an account of the institution), and to the Signet Library (where Mr. Law performed the same friendly office), were highly appreciated by the members of the Association. At the Library of New College the visitors listened to a minute account of the collection of 30,000 or 40,000 volumes, begun so late as 1843. An old chest, curiously carved in the Dutch or Flemish style, and presented to the College by Miss Sibbald, of Kips, attracted much attention. At the dinner in the evening one modest librarian had the audacity to perpetrate the following climax:—"That the progress of libraries in Edinburgh had proceeded by leaps and bounds of centuries, to wit, the University Library was founded in 1580, the Advocates' in 1680, the Signet in 1780, and in 1880 the reception of the Library Association was taking place!"

Library Gossip.

LADY ANNE BLUNT, whose delightful book on the 'Bedouins of the Euphrates Valley' is well known to our readers, has in the press an account, in two volumes, of 'A Pilgrimage to Nejd,' which will be illustrated by drawings by the author. Mr. Murray will be the publisher.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE's work on 'India in 1880,' which, as we stated some time ago, Mr. Murray promises for the ensuing season, will deal with such topics as the following: Progress, moral and material, of the natives; national education; religious missions, native states and chiefships; official classes, European and native; non-official Europeans; law and legislation; revenues; canals and irrigation; roads and railways; products, agricultural and industrial; commerce, internal and external; famines; public health and sanitation; physical science; learned research; foreign relations; armies; navy and marine; finances; and statistical summary. In an introduction Sir Richard will point out the claims that India has on the attention of Englishmen, and his final chapter will be devoted to discussing the effects and prospects of British rule.

A ROMANCE of the present century by Mr. W. H. Mallock, the author of 'Is Life Worth Living?' will commence in the January number of Belgravia.

THE Earl of Dufferin is going to publish his speeches and addresses delivered in Canada, during his tenure of the office of Governor-General, in the House of Lords and elsewhere. Mr. Murray will be the publisher.

THE same publisher promises several biographies; among them are a Memoir, by his son, Mr. E. Herries, C.B., of the Public Life of the Right Hon. J. C. Herries, which extended over the reigns of George III. and IV., William IV., and Queen Victoria; and 'The Life, Letters, and Journals' of Sir W. M. Gomm, edited by Mr. F. C. C. Gomm.

MR. PEARSON, of Pall Mall, has discovered, in a weekly newspaper of 1812, a political ode by Byron that was not hitherto known to be his. It will shortly be printed, with a copy of the poet's letter relating to the same.

MESSRS. REMINGTON & Co. will publish about the middle of this month the 'Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi, K.C.B.,' by Mr. Louis Fagan, which we have already announced. It will fill two volumes, and will be accompanied by a portrait and other illustrations by the author.

A LITTLE work from the pen of the late Dr. Robert Chambers will shortly be issued by the firm of Messrs. W. & R. Chambers. It consists of an historical notice of the well-known Jacobite family of Threipland of Fingask, Perthshire, written in 1853, but not before published; as also of two papers having reference to the same family written some years previously. The late Dr. Chambers was an intimate friend of Sir P. Murray Threipland, the present baronet of Fingask, and the materials for the historical notice have, we understand, been wholly derived from the family papers and other private and hitherto inaccessible sources.

MRS. STAIR DOUGLAS's 'Life and Letters of Dr. Whewell,' the preparation of which has been delayed by various causes, is now all but ready to go to press.

THE cylinder of Uruk figured by Sir R. Ker Porter in his 'Travels in Georgia, Persia, &c., 1822, vol. ii. p. 79, and recently obtained at Babylon by Mr. Cobham, Commissioner at Larnaka, has been presented by that gentleman to the British Museum. It has been long sought for.

THE 'Popular Educator' did so much good at the time of its publication that we are glad to hear Messrs. Cassell & Co. intend to bring out a thoroughly revised edition.

MRS. OLIPHANT's 'Cervantes,' in Messrs. Blackwood's series of "Foreign Classics for English Readers," is ready for press, and will shortly be issued. It is understood that Mrs. Oliphant has adopted Shelton's version of 'Don Quixote' in the passages she quotes.

MR. J. VENN, M.A., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge, has in the press a work on 'Symbolic Logic.' It is proposed to enter pretty fully into a description and criticism of the generalizations introduced by Boole, explaining in detail their nature and relation to the traditional scheme, and giving some historic account of earlier attempts to introduce symbolic and diagrammatic notation into logic. Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will be the publishers.

MR. ALLAN, of Sunderland, who combines the writing of verse with the making of marine engines, has finished a poem of 5,000 lines, entitled 'A Life Pursuit.' It embodies a great many of his own experiences of the world, and gives an account of his blockade running and imprisonment at Washington during the civil war in America. It is to be out in a short time.

THE Leicester Daily Post has changed hands, Mr. Bradshaw having sold it to Mr. J. A. Parker, who was for many years editor and manager of the Indian Daily News of Calcutta. In the early portion of his Indian career Mr. Parker was the official shorthand writer to the Government of India.

ANOTHER set of primers is announced under the title of "Bible Class Primers." Messrs. Macniven & Wallace, of Edinburgh, are to issue a series of manuals, edited by Prof. Salmond, of Aberdeen, for use in day and Sabbath schools and Bible classes. The first instalment, a Life of David, by the late Rev. Peter Thomsen, M.A., of St. Fergus, a Semitic scholar of some promise, will shortly appear, and writers of different Protestant denominations will contribute to the series.

THE Folk-lore Society promises to be active during the coming season. The MS. of the 'Denham Tracts,' a vast storehouse of information, is in the hands of Mr. Hardy, the editor. The Rev. W. Gregor is passing through the press his 'Folk-lore of the North-East of Scotland,' which will soon be published. The MS. of Mr. Black's 'Folk-Medicine' has been received. Signor Comparotti, of Florence, and Prof. Pedrezo, of Lisbon, are also preparing MSS. for the Society. Then the Harvard University has sent a transcript of the titles of its English folk-lore books towards the 'Bibliography of Folk-lore' now being compiled by Mr. Gomme. The new number of the Folk-lore Record will contain a translation of some Danish stories, besides the papers which will be read at the forthcoming session of evening meetings by Mr. Coots, Mr. John Fenton, Rev. J. Sibree, Rev. W. S. Lach-Szyrna, Mr. Hyde Clarke, and others.

MR. PHILLS has finished his 'Notes for the Story of Nala,' for the use of classical scholars. The Pitt Press is going to publish the book.

PROF. MONIER WILLIAMS has just returned from Berlin, where he has been making inquiries as to the arrangements for the reception of English Orientalists at the Congress to be held in that capital next year.

M. PAUL MEYER, Professor in the Collège de France, Paris, is preparing a French translation of the romance 'Gérard de Roussillon,' published from a Bodleian MS. by Herr Mahn, and lately revised by Prof. W. Foerster, of Bonn.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. will publish almost immediately a translation of Dr. Luigi Coassa's 'Guide to the Study of Political Economy.' A preface is contributed by a distinguished English economist, and the translation, which is published with the author's sanction, and has had the benefit of his latest corrections, has been made by a former lady student in one of the classes of political economy conducted under the superintendence of the Cambridge Society for the Extension of University Teaching. This 'Guide' is intended to not only present in a compendious form a general view of the bounds, divisions, and relations of the science, but it also furnishes an historical sketch of the science. Dr. Coassa has been since 1858 Professor of Political Economy in the University of Pavia.

THE Rev. S. Beal, Professor of Chinese, will lecture at University College, London, on Tuesday, the 12th, and Thursday, the 14th inst., at 3 P.M., on some Chinese inscriptions recently discovered at Buddha Gayā, in India, and on the travels of some Chinese pilgrims subsequent to the time of Yüan Tsang (Hiouen Thsang).

PROF. GEORGE C. WARR will commence on Wednesday next, at King's College, Strand, a course of lectures intended to give a connected view of the history of ancient Greece, Rome, and the East. The subject of the first series will be Greek history; the second series (after Christmas) will deal with Greek literature. The class will meet once a week at 6 P.M., this hour being chosen for the convenience of those who are engaged in business during the day.

CAPT. RICHARD BURTON's translation of the 'Lusid' of Camoens, of which we made mention some time ago, will be published before long.

MESSRS. CROSBY LOCKWOOD & Co. promise the following school-books: 'The German Prepositions, with the Cases they Govern,' by S. Galindo; 'German Colloquial Phrases, exemplifying all the Rules of the German Grammar,' by the same author; and a 'Portuguese-English and English-Portuguese Dictionary, with the Genders of each Noun,' by Alfred Elwes.

THE first number of the Revue des Études Juives will contain, amongst other essays, (1) a revised translation of the Cyrus inscription, with a commentary on its relation to the prophecies on Cyrus and the fall of Babylon, by M. Joseph Halévy; (2) a first article with the title of 'Études Bibliques,' by M. J. Derenbourg, which will contain some new suggestions on the composition of the book of Job in connexion with the prophecy of Balaam.

CONSIDERABLE discontent continues to be felt amongst the Mohammedans of Patna at the proposal to substitute the Nagri character for the Persian in the language of the law courts of Behar. The change has been for many years in contemplation, and its object, as Lord Northbrook pointed out a short time since in the House of Lords in answer to Lord Stanley of Alderley, is to render the language of the courts more intelligible to the natives of the province.

MR. JOHN MACDONELL informs us we were mistaken in saying (Athen., Sept. 25th) that he is a candidate for the vacant chair of Commercial and Political Economy in Edinburgh University.

SCIENCE

Insect Variety: its Propagation and Distribution. By A. H. Swinton. (Cassell & Co.)

THIS is a most bewildering book. We were first puzzled by the title, but it was not long before we found that it meant insect variation and the relation of this to the propagation and distribution of species. The title-page is followed by some plates largely occupied by tableaux from insect life, which would seem not inappropriate as illustrations of 'The Autobiography of a Cricket,' or a tale with some such title, in a magazine of light literature. Turning next to the lengthy introduction, we found that it consists of a vague and shadowy biography of the author as an entomologist. There are a few fairly intelligible passages in this, such as that from which we learn the thrilling fact that the author on one occasion "sat down mechanically on the partially dried grass"; but as a rule the style is so obscure that it is difficult to make out what the whole mass of words means. The following description of, we believe, Southampton Water is a fair specimen of the style, not only of the introduction, but of the whole book:—

"A silent turn in the road brought again to my view the winding creek, bordered with its well-known white mansions mirrored glassy and grey. Over the cockly mud flats and fucus wash, made in hurriedly the clear spring flood with a silver ripple until it kissed the shingles at my feet; and then there arose a voice of the tutelary river nymph, 'Behold your fluvio-marine limestones of the future!'.....Away and beyond the silvery gauze of fresh bromine and iodine undulated the upheaved cloud-cliffs of Vectis, 'The deep-sea formation continued in the wavelets of the secondary.'.....And now as the morning fled its prime, a floating catstep escaping the sunset tangle hung with coral red, sat momentarily in the bulging jib of the creeping smack, and caused its keel to career sleepily along the waving water-grass; or now the indolent ducklings again and again pat forth from the red brick angle, to undulate on the cool reflections. Chronologically it was autumn, a definable period in unlimited time."

The author's passion for adjectives is marvellous, and his abuse of the English language terrible. In almost every other line occur such phrases as "to conglobate," "to flavour of," for to smell like—s.g., of a certain plant-bug it is said that it "is thought to flavour of sliced cucumber"—"a bulky cynosure" for a large moth; and not seldom he breaks out into such alarming sentences as "Reciprocating stimulatory friction of articulate parts to express emotion postulates adaptive acquisition, consequent on assumed integumental tendency under attrition to determine a smooth undulatory surface, and propagation by transmission." After one such outburst of bad language even the author is frightened into the ejaculation that he "is getting as bad as the poets."

It is no easy task to read such a book. So far as we can make out, its author is an enthusiastic entomologist who has derived no small pleasure from using his eyes in the fields, and in so doing has learned not a few facts; he also seems to have read widely, if not well. But it is quite evident that he is entirely unable to estimate the relative value, either of his own more or less accurate observations, or of the authority of the authors from whom he quotes. This want of judgment is shown in many such statements as that "other sorts [of moths] seem to be influenced by sight, as Trichoptera, whom I have known to attach their ovis [sic] to a fly's wing, evidently mistaking it for a glassy brook"; and in many such arguments as this, where the author states that he remembers "one morning, when sauntering along the highland glen, . . . catching a whining cry from the sunny side of the road, and on proceeding to the spot detected an orange-belted fly wrestling on a buttercup-head with a small Hymenoptera," and argues from the piteousness which he thinks he detected in this cry that insects express their various sensations by modifications of sound identical with those which human beings employ to express corresponding emotions. The author also quotes with equal complacency, on the one hand, from such accurate writers as Dr. Darwin and Sir John Lubbock, and on the other such conceits as that "certain dragon-flies, especially the large species of Libellulina, give out a melancholy sound on the wing, which Dr. Landou, who attributes its production to the spiracles, thinks they learned from listening to the sighing of the reeds." The italics in this extract, as in the above passage on Trichoptera, are, of course, our own.

The book treats chiefly of the odours and secretions, dances, colours, and "music" of insects of all classes, and of the relation which these characters have to sexual selection, and, consequently, to the reproduction and variation of the species. It is made up of a great many interesting quotations from other writers on these subjects, and of some novel facts, of various degrees of credibility, observed by the author. But quotations and experiences alike are buried under such a mass of what, to adopt for a moment the style of the author, we may call æsopædalian phraseology and rodomontade that it is impossible to follow the thread of the argument.

SATURN'S RINGS.

Kenton, near Exeter.

In your journal of August 21st, p. 244, is an account of the discovery of the duplicity of Saturn's rings by the brothers Ball of Devonshire in the year 1665. The record of their observation was, it appears, announced in the first volume of the Philosophical Transactions, and is stated to have been made by Mr. William Ball and his brother Dr. Ball at Mamhead, near Exeter, with a good telescope thirty-eight feet long.

Mr. Hind supposes that Minehead, North Devonshire, was the place of the discovery, but your reviewer rightly suspects that the word in the Philosophical Transactions is a misprint for Mamhead, a village which is near Exeter, while Minehead is not near Exeter nor in Devonshire at all. I write to corroborate your reviewer's opinion and to claim for Mamhead (originally spelt Mamhead) the honour of being the scene of this very important discovery.

The old mansion and manor of Mamhead were for about two hundred years in the possession of the Balle family. The late Dr. Oliver thought that probably one John Balle, who is mentioned as overseer of the will of Nicholas Balle the elder of Chudleigh, was the first of the family who settled in the parish. However that may be, among the list of rectors is the name of John Courte alias Burge, admitted May 27th, 1681, on the presentation of Giles Balle, of Mamhead. Sir Peter Balle, Knt., D.O.L., the son of Giles, was Recorder of Exeter for forty years, and his biography is preserved in Prince's 'Worthies of Devon.' He died at Mamhead House, and was buried in the parish church on the 4th of September, 1680. He had a family of seventeen children, among whom were William Balle, the eldest, who married Mary Posthuma Hume, of Lancashire, and Peter, a doctor of physic, who was buried in the Temple. These two sons could be no other than the Mr. William Ball and his brother Dr. Ball who looked through their long telescope in Mamhead Park on the 13th of October, 1665, and saw what no man had ever seen before, the division in the rings of the most distant of all then known planets, Saturn.

The manor of Mamhead has long ago passed into other hands, and the Ballees are forgotten in the neighbourhood. But among the peasantry there is a common saying which preserves their name and will probably hand it down for ages. At the back of the site of the old mansion, now demolished, is a marshy spot, above which in damp weather a light cloud hovers like a puff of smoke, and the country folks when they see this say, "There's rain a-coming; don't see old Balle smoking his pipe!" Thus tradition would have perpetuated the fact that a Balle lived at Mamhead House, that he was an old man, and that he was fond of his pipe, but all memory of the more interesting fact of the two young Ballees and their telescope would have been forgotten had not Mr. Hind unearthed the fact and given to Devonshire the honour of this very important astronomical discovery.

GEORGE PYCROFT.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

MR. JOSEPH THOMSON has returned from Africa in excellent health, and will read a paper on his most remarkable journey at the first meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, that for November 8th.

The Dutch Arctic exploring vessel the Barents has been unfortunate this summer. In attempting to reach the north-easterly cape of Novaya Zemlia she struck on a reef at Cross Island, and narrowly escaped shipwreck. She was brought back, however, safely to Norway. The leader of the expedition reports a great difference in the position of the ice in northern Novaya Zemlia from last year, the drift, however, being favourable for reaching Franz Josef Land. This accounts for the success of Mr. Leigh Smith's gallant endeavours, he having advanced northwards on a much more westerly meridian. It is now the opinion of several authorities on Arctic matters that of all known routes the one which should be chosen by the next Polar expedition is that along the western shores of Franz Josef Land.

Mr. Stanford is preparing for publication the following geographical books: 'Index Geographicus Indicus: a Gazetteer of India,' embracing about 20,000 names of the most important places of India, spelled agreeably to the authorized spelling, by Mr. J. F. Baner; 'The Flora of Algeria,' considered in relation to the physical history of the Mediterranean region and supposed submergence of the Sahara, by Mr. W. Mathews; 'The Tourist's Guide through London,' by the Rev. W. J. Loftie; 'Water Supply of England and Wales: its Geology, Underground Circulation, Surface Distribution, and Statistics,' by C. E. de Rance; and 'The Town, College, and Neighbourhood of Marlborough,' by Mr. F. Edward Hulme, F.L.S.

MR. WILLIAM LASSALL, F.R.S.

It is with great regret that we announce the death of this veteran astronomer, which took place quietly and without suffering early on the morning of Monday last, the 4th inst. He was born on the 18th of June, 1799, at Bolton in Lancashire, and his construction of reflecting telescopes, in which he attained such skill, and of which he afterwards made such good use, commenced about the time when Sir William Herschel was passing away from our midst, full of years and of honour. In 1846 Mr. Lassall completed one of two-foot aperture, and of most excellent definition, with which the year after he discovered the satellite of Neptune (the only one hitherto known to exist), which is a minute object even in the most powerful telescopes. He also discovered independently (though anticipated by two days in seeing it by the late Prof. Bond, of Harvard College, Cambridge, U.S.) an eighth satellite of Saturn, which is seventh in the order of its distance from the planet, and has been named Hyperion. The satellites of Uranus were long a puzzle, Sir William Herschel having discovered two of them less than six years after the discovery of the planet itself, and afterwards thought that he had detected the existence of four others. Mr. Lassall began searching for them also in 1847, about the same time that M. Otto Struve did with the 15-inch refractor of the Pulkowa Observatory, and the result was the discovery of two satellites, now called Ariel and Umbriel, within the orbits of Herschel's first two, and the disproving of the existence of his supposed other four. Following the minute stars in the vicinity of the planet is very difficult, and, whoever had the priority in seeing Ariel and Umbriel, the observations by which their orbits were determined were made by Mr. Lassall in 1852 at Malta, to which island he had transported his two-foot reflector, to take advantage of its more transparent atmosphere. In 1861 he constructed a much larger reflecting telescope, four feet in aperture and thirty-seven feet in focal length, which he also set up in Malta, and made with it a large number of observations of the planets, distant satellites, and nebulae, of which he discovered many new ones. On his return to England Mr. Lassall purchased an estate near Maidenhead, where he passed the last years of his life. He received the gold medal of the Royal Astronomical Society in recognition of his discoveries, and was its President from 1870 to 1872. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1849, and was also elected an Honorary Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, besides receiving an honorary degree from the University of Cambridge.

MEETINGS FOR THE NEXT TWO WEEKS.

Mon. Antiquaries A.—Philosophy in Relation to the History, Dr. S. H. Hodgson.
Wed. Microscopical S.—Discussions in the Library, Messrs. Smith and Upcott, Mr. E. Rotherham.
Fri. New Shakespeare S.—Foreword, the Director, First and Second Quartos and the First Folio of "Hamlet," Dr. Tupper.

Science Gossip.

DR. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E., of the Edinburgh Medical School, has in course of preparation a work entitled 'Chapters on Evolution.' The work is designed as a popular exposition of the Darwinian and allied theories of development, and will present in a popular dress the evidence for evolution, and include a history of the progress of that theory. It will be profusely illustrated.

WITH the object of encouraging the study of agriculture, two special scholarships of 200l. a year each have been founded by the Bengal Government to be held at the Cirencester College. Candidates must be natives of Bengal, Behar, or Orissa, and must have passed the B.A. examination, on the physical side, at the Calcutta University. The first two scholarships to be granted will be tenable from the commencement of next January. An allowance will be given to the selected candidates to defray the expenses of proceeding to England, and a similar allowance will be made for the return journey at the completion of the course.

MR. CHARLES JOHNSON, who for a long period was the lecturer on botany at Guy's Hospital, died on the 21st of September, at the age of eighty-nine. Mr. Johnson was editor of 'Sowerby's English Botany,' 'The Ferns of Great Britain,' and several other botanical works.

Mr. V. BALL, of the Geological Survey of India, sends to the Royal Dublin Society an account of the occurrence of diamonds in India. The Geological Survey has demonstrated that diamonds occur in the Vindhyan rocks of Northern India, and Mr. Ball states that the Punnah mines in Bundelcund yield a mean annual produce to the value of nearly 60,000*l*.

A new comet was discovered by Dr. Hartwig at Strasbourg on the 29th of September; it was then very near Arcturus, and was bright, just visible to the naked eye, and had a tail 2' in length. The following night it was discovered independently by Prof. Harrington at Ann Arbor, Michigan, U.S. Dr. Hartwig has since obtained a sufficient number of observations to enable him to compute an approximate set of elements and ephemeris, by which it appears that the comet passed its perihelion on the 7th of September, and is now receding also from the earth. The following places are extracted from his ephemeris, which is adapted to Berlin midnight:—

Date.	R.A.	N.P.D.
	h. m. s.
Oct. 8	16 29 22	87 14
" 10	16 47 18	88 58
" 13	17 3 18	90 30
" 14	17 14 51	91 46

It will be seen that at present the comet sets about ten o'clock at night. On the 2nd inst. its brightness was equal to that of a star of the fifth magnitude.

Miss A. BUCKLEY's new book, 'Life and her Children: Glimpses of Animal Life from the Amoeba to the Insects,' will be published by Mr. Stanford in November.

MR. A. C. HADDON, Demonstrator of Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge, has been very successful in establishing a zoological station in Torbay and organizing a class which has been actively engaged during the long vacation in dredging operations and in the preparation and preservation of marine specimens for the Cambridge Museum.

Messrs. CROSSY LOCKWOOD & Co. promise several practical treatises for the ensuing season: 'On Mine Drainage,' by Mr. Stephen Michell, joint author of an essay on 'The Best Mining Machinery' and 'The Cornish System of Mine Drainage'; 'On Stationary Engine Driving,' by Mr. Michael Reynolds, author of 'Locomotive Engine Driving'; 'On River Bars: an Account of the successful Removal of the River Bar at Dublin, prefixed by a Consideration of the General Principles of River Bars,' by Mr. I. J. Mann, C.E.; 'The Ladies' Mutton-in-Parvo Flower Garden,' by Mr. Samuel Wood, author of 'Good Gardening,' &c.; 'The Fields of Great Britain: a Text-Book of Agriculture, adapted to the Syllabus of the Science and Art Department, South Kensington,' by Mr. Hugh Clements (Board of Trade), with an Introduction by Mr. H. Kains Jackson; 'The Early Forcing Garden,' by Mr. S. Wood; and several new volumes and new editions in Weale's Rudimentary Scientific Series: 'Materials and Construction,' by Francis Campin, C.E.; 'Sewing Machinery,' by J. W. Urquhart, C.E.; 'A Treatise on Slate and Slate Quarrying,' by D. C. Davies, F.G.S.; 'Rudimentary Treatise on Civil Engineering,' &c., by Messrs. Law and Burnell, with large additions on recent practice in Civil Engineering, by D. Kinnear Clark; 'Pioneer Engineering: a Treatise on the Engineering Operations connected with the Settlement of Waste Lands in New Countries,' by E. Dobson, A.M.Inst.C.E., second edition; and a new edition of Mr. Warrington Smyth's 'Rudimentary Treatise on Coal and Coal Mining.'

THREE of the Cornish county societies—the Polytechnic and the Miners' Association and Mining Institute—formed a Committee in the autumn of 1879 to make an inquiry into the nature, efficiency, and safety of the various explosives in use, or proposed for use, in the mines of Cornwall and Devon. The Committee have just published their first Report, and have experimented with or obtained information respecting twelve different kinds of explosive compounds. It is intended to continue the inquiry.

M. E. YUNG communicated to the Academy of Sciences of Paris on the 13th of September a note 'De l'Influence des Lumières Colorées sur le Développement des Animaux.' The experiments were made with the eggs of Loligo vulgaris and Sepia officinalis, which were placed in vases of water so arranged as to be influenced by monochromatic light. The eggs, it is stated, were developed most actively by the violet and blue rays, and, on the contrary, vitality was retarded by the red and the green rays. The yellow rays were found to act as the ordinary white light of day.

THE Indian Government is about to send Dr. King, Superintendent of the Calcutta Botanical Gardens, to the Andaman Islands to select a site for the experimental cultivation of cinchona.

FINE ARTS

JOHN'S GREAT WORKS. 'CHRIST LEAVING THE PILATESTONE,' 'CHRIST SORTING JERUSALEM,' and 'THE BRAZEN SERPENT,' (the latter just completed, each 20 by 25 feet, with 'Draught of Pilate's Wife,' 'Soldiers of the Cross,' 'Night of the Crucifixion,' 'Home of Caliph,' &c., at the DOME GALLERY, 26, New Bond Street. Daily, Ten to six.—i.e.)

Geschichte der Griechischen Plastik. Von J. Overbeck. Erster Halbband. (Leipzig, Hinrich.)

THE completion in two volumes of this enlarged and corrected edition of Prof. Overbeck's 'History of Greek Sculpture' is promised by the autumn of next year; this first half-volume will receive its completion in the present autumn, but it appears by no means prematurely, as it comprises a survey of a distinct and well-rounded period of easy and plausibly authenticated transitions, limited at last by a transition which is, perhaps, the most abrupt and most marvellous that occurs in any history of any art. After a rather grudging recognition of the obligations of Greece to Egyptian and Eastern sculpture, the reader is carried through the earliest Hellenic traditions of plastic art and artists, through the "Homeric-heroic" period, and so, after a discussion of the relation of literary notices to preserved monuments of archaic art, he reaches the verge of entire emancipation from conventionalism and crudity as marked by the style and genius of Myron. If the remainder of the story receives treatment on the same scale, the author is likely to find himself severely pinched by the limits of another volume and a half, but not, it may be, without some compensating advantages to his style and to his readers. Indeed, the ample breadth of his pages seems adopted to harmonize with the length of his sentences—sentences which with painful frequency are equivalent to paragraphs.

The introduction sets forth the author's conception of the value of a study of art from the historical point of view, and this is pressed with such urgency, indeed, that the æsthetic is scarcely recognized at all. It is by the recognition of the stages of growth and development of art that archaic works, which "the untrained" pass by with pity or a smile as simple curiosities, become objects of higher and truer interest than the more popular examples of art in its stages of decline. An expansion of interest in ancient art will thus, it is argued, give a better "objective standard" for the modern student when the earlier works, which, however unsuitable as models to be copied, exhibit a healthy and fresh originality, are habitually contemplated in company with examples of art at its highest perfection. Nay, the appreciation of these best examples (so the historian ventures to argue as he warms with his theme) can only be attained definitely, if indeed at all, in virtue of attention to an historical course. When we come to understand what they have in common with earlier productions, and what, as compared with these, they possess of their own which establishes their superiority, then shall we be in the way, and perhaps in the only way, to feel confidence that the transmutation of mere confused astonishment at the production of the Grecian chisel into admiration is due to true enlightenment. Nothing, in fact, it is said, can endow our judgment of the worth and significance of a work of ancient sculpture with such certainty and independence as the ability to assign its place in the historical sequence of art development.

There is, however, a question which some will be disposed to make a previous question (though an historian may easily overlook or not think himself bound to take cognizance of it)—whether the most appropriate attitude towards a work of art is that of a student, or one with which the intellectual concentration known as study, and especially historical study, is all but entirely unconcerned. Galleries of sculpture and painting are now so constantly assumed to be intended to give opportunities for study that it is becoming necessary to remind German professors and their admirers that the final cause of a work of art is neither intellectual appreciation nor moral edification, but refined and elevated delight; it is the imagination, and not the analytical faculty, that must justify the artist by a verdict of permanent satisfaction. The interest which he appeals to is properly æsthetic, not antiquarian. Between the museographers and the pure historians works of art are in danger of becoming transformed into scientific specimens, of which the morbidly developed are to the purely scientific student only on that account more interesting. The relation of the student to art is in such case much the same as that of an investigator of pedigrees—useful, too, in his way—to political history. What is called elucidation of art becomes not much more than exposition of rather precarious pedigrees of styles.

With these reservations, the history of Greek sculpture may be pronounced a subject of great importance and interest in spite of the difficulties with which it is beset. The first of these, momentous as it is, the paucity of remains, is frankly admitted by Prof. Overbeck. The historian might thus seem to be foiled at the outset in any attempt to complete even a simple catalogue of artists and their works in chronological succession, and still more decidedly in the higher function of tracing reactions among contemporaries, from age to age, between local school and school, and sympathetic relation to general movements of mind. But, nevertheless, much may be said upon the subject, as this treatise shows, and much may be even ascertained. Besides theremains of certified and localized antiquity like the Æginetan and Selinustine sculptures, there are others in marble and bronze of antiquity as unquestioned if too often of uncertain original provenance, and also the valuable class of identified copies of works described by the ancients. The information to be derived directly from these is enhanced tenfold by the verification which they give of the accounts of early art in ancient literature and the consequent guarantee for the value of such accounts where we are destitute of like means of direct verification. It appears to be a defect in the work that the author does not reduce his difficulties in some degree by making more use of the indications of the coins, which have full claim to connexion with sculpture, are always localized, and in a great number of instances accurately dated. The archaic vase paintings, again, might have been utilized with advantage in illustration of the early ideal of the human figure. On the other hand, the author is scarcely sufficiently on his guard as to the margin of untrustworthiness which we are bound to take for granted in ancient literary authorities. Our most useful guide, Pausanias, was certainly not more accurate either in his criticisms or his statements than Vasari and Condivi, and what this implies we may learn from every page of Cavalcaselle and Crowe. We have had some recent warnings much to the purpose. The figures from one of the pediments of the temple at Olympia, which Pausanias was told with confidence, as he confidently told us again, were works of Alcámenes, who was even mentioned as in competition with Phidias, have recently come forth from their sepulchre of centuries. We ask ourselves as we look on them, Was the ascription erroneous? or was the reputation of a sculptor liable in the fifth century B.C. to be exaggerated by the detractors of a greater rival? The same excavations have brought to light the works from the opposite pediment attributed to Pseonius of Mende, in Thrace, and also his figure of Victory, and down falls at once the theory which self-reliant German criticism had built up with such specific attributions, of a school of Thracian sculpture as excellent as characteristic.

The chapter on Homeric-heroic sculpture will be turned to with interest and not without reward. The author reasonably assigns the gravestones (Schliemann) and lions of Mycenæ to a pre-Homeric period, and collects and comments on all the poet's notices of plastic art; but when he decides that Homer on the whole described the art of his own time, we hesitate and wait for more definite information than is vouchsafed to us. The suppressions of a poet from a sense of keeping have always been as serious as his exaggerations, or, let us say in this case, as his enhancements of his contemporary art to suit an age of demigods, certainly are.

Much less than justice is done to the model of the shield of Achilles as conceived by Homer. Welcker, it is rightly stated, was the first to point out that the varied and complex subjects were conceived as distributed upon a succession of bands round a central boss; but his scheme breaks down from his assigning the most important and crowded subjects to the innermost and least capacious circles, and Prof. Overbeck, unaware that this error has long ago received correction by reversal of the order, is reduced to conclude that the poet had no clear conception of any special arrangement and that one may be as good as another; his own preference, however, being given to perhaps the worst. Equally unfortunate is his attempt to recover the symmetrical distribution of the forty-four different and crowded subjects which Pausanias catalogued as he took them down in order from the throne of the archaic Apollo of Amyclæ in Laconia; his scheme is adopted after study of those of a number of German authorities, but he misses a reference to one still earlier in Falkener's 'Museum of Classical Antiquities,' 1852, which, with a little candid study, would have gone far to save the trouble of all, from Pyl and Brunn to Ruhl and Trendelenburg. It may further be said that, but for exclusive attention to the speculations of his countrymen, the professor might have been spared the unfortunate utterance, that the subjects with which the shield of Achilles was enriched by Hephestus were adopted without any regard to particular appropriateness.

It has always been known from the fragments of arms, hands, &c., that the number of figures in each of the Æginetan pediments must have exceeded the eleven of Thorwaldsen's restoration; we are furnished here with an interesting copy of the restoration, comprising fourteen figures, which K. Lange arrived at after minute examination of the remains and the dimensions of the figures, and of the space that was available for their accommodation.

Less satisfactory are the full-page plates of the Neapolitan statues of the tyrannicides Harmodius and Aristogeiton, as at present restored and in proposed restoration. The group is better given in the less ambitious woodcut. To the late Prof. Friedrichs was due the identification of these copies of the group which Stackelburg recognised long ago on a tetradrachm and bas-relief at Athens. Another ancient repetition has turned up within these few years; it may be seen in the British Museum on the shield of the goddess on a Panathenaic vase obtained from Cyrene. In the British Museum may also be seen the bronze satyr which Overbeck engraves as manifestly derived from the same original as the marble satyr of the Lateran, in which Brunn, supported again by coin, bas-relief, and vase, identified a reminiscence of the astonished satyr of Myron. An engraving of the not very accessible Diacobolus of the Massimi Palace at Rome presents another model of Myron with the head turned towards the discus-whirling right hand—a correction of the attitude of the Townley statue. The traces and the records of archaism in Greek sculpture may be said to die out with Myron, but how short a way does this conduct us to the art of the pediments, friezes, and the colossal statue of the Parthenon! and yet Myron was a contemporary of Phidias.

In looking back generally over this account of the origin and early stages of Greek sculpture, we feel most disposed to cavil at the rule, too strictly adhered to, of allowing nothing to foreign influence until all possibilities of independent native origin have been exhausted. It is not so much that Egyptian and Eastern works are thus treated unjustly, but it is to ignore in the Greek a chief endowment of original genius—susceptibility of influence combined with marvellous faculty of inventive transmutation. The treatise, however, as a whole, all differences of opinion and qualifications apart, may be warmly recommended to the increasing circle of votaries of ancient art.

THE ROMAN REMAINS AT SANDOWN.

HAVING had the opportunity of a day or two's digging at Sandown with my friend Mr. J. E. Price, I hope that it may interest your readers if I supplement Mr. Westropp's communication to you on May 22nd (Athen. No. 2743, p. 670) with a few notes on the explorations made since and their present state.

It is evident that the room described so well by Mr. Westropp, far from being "the principal room," was a subordinate member of a large Roman villa. It is balanced on the other side by a noble room, forty feet long, and divided by columns into two compartments, the floor of which is a mosaic pavement of large size and great beauty. At the top of the upper compartment of this pavement is the fylfot or swastika. Beneath this is a group representing Perseus and Andromeda. The central design of the upper compartment is nearly destroyed, but the corners contain medallions representing the four seasons, and the lower end the figure of a bearded man with astronomical instruments. The lower compartment of the mosaic floor contains in the centre a head of Medusa, and in the four corners groups of one male and one female figure each; one of which groups represents Ceres and a nude man bearing a plough of primitive shape, and the others appear to have relation to musical performances. Four figures with winged heads blowing horns occupy the spaces between these groups. Between the room described by Mr. Westropp and this newly discovered room is a long room or corridor paved with tesserae in alternate red and white squares, and having in the centre a mosaic representing Orpheus. Behind these three chambers are several subordinate apartments, some of them also containing mosaic pavements, but without figures. A short distance beyond the room with the Medusa pavement is a semicircular building with tiled floor, probably a cænotheca. Several circumstances lead one to suspect that the principal room, or atrium, of this villa has yet to be found, and that the whole group of buildings must have been of very large extent. The field over which the committee of explorers have obtained permission to excavate is one of seven acres, and it and the adjoining field probably contain remains of rooms even more important than those already explored. Nothing, indeed, need now stop the course of investigation and discovery, except want of funds to proceed with it. These, I am convinced, will be liberally forthcoming.

With regard to the portions already uncovered two interesting details are just now being worked out: the first, the direction and extent of the flues for heating, and the second, the means of internal communication between the apartments. Under the flooring of the long room containing the Orpheus pavement a subway of massive masonry has been discovered, and traced to its termination at the wall of the room containing the Medusa pavement. In one of the smaller apartments a large doorway has been cleared out, and stones from the lintel identified. One of the square columns supporting the floor of another important chamber, formed of tiles eight inches square and one inch thick, alternated with layers of cement of the same thickness, was discovered on Monday; and also a flue in situ in the wall of the same chamber.

The period of occupation is indicated by the discovery of coins from Galbenus (A.D. 260) to Constantine (A.D. 337).

The spot is visited daily by large numbers of people, who are sad pilferers. I do not know the number of inhabitants and visitors in the Isle of Wight now, but I am afraid they are mostly thieves. Before my eyes, a well-dressed person took up a tessera, and handed it to his female companion, who pocketed it without a blush. The explorers are taking all the means in their power to check this pernicious, but truly English, practice.

I believe the explorations will be proceeded with as long as the weather continues favourable, but they will, of course, have to be suspended when winter comes. Arrangements will then be made to cover in and adequately protect the pavements from the weather.

It is beyond doubt that no similar discovery of equal interest and value has been made since the exploration of Uriconium. The antiquarian skill and insight which have led to it should be acknowledged by antiquarian societies and the public in the most fitting way, by providing funds for its completion and continuance. All I need add is that the veteran antiquary, Mr. Cornelius Nicholson, of Ventnor, is treasurer to the committee of explorers.

E. W. BRADBROOK.

'SIR THOMAS MORE AND HIS FAMILY.'

4, Argyll Place, Regent Street, Sept. 25, 1880.

IN reading your critic's long description of the picture of 'Sir Thomas More and his Family,' in Mr. Rowland Winn's collection at Nostel Priory, I feel interested in his allusion to the figure of a monkey, which he describes as being depicted on a portion of the canvas previously "turned in." Could this be the monogram of Martin van Cleef? In Her Majesty's collection at Windsor Castle is a curiously finished picture containing numerous figures, and representing 'The Calling of St. Matthew.' At one time, I believe, this work was attributed to Mabuse, although apparently without any authority. On the picture in question there does not appear to be any writing or monogram to assist us in finding the author of it, yet, curiously enough, we find in this picture "a chained monkey conspicuously placed," and apparently having no reference to the subject of the picture. Now we have a similar monkey in an old and coarsely executed woodcut, representing our Lord and his disciples leaving the Temple. By the side of the monkey in this print are the letters "V. C.," which may be the initials of Van Cleef. I am aware that some print connoisseurs read these letters as "V. G.," and ascribe the print to another hand; yet it must be remembered that in the better authenticated monogram of Martin Van Cleef, where a front view of the ape is given instead of the profile, or semi-profile, as in the picture at Windsor Castle, we find on the body of the ape a small shield, bearing similar Roman letters, viz., "V. C." Walpole merely alludes to the elder Van Cleef coming to this country during the reign of Philip and Mary, but it is quite possible that Martin van Cleef may have visited England in the early part of his life, and was then employed to complete Holbein's picture of the family of Sir Thomas More.

F. PETER SNOUZA.

* The monkey in question is an essential element of the design, and was never intended for a signature, still less for a "monogram." The beast is life size, and doubtless one of More's numerous household pets. Besides,—1, neither of the Van Cleefs had to do with any part of a picture of this technical nature; 2, there is no apparent connexion between the painting and the signature of M. Van Cleef; 3, "V. C." does not occur on the picture. In short, on such grounds as these as well might we attribute to Mucce every painting which contains a house-fly, because that artist is believed to have signed his works with representations of a fly, and give all pictures containing dogs to Hondius; all with cocks to Jerome Cock; all with stars to Staren; all with foxes to Vos. Finally, it is of Joest Van Cleef we read that he came to England, not of Martin, and Joest did not sign with the monkey!

THE SITE OF THE ANCIENT PHAROS AT ALEXANDRIA.

Alexandria, September, 1880.

By the kindness of the Khedive, who furnished me with a special order, I have just been enabled to visit the fortress of Kaitbey, built in the fifteenth century upon the site of the original Pharos of Alexandria. The island of Pharos is long since joined to the mainland, and its name only lingers in the Arabic word for a lighthouse, "Fenâr"; but that the tower of Sostratus stood at the end of the ridge of rocks which forms the western wing of the Great Harbour is perhaps the most certain fact in Alexandrian topography. My object was twofold: to see what is one of the finest relics of mediæval military architecture in the East, and to discover, if possible, some trace of the old Greek building. The value of the fortress as a work of war unfortunately forbids me to describe it as a work of art, but the most interesting part of it is the keep, a huge white tower standing four-square and topped by a crumbling minaret. This keep, I have no doubt, marks the exact site of the Pharos; and since Abdallatif in the thirteenth century describes the lower story of the ruin as square, it is not improbable that the walls of the keep follow the lines of the old walls, and are built on the same foundations with the old material. But, to my intense disappointment, I found nearly every stick and stone in the whole fortress covered with a thick coating of stucco. Almost the only exceptions are the doorway of the keep, which is formed of four huge blocks of plain Assouan granite (viz., two door-posts, lintel, and threshold), a granite column with Corinthian capital, upholding an arch inside, and two tablets of white marble, engraved in worn Coptic characters. As long as this stucco remains, one may look in vain for even a stone of the old building. The windowless cruciform mosque inside the keep, lit by a great square shaft in the centre open to the sky, is curious, but utterly devoid of ornament, except for a mosaic marble pavement which lies under the shaft, and forms a square between the four equal branches of the Greek cross. This pavement is sunk a foot below the floor of the four branches, perhaps to hold the rain that falls in winter. But though the mosque is not beautiful, its existence in that place tends to confirm the opinion that the keep marks the site of the Pharos, as the Arabs were notoriously fond of planting their mosques on sites hallowed by tradition or history. I hope to send another note on the subject.

ALFRED J. BUTLER.

M. JULES FERDINAND JACQUEMART.

ENGLISHMEN will join the French critics in lamenting profoundly the death of the distinguished engraver, who, born in Paris in 1837, was not quite forty-three years of age when he expired on the 26th ult. after a long illness, which he contracted during a visit to Vienna in 1873. On this occasion he acted as a juror of engraving at the Universal Exhibition. This attack resulted in an incurable malady of the lungs, which before long seriously interfered with Jacquemart's studies as an engraver, and compelled him to spend his winters at Mentone, where, nevertheless, he did as much work as was practicable, especially in water-colour painting, to which his attention had long been carefully and thoroughly given. He painted with remarkable freedom, brilliancy, purity of tints and tones, and extreme fidelity. He was one of the chief promoters of the Société des Aquarellistes, whose doings have been much admired in France and abroad. He appeared at the Salon of 1861 as a painter and as engraver, and showed such skill that he won much applause from those artists whose opinions sway the judgment of the laymen. He was the son of the late M. Albert Jacquemart, able author of the 'Histoire de la Porcelaine,' Paris, 1862, a sumptuous work, for which the engraver supplied twenty-six etchings of exquisite lucidity, solidity, and "colour." No one but a painter could have engraved so finely. An English translation of this work, with twelve of the etchings, has been published by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. Another work in which the two Jacquemarts were concerned with M. Henri Barbet de Jouy is the magnificent 'Les Gemmes et Joyaux de la Couronne,' Paris, 1866. In this publication the younger Jacquemart produced some masterpieces, among them being the famous "Pl. 46," a triumphant representation of the well-known buckler-shaped vase of rock crystal which is in a case in the Galerie d'Apollon. A proof of this line before us, and shows the conscientiousness, care, learning, freedom, and felicity of the draughtsman who could render with such precision the transparent, lustrous, hard, and pure material, its innumerable reflections of surrounding objects, its breadth, and its sparkle, without the slightest appearance of labour. He engraved among other examples ten pictures in the Museum at New York. He produced a very numerous series of illustrations of great value to his father's 'History of Furniture,' which, like the companion work on porcelain, we reviewed at the date of publication. The artist was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1869; he received medals in 1864, 1866, and 1867; likewise a medal of honour in 1878.

THE NATIONAL COLLECTION OF COINS AT APTHEKE.

1, Bloomsbury Court, W.C., Oct. 5, 1880.

Will you permit me to make known through your columns that I am forming a small collection of later English coins for presentation to the national collection of coins and medals in the University of Athens, which, from lack of sufficient funds, is very weak in specimens of the English series? If any Philhellene or others interested in promoting the study of numismatics would be willing to contribute any well-preserved specimens in gold, silver, or copper, I should be happy to take charge of them and present them in their name to the collection, as, the Eastern complications permitting, I propose to visit Athens in November. The coins might otherwise be sent through the Hellenic Legation direct to M. Pouloucas, the Curator. I should be particularly glad of a Gothic crown piece of the present reign.

GREVILLE J. CHESTER.

Five-Fri Gentry.

M. A. Yvon is said to be preparing a large panoramic picture representing the battle of Ulundi, and it is to be exhibited in London in May next. It is further said that this portent will be stretched on a wall of 130 yards (!) circumference. Let us hope that for "yards" "feet" is to be read.

The large picture, or the fragments of it, representing the 'Battle of Agincourt,' by Sir R. Ker Porter, which has recently been dismantled at the Mansion House, and, to the wonder of a new generation, exhibited at Guildhall in a terribly dilapidated condition, was the third work of its class which the energetic and warlike artist produced. The first was called 'The Storming of Seringapatam,' 1799—an event which in 1800, when the news of it reached Europe, created a tremendous furor. Sir R. K. Porter, then a youth of twenty or so, filled a canvas 120 ft. long in less than six weeks, and the picture was much praised when it was shown in the Lyceum Great Room in the last-named year. There is hardly any doubt that Mulready was one of Sir Robert's assistants in this work. It was burned by accident; the sketches made for it were sold at Porter's sale in 1843. The 'Siege of Acre' was the subject of the next picture or panorama; this was followed by the 'Battle of Agincourt,' which was likewise shown at the Lyceum Great Room about 1803. It was soon after presented to the Corporation of London, and hung in Guildhall; thence removed, it was again exhibited about thirty years later; after this it disappeared till about 1866, when it was rehung, and it then became plain that rats had made free with the edges of the canvas, which had been removed from the stretching frame and ignominiously treated. We take these notes from Mr. Stephens's 'Memorials of W. Mulready,' 1867, where, with other details, the author gives reasons for believing that Mulready, then a student of the Royal Academy and seventeen years of age, had a share in painting the 'Agincourt,' of which even the wreck shows that it is a work of very great spirit. It is 100 ft. long. It has been shamefully neglected. It is proposed to restore this prodigious production and treat it better in future.

DR. SCHLEIMANN'S new work, 'Ilios,' which Mr. Murray will publish before long, will be enriched with appendices and notes by Prof. Virchow, Brugsch Bey, Prof. Sayce, Prof. Max Müller, Prof. Mahaffy, Prof. Ascherson, Mr. Calvert, and Mr. Duffield.

MESSRS. SANBORN Low & Co. have in the press 'A Short History of the British School of Painting,' by Mr. G. H. Shepherd, giving a brief account of the characteristics of each artist, and an enumeration of his principal works.

THE Edinburgh Town Council are about to expend the sum of 1,200*l.* in placing statuettes of characters in the Waverley novels in the thirty empty niches of the Scott Monument.

WE are glad to learn that the Metropolitan Board of Works has agreed to refer to a committee the question of what can be done in respect to the obstruction placed by the City authorities on the site of Temple Bar. Sufficient is now to be seen of the design of Mr. Horace Jones to prove that it is quite out of keeping with the Courts of Justice. Had the design been placed before the public, as it ought to have been, the work would have been condemned on æsthetic and architectural grounds. Than the position of the "memorial" nothing could be more ill judged, not to say unfair. The erection of an uncalled-for structure on a site which, at a great public cost, has been enlarged for public convenience, ought to be stopped. A "refuge," if erected where Mr. Street has suggested, that is, to the westward of the obstruction, might be acceptable. Still better would be a subway at this point, and an inscription to mark the old site of Temple Bar. Let us hope the obstruction may be removed. That Mr. Street approved such a design as this is out of the range of possibilities.

IT has been proposed to "restore" the old Bridge Chapel at Rotherham by way of memorial of the late Mr. Guest of that town, an accomplished antiquary, and the historian of his native place. Still we are glad to learn that the feoffees of the place refused permission for the desired operations, that cash was not forthcoming, and that the committee of restorers has retired in disgust. To "restore" a genuine ancient building in memory of an antiquary was surely like insulting his spirit beyond the grave.

THE danger from fire to which the collections of the Louvre have been exposed by the burning of a considerable portion of the upper floors of the Pavillon de Flore on Saturday last has excited much alarm. It is deplorable that a building which is, on the whole, the greatest treasure-house of art in the world should still be exposed to risks of this nature, and be in unbroken connexion with houses in which fire is constantly used.

MUSIC

M. OFFENBACH.

THE most distinguished among composers of opéra bouffe, Jacques Offenbach, died in Paris last Tuesday, at the age of fifty-eight. He was born of Jewish parents at Cologne, on the 20th of July, 1822; but, though by birth a German, he belongs, both by education and style, to the French school of composers. He studied music at the Conservatoire of Paris, his instrument at that time being the violoncello. On the completion of his studies he entered the orchestra of the Opéra Comique as a violoncellist, also appearing as a solo player, though with no very marked success. His first essays at composition consisted of short pieces for his instrument and songs for soudeuses. He next became conductor at the Théâtre Français; and his first opera, 'Pépito,' in one act, was produced at the Opéra Comique in 1853. It was not, however, till 1855, when he took the theatre of the Bouffes Parisiens in order to produce his own works, that he reached the height of his popularity. His rapidity in composition was surprising; the catalogue of his pieces given by M. Gustave Chouquet in Dr. Grove's 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians' shows that between the years 1856 and 1862 he produced no fewer than twenty-five operas, of which six were brought out in 1856 and five in 1857. It cannot be doubted that this fluency injured the quality of his work, but it would be most unjust to deny him the possession of great talent. He had a constant flow of melody—often trivial, sometimes even vulgar, but very seldom dry, and of that peculiarly "ear-catching" quality calculated to ensure it at least a temporary popularity. Perhaps no modern composer has furnished so many melodies for the street-organs. M. Offenbach must also be credited with a large amount of "vis comica" and a thorough knowledge of stage effect, besides such an amount of real ability as would, if directed into a more serious channel, have given him a higher place in the history of art than that which he is likely to hold as a clever writer of burlesques. His works for the stage number about seventy, among the most popular being 'Orphée aux Enfers' (1858), 'Geneviève de Brabant' (1860), 'La Belle Héloïse' (1865), 'Barbe Bleue' (1866), 'La Grande Duchesse de Gérolstein' (1867), 'La Princesse de Trébizonde' (1870), 'Madame Favart' (1878), and 'La Fille du Tambour-Major' (1879).

Musical Society.

THE autumn season of Italian opera at Her Majesty's Theatre will commence on Monday week, the 18th inst., under the management of Mr. Armit. It was at one time feared that the theatre would not be opened this season, Mr. Mapleson having decided to concentrate his energies on his American enterprise; but this misfortune has been averted, thanks to the initiative of Mr. Armit, who brings to his onerous task the experience gained in assisting his father-in-law for several years in the management of Her Majesty's. The prospectus shows a desire to depart somewhat from the beaten track, but that the direction indicated is wise cannot be safely asserted. The one novelty promised is a work described as a "grand dramatic opera," 'Maria di Gand,' by Signor Tito Mattei, the libretto by Signor Cimini. The circumstance that Signor Tito Mattei has not hitherto given evidence of his powers as a composer of grand opera must not be taken as proof of his lack of such powers. But the other task which he has undertaken, that of writing recitatives for an Italian version of 'Maritana,' may be condemned beforehand as a waste of energy. The promised revivals of 'Norma,' 'Semiramide,' and 'Lucrezia Borgia' will not of themselves awaken much interest, but, if report speaks truly, Mr. Armit has secured a dramatic soprano in the person of Madame Giovannoni Zacchi, who will sustain the title rôles in these somewhat antiquated works. Madame Trebelli may be expected to secure a success in 'La Favorita,' the music of the heroine in Donizetti's masterpiece being written for a mezzo-soprano. In addition to Madame Zacchi, the list of artists includes the names of Mdlle. Rosina Isidor, Mdlle. Elise Widmar, Mdlle. de Bressolles, Signor Cantoni, and Signor Quintili-Leoni as new-comers, while among those more familiar are Mdlle. Bauermeister, Miss Purdy, Madame Trebelli, Signor Runcio, Signor Vizzani, Mr. George Fox, Signor Pantaleoni, M. Ordine, Signor Ghilberti, and Signor Foli. The engagement of an entirely new chorus of sixty-two voices is a step deserving warm commendation. The conductor will be Signor Li Calci, who in previous seasons has shown himself well qualified for his position, and Mr. Carrodus will be the leader of the orchestra.

THE third Leeds Triennial Festival will take place next week, and promises to be even more successful than the preceding gatherings. The list of works to be performed could not well have been rendered more interesting nor the executive force more efficient and imposing. The festival will open on Wednesday morning with a performance of 'Elijah'; in the evening one of the two most important novelties, Mr. J. F. Barnett's cantata, founded on Longfellow's poem, 'The Building of the Ship,' will be brought forward. The second part of the concert will be miscellaneous, the most important item being Mozart's minor Symphony. On Thursday morning there is a lengthy programme, consisting of Beethoven's Choral Symphony, Mendelssohn's 114th Psalm, Sterndale Bennett's 'May Queen,' and Mr. Walter Macfarren's overture, 'Hero and Leander.' In the evening Handel's 'Samson' will be performed with new additional accompaniments, written expressly for the festival by Mr. Ebenezer Prout. The principal feature of Friday morning's concert will be Mr. Arthur Sullivan's new sacred cantata, 'The Martyr of Antioch,' the words of which have been selected and arranged from Dean Milman's poem by Mr. W. S. Gilbert. The second part will consist of Beethoven's Mam in c and Schubert's 'Song of Miriam.' The evening programme will include Bach's cantata, 'O Light Everlasting'; Raff's 'Lenore' Symphony; a new overture, entitled 'Mors Janus Vitæ,' by Mr. Thomas Wingham; and Mendelssohn's 'Lorelei.' The festival will be brought to a conclusion on Saturday morning with a performance of 'The Last Judgment,' the first and second parts of 'The Creation,' and the 'Gloria' from Handel's Utrecht 'Te Deum.' There will be an orchestra of 112 performers, the wood wind contingent being doubled, and a chorus of 306. The principal vocalists engaged are Madames Albani, Osgood, Anna Williams, Patey, Trebelli, Messrs. Lloyd, Mass, Henschel, Henry Cross, and Frederic King. The conductor is Mr. Arthur Sullivan.

THE programmes of the new series of Promenade Concerts at Covent Garden, under Mr. Weist Hill, are of a distinctly lower type than those under Mr. F. H. Cowen's leadership, and are therefore unworthy of notice in these columns.

THE Saturday Concerts at the Crystal Palace will be resumed this afternoon.

THE South London Choral Association, under the direction of Mr. L. C. Venables, announces a series of three concerts at St. James's Hall, on April 5th, May 19th, and June 22nd next. The Association has secured the lease of the Surrey Masonic Hall, where, in addition to an inaugural concert, performances of 'The Messiah' and 'Elijah' will be given during the season.

THE current number of the Revue et Gazette Musicale contains the last of a long and most interesting series of articles on 'Music in Russia,' written by M. César Cui, himself a Russian composer of distinction. Besides a history of music in that country, the articles comprise a series of biographical and critical notices of the chief Russian composers, past and present, and an account of the principal musical institutions in the empire of the Czar.

It is announced that the parts in M. Gounod's new opera, 'Le Tribut de Zamora,' will be sung by Mlles. Daram, Krauss, and Ploux, and Messrs. Boudouresque, Lussalle, Melchissédec, and Sellier. It is not expected that the work will be produced before next April.

FRIEDRICH WIRPACHT, one of the most distinguished oboe-players in Germany, who for many years held the post of first oboe at the Opera of Berlin, died in that city on the 17th ult., at the age of seventy-six.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LEMKEN and MANAGER, MR. HENRY IRVING.
THE CORICAN BROTHERS, Every Night at 8.30. LOUIS and FANTIN DRI FRANCHI, by IRVING at 7.30. BYRON'S 'Bow Bells,' by IRVING at 7.30. BYRON'S 'Wild Flowers,' by IRVING at 7.30. BYRON'S 'Popsy Wopsy,' by IRVING at 7.30. BYRON'S 'A Musical Folly in One Act,' by SYDNEY GRUNDY and EDWARD SOLOMON. SURREY.—'Virginia,' a Tragedy in Five Acts. By Sheridan Knowles.

THE WEEK.

ROYALTY (Reopening).—'Bow Bells,' a Comic Drama in Three Acts, by H. J. Byron; 'Wild Flowers,' a Dramatic Sketch, by Edward Rose; 'Popsy Wopsy,' a Musical Folly in One Act, by Sydney Grundy and Edward Solomon. SURREY.—'Virginia,' a Tragedy in Five Acts. By Sheridan Knowles.

Mr. Byron's dramas have a strong family resemblance. Plot and situation are ordinarily of small account, characters are forcibly sketched and inadequately filled in, and the personal volition of the author is seen to direct the course of his bark, independent of all wind of probability or tide of motive. Confident in his power by quaint conceit or humorous extravagance to win back the favour of his audience, Mr. Byron takes the strangest liberties that ever were claimed by dramatist. The result is, however, always success. Mr. Byron is one of the first humourists of the day. He could almost be trusted to Provoke a smile

Under the ribs of death.

If anything goes wrong in one of his pieces (and something often goes wrong), if the small balance of dramatic invention which he keeps at the bank is overdrawn, he has but to hand in a draft upon his fund of drollery and all is once more well. Criticism, mean time, stands in the same position as the public, but feels, of course, an added responsibility;—not liking to censure, it does not dare to praise.

A curious instance how successful is Mr. Byron's method is afforded by the reception accorded 'Bow Bells,' his new "comic drama" at the Royalty. The first act was received with indifference, and the second with discontent. Sensible, then, that he had tested to the utmost that favour of the public which is his sheet anchor, Mr. Byron commenced to exert himself. He did not, it is true, make any alteration in his course. He spread, however, all the canvas of his fancy, and displayed all the bunting of his drollery, and his vessel thus equipped sailed amidst acclamations into port. All thoughts of her unseaworthiness were then dismissed, and the homage due to a skilful pilot, who, whatever his lack of knowledge of the ocean tracks, could be trusted to force his vessel through obstructions at the mouth of the harbour, was accorded. Dismissing nautical illustrations, of which, perhaps, too abundant use has been made, we may safely aver that 'Bow Bells' was pulled out of the fire at a moment when its destruction seemed all but certain. It is gratifying to state, since the contrary is ordinarily the case, that the third act was the strongest. Mr. Byron may be congratulated upon having reserved the interest for the last act. So resolutely has he economized for this purpose, he may almost be said to have left his two previous acts without any provision. Nothing can be much more simple than his plot, which is based upon a constant and sorrowful experience of humanity. The idea that happiness is to be found in some total change of conditions is a rooted conviction of men which Pope advances when he states, in one of his most familiar lines, that Man never is, but always to be, blest, and which, in some of his most vigorous verses, Dryden derides when he tells how men

From the dregs of life think to receive
What the first sprightly running could not give.

Having by years of patience, and, as we may suppose from the conclusions at which he arrives, not too scrupulous toil, accumulated a competency, Mr. Byron's hero, a City tradesman, retires into the country to lead, apart from social snares, falsehoods, and temptations, a life of purity and innocence. For a brief while his experiences are pleasant enough. In the end the conviction is thrust upon him that selfishness and imposture, though they are inmates of great cities, are not confined to them, and that bucolic pursuits may sharpen other appetites than those which country fare will satisfy. With a largely augmented stock of experience, accordingly, our citizen returns within the sound of Bow bells. His niece, whom, with a view to induce them to select unsophisticated husbands, he has greatly tormented, are now left to choose for themselves.

This idea is as good as another for a comedy, since it offers room for a sentimental interest and for that species of satire which is the salt of comedy. Had it been treated more seriously, a better work might have been extracted. Mr. Byron, however, has sacrificed probability to compactness, and when he has reached the third act, and it is necessary for the villains to be unmasked, he has made them very conveniently pull off one another's masks or throw off their own.

A bright if not specially noteworthy interpretation of the piece is afforded. Mr. Righton plays with unction distinctly comic the citizen who seems to have occupied his leisure hours with meditations upon Jean Jacques. This is one of the best and most artistic of Mr. Righton's performances. Miss Kate Lawler has a brusqueness and petulance not unsuited to the character she presents of a tradesman's niece with a will of her own. The actors generally play satisfactorily the characters assigned them, and one actor at least, Mr. Philip Day, succeeds in stamping upon a character an exact, a recognizable, and a very comic physiognomy.

With 'Bow Bells' were presented two shorter pieces. 'Wild Flowers,' by Mr. Rose, is a sketch of contemporary society with a pleasant love interest. 'Popsy Wopsy' is an extravaganza which, so far as regards its plot, is not without drollery, but which owes much of its attractions to Mr. Solomon's vivacious music. The principal characters in this were sustained by Misses Lawler and Brennan, Mr. Righton, and Mr. Haynes.

Sheridan Knowles's drama of 'Virginia' has been revived at the Surrey, for the reappearance of Mr. Creswick after his return from Australia. This tragic masterpiece of a man who had a large measure of dramatic fire provides Mr. Creswick with a character suited to his talents. The exposition of Virginia which is afforded is conventional in style, and is wholly unlike the modern school of tragic acting. It has, however, genuine power, and is in its sustained strength more effective than the spasmodic style which has sprung of late into public favour. Mr. Creswick's powers have ripened and his method has been matured during his absence, and his impersonation has variety and significance we failed to note in earlier performances. The general interpretation of this play had an amount of merit which reflects credit upon the Surrey management. Actors, many of whom are wholly unknown to the majority of playgoers, wore the Roman dress with an ease that is far from common in West End theatres, and acted with judgment and moderation which deserve high commendation. Mr. J. A. Arnold's Appius Claudius, Mr. Howard Russell's Dentatus, and Mrs. Billington's Servia were competent performances; Miss Cowell's Virginia had grace and tenderness; and Mr. Cartwright's Iulius showed flashes of genuine passion. If performances of this class become common on the Surrey side of the river, there is a chance of the West End playgoer being lured to theatres altogether outside his customary limits. Mr. Creswick, previous to the termination of his engagement, will play a round of his characters.

Dramatic Society.

Evening performances have commenced at the Imperial Theatre, the entertainments consisting principally of ballet. No novelty has, however, been produced, the opening piece consisting of 'A Quiet Pipe,' with Miss B. Henri and Mr. Macklin in their original rôles, and the following spectacle being made up of ballets which have been seen in the Aquarium, at Drury Lane, or at other theatres.

At the morning performances at the same house a burlesque by Mr. R. Reece, entitled 'The Half-Crown Diamonds,' has also been played. This is a rearrangement of a piece given a few years ago at the Mirror Theatre. Miss E. Farren, Mr. Royce, Miss Vaughan, Miss Amelia, and other members of the Gaiety company support the principal parts.

The title 'Auld Lang Syne,' assigned last week to Mr. Dilly's one-act piece at the Vaudeville, should be 'Auld Acquaintance,' a name which characterizes the intimacy originally existing between the two principal characters.

'ROBERT MACAIRE' has been revived at the Ambigu Comique for the reappearance of M. Gil Naza, who plays the hero. M. Dilly is Bertrand, a part which in his hands should be irresistibly comic. The version of 'Robert Macaire' now given is in five acts and seven tableaux, and is preceded by 'L'Auberge aux Adrets,' in two tableaux.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—E. B.—E. J. C.—W. G.—E. L.—W. A.—G. F.—received.
W. G. W.—We cannot answer such questions.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

SOUTH AMERICA.

By ANTONIO GALLEGA.

1 vol. demy 8vo.

THE LIFE OF CICERO.

By ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE OF RICHARD COBDEN.

By JOHN MORLEY.

2 vols. demy 8vo.

SOCIOLOGY BASED UPON ETHNOGRAPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

By Dr. CHARLES LETOURNEAU.

Translated by HENRY M. TROLLOPE.

Large crown 8vo.

JAPANESE POTTERY;

Being a Native Report.

Edited by A. W. FRANKS, F.R.S., F.S.A.

With numerous Illustrations and Marks. Large crown 8vo.

THE INDUSTRIAL ARTS OF INDIA.

By GEORGE C. M. BIRDWOOD, C.S.I.

With Map and 174 Illustrations. New Edition.

WALKS THROUGH THE CITY OF YORK.

By ROBERT DAVIES, F.S.A.

Edited by his WIDOW.

Demy 8vo.

THE RACEHORSE IN TRAINING.

With some Hints on Racing and Racing Reform.

By WILLIAM DAY.

Demy 8vo. Third Edition.

NEW NOVELS IN THE PRESS

BY

ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

GEORGE MEREDITH.

HAWLEY SMART.

JOHN SAUNDERS.

GEORGE MANVILLE FENN.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW, for OCTOBER.

IRISH RENTS, IMPROVEMENTS, and LANDLORDS. By Maymough O'Brien.
A CENTURY OF ENGLISH POETRY. By A. C. Swinburne.
CATTLE RANCHES in the FAR WEST. By W. Burke Grohman.
COUNTY CONSTITUENCIES—a PLAN of REFORM. By Rev. T. W. Fowler.
ARE WE ENGLISHMEN? By Grant Allen.
POLITICAL ECONOMY in the UNITED STATES. By T. R. Child Leslie.
THE TRAGIC COMEDIANS. Chaps. 1-4. By George Meredith.
HOME and FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

NEW NOVELS.

THE TWO DREAMERS.

By JOHN SAUNDERS.

3 vols.

[Next week.]

THE CLERK OF PORTWICK.

By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN.

1 vol.

[This day.]

BELLES AND RINGERS.

By HAWLEY SMART.

1 vol.

THE NEW ERA.

A Dramatic Poem.

By VIRGINIA VAUGHAN.

Poep. 8vo.

[This day.]

BRITISH BEE FARMING, ITS PROFITS AND PLEASURES.

By JAMES F. ROBINSON.

Uniform with the "Farming for Pleasure and Profit" Series. Large crown 8vo. 6s.

"It puts before the public, on unquestionable authority, an unvarnished and honest statement of the advantages and difficulties (such as these are) of bee-keeping, and is in itself, therefore, a far more powerful incentive to the industry than any number of philanthropic or sentimental exhortations to the same object."—Daily Telegraph.

"Certainly no one could wish for a better guide than this excellent manual by Mr. Robinson."—Live Stock Journal.

CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

THE ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY EDITION.

Complete in 20 vols. demy 8vo. 10s. each, or Set of 20 vols. 15s.

THE HOUSEHOLD EDITION.

20 Volumes, containing nearly 900 Illustrations by F. Bernard, J. Mahony, F. A. Fraser, C. Green, &c. Price 3s. 14s. 6d. in cloth; and 3s. 15s. in paper binding.

THE POCKET VOLUME EDITION.

20 vols. small fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

THE "CHARLES DICKENS" EDITION.

Crown 8vo. 21 vols. cloth, with 3 Illustrations each, 3s. 6d. 6d.

THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS.

LIBRARY EDITION, COMPLETE.

Handsomely printed, 34 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.

CHEAP AND UNIFORM EDITION.

23 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

PEOPLE'S EDITION.

In 27 vols. small crown 8vo. price 2s. each volume, bound in cloth.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S
NEW LIST.

Now ready,
NEW GUINEA:
WHAT I DID AND WHAT I SAW.

By L. M. D'ALBERTIS,
Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Honorary Member and Gold Medalist of the I.R.G.S. C.M.Z.B., &c.
In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, with Maps, Coloured Plates,
and numerous very fine Woodcut Illustrations, price 45s.

* * Of all the habitable but unknown portions of the globe,
with the exception of Africa, New Guinea possesses at present the greatest interest for the student and the general reader. Professor D'Albertis may be said to have devoted his life to the unravelling of its mysteries, and his work is by far the most thorough and complete account of its people, animals, birds, insects, &c., extant.

PRIMITIVE FOLK MOOTS; Or, OPEN-AIR ASSEMBLIES IN BRITAIN.

By GEORGE LAURENCE GOMME, F.S.A.,
Honorary Secretary to the Folk-Lore Society, Author of
'Index of Municipal Offices.'

Now ready, 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, price 12s.

THE NEW NOVEL BY JEAN INGELOW &
SARAH DE BERANGER.
In 3 vols.

Now ready, by the Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,'
'John Holdsworth, Chief Mate,' &c.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART.
By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 5s. 6d.

THE NEW STORY BY JULES VERNE is
The TRIBULATIONS of a CHINA-
MAN. New Work. By JULES VERNE. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, illustrated, 7s. 6d.

THE NEW STORIES BY THE LATE W. R. G. KINGSTON are
The HEIR of KILFINNAN: a Tale of the Shore and Ocean. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, with illustrations, 7s. 6d.

DICK CHEVELEY: his Adventures and Misadventures. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, with illustrations, 7s. 6d.

THE NEW STORY BY LOUISA M. ALCOIT is
JACK and JILL: a Village Story.
By the Author of 'Little Men,' 'Little Women,' &c.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 10s. 6d.
GREECE and the GREEKS; or, a Historic Sketch of Attic Life and Manners. By the Hon. THOMAS TALBOT.

The NAVAL BRIGADE in SOUTH AFRICA. By HENRY F. NORMSBURY, C.B. R.N. Crown 8vo. cloth
extra, price 7s. 6d.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION DE LUXE FOR CHRISTMAS, &c.
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LITTLE BRITAIN, the SPECTRE BRIDGEBROOM, and a LEGEND of SLEEPY HOLLOW. Specially illustrated by 130 very fine Engravings on Wood by Mr. J. D. Cooper designed by Mr. Charles
O. Murray. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d.

In Coloured Wrapper 4to. price 3s.
PRETTY PEGGY, and other Ballads.
By ROSINA EMMET. Charming large Coloured Illustrations and Ballads by an American Lady. (Ready.)

Now ready, 4to. In Wrapper, price 1s. 6d.
MEN of MARK. No. 57, Vol. V., containing 3 Permanent Cabinet-size Photographs by Leek & White and, specially taken from life for this work, of RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT CRANBROOK.
HON. SIR EDWARD FREY.
HORMUZD RASSAM.

Now ready, price 1s. Part VII. of SUNRISE; a Story of these Times,
By WILLIAM BLACK.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., SHARPE & RIVINGTON,
Crown Buildings, 1-8, Fleet-street, E.C.

Ready next week, in 2 vols. price 25s.

HALF - HOURS WITH FOREIGN NOVELISTS.
By HELEN and ALICE ZIMMERN.

With Short Notices of the Lives and Writings of the Various Authors.

These stories from beyond sea and studies of the novelists of other lands will be best understood by the following passage from the authors' Preface:—"Some years ago a contributor to a distinguished quarterly review, in introducing a foreign novelist to English readers, wrote the following sentence: 'It may be received as an axiom that the light literature of any country—particularly its novels and romances—not only reveals the individual talents and dispositions of the writers, but likewise affords indirectly an insight into the general character of the inhabitants.'

Indeed, it may be said to reflect to some extent the varying phases of national life.' This idea suggested the plan of this book. Its aim is twofold: to give English readers unacquainted with foreign languages some insight into the writings of the best foreign novelists, and also, by means of extracts from these novelists, to depict the life, character, scenery of the various countries of which they write.
To this end it was needful to select such writers as are most popular and national."

CONTENTS OF THE TWO VOLUMES.

I.
GEORGES SAND (France).

The MARRIAGE.
The CABBAGE.

II.
HENRY MURGER (France).

FRANCINE'S MUFF.
The PASSAGE of the RED SEA.

III.
AUERBACH (Germany).

The AXE.

IV.
BUSKEN-HUET (Holland).

GITJE.
SATURDAY at the HAGUE.
ALONG the CHURCHYARD.

V.
STIFTER (Austria).

The BALLOON ASCENT.
The HEATH.

VI.
FARINA (Italy).

SEPARATION.

VII.
DAUDET (France).

INDUENT.
The VICE.
The MACHINES.

VIII.
SPIELHAGEN (Germany).

The STORM.

IX.
VON SACHER-MASOCH (Galicia).

The SLEDGE RIDE.

X.
FLYGARE-CARLEN (Sweden).]

The SMUGGLERS.

XI.
CHERBULIEZ (France).

L'IDÉE de JEAN TETEROL.

XII.
HACKLÄNDER.

The VOLUNTEER.

XIII.
JOKAI (Hungary).

HUNGARIAN SKETCHES.

XIV.
TURGENIEFF (Russia).

The NIHILIST.

XV.
FREYTAG (Germany).

The GERMAN PROFESSOR.

XVI.
CABALLERO (Spain).

The OLD and the NEW;
Or, THREE SOULS TOO GOOD for this WORLD.

XVII.
FEUILLET (France).

JULIA de TRECŒUR.

XVIII.
KRASZEWSKI (Poland).

The FOUNDLING.

XIX.
MARLITT (Germany).

The TWELVE APOSTLES.

XX.
BJØERNSON (Norway).

The BETROTHAL.

XXI.
BALZAC (France).

A CRETIN VILLAGE.
A BRETON TOWN.

XXII.
HEYSE (Germany).

The HUNTSMAN.

XXIII.
GABORIAU (France).

The AMATEUR DETECTIVE.

XXIV.
KELLER (Switzerland).

The FUNERAL.
CLOTHES MAKE MEN.

XXV.
Mrs. BOSBOOM-TOUSSAINT (Holland).

MAJOR FRANCES.

XXVI.
SANDEAU (France).

The LAST of the OLD FAMILY.

The Works of the Twenty-six Leaders of Fiction here laid under Contribution present

NUMEROUS CHARMING PICTURES
OF THE
HOME LIFE AND HUMORESQUE CHARACTER
OF
CONTINENTAL EUROPE.

REMINGTON & CO. 138, New Bond-street, W.

In a few days, at all the Libraries,

FAR OUT: Rovings Retold.

By Lieut.-Col. W. F. BUTLER, C.B., Author of 'The Great Lone Land,' &c.

Illustrated by

WM. ILLISTON, Limited, 55, Ludgate-hill, London.

Now ready, demy 8vo. 648 pages, price 18s.

AN ANECDOTAL HISTORY OF THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT,

FROM THE EARLIEST PERIODS TO THE PRESENT TIME.

WITH NOTICES OF EMINENT PARLIAMENTARY MEN, AND EXAMPLES OF THEIR ORATORY.

Compiled from Authentic Sources by GEORGE HENRY JENNINGS.

"A charming collection of anecdotes. No book is more fitted to lie near one's elbow, so as to be taken up for a half-hour's instruction and amusement."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

London: HORACE COX, Law Times Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand.

NEW STORY.—Just published, price 5s.

HOW THEY WERE CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

A TALE OF FRANCE IN 1802.

By ESMÉ STUART,
Author of 'Mimi,' 'The Good Old Days,' &c.

With a Frontispiece, introducing NAPOLEON I. and another Character in the Story.

MARCUS WARD & Co. 67, Chandos-street, Strand, W.C.

NEW NOVEL.—NEXT WEEK,

In 3 vols.

LIFE'S SEVEN AGES: A NOVEL.

By Mrs. HIBBERT WARE,
Author of 'The King of Bath; or, the Days of Beau Nash,' &c.

"And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven Ages."—As You Like It.

CHARLES J. SKERT, 10, King William-street, Charing Cross.

With 12 Illustrations, price 5s.

THE CONJURER'S DAUGHTER: A TALE.

By J. W. SHERER, C.B.I.

"The incidents are well connected, the dialogue is rational, and the author's narrative style is most agreeable."
—St. James's Gazette.

"It must be said that the volume is eminently readable, and that it should come into popular favour."—Scotsman.

London: W. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place.

GEORGE ELIOT

This day is published, a New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo. 5s.

IMPRESSIONS OF THEOPHRASTUS SUCH.

By GEORGE ELIOT.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

On WEDNESDAY, the 13th, will be published,

THE HISTORY OF THE INVASION OF THE CRIMEA.

By A. W. KINGLAKE, Esq.

Volume the Sixth—WINTER TROUBLES.

8vo. price 16s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

E P P S'S C O C O A.

GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

JAMES EPPS & Co. HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS, LONDON.
MAKERS OF EPPS'S GLYCERINE JULIENES.—Sold in Labelled Boxes only.

Just out, price 1s.; post free, 1s. 3d.

FOUR FLIGHTS; ROUND TABLE ANNUAL for 1881. At all Bookshops, Railway Bookstalls, and at JUDY OFFICE, 99, SHOELANE, E.C.

CHARLES SALAMANT'S MUSICAL SETTINGS OF THE ANCIENT LYRICS.

Two Shillings each.

HORACE'S 23rd Ode, 1st Book, Ad CHLOEN:
Latin Song, for Marriage and Tumors, in F and G.—CATULLUS'S
1st Ode LUCTUS in MORTE PARSELES Latin Song, for Tumors and Sorrow.—"Quite worthy of the composer of 'I arise from dreams of this'."—Standard. "The idea is a happy one, and the execution felicitous."—Standard. London: Novello, Ewer & Co.

Just published, 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

HAUSRAH.—HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTA-MENT TIMES. The Time of Jesus. By Dr A. HAUSRAH, Professor of Theology, Heidelberg translated, with the Author's sanction, from the Third German Edition by the Rev. C. T. POYNING and P. QUENEN. Vol. II. Complete, 2 vols. 8vo. 12s.
Subscribers to the Theological Translation Fund Library receive this Volume for 1s. Prospectus with Contents of the Series post free on application.

THE HOLY BIBLE

Just published, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

THE HOLY BIBLE. Translated by SAMUEL
SHARPE. Being a Revision of the Authorized English Version.
Fourth Edition of the Old Testament, Eighth Edition of the New Testament. 8vo. 10s. 6d.
Williams & Norgate, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; and 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A MANUAL OF PALEONTOLOGY, FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS.

With a General Introduction on the Principles of Paleontology.

By H. ALLYN NICHOLSON M.D. D.Sc. F.R.S.E. &c., Professor of Natural History in the University of St. Andrews, Author of 'A Manual of Zoology' &c.
Second Edition, Revised and greatly enlarged, with a Glossary and Index.
3 vols. 8vo. with 125 illustrations, 21s.

"The most complete and systematic treatise on the subject in the English language. It has not only been thoroughly revised, and to a great extent rewritten, but so much enlarged by the addition of new matter, that it may be considered to be a new edition and purpose, a new book."—Saturday Review, 26th Sept. 1880.

"There is a wonderful charm of simplicity and clearness about the composition: the indefinable touch of genius lights up the page, and the most general reader must be struck indeed who does not follow the author with an interest running hard upon enthusiasm. The illustrations are not only profuse and scientifically accurate, but exhibit for the most part a pictorial delivery and vividness such as must satisfy the most exacting connoisseur in this kind of art."

"It is certainly the best book of its kind for the use of students and for the general reader which we possess."—Ecological Magazine.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

PHENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET

and CHANCERY CROSS, LONDON. Established 1782.

Branches and Liberal Loss Settlements.

Insurance effected in all parts of the World.

JOHN J. SMOUMFIELD, Secretary.

SUN FIRE OFFICE.

Thames-street, E.C. Charing Cross, S.W.

Oxford-street (corner of Vere-street), W.

Established 1710.

Home and Foreign Insurance effected.

Sum insured in 1879, £81,497,401.

FRANCIS B. BELTON, Secretary.

SUN LIFE OFFICE, LONDON.

Established 1810.

CHIEF OFFICE—61, Threadneedle-street.

BRANCH OFFICE—60, Chancery Cross.

Also at Oxford-street, corner of Vere-street.

Life Assurance of all descriptions.

Specialty Low Rates for Young Lives, and for Non-Participating Policies.

Provision of all Claims.

A new and greatly simplified form of Proposal also the Society's newly-revised Prospectus, will be forwarded on application.

J. G. FLETCHER, Actuary.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY,

79, FINE COURT,

For LIVES ONLY ESTABLISHED 1807.

Accumulated Fund £2,043,882

Also a Subscribed Capital of more than .. £1,000,000

Reports, Prospectuses, and Forms may be had at the Office, or from any of the Company's Agents, post free.

GEORGE HUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary.

UNION ASSURANCE SOCIETY, Instituted in the reign of Queen Anne, A.D. 1714. Chief Office, 61, Cornhill, E.C.; Western Branch, 70, Baker-street, W. London.

DIRECTORS, TRUSTEES, &c.

STEPHEN SOAMES, Esq., Chairman.

CHARLES MONTAGUE, Esq., Deputy-Chairman.

William James Ford, Esq., John Thornton Rogers, Esq., John Herbert Esq., Leonard Hunter Esq.,
Edmund Holland, Esq., James Thompson Esq.,
Wm. Burrows Lewis, Esq., Alderman Sir Sidney H. Wain-
low Bart. M.P.,
John Miles Esq., R. Heysham Wood, Esq.,
John Morley Esq.

Managing Director—Wm. Burrows Lewis, Esq.

Actuary—Wm. Wallis, Esq.

Secretary—Chas. Darvall, Esq.

Accumulated Funds £1,700,000

Annual Income £250,000

FIRE INSURANCE.—Fire Insurance should be paid within fifteen days from the 25th of September.

Four-fifths of the office profits are appropriated to the benefit of the insured every five years, thus giving them nearly all the advantage of a Mutual Company but without any risk or liability whatever.

During the last thirty years the bonus has averaged upwards of 12.5 per cent per annum on the sum assured.

The published accounts give the fullest details as to the position of the Society.

WILLIAM BURROWS LEWIS, Managing Director.

CHARLES MONTAGUE, Secretary.

GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY,

NEW BOND-STREET,

AVAILABLE FOR BOTH LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

Comprises an ENGLISH and FOREIGN CIRCULATING LIBRARY, provided with all the BEST and NEWEST LITERATURE, a LIBRARY of VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC, a REFERENCE LIBRARY, READING, WRITING, and NEWS ROOMS, supplied with the Daily and Weekly Journals, LADIES' DRAWING-ROOM, DINING and LUNCHEON ROOMS, SMOKING-ROOM, and all the appliances and comforts of a FIRST-CLASS CLUB.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

CLASS.	TOWN.				HALF YEAR.	ONE YEAR.
					£. s. d.	£. s. d.
A—TWO VOLUMES	0 12 0	1 1 0
B—THREE VOLUMES	0 18 0	1 11 6
C—FOUR VOLUMES , delivered free	1 4 0	2 2 0
D—SIX VOLUMES , ditto	1 16 0	3 3 0
E—EIGHT VOLUMES , ditto	2 8 0	4 4 0

And Two Volumes for each additional Guinea per annum. Sets of Books are divided to meet the convenience of Subscribers.

Subscribers D and E are entitled to all the Club privileges, including the use of the Reference Library, the Reading and Writing Rooms, Ladies' Drawing-Room, &c.; and E are also entitled, upon a further payment of Two Guineas per annum, to introduce One Friend into the Rooms set apart for Members.

CLUBS AND LITERARY INSTITUTIONS.

CLASS.					HALF YEAR.	ONE YEAR.
					£. s. d.	£. s. d.
F—TWELVE VOLUMES	4 4 0
G—TWENTY VOLUMES	6 6 0

And Ten Volumes for each additional Three Guineas.

CLASS.	COUNTRY.				HALF YEAR.	ONE YEAR.
					£. s. d.	£. s. d.
H—FIVE VOLUMES	1 4 0	2 2 0
I—NINE VOLUMES	1 16 0	3 3 0
K—TWELVE VOLUMES	2 8 0	4 4 0
L—FIFTEEN VOLUMES	3 0 0	5 5 0
M—EIGHTEEN VOLUMES	3 12 0	6 6 0

Subscription N to Club privileges only, as described above, Two Guineas per annum.

Subscribers L and M are entitled to the Club privileges for themselves and for one additional member of the family.

Boxes for the Conveyance of Books to Country Subscribers are provided by the Library free of charge.

All the Books in the Library, both English and Foreign, are available for Subscribers without distinction as to amounts of subscription, and Subscribers, at their option, may have Volumes of Music instead of Books.

THE FOREIGN CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

In addition to the usual advantages offered by Circulating Libraries, attention is paid to the Foreign Library, which consists of over 5,000 Volumes, and which is kept supplied with all New Works of importance. Subscribers have the option of taking the whole or part of their subscription in Foreign Books.

THE REFERENCE LIBRARY.

The formation of a Permanent Library of Selected and Standard Works has been commenced, and liberal additions will be made from time to time with the growth of the undertaking.

THE READING AND WRITING ROOMS.

Especially care is taken to render this feature of the Library attractive by a regular supply of all the best Periodicals and Reviews. These are always available, and particular attention is paid to the Department of Foreign Periodical Literature.

The Reading-Rooms are open, at present, from 9 A.M. until 10 P.M. on week days, and from 6 P.M. until 10 P.M. on Sundays.

THE MUSIC LIBRARY.

Subscribers of every class have the option of taking either the whole or part of their subscription in music—instrumental and vocal.

THE DINING-ROOMS.

The Dining-Rooms are open for the supply of luncheons, afternoon teas, and dinners, and Members of the Library will also be able to make arrangements for dinners to private parties.

THE TELEPHONE.

Subscribers are now in telephonic communication with the centres at Westminster and in the City.

Cheques and P.O. Orders should be made payable to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, the Librarian, who will promptly furnish all further information upon application.

GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW BOND-STREET, W.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Royal 8vo. 25s. [On October 15.]

LIFE of Lieut.-Gen. Sir JAMES OUTRAM. By Major-General Sir FREDERICK J. GOLDSMITH, C.B. K.C.S.I. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations and Maps, 32s.
"As a biography the book must take a permanent place. It will live among us like the justly-acquired fame of James Outram himself, and help, as he did, to uphold British power, beneficence, and honour."—Daily Telegraph.

PRINCIPLES of PROPERTY in LAND. By John Boyd KINNEAR, Author of 'Principles of Reform, Political and Legal,' 'A Practical Treatise on the Law of Bankruptcy in Scotland,' 'Digest of House of Lords Appeal Cases,' &c. Crown 8vo. 5s.

DRAMATIC IDYLS. Second Series. By Robert Browning. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

PASSAGES from the PROSE WRITINGS of MATTHEW ARNOLD. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
Contents:—1. Literature—2. Politics and Society—3. Philosophy and Religion.

MIXED ESSAYS. By Matthew Arnold. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 9s.
Contents:—Democracy—Equality—Irish Catholicism and British Liberalism—Parvo Vivam ut Necesse est—A Guide to English Literature—Falkland—A French Critic on Milton—A French Critic on Goethe—George Sand.

A SELECTION from the POETRY of ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. Second Series. Uniform with the First Series. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.; gilt edges, 8s. 6d.

A SELECTION from the POETICAL WORKS of ROBERT BROWNING. Second Series. Uniform with the First Series. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.; gilt edges, 8s. 6d.

PHILOSOPHY of CHARLES DICKENS. By the Hon. Albert S. G. CANNING, Author of 'Philosophy of the Waverley Novels,' 'Religious Strife in British History,' &c. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
"A book that is well worth reading."—Whitaker's Review.
"The author has done his work with taste and judgment."—Queen.

ENGLISH TREES and TREE PLANTING. By William H. ARLETT. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.
"To country gentlemen the book will be invaluable."—Examiner.
"Calculated to be of great service to such as need a practical guide to English forestry."—Live Stock Journal.

NEW and OLD: a Volume of Verse. By John Addington SYMONDS, M.A., Author of 'Renaissance in Italy,' &c. Crown 8vo. 9s.
"The production of a man of decidedly poetical sympathy and imagination; of delicate and refined taste and feeling, and rare accomplishment as a writer of various verse."—Daily News.

RENAISSANCE in ITALY: Age of the Despots. By John ADDINGTON SYMONDS, M.A. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 16s.

NEW NOVELS.

OLIVER CONSTABLE, Miller and Baker. By Sarah Tytler, Author of 'Citoyenne Jacqueline,' 'Scotch Fire,' &c. 3 vols. post 8vo.
"An exceedingly interesting tale. We regard it as one of the best works of the gifted authoress."—Court Journal.

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes. 2 vols. post 8vo. [On October 15.]

NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD.'
The TRUMPET MAJOR. By Thomas Hardy, Author of 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' &c. 3 vols. post 8vo. [On October 23rd.]

R O M O L A.

BY GEORGE ELIOT.

Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. have the pleasure of announcing the Publication of an Edition of 'ROMOLA,' by GEORGE ELIOT, in Two Volumes, imperial 8vo.

The Letter-press of this Edition will be printed by Messrs. RICHARD CLAY, SONS & TAYLOR, on paper of the finest quality, made expressly for the Work by Messrs. JOHN DICKINSON & Co.

The Illustrations for the Work, which were drawn by Sir FREDERICK LEIGHTON, the President of the Royal Academy, will all be printed on real China Paper by Messrs. RICHARD CLAY, SONS & TAYLOR, and Mounted on Plate Paper; the Initial Letters will be mounted with the Letter-press of the Book.

The Edition will be limited to One Thousand Copies, and the type will be distributed after each sheet has been printed.

The Work will be published on October 15th, 1880.

Subscriptions will be received through Booksellers; each copy will be numbered, and copies will be delivered to Subscribers in the order in which Subscriptions are received.

The Publishers reserve to themselves the option of at any time increasing the Subscription price.

The Publishers also reserve to themselves the right of printing a few copies beyond the Edition of One Thousand Copies, for the purpose of presentation to the Author and Reviewers. Such additional copies will not be numbered or sold, the Edition for sale being strictly limited to One Thousand Copies.

Prospectuses and Specimen Pages, with information as to the price at which Booksellers will receive Subscriptions, may be obtained on application to the principal Booksellers in London and the Provinces.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

PRINTED
THE REPUBLIC
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

1. id., Wanderlust, p. 17.

Tenth Edition, post 8vo, 1s.

DR. WATTS ON ASTHMA: a Treatise on the only Successful Method of Curing this Disease. By ROBERT G. WATTS, M.D. F.R.S.L. F.R.C.S., &c., &c., Belgrave-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.
London: C. Mitchell & Co. Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

Second Edition, One Shilling, or thirtysix stamps by post.

SKIN DISEASES TREATED HOMŒOPATHICALLY. By WASHINGTON REPPS, L.R.C.P. One Hundred Cases, including forty distinct varieties of Skin Diseases.
London: James Repps & Co. 45, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Finsbury.

New Edition, price 1s. Illustrated.

THE SEARCH FOR A PUBLISHER. Contains Publishing Arrangements, Specimens of Type and Illustrations, and much valuable information for those about to Publish.
London: Proctor & Co. 40, Tavistock-street, W.C.

Now ready, crown 8vo. and pp. price 6s.

THE CAMP OF REFUGE: a Tale of the Conquest of the Isle of My. Edited, with Notes and Appendix, by SAMUEL H. MILLER, F.R.S., Joint-Author of 'The Finland, Past and Present.' Illustrated with Maps.
Wimbor: Leach & Son, London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co.

Now ready, demy 4to.

APPENDIXES TO YOUNG'S ANALYTICAL CONCORDANCE. Containing Hebrew and Greek Lexicons, Views, Maps, Facsimiles, &c. Price to subscribers, 14s. 6d. half-bound, 12s. 6d. cloth, 11s. sewed, post free.
P.O.O. payable to G. A. Young & Co. 15, Nicolson-street, Edinburgh.

Oblong 4to. bound, post free, 6s.

ARTISTIC CONSERVATORS.—About FORTY PHOTO-LITHOGRAPHS AND LETTER-PRESS, from Designs by E. W. GODWIN, F.R.S., and MAURICE B. ADAMS, on Mammals & Co.'s Patent System of Conservation.

B. T. Batford, 52, High Holborn.

E V E R Y D A Y.

"It tempts me."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"In it, throughout, a touch of nature, and a catholic taste for what is good."—Pan.
"Present, and by no means dull."—Obert Journal.
Cloth, 8s., boards, 1s. 6d.
Remington & Co. 133, New Bond-street, W.

TRUBNER & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

CHEAP EDITION OF MR. ARNOLD'S POPULAR POEM ON BUDDHISM AND BUDDHISM.

THE LIGHT OF ASIA; or, the Great Renunciation, being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. By EDWIN ARNOLD, C.B., &c. Crown 8vo. Illustrated boards, or limp parchment wrapper, 2s. 6d.

RECOLLECTIONS OF TRAVEL IN NEW ZEALAND AND AUSTRALIA. By J. C. CRAWFORD, late Member of the Legislative Council of New Zealand, &c. 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, cloth, 12s.

THE GREAT AFRICAN ISLAND: Chapters on Madagascar. By the Rev JAS. SIERCK, jun., of the London Missionary Society, Author of 'Madagascar and its People,' &c. Demy 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, cloth, 12s.

POLITICAL ECONOMY for the PEOPLE. By JOHN LAMCHELOT BRADWELL, Author of 'A System of Political Economy.' Crown 8vo. limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

EVOLUTION and INVOLUTION. By GEORGE THOMSON, Author of the 'World of Being,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

LINGUISTIC and ORIENTAL ESSAYS. Written from the Year 1846 to 1873. By R. N. CUST, late H.M.C.S., Hon. Sec. M. Asiatic Society and Author of 'The Modern Languages of the East Indies.' Post 8vo. cloth, 12s.

THE ENEMIES OF BOOKS. By WILLIAM BLAIDIS, Typographer. 1 vol. crown 8vo. on laid paper, with Five Plates, parchment wrapper, 5s.
London: Trubner & Co. Ludgate-hill.

Pour paraître le 1 novembre prochain.

MANUEL de l'AMATEUR d'ESTAMPES. Par EUGÈNE DUTUIT.

1. Un aperçu sur les plus anciennes gravures, sur les Estampes en manière crible, sur les livres xylographiques, sur les Estampes coloriées, sur les cartes à jouer, sur quelques livres à figures du XV^e siècle, sur les dictionnaires des mots, sur les livres d'heures, les nouveaux catalogues de livres de Proserpine et un essai sur les médailles et gravures d'orfèvres.
2. Les Ecoles italiennes, allemandes, flamandes et hollandaises, françaises et anglaises, ouvrages enrichis de fac-similes des Estampes les plus rares reproduites par l'héliogravure.
L'ouvrage formera huit volumes grand in-8 de 200 pages environ chacun.

Prix du volume, 35 francs.
Il a été tiré cent exemplaires numérotés sur papier vergé avec deux pages de planches sur papier vergé et papier du Japon.
Prix de volume, 50 francs.

Delaunay & Co. 37, Soho-square, London.

THE GERMAN DECLENSIONS: a Practical Course. With easy Reading and Writing Lessons, and a Synopsis of Strong and Irregular Verbs.
By J. KISNER, M.C.P.

The Graphic says:—"Those who have to learn German could scarcely have a better practical help than that which Herr Kisner has provided."

The Educational Times says:—"We have pleasure in recommending Herr Kisner's little work to the attention of teachers who are desirous of laying a thorough foundation for their pupils in the study of the German language."

The Literary World says:—"The work before us strongly recommends itself to our approval. It is planned on sound scientific principles, and, especially if it were in the hands of a capable teacher, we do not think that a better introductory book for the study of German could be found."

The Review says:—"The plan of the work consists in grouping the whole body of German nouns. The pupil is taken on through these in a course of easy conversational. The pupil is taken on through these in a course of easy conversational, which will smooth the way of learning both for teacher and learner."

Williams & Norgate.

This day is published,

THE INSTITUTES OF LAW.

A TREATISE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF JURISPRUDENCE AS DETERMINED BY NATURE.

By JAMES LORIMER, Advocate, Regius Professor of Public Law and of the Law of Nature and Nations in the University of Edinburgh.

New Edition, Revised throughout, and much Enlarged. 8vo. 18s.
William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Advertisements for the Fortnightly Review should be sent to ADAMS & FRANCIS, 55, Fleet-street, E.C.

ALL THE YEAR ROUND.—Conducted by Charles Dickens.—Advertisements for All the Year Round should be sent before the 15th of each Month to

ADAMS & FRANCIS, 55, Fleet-street, E.C.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

ADAMS & FRANCIS insert ADVERTISEMENTS in all Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals.

* Terms for transacting business, and List of London Papers, can be had on application to ADAMS & FRANCIS, 55, Fleet-street, E.C.

IN AND OUT OF LONDON.

The New Alphabetical Railway Guide (price 6d.) for Travellers. On the First of every Month.

THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL BRADSHAW: by Alphabetical and Tabular Arrangement.—Advertisements should be sent to

ADAMS & FRANCIS, 55, Fleet-street, E.C.

NOTICE.

NOW READY,

VOL. I. SIXTH SERIES,

OF

NOTES AND QUERIES.

With Copious Index, price 10s. 6d.

JOHN FRANCIS, 20, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.

THIS DAY, AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS',
THE
LIFE OF SIR ANTHONY PANIZZI, K.C.B.,

LATE PRINCIPAL LIBRARIAN OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM, SENATOR OF ITALY, &c.

By LOUIS FAGAN.

Two vols. demy 8vo. handsomely bound, with Frontispiece and numerous Illustrations, 25s. <

The Times, in its issue of 11th September, 1880, says:—

"A Panizzi biography, should Mr. Fagan accomplish his task, would have an importance hardly inferior to any of the works added during this last half-century to the heavily-burdened shelves of our great book repository."

REMINGTON & Co. 133, New Bond-street, W.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY,

THE BURLINGTON:

A NEW HIGH-CLASS MONTHLY MAGAZINE, PRICE SIXPENCE.

Edited by HELEN MATHERS,

Author of 'Comin thro' the Rye.'

The First Number will contain:—The STORY of a SIN: a New Novel, by Helen Mathers—IRISH LIFE and SONG, by Barnett Smith—The ROMANCE of SURGERY, by Æsculapius—WINDA, the SAVAGE: a Novel of Australian Bush Life, by an Anonymous Author—POETRY, and other ESSAYS and TALES, by well-known Writers. The following distinguished names are among the Contributors: W. H. Russell, Bret Harte, Justin McCarthy, Frederick Locker, Robert Buchanan, Comyns Carr, Author of 'Queen of Connaught,' R. E. Francillon, H. W. Lucy, Mrs. Forrester, Savile Clarke, Oscar Wilde, Editor of Judy, Compton Reade, Sutherland Edwards, George Barlow, E. Owens Blackborne, &c.

REMINGTON & Co. 133, New Bond-street, W.

GEORGE BELL & SONS' NEW AND FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS.

UNIVERSAL STATISTICS.

The CONDITION of NATIONS, Social and Political, with Complete Comparative Tables of Universal Statistics. By G. FR. KOLB. Translated, Edited, and Collated to 1880 by Mrs. BREWER. With Original Notes by E. W. STREETER, F.R.G.S., Author of 'Precious Stones,' &c. Royal 8vo. 985 pages. 2s. 2d.

"No more thorough, comprehensive, or serviceable book of the kind has ever been issued from the press. It might be described, from one point of view, as a panorama of the internal condition of all the peoples of the civilized world, and from another as a compendious and discreet deconvolution of the most important Blue-Books of all the countries and all the languages which boast a literature of the kind."—Standard.

HISTORY of POLITICAL ECONOMY in EUROPE. By Jérôme-ADOLPHE BLANQUI. Translated from the Fourth French Edition by E. J. LEONARD. With Preface by D. A. WELLS. Medium 8vo. 12s.

TRADE, POPULATION, and FOOD: a Series of Papers on Economic Statistics. By STEPHEN BOURNE, F.R.S. of the Statistical Department of H.M. Customs. Demy 8vo. (Immediately.)

SOPHOCLES. Vol. II. By F. A. PALEY, M.A. Containing PHILOCTETES—ELECTRA—TRACHINIE—AJAX. Demy 8vo. 12s. (London: WHITTAKER & Co.)

The PERSÆ and EUMENIDES of ÆSCHYLUS.—The De SEINFOTUS—De AMICITIA and EPISTOLÆ SELECTÆ of CICERO. (London: WHITTAKER & Co.)

HORACE'S ODES. Englished and Imitated by Various Hands. Selected and Arranged by C. W. F. COOPER. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

"UNSEEN PAPERS" in Latin Prose and Verse, with Examination Questions. By T. COLLINS, M.A., late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge, Head Master of the Grammar School, Newport, Salop; Author of 'Latin Exercises.' 2s. 6d.

The QUEEN'S ENGLISH: a Manual of Idiom and Usage. By the late HENRY ALFORD, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. Fifth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

The STUDENT'S GUIDE to the UNIVERSITY of CAMBRIDGE. Fourth Edition, Revised. To be issued in Parts. Parts I., II., III. (Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL & Co.)

SYLVESTRA: Studies of Manners in England from 1770-1800. By ANNIE RAINIE BILLS, Author of 'Marie,' 'Mariette,' &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

AUNT JUDY'S ANNUAL VOLUME. Edited by H. K. F. GATTY. Containing a Social Story 'Princess Althea,' by the Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.; and Contributions from J. H. Bwing, Annetta R. Hope, C. S. Calverley, F. A. S. Franks, M. F. O'Malley, Major Bwing, the Author of 'Snap's Two Homes,' and others. Songs, with Music, by A. S. Gatty—Fairy Tales—Biographical Sketches—Verses—A Christmas Extravaganza, by A. S. Gatty—Competition Studies—Translations from the Germans—Notices of English and Foreign Books—Reports of the Patients in "Aunt Judy's Cottage," at the Children's Hospital, &c. Former Volumes may still be had, some at reduced prices.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. BING.
WE and the WORLD: a Story for Boys. With 7 Illustrations by W. L. Jones. Small post 8vo. 5s.

NEW VOLUME BY F. M. PHARD, AUTHOR OF 'THE ROSE GARDEN,' 'CARTOONCHIE,' 'UNAWARNS,' &c.
MOTHER MOLLY: a Story for Young People. With 8 Illustrations by Charles Green. Small post 8vo. 5s.

OUR PETS and PLAYFELLOWS, in Air, Earth, and Water. By GERTUDE PATMORE. With 4 Illustrations by Bertha Patmore. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

POEMS. By Sir Samuel Ferguson. Demy 8vo. fine toned paper, 7s. 6d.

"This is a volume of poetry marked by originality.... It would be difficult to find amid our recent literature a poem which at once aims as high as 'Conary,' and as adequately fulfils its aim. The dulcet reader can hardly fail to be struck by the degree in which he meets within a narrow compass so many of the higher qualities of poetry—character and passion, graphic description, and consistent illustration of manners."—Spectator. (Dublin: WILLIAM MOORE.)

The HISTORY of the CREEDS. I. Ante-Nicene. II. Nicene and Constantinopolitan. III. The Apostolic Creed. IV. The Quinquagesima, commonly called the Creed of St. Athanasius. By J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D., Professor of Divinity, Fellow of St. Catharine's College, and late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. (Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL & Co.)

An ACCOUNT of the PERSECUTIONS of the CHURCH under the ROMAN EMPERORS. By EDWARD STEERE, D.D., Missionary Bishop. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

CHANGE-RINGING DISENTANGLED. With Hints on the Direction of Bells, on the Management of Bells, &c. By the Rev. WOOLMORE WIGRAM, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, Rector of St. Andrew, with St. Nicholas and St. Mary, Hartford, Rural Dean of Hartford, a Member of the Ancient Society of College Youths. Second Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo. 3s.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

FULL CATALOGUES,

Sent Post Free to all Parts of the World on application.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES,

CONTAINING

Standard Works of European Literature in the English Language,

HISTORY,	SCIENCE,
BIOGRAPHY,	PHILOSOPHY,
TOPOGRAPHY,	NATURAL HISTORY,
ARCHAEOLOGY,	POETRY,
THEOLOGY,	ART,
ANTIQUITIES,	FICTION.

With Dictionaries and other Books of Reference, comprising in all Translations from the

FRENCH,	SCANDINAVIAN,
GERMAN,	ANGLO-SAXON,
ITALIAN,	LATIN and GREEK.
SPANISH,

3s. 6d. or 5s. per vol. (with exceptions). A Complete Set in 623 vols. 138l. 10s. 6d.

NEW VOLUMES.

CUNNINGHAM'S LIVES of the most EMINENT BRITISH PAINTERS. Edited by Mrs. HEATON. 3 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES. A New Translation. By A. STEWART, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, embodying the Lives by the late GEORGE LONG, M.A. In 4 vols. 3s. 6d. each. Vol. I. ready. Vol. II. shortly.

LAPPENBERG'S HISTORY of ENGLAND under the ANGLO-SAXON KINGS. Translated by E. THORPE, F.R.S. New Edition, Revised by C. E. OTTE. 2 vols. 3s. 6d. each. [Immediately.]

NEW EDITION [1880],

With Supplement of 4,600 New Words and Meanings.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY

OF THE

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Including Scientific, Technical, and Biblical Words and Terms, with their Significations, Pronunciations, Alternative Spellings, Derivations, Synonyms, and numerous Illustrative Quotations.

In One Volume of 1,622 pages, with 3,000 Illustrations. 4to. cloth, 21s.

The COMPLETE DICTIONARY contains, in addition to the above matter, several valuable Literary Appendices, and 70 extra pages of Illustrations, grouped and Classified. New Edition, containing a New Biographical Dictionary of upwards of 9,700 Names. 1 vol. 1,919 pages, cloth, 31s. 6d.

"Certainly the best practical English dictionary extant." Quarterly Review, October, 1878.

Prospectuses, with Specimen Pages, sent post free on application.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SPECIMEN LIST OF NEW AND CHOICE BOOKS IN CIRCULATION.

HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES. By Justin McCarthy.

One Thousand Five Hundred Copies.

- Japan, by Miss Bird—New Guinea, by L. M. D'Albertis—Island Life, by A. R. Wallace.
 Sketches of the Women of Christendon, by Mrs. Charles—Early Life of C. J. Fox, by G. O. Trevelyan.
 Memorials of Frances Ridley Havergal—Italy and her Invaders, by Thomas Hodgkin—Life of Étienne Dolet.
 Kinglake's History of the Crimean War, New Vol.—Baird's Rise of the Huguenots—A Tramp Abroad, by Mark Twain.
 Memoirs of Madame de Rémusat—Pictures from Ireland, by Terence McGrath—Guizot in Private Life.
 Life of Cicero, by Rev. G. E. Jeans—The Actor Abroad, by Edmund Leathes—Faiths and Fashions, by Lady Violet Greville.
 Soldiers of the Victorian Age, by C. R. Low—Memoirs of Sir James Outram—History of Japan, by Sir E. J. Reed.
 The New Truth and the Old Faith, by a Scientific Layman—The Evangelical Revival, by Rev. R. W. Dale.
 Some Heroes of Travel, by W. H. D. Adams—A Visit to Wazan, by Robert S. Watson—Memoirs of Mrs. Tait.
 Life of Bishop Wilberforce—The Letters of Charles Dickens—Senior's Conversations—History of the Zulu War, by Frances Colenso.
 Memoir of Rev. Henry Venn—Séguin's Country of the Passion Play—Ingram's Life of Edgar Allan Poe.
 Sketch of the Life of Elihu Burritt—Renan's Hibbert Lectures—Renouf's Origin and Growth of Religion.
 The River of Golden Sand, by Captain Gill—Sister Dora—A Ride in Petticoats and Slippers, by Captain Colville.
 The Old Régime, by Lady Jackson—Our Home in Cyprus, by Mrs. Scott-Stevenson—Two Worlds are Ours, by Hugh Macmillan.
 Memoirs of Edward and Catharine Stanley—Life and Work of Mary Carpenter—Browning's Dramatic Idyls.
 Political Questions of the Day, by S. C. Buxton—Mind in the Lower Animals, by Dr. Lindsay—Parables of Our Lord, by Dr. Calderwood.
 Ephphatha, by Canon Farrar—Five Weeks in Iceland, by C. A. de Fonblanque—A Trip to Manitoba, by Mary Fitzgibbon.
 Byron, by John Nichol—Russia Before and After the War—Dr. Stoughton's Introduction to Historical Theology.
 Heroes of the Cross, by W. H. D. Adams—Belton's Recollections of an Old Actor.
 Mrs. Brassey's Voyage in the Mediterranean—Mackenzie's History of the Nineteenth Century—Up the Amazon, by E. D. Mathews.
 Parker Gilmore's Ride through Hostile Africa—The Ode of Life—Burton's Reign of Queen Anne—Life of Dr. Duff.
 Life of Bishop Selwyn—Ball's Jungle Life in India—Sibree's Madagascar—Thoughts in my Garden, by Mortimer Collins.
 Cyprus as I Saw It, by Sir Samuel Baker—A Study of Shakespeare, by A. C. Swinburne.
 Campaigning in South Africa, by Captain Montague—Glimpses through the Cannon Smoke, by Alexander Forbes.
 Early Man in Britain, by W. Boyd Dawkins—Rest Awhile, by Dean Vaughan—Autobiography of Prince Metternich.
 Chronicles of Chelsea, by Rev. A. G. L'Estrange—Travels in Albania, by E. F. Knight—Forty Years' Recollections, by Thomas Frost.
 In Gipsy Tents, by F. H. Groome—Gipsy Life, by George Smith—Holidays in Home Counties, by E. Walford.
 Round About a Great Estate—and all the Best Recent Works of Fiction.

Additional Copies of all the Best New Books in History, Biography, Religion, Philosophy, Travel and Adventure, and the Higher Class of Fiction continue to be added as the demand increases; and arrangements are made with the leading Publishers for an ample supply of the principal Works already announced for the New Season and of all other Forthcoming Books of general interest as they appear.

FIRST-CLASS SUBSCRIPTION, ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM,

For a Constant Succession of the Newest Books.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM,

For the Free Delivery of Books in every part of London.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM AND UPWARDS,

According to the Number of Volumes required.

BOOK SOCIETIES AND LITERARY INSTITUTIONS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

THE NAMES OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS ARE ENTERED DAILY.

Revised Catalogue of Works recently added to the Library, and of Surplus Copies withdrawn for Sale at greatly reduced prices, are now ready, and will be forwarded, postage free, on application.

All the Books in Circulation and on Sale at MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY may also be obtained, with the least possible delay, by all Subscribers to

MUDIE'S LIBRARY, BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER,

And (by order) from all Booksellers in connexion with the Library.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (LIMITED), New Oxford-street.

CITY OFFICE: 2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

By LORD ELLENBOROUGH.

A DIARY KEPT WHILE in OFFICE, 1828-1830. By EDWARD LAW, EARL OF ELLENBOROUGH.

Edited by LORD COLCHESTER. Containing Anecdotes of George the Fourth, William the Fourth, the Dukes of Cumberland, Wellington, and Richmond, Lord Hardinge, Sir Robert Peel, Lords Brougham, Grey, Bathurst, and Palmerston, Huskisson, Sir Wm. Knighton, Marchioness of Conyngham, Sir Henry Hallford, Lord Aberdeen, Grant, Lord Melville, &c. In 2 vols. demy 8vo.

By LADY FLORENCE DIXIE.

A RIDE THROUGH PATAGONIA. By LADY FLORENCE DIXIE. In demy 8vo. with numerous Illustrations from Sketches by Julius Beerbohm. Engraved by Whymper and Pearson.

By H.H. PRINCE METTERNICH.

The MEMOIRS of PRINCE METTERNICH, 1815-1848. Containing particulars of the Congresses of Laybach, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Verona—the Eastern War of 1829, and the Revolutionary period of 1848, &c. Edited by his Son, PRINCE RICHARD METTERNICH; the Papers being Classified and Arranged by M. A. DE KLENKOWSTROM. Translated by ROSENA NAPIER. In 2 vols. demy 8vo.

By DR. DUNKER.

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. From the German of Professor MAX DUNKER. By Dr. EVELYN

ABBOTT, Balliol College, Oxford. The Fourth Volume, containing the History of India from the Earliest Times down to the Reign of Asoka. It describes the Movements of the Aryas from the Indus to the Ganges and their Settlements in the South of India, and gives an Account of the Conquests of Alexander and the Empire of Chandragupta. The various forms of Indian Philosophy and Religion are also traced, among which the Life and Teaching of Buddha occupies a prominent place. A short Summary is also given of the Indian Epics and the Institutes of Manu. In demy 8vo. 2ls.

The Work should form a valuable assistance to Students preparing for Indian Civil Service Examination.

By DR. THIRLWALL.

LETTERS of the late DR. THIRLWALL, BISHOP of ST. DAVID'S. Edited by DEAN STANLEY and DEAN PREBOWNE. In 2 vols. demy 8vo.

By MISS FORDE.

A LADY'S TOUR in CORSICA. By GERTRUDE FORDE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

By ADELAIDE KEMBLE.

PAST HOURS. By the late ADELAIDE SARTORIS. Edited, and with a Preface, by her Daughter, — Mrs. GORDON. In 2 vols. small crown 8vo.

By FREDERICK WEDMORE.

STUDIES in ENGLISH ART. By FREDERICK WEDMORE, Author of 'A History of Genre Painting,' &c. The Second Series, containing Romney, Constable, David Cox, George Cruikshank, Meryon, Burne Jones, and Albert Moore. In crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

By M. BURDO.

A TRIP up the NIGER and BENUEH. By ADOLPHE BURDO. Translated by Mrs. GEORGE STURGE. In demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

By H. STONEHEWER COOPER.

The CORAL LANDS of the PACIFIC; being an Account of nearly all the Inhabited Islands of the Pacific, their Peoples and their Products. By H. STONEHEWER COOPER. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations.

Volume I.—The FIJI GROUP.

Volume II.—SAMOA, TONGA, the LINE ISLANDS, the CAROLINES, the MARQUESAS, SOLOMON GROUP, the NEW HEBRIDES, and OTHER ISLANDS.

CONTENTS

By CHARLES WOOD.

ROUND ABOUT NORWAY. By CHARLES W. WOOD, Author of 'Through Holland,' &c. In crown 8vo. with numerous Illustrations.

By THE REV. R. W. STEPHENS.

DEAN HOOK: his Life and Letters. Edited by the Rev. R. W. R. STEPHENS, Vicar of Woolbeding, Author of 'Life of St. John Chrysostom,' &c. The POPULAR EDITION, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6s.

By THE REV. R. H. BARHAM.

The INGOLDSBY LYRICS. By the Rev. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM, Author of 'The Ingoldsby Legends.' Edited by his Son, the Rev. R. DALTON BARHAM. In 1 vol.

By THE REV. R. D. BARHAM.

The LIFE of the REV. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM, Author of 'The Ingoldsby Legends.' A New Edition, Revised and Rewritten by his Son, the Rev. R. DALTON BARHAM. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

By LIEUTENANT CONDER.

TENT WORK in PALESTINE. By Lieutenant CLAUDE R. CONDER, R.E. A Popular Edition, in crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 1s. 6d.

By COLONEL WARREN.

The TEMPLE or the TOMB. By CHARLES WARREN, Author of 'Underground Jerusalem.' In demy 8vo. with Illustrations.

By M. TISSOT.

UNKNOWN HUNGARY. By VICTOR TISSOT. Translated by Mrs. BRODIE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MR. MURRAY'S

LIST OF NEW AND RECENT WORKS.

The SPEAKER'S COMMENTARY on the OLD TESTAMENT: Explanatory and Critical; with a Revision of the Translation. Edited by F. C. COOK, M.A., Canon of Exeter. Complete in 6 vols. medium 8vo. 6l. 15s.

LIFE of SAMUEL WILBERFORCE, D.D., Bishop of Oxford and afterwards of Winchester. By CANON ASHWELL. Fifth Thousand. Portrait. Vol. I. 8vo. 15s.

NILE GLEANINGS: the Ethnology, History, and Art of Ancient Egypt, as revealed by its Paintings and Bas-Reliefs. By VILLIERS STUART, of Dromana, M.P. With 58 Coloured Plates, &c. Royal 8vo. 31s. 6d.

MEMOIRS of EDWARD, CATHERINE, and MARY STANLEY. By the DEAN of WESTMINSTER. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 9s.

The GOSPEL of ST. JOHN, and the ACTS of the APOSTLES. By CANON WESTCOTT and the BISHOP of CHESTER. Forming a Volume of the 'Speaker's Commentary.' Medium 8vo. 90s.

A LADY'S LIFE in the ROCKY MOUNTAINS. By ISABELLA BIRD. Third Edition. Illustrations. Post 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The SYNOPTIC GOSPELS.—The DEATH of CHRIST.—The WORTH of LIFE.—DESIGN in NATURE, and other ESSAYS. By the ARCHBISHOP of YORK. Crown 8vo. 9s.

The METALLURGY of SILVER and GOLD. By JOHN PERCY, F.R.S. Illustrations. 8vo. 30s.

PHYSICAL PROPERTIES and CHEMISTRY of SILVER in RELATION to METALLURGY. ALLOYS, ORES.	AMALGAMATING. PAINTING of SILVER and GOLD. SMELTING of SILVER ORES. AMALGAMATION of SILVER ORES, in PART, ending with the CAZO PROCESS.
--	---

The CITIES and CEMETERIES of ETRURIA. By GEORGE DENNIS. A New Edition, Revised, and incorporating all the most Recent Discoveries. With Maps and 200 Illustrations. 2 vols. medium 8vo. 42s.

RHEINSBERG:—MEMORIALS of FREDERICK the GREAT and PRINCE HENRY of PRUSSIA. By ANDREW HAMILTON. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

The CONVOCATION PRAYER BOOK. With altered Rubrics, showing the Book if amended in conformity with the Recommendations of the Convocations of Canterbury and York. Post 8vo. 5s.

The MORAL PHILOSOPHY of ARISTOTLE. Consisting of a Translation of the Nicomachean Ethics, with Introductory Analysis of each Book. By WALTER M. HATCH, M.A. 8vo. 18s.

GLEANINGS of PAST YEARS, 1843-78. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. 7 vols. small 8vo. 2s. 6d. each.

COMPLETION of the DICTIONARY of CHRISTIAN ANTIQUITIES. Comprising the History, Institutions, and Antiquities of the Christian Church, from the Time of the Apostles to the Age of Charlemagne. Edited by Dr. WM. SMITH and ARCHDEACON CHEETHAM. Vol. II. (1200 pp.) With Illustrations. Medium 8vo. 42s.

The SECOND VOLUME of the DICTIONARY of CHRISTIAN BIOGRAPHY, LITERATURE, SECTS, and DOCTRINES—EABA to HERMOCRATES. Edited by Dr. WM. SMITH and Professor WACE. To be completed in 4 vols. (900 pp.) Medium 8vo. 31s. 6d.

The MANNERS and CUSTOMS of the ANCIENT EGYPTIANS. By Sir J. GARDNER WILKINSON, F.R.S. A New Edition, Revised, by SAMUEL BIRCH, L.L.D. With 500 Illustrations. 3 vols. medium 8vo. 84s.

A VISIT to the BEDOUINS of the EUPHRATES VALLEY. By LADY ANNE BLUNT. With some Account of the Arabs and their Horses. Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

LECTURES on GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE. Delivered at the Royal Academy. By the late Sir G. GILBERT SCOTT, R.A. With 450 Illustrations. 2 vols. medium 8vo. 42s.

MEMOIR of ROBERT MILMAN, D.D., late Bishop of Calcutta and Metropolitan of India. By FRANCES MARIA MILMAN. Map. 8vo. 12s.

LIFE of ROBERT DICK, Baker of Thurso, Geologist and Botanist. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL.D. Tenth Thousand. With Portrait and 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 12s.

A HISTORY of ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY among the GREEKS and ROMANS, from the Earliest Ages till the Fall of the Roman Empire. By E. H. BUNBURY, F.R.G.S. Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. 42s.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM: his Life and Times. A Sketch of the Church and the Empire in the Fourth Century. By Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS, M.A. Second Edition. Portrait. 8vo. 12s.

HISTORY of BRITISH COMMERCE, and the ECONOMIC PROGRESS of the NATION, from 1763 to 1878. By LEONE LEVI, F.S.A. New Edition. Diagrams. 8vo. 18s.

TWENTY YEARS in the WILD WEST of IRELAND; or, Life in Connaght. By Mrs. HOUSTOUN. Crown 8vo. 9s.

OLD FRENCH PLATE: furnishing Tables of the Paris Date-Letters and Fac-similes of other Marks. A Handbook for the Collector. By WILFRID J. CRIPPS, Author of 'Old English Plate.' With Illustrations. 8vo. 5s. 6d.

The STUDENT'S HUME.—A HISTORY of ENGLAND from the EARLIEST TIMES to the TREATY of BERLIN, 1878. New Edition, Revised, Corrected, and partly Rewritten. By J. S. BREWER, M.A., late of the Record Office, Professor of Modern History, King's College, London. Maps and Woodcuts. (830 pp.) Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

NOTICE.—For RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST of ANNOUNCEMENTS see page 488.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, at all Libraries,
A NEW NOVEL, IN THREE VOLUMES,

ADAM AND EVE.

By Mrs. PARR,
Author of 'Dorothy Fox.'

Also, immediately, in crown 8vo. 6s.

DOROTHY FOX.

By Mrs. PARR.

Forming the New Volume of

"BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS."

MR. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL.

Immediately, in 2 vols. crown 8vo.

THE RED RAG.

By R. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON,

Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c.

Also, immediately,

A CHEAPER EDITION OF

HE WOULD BE A SOLDIER.

With Illustrations.

By the SAME AUTHOR.

NEW WORK BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, Author of 'East Lynne,' &c.
3 vols. crown 8vo.

"Johnny Ludlow" is always worth listening to. The best characteristic of these tales is the manner of their relation, quiet and yet vigorous, combining humour with pathos, and artlessly avoiding the temptation to exaggerate. —Athenæum.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE FIRST VIOLIN.'

The WELLFIELDS. By Jessie FOTHERGILL, Author of 'Probation' and 'The First Violin.' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"A well and powerfully written novel." —St. James's Gazette.

"This is the best of the author's three books in point of construction; and the character of Jerome Wellfield is more finished and more consistent than any she has yet attempted." —Athenæum.

THE VARIOUS EDITIONS OF THE INGOLDSBY LEGENDS; or, Mirth and Marvels.

The ANNOTATED EDITION. A Library Edition, with a History of each Legend and other Notes. The Illustrations by Cruikshank and Leach. 3 vols. 8vo. 34s.

The ILLUSTRATED EDITION. In crown 4to. with 63 Illustrations by Cruikshank, Leach, and Tenniel, &c.

The CARMINE EDITION. In crown 8vo. with Carmine Border, and 17 Illustrations by Cruikshank and Leach, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

The BURLINGTON EDITION. In 3 vols. post 8vo. printed in large clear type, price 10s. 6d.

The EDINBURGH EDITION. In large type, crown 8vo. with 32 Illustrations by Cruikshank, Leach, Tenniel, and Du Maurier, specially Re-engraved for this Edition by George Pearson, 6s.

The POPULAR EDITION. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The VICTORIA (Pocket) EDITION. Fcap. 8vo. 2s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

MONSIEUR GUIZOT in PRIVATE

LIFE (1787-1874). By his Daughter, MADAME DE WITT. Translated by Mrs. SIMPSON. 1 vol. 8vo. 15s.
"This book was well worth translating. Mrs. Simpson has written excellent English, while preserving the spirit of the French." —Times.
"Madame de Witt has done justice to her father's memory in an admirable record of his life. Mrs. Simpson's translation of this extremely interesting book is in accuracy and grace worthy of the original and of the subject." —Saturday Review.

An ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip, Dramatic Narrative, and Descriptive: from the Recollections of an Actor in Australia, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, California, Nevada, Central America, and New York. By EDWARD LATHES. 8vo. 15s.

TALES of OUR GREAT FAMILIES. SECOND SERIES. By EDWARD WALFORD, M.A. 3 vols. 15s.

The VILLAGE of PALACES; or, CHRONICLES of CHREIRA. By the Rev. A. G. L'ESTRANGE. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 7s.

CHEAP EDITION of YOUNG Mrs. JARDNER. By the AUTHOR of 'JOHN HALIFAX.' Forming the New Volume of HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY. 8s. 6d. (10s. 6d. net).

THE NEW NOVELS.

STRICTLY TIED UP. 3 vols.

BOY and VIOLA. By Mrs. Forrester,

Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' &c. SECOND EDITION. 3 vols.
"An admirable tale; told by one who can vividly describe and incisively comment on the manners and personal of modern society." —The World.

"Boy and Viola" is in many ways a remarkable novel, both interesting and exciting. It treats of the world of fashion, and is written by one who knows that world thoroughly. Some of the scenes are described with marked pathos. The book is both entertaining and instructive. —Home News.

LORD BRACKENBURY. By

AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of 'Barbara's History,' &c. SECOND EDITION. 3 vols.

"Lord Brackenbury" is a very readable story. The author has well associated the purpose of high-class novel writing, and succeeded in no small measure in attaining it. There is plenty of variety, cheerful dialogue, and general nerve in the book. —Athenæum.

"A story that can be read with not a little interest. The plot is contrived with much skill." —Saturday Review.

"Lord Brackenbury" is pleasant reading from beginning to end." —Academy.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By

SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of 'His Last Sigh,' &c. 3 vols.

"There is freshness and variety in this story, and some of its characters are very prettily conceived. The book is well worth reading." —Athenæum.

"A novel of no common merit. It is brightly and vivaciously written. It abounds in sprightly dialogue and shrewdness, and it contains a great deal of dialogue at once lively and natural, at once spontaneous and amusing." —Fair Mail.

A VERY OPAL. By C. L. Firkis.

"A novel of considerable merit. There is at times a kind of quiet humour which reminds one of Jane Austen." —Athenæum.

FORESTALLED. By M.

BETHAM EDWARDS, Author of 'Missy,' 'Bridget,' &c. 2 vols. 15s.

"An original, interesting, and carefully written story." —Speaker.

DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of 'ST. OLAVE'S,' &c. 2 vols. (Oct. 22.)

CHEAP EDITIONS.

Each Work complete in 1 vol. price 1s. (any of which can be had separately), elegantly printed and bound, and illustrated by Sir J. GILBERT MILLAIS, HUNT, LEACH, POYNTER, FOSTER, TENNIEL, SANDYS, E. HUGHES, SALMONS, &c.

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY

OF CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR MODERN WORKS.

Sam Nick's Manners and Manners. Barbara's History. By Amelia B. Edwards.
Nature. Life of Irving. By Mrs. Oliphant.
John Halifax, Gentleman. No Church.
The Crucifix and the Cross. By Eliza Warren.
Methusalem. By Mrs. Kavanagh.
A Woman's Thoughts about a Woman. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Adam's Dream. By Mrs. Oliphant.
Sam Nick's Wife. Mrs. Oliphant.
Cordelia. Wiseman's Pope. Robert Pincott.
A Life for a Life. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Lodge House and Old Court. Margaret and her Maidens.
Sam Nick's Old Judge. Annals of an Eventful Life. By David Elphinstone.
Sir R. Burke's Family Romance. The Land of Norwae. By Mrs. Oliphant.
The Englishwoman in Italy. Nothing New. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Prose and Verse of Joanna d'Albret. The Valley of a Hundred Firs. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Jefferson's Book about Doctors. Marston and Maid. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Lionel Lincoln. By Victor Hugo. St. Olave's. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Lost and Saved. By the Rev. Mrs. Norton.
Barbara's History. By Amelia B. Edwards.
Life of Irving. By Mrs. Oliphant.
No Church.
Christiana. Mianah. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Alice Forbes. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.
Agnes. By Mrs. Oliphant.
A Noble Life. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Dixie's New American. Robert Pincott.
The Woman's Kingdom. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Annals of an Eventful Life. By David Elphinstone.
David Elphinstone. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.
A Brave Lady. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Hannah. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
Sam Nick's American at Home. The United Word. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'
A Rose in June. By Mrs. Oliphant.
My Little Lady. By E. Fremont Carpenter.
Finkle, Junior. By Mrs. Oliphant.
Life of John Antiochus. By Professor C. D. Young.
Sir Gibbie. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.
Sam Nick's American Humour. Young Mrs. Jardine. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

WM. H. ALLEN & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Prof. JOHN DOWSON, M.R.A.S.—The HISTORY of INDIA, as TOLD by its OWN HISTORIANS. The LOCAL MUHAMMADIAN DYNASTIES. Vol. I. GUZERAT.

Mr. C. L. NORRIS-NEWMAN, Special Correspondent of the Standard &c.—IN ZULU LAND with the BRITISH, throughout the WAR of 1879. 8vo. with Plans and Illustrations.

Dr. OLDFIELD (the late).—SKETCHES from NIPAL. HISTORICAL and DESCRIPTIVE. With Anecdotes of the Court Life and Wild Sports of the Country in the Time of Maharaja Jung Bahadur, G.C.B., to which is added, an Essay on Nipalese Buddhism. 2 vols. illustrated.

CAROLINE TILTON.—HOLLAND. By

Mr. SUTHERLAND EDWARDS.—The LYRICAL DRAMA: Essays on Subjects, Composers, and Knowledge of Modern Opera.

Mrs. NEWTON CROSLAND.—STORIES of the CITY of LONDON.

Ranging from the early days of Old London Bridge and the Settlement of the Knights Templary in England to the time of the Gordon Riots, with incidents in the Life of Brunel in relation to the Thames Tunnel; narrated from personal recollections. Illustrated.

Mr. W. A. MITCHINSON.—The EXPIRING CONTINENT: A NARRATIVE of TRAVEL in SENEGAMBIA. With Observations on Native Character, Present Condition, and Future Prospects of Africa and Colonisation. With 16 Full-page Illustrations.

Mr. SUTHERLAND MENZIES.—TURKEY, OLD and NEW. Illustrated.

Major B. C. W. MITFORD, 14th Bengal Lancers.—TO CABUL with the CAVALRY BRIGADE.

Major J. A. S. COLQUHOUN, R.A.—With the KURRUM VALLEY FORCE in the CABUL CAMPAIGN of 1878-1879.

Mr. FRED. PINCOTT, M.R.A.S.—ANALYTICAL INDEX to Sir JOHN EATON'S HISTORY of the REPOUT WAR and Colonel G. B. MALLESON'S HISTORY of the INDIAN MUTINY. Combined in One Volume.

Dr. R. G. LATHAM, F.R.S.—A DICTIONARY of ETHNOLOGICAL and PHILOLOGICAL GEOGRAPHY.

Mr. R. B. BUCKLEY, India Public Works Department.—THE IRRIGATION WORKS of INDIA, and their FINANCIAL RESULTS. 8vo. with Map, &c.

SYED AMEER ALI, MA., LL.D.—A TREATISE on the PERSONAL LAW of the MAROMMEDANS.

The VICTORIA CROSS: an Official Chronicle of Deeds of Personal Valour, achieved in the presence of the Queen during the Crimean and Indian Campaigns and the Indian, Feroz, Chinese, New Zealand and African Wars, from the Institution of the Order in 1856 and 1868.

Mr. SYDNEY ENSOR, E.C.—INCIDENTS of a JOLNEY through KUMIA to DAMPOOR.

Mr. D. C. BOULGER.—The HISTORY of CHINA.

Col. PARKER GILLMORE ("Ubique").—A

Col. PARKER GILLMORE ("Ubique").—In

Col. PARKER GILLMORE ("Ubique").—On

Lieut. F. V. GREENE, U.S. Army.—

Dr. CHARLES MACKAY.—A New Novel, LUCK, and WHAT CAME OF IT.

Prof. E. H. PALMER.—AN ARABIC MANUAL.

London: WM. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1880.

CONTENTS.

PANIZZI'S LIFE	491
THE COUNCIL BOOK OF KENNEL	492
SIR EDWARD REED'S TOUR IN JAPAN	493
CHRISTIE'S BIOGRAPHY OF DOLIST	494
NOVELS OF THE WEEK	495
PHILOLOGICAL BOOKS	497
LIBRARY TABLE	498
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	499
THE GIPHSIE IN NORTHERN EUROPE; THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AT EDINBURGH	499-500
LIBRARY GOSPEL	500
SCIENCE—BOTANICAL BOOKS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSPEL	502-503
NEW ARTS—THE PRIVATE COLLECTIONS OF ENGLAND; GOSPEL	503-505
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSPEL	505-507
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSPEL	507-508

LITERATURE

The Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi, K.C.B., late Principal Librarian of the British Museum, Senator of Italy, &c. By Louis Fagan. With an Etching and other Illustrations by the Author. 2 vols. (Remington & Co.)

VERY interesting in many respects was the career of the late Sir Anthony Panizzi. Exiled at an early age from his native country, beset for some time by the troubles which poverty entails, often in conflict though seldom overcome, he not only attained to a high and most honourable position in the public service of his adopted land, but he became an actual power in the society of that land, consulted and trusted by leading statesmen, and esteemed by many of those distinguished persons whose weight was greatest in the world of letters. It is not very difficult to see or to explain how his success was achieved. He was endowed with a remarkable memory and an amount of brain power which enabled him to work hard and long, and so to accumulate knowledge with little fatigue. He had the love of power which leads a man to spurn frivolous delights; his intellect was clear, his will was strong, his temper was hot. He possessed most of the requisites for victory in the battle of life, especially the rare power of ruling, the capacity for conciliating where it is expedient and for crushing where it is necessary. Seldom doubting, never wavering, he steadily ascended until he had reached a height as remarkable as enviable. Attached as he was to the country of his adoption, his love for his native land never grew cold, and his influence with the leading men of the Liberal party made him an invaluable adherent to the cause of Italian independence. Until he retired from the public service in 1866, he occupied a conspicuous position, and even afterwards, though his health was greatly enfeebled, he kept up his influence with many ruling men. The last years of his life, however, were rendered painful by a lingering illness, and he gradually dropped out of public notice, so that when the end came he passed away comparatively unremarked. But his fame must ever be associated with that of the Library of the British Museum, the noble institution to which he devoted so many years of his life, and which is so deeply indebted to his energy. Its magnificent Reading Room is the best monument to his memory. But the volumes now before us will render good service by calling attention to the work he did, not only within the walls of the Museum, but also in the world without. They are at the same time rendered both interesting and valuable by the letters which they contain from many of the leading statesmen and other celebrated men of his time—Thiers, Cavour, Palmerston, Clarendon, Gladstone, and many others—sometimes dealing with the most important questions of the day, generally written with a frankness which testifies to great regard and esteem.

Antonio Genesio Maria Panizzi was born at Brescello, in the territory of Modena, on the 16th of September, 1797. "His father, Luigi Panizzi, was the son of Dottor Antonio Panizzi, a lawyer. His mother, Caterina Gruppi, was descended from a respectable line of ancestors, many of whom had earned for themselves honourable distinction, chiefly in the profession of the law." He was sent to school at Reggio—where he seems, to judge by a somewhat unsavoury anecdote on p. 11, to have early evinced a characteristic indifference to religious matters—and then to the University of Parma, where he studied law, obtaining the degree of "Dottor" in 1818. Soon afterwards he was appointed Inspector of Public Schools at Brescello, being indebted for the appointment to the goodwill of his sovereign, Francis IV., Duke of Modena. Before long, however, he joined the Association of Carbonari, men whose chief wishes were "to free Italy, to unite her several states, and to expel the 'stranger.'" In 1821 he was summoned to the police office and there arrested. But "the man who arrested him proved to be a friend, and by the aid of this kindly official he was enabled to jump out of a window and again make his way for the frontier." Arriving in Switzerland, he wrote the book generally referred to as 'I Processi di Rubiera,' Rubiera being the name of the fortress in which the prosecution of Modenese political offenders was carried on. This book, by which "the circumstances which drove Panizzi into exile, though not detailed in all their fulness, are illustrated and rendered intelligible," was even then sparingly circulated, and was afterwards "so rigidly suppressed by the writer that very few persons have ever seen it." In his absence "the contumacious Doctor of Laws Antonio Panizzi" was tried and condemned "to the punishment of death, to be executed on his effigy." The Inspector of Finances at Reggio soon afterwards "sent him an account of money spent in preparing his accusation, sentence of death, and even for the expenses of his execution in contumaciam," and requested that he would recompense him for the outlay of "225 francs and 25 cents, including the usual fee for the hangman."

The representatives of Austria, France, and Sardinia having insisted on his expulsion from Switzerland, where he first sought for shelter, Panizzi was obliged to make for England. In May, 1823, he arrived in London, and there he spent a short time.

"The author clearly recollects hearing Panizzi narrate that, in these days of his indigence, fourpence was all he allowed himself for breakfast and dinner, and how well he remembered spending one portion of an afternoon in gazing through the windows of a cookshop, watching with hungry eyes the more fortunate mortals who were satisfying their appetites within."

From London he went, acting on the advice of Ugo Foscolo, to Liverpool, where he remained some years.

"His income was chiefly derived from giving lessons in the Italian language and literature; some of his pupils lived far away from the town, and he used to start on foot early in the morning, give his lessons, and return to Liverpool by eleven o'clock."

In 1828 he accepted an invitation to occupy the chair of Italian Literature in University College, an offer due to the influence of Mr. Brougham, who in the spring of 1831, having become Lord Chancellor, and therefore one of the rulers of the British Museum, introduced him into that establishment under the title of extra assistant librarian. In the Museum he gradually rose from step to step, until in 1856 he reached the highest post, that of Principal Librarian. The charge of being a foreigner was often brought against him, and we are told that a speaker at a public meeting once "made an open statement that Panizzi had been seen in the streets of London selling white mice." Not that precedents for bestowing posts in the British Museum on foreigners were wanting, for the second Principal Librarian was a Dutchman, Dr. Matthew Maty, and the fourth was a native of Switzerland, Dr. Joseph Planta. Sir Henry Ellis, whom Mr. Panizzi succeeded, was the fifth.

How much the British Museum owes to the tact and energy of the late Sir Anthony Panizzi is well known. From the time of his first entering upon office he never ceased to impress upon the minds of all the authorities concerned, whether Trustees or Treasury officials, the ideas which he himself held, and which his biographer sums up as follows:—

"I. The Museum is not a show, but an institution for the diffusion of culture.

"II. It is a department of the Civil Service, and should be conducted in the spirit of other public departments.

"III. It should be managed with the utmost possible liberality."

Of all the various phases of his Museum life the present work gives a full account, especially as regards the development of the Library and the construction of the new Reading Room. But we will pass on from that part of Mr. Fagan's work which deals with official life to those (of more interest to many readers) which refer to foreign affairs. In the year 1845 Mr. Panizzi was allowed to go to Vienna, and there he had an interview with his former sovereign, the Duke of Modena. On that occasion "he clearly and distinctly told the duke that his mode of government was wholly hateful to his visitor, though he had no feeling of enmity towards the duke himself personally, and that perhaps there remained even a sense of gratitude." In 1851, being at Naples, he was received by King Ferdinand II., who "allowed him to talk on the subject of Poerio to Settembrini, and the prisons of Naples. On this theme Panizzi descanted uninterruptedly for full twenty minutes, when the king rose, closing the interview with the remarkable words: 'Addio, terribile Panizzi!'"

He paid another visit to Naples, it may be remarked, in 1862, when he was, to use his own words, "so disgusted with the harsh proceedings of the President of the Commission appointed to take possession of the property of religious corporations," that he did not rest till he had obtained the dismissal of that official. With Settembrini and his friends, imprisoned in San Stefano, Panizzi sympathized so warmly that he took a leading part in a plan for their release. A steamer was chartered, the Lale of Thanet, which started from Hull in the autumn of 1855, bound for Naples, where the prisoners were anxiously awaiting its arrival; but an accident soon compelled it to turn back for repairs. A second time it set forth; but it was caught in a storm off Yarmouth on the 25th of October and totally lost. One of the numerous letters from Mr. Gladstone which these volumes contain was written on this occasion. It begins:—

"My dear Panizzi,—I cannot help writing you a line, however barren of condolence. I had hoped it might please God that your benevolent plan should succeed. It seems usually so hopeless to do good in this world, on a large scale, that one desires to become intensely concentrated on what lies within a small compass. For myself, too, I feel that with respect to the Italians I have had a great deal more credit than I have fairly earned; and I wished to have a hand in doing something by way of a step towards rectifying the account."

Another letter of Mr. Gladstone's deserves to be quoted, because it is most characteristic of the writer:—

—Chumber, October 18, 1866.

"My dear Panizzi,—Ei fu! Death has indeed laid low the most towering antlers in all the forest. No man in England will more sincerely mourn Lord Palmerston than you. Your warm heart, your long and close friendship with him, and your sense of all he had said and done for Italy, all so bound you to him that you will deeply feel this loss. As for myself, I am stunned. It was plain that this would come; but sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, and there is no surplus stock of energy in the mind to face, far less to anticipate, fresh contingencies. But I need not speak of this great event. To-morrow all England will be ringing of it, and the world will echo England. I cannot forecast the changes which will follow; but it is easy to see what the first step should be. I cannot write on any other subject.—Yours ever, and most warmly,

"W. E. GLADSTONE."

With exiles of the Mazzini type Panizzi appears not to have been so much in accord. Mr. Fagan states that he remembers

"one afternoon, about the year 1860, whilst walking down Fleet Street, in the company of Panizzi, being desired to look towards the left, on doing which, he perceived a man of very dark complexion, in a shabby black coat, with a silk kerchief wound round and round his neck, without collar, waistcoat buttoned high, and with downcast eyes, standing by the side of one of the small archways of what was but recently Temple Bar. Panizzi observed, 'That is Mazzini.' No bow, no sign of recognition passed between them."

Early one morning, almost before daybreak, we are told, on taking his seat in the diligence running between France and Italy, Panizzi "recognized close to him the figure of a man, in blue spectacles, and carefully enveloped in his long Italian cloak. It was no other than his quondam friend Mazzini, who, finding his incognito discovered, whispered 'Per amor di Dio, Signor Panizzi!'"

With Garibaldi, however, Panizzi was evidently on good terms, for the general dined with him on the 15th of April, 1864, on the occasion of his visit to London, and drove with him to Chiswick at five o'clock next morning, in order to visit the grave of Ugo Foscolo, above which

"the general requested his friend to address the crowd which their appearance had collected from all sides; the latter did not, however, hesitate to declare frankly that such a course would be contrary to the customs of this country."

It was in reference to the reception of Garibaldi in England that Massimo d'Azeglio wrote the letter which has been printed in the 'Lettere ad Antonio Panizzi,' and from which some extracts are given in the present work.

Among the letters of most interest communicated by Mr. Fagan are those written by M. Thiers on the subject of the Spanish marriages. They are too long for quotation, but they are well worthy of being carefully read. A briefer specimen of his correspondence is preserved in one of Lord Clarendon's bright, vigorous letters. It was sent, it seems, to the Secretary of the Treasury, and ran as follows: "Mon cher Ellice,—Je veux connaître à fond le système financier de l'Angleterre; quand pourriez-vous me donner cinq minutes?" As possibly interesting may also be mentioned the long letter from Cavour to Panizzi, written on the 24th of October, 1858, at Leri, the country seat to which the great statesman had retired immediately after Villafranca with a heavy heart; Mr. Gladstone's letters with respect to the conduct of the Emperor of the French in 1860; Massimo d'Azeglio's confession of faith on the subject of spiritualism, written in 1865; Prosper Mérimée's praises of his imperial friends at Biarritz; and Poerio's account of Southern Italy, written in 1860. Mr. Fagan has made good use of the materials bequeathed to him, and has produced a work of great and probably lasting interest. Among the numerous illustrations which he has contributed to these volumes, the two etched portraits of Sir Anthony Panizzi deserve very high praise.

The Council Book of the Corporation of Kinsale from 1652 to 1800. Edited by Richard Caulfield, LL.D. (Guildford, Billing & Sons.)

HAVING published the Council Books of Cork and Youghal, Dr. Caulfield has now edited in the same form that of Kinsale. This quaint old town lies seventeen miles directly south of Cork. Its proximity to the latter town has always prevented Kinsale from acquiring commercial importance, and during the present century it has fallen into insignificance, being a mere fishing station and a local but unfashionable watering-place; nor do the few visitors that it attracts suspect that the siege of Kinsale, at the commencement of the seventeenth century, was second in importance to that of Ostend only, and that the struggle round this remote borough formed the turning-point of the prolonged war between England and Spain. Ships making for the south coast of Ireland or the British Channel from the westward ran for the old

Head of Kinsale, and the passage from this port to the harbours of Galicia was short and free from difficulty. Before the introduction of steam navigation, both English and foreign fleets frequently anchored at Kinsale.

Perhaps originally a Danish settlement, Kinsale has a history similar to that of the other southern Irish ports. Colonized by English settlers, it suffered from the hostility of its neighbours, and endured a perpetual siege, lasting through generations. If we are to believe the declarations of the inhabitants of these places, it is not easy to understand how they continued to exist, and it may perhaps be suspected that in the intervals between hostilities the merchants of the seaboard towns contrived to do many good strokes of business with their hereditary enemies. The military importance of the harbour was rendered evident by the defeat there of the French and Spanish galleys in 1580; and when in the sixteenth century the relations of England and Spain became permanently hostile, proposals were often made for fortifying the town. During the reign of Elizabeth the Irish insurgents naturally communicated with the Continent through the ports of Western Munster, but this district, although adapted for the landing from time to time of small supplies of arms and ammunition, was not fitted to serve as a basis for extensive military operations. It is, however, difficult to understand why the Spanish expedition of 1601, sent to succour O'Neil, selected the county of Cork as the point of invasion, and established themselves at Kinsale, the only available road from which was closed by the garrison of Cork. Abandoned by their fleet and unable to retreat or advance, the Spanish invaders were penned up in Kinsale, and after a vigorous defence of seventy-five days surrendered to the Lord Deputy. The Council Book of this period is not forthcoming; it possibly may be found among the Public Records, as after the siege the Lord President refused to return without express order the muniments of the city, which he conceived to be forfeited. It is, however, to be regretted that Dr. Caulfield has confined his notice of this remarkable siege in his prefixed annals to short and unconnected extracts from an ordinary and well-known history, and has not added to the illustrations of his volume an engraving of the picture of the siege preserved in the Library of Trinity College, in memory of the fact that that collection of books owes its origin to a subscription made, at the suggestion of Raleigh, by the English officers out of the Kinsale prize-money.

The most interesting portion of this volume is the entries during the reign of James II. and the temporary supremacy of the Catholic freemen. In most of the Irish corporations the books containing these entries have been destroyed, and in some, as in Galway, the new corporation did not commit themselves on paper, and left the records of this interval a blank. At Kinsale the records are carried uninterruptedly through this period, and we are enabled thus to judge, in the case of an ordinary borough, how far the Protestants were affected by the supposed liberalism of the last Stuart king. In May, 1686, for the first time, and under the letter of the Lord

Lieutenant (Lord Clarendon), there were admitted freemen, manifestly Catholics, without taking the oath of supremacy, who, for some unexplained reason, did not pay their fees. On the 28th of February, 1687, Robert Myagh was sworn sovereign for the remainder of the year by virtue of his Majesty's letters patent. Myagh belonged to one of the Catholic families who had lost their property in Kinsale in the time of Cromwell, and had been in constant litigation with the Corporation. On the same day nineteen burghesses were admitted, of whom sixteen were manifestly Catholics. Of the officers appointed on the same day three out of four were undoubtedly Catholics. The reconstituted Corporation appears then to have dissolved all the existing trade guilds and reconstituted them. On the 5th of March the Masters of the new companies were sworn in, the nationality and religion of the first of whom are not doubtful, viz. Mr. Teige O'Know, Master of the Company of Coopers; the names of the other Masters are not so purely Celtic, but are unmistakably Catholic. Some new companies were also formed, including the "Barber Chyrurgions and Perriwigg Makers of the Town and Liberty of Kinsale," who were bound to trim gratis the sovereign, recorder, and town clerk, and their successors. The complete predominance of the Catholics is marked in the following entry:—

"14 Oct., 1689. Ordered that the Sov^{ty} shall nominate such as are qualified to watch nightly in the Corporation, and such of the Protestant inhabitants as are not able to pay for Roman Catholics to watch in the town, to be exempted, and such as he thinks able, either to send a Ro Catholic or pay for him."

This may be contrasted with an entry some thirty years later:—

"1 Oct., 1716. Whereas the Protestants of this town did watch and ward last year, that in future, if there be occasion, that the Roman Catholics shall send a sufficient man, each of them, to do their duty."

The introductory annals contain some interesting extracts about the sack of Baltimore by the Turks in 1631. This event is detailed in one of the best of modern Irish ballads, the author of which manifestly believed the sufferers to have belonged to the much-enduring Celtic race; for when he desires to express their detestation of the traitorous pirate John Hackett, who steered in the vessel of the Mohammedan captain, there occurs the line, "They cursed him with McMurrough that day in Baltimore"; it is amusing to find that the sufferers were all Saxon oppressors, who probably had never heard of McMurrough, and that John Hackett is described as an Irish Papist.

There are numerous interesting extracts and documents contained in both the introductory annals and the appendix, out of which a large amount of miscellaneous information may be sifted by the intelligent reader. We need scarcely add that this volume (the result of the energy of a private individual unaided by any public assistance) is a worthy companion of those which have preceded it.

Japan: its History, Traditions, and Religions. With the Narrative of a Visit in 1879. By Sir Edward J. Reed, K.C.B., M.P. 2 vols. (Murray.)

No circumstances could have been more favourable for sightseeing than those under which Sir Edward Reed lately paid a visit to Japan. Having given his support to the aspirations after progress displayed by the Japanese Government by building ironclads for their navy, he received and accepted an invitation "from his Excellency Admiral Kawamura, the Minister of Marine, and some of his colleagues" to follow the creations of his skill to their new home. In the beginning of January of last year Sir Edward landed at Yokohama, and before many weeks of his short visit were over the hospitality of his hosts, the brilliancy of the climate, the beauty of the landscape, the gaiety of the people, and the quaintness of their civilization had so filled him with admiration that he determined to exchange the "letter or two to a leading journal," in which he had intended to expound his views on Japan, for a two-volume work.

Of course, in a visit extending over only a few months, it was impossible that Sir Edward could gain more than a superficial knowledge of the history and the institutions of the country, and he frankly states in his preface that his information on these subjects is all second-hand. But none the less is our gratitude due to him for having written so vivacious an account of all he saw and heard during his stay in Japan. But though his readers will gladly listen to him while he relates his own experiences, it cannot but be regretted that he has given his book so much the air of having been written for a purpose, by championing on all occasions the Japanese views on international questions in opposition to those of his own Government. No one will deny to the Japanese the credit due to them for the astonishing advance that they have made in real civilization, and all will sympathize with their "aspiration.....for their country to be treated by the other powers on terms of absolute equality—to have its so-called sovereign rights fully recognized, and its liberty of action entirely unfettered."

In other words, they wish to abolish those clauses in the treaty which provide for the extra-territorial rights of Europeans and for the regulation of the customs tariff. But long experience is said to show that if the lives and limbs of Europeans residing in Oriental countries are to be protected and commerce encouraged, these clauses are necessary. China, Siam, Turkey, Egypt, and other states have submitted to them, and Japan could only be exempted from the common law if she were able to prove that she had definitively established reformed institutions on a European basis. Even Sir Edward Reed admits "that at the time of the signing of the treaty it was absolutely essential, for the security of the persons and property of foreigners, that these should not be subject to the action of native courts. Torture, since happily abolished, then existed in grim reality, and justice of all kinds was administered in a fashion utterly unmitigated to foreigners. But," adds Sir Edward,

"a great change has taken place. Codes of laws, both civil and criminal, have been framed on the best models; while the procedure in the courts of justice would compare favourably with that in use in many European courts.....In the case of Japan, then, it appears certain that consular jurisdiction will shortly have to be seriously dealt with."

But Sir Edward Reed forgets that the changes he describes have been effected suddenly by a handful of men, and that the people in the interior of the country, who took him for a Chinaman, never having heard of any other foreigners, would as readily follow leaders who might bring back "torture in its grim reality" as their present enlightened rulers. That in some respects no advance has been made since the treaties were signed is shown by the fact that foreigners, except when provided with special passports, are still rigidly excluded from the interior of the country; and even that a step backwards is not impossible may be argued from the abolition of Buddhism as the State religion, and the return to the ancient Shinto faith, which has been described by Mr. Satow, the great authority on this subject, as "an engine for reducing the people to a condition of mental slavery." As to the foreign treaties, Sir Edward considers that they were imposed on the Japanese "by force of sword and musket and cannon," but the events of the time hardly bear out this statement, nor were any threats of violence used by the foreign powers. "Poor Shogun, poor people," writes Sir Edward. "But more serious than the financial difficulty [that was then pressing on the Government] and more significant were the perpetually renewed efforts of foreigners to force Japan to trade with them." It is curious that while witnessing and so much admiring the signal advantages which have accrued to Japan from her intercourse with foreign nations, Sir Edward should so much regret the first step which led to this advance. He is never tired of enlarging on the superiority of the new state of things over the old, and yet he never ceases to stigmatize the act which made this reform possible as one of cruel injustice. It is a pity also that before writing of the events which occurred subsequently to the establishment of foreigners in Japan, such as, for example, the murder of Mr. Richardson, he did not make himself thoroughly acquainted with the facts. Readers of the present work should correct their impressions of the history of this period by turning to Adams's 'History of Japan,' where they will find it accurately related by one who was on the spot, and who supports his statements by full and authentic testimony.

With international questions, however, we take leave of the only parts of the work with which it is necessary to find fault, except it be to say that, already having in Dickson's 'Japan' an excellent sketch of the history of the empire, we cannot but regret that Sir Edward should have thought it needful to shorten his most interesting account of his own tour by giving so long an introduction covering the same ground.

On arriving at Yokohama, the approach to which had been announced by the sight, while yet nearly a hundred miles off, of the "lordly and beautiful Fujiyama," which,

"like a vast and splendid temple, stood high above the ocean plain, white with snow and glittering in the sun," a steam launch was sent off to the ship—it would have been a sampan if the treaties Sir Edward deprecates had never been made—for the distinguished visitor. At the landing-place he was received by Admiral Kawamura and other high officials, who conducted him by train to Yedo, or, as it is now called, Tokio, "the Eastern capital." The motley appearance of this city is a fitting emblem of the state of transition in which everything, political and social, in Japan now is:—

"Although Tokio is in the main still a Japanese city, exhibiting everywhere the life, the customs, and the costumes of the Japanese people, it bears many manifest and obtrusive evidences of European interposition. The railway, with its European station and equipments, is the first great contrast with the native architecture and appliances which strikes one. Not far from it is the foreign settlement, where many of the houses are of European type; and in looking over the city from an eminence, one sees bank buildings, schools, and occasional residences of foreign pattern rising up above the less elevated Japanese buildings—less elevated save as regards the temples alone, which here and there stand up high above all other Japanese constructions. Most of the great educational establishments, such as the University, the College of Engineering, the Military College, and the Naval College, are of European style; as are also some of the barracks, and likewise some of the manufacturing establishments. In fact, buildings of this style, with which alone we are familiar at home, but which were perfectly unknown in Tokio a few years ago, are now very frequent and conspicuous objects in the bird's-eye view of the city."

A month was agreeably spent by Sir Edward in Tokio in inspecting the arts and manufactures, the public buildings, and objects of interest of the city and neighbourhood. Nor should the hospitality of his many entertainers be unmentioned. The resources of land and sea, of vineyard and river, were taxed to their utmost to minister to his gratification; and the height of compliment was reached when, at a dinner given by Admiral Kawamura, a "dainty dish" was set before him, from which, when cut, "there flew a number of small birds, with written sentiments of welcome attached to their legs." The curiosity shops naturally attracted much attention, and Sir Edward gives a most interesting account, which is unfortunately too long to quote, of the processes employed in the manufacture of lacquer-ware. Japanese art Sir Edward justly considers to have been derived from China, and he tells us that "the first artist well worthy of the name was Kōsō no Kanaoké," "a pupil of a Chinese." The extreme jealousy with which the Chinese guard their best pictures leaves only the common daubs painted at the treaty ports at the command of foreigners, and the contrast between these and the excellent specimens of Japanese painting which are to be bought everywhere has given rise to the belief that the arts of the two countries have separate and distinct origins. But this is not the case, and the history of Japanese painting which Sir Edward gives is confirmed by the literature on the subject. Probably all admirers of Japanese bronzes have noticed that no two are exactly alike, but few perhaps are aware of the reason, which is thus explained by Sir Edward:—

"The European mode of casting ornamental objects, such as birds, flowers, &c., in very high relief as decorations of large bronze objects is to employ 'piece-moulds' produced in the following manner. After moulding the pattern in wax or clay, and taking a plaster cast from it, you from this again take a cast in an alloy of tin and lead. This is then sharply chased and divided into a number of pieces, and is then used as the pattern from which the bronze or other article produced is moulded. The process is, of course, an expensive one, and it is not resorted to by the Japanese. They never employ 'piece-moulds,' and yet such is their skill that they produce complex flower-forms as perfect as simpler castings, and more perfect than we ever, as a matter of fact, do produce by aid of our piece-moulds. It follows from their plan that whereas with the piece-mould system a succession of articles can be produced from the same mould, the Japanese require to remodel every article.....The idea of producing a thousand ornamental articles precisely alike is entirely foreign to the Japanese."

But the sights of Tokio only claimed the first attention of the visitor, and a trip through the inland sea to Nagasaki introduced him to the lovely succession of panoramas for which that huge lake is celebrated. Every one who has made the same voyage has admired with him

"the little shrines and temples which are to be seen in picturesque places along the shore opposite to Shimonoséki; and beyond, on both shores, and up the wooded hillsides, the beacons which assist in marking the channel, and which carry small lights at night. Villages nestled in every sheltered bay, with their picturesque junks and boats clustered in front of them; and as we got round on the western side of the land, where the ship channel curves away northwards, we came upon the broad shining surface of the smooth sea, that doubtless overspread many a once beautiful landscape, of which only the mountain tops, in the form of islands, are now visible."

After leaving Nagasaki Sir Edward paid a visit to the great commercial city of Osaka, which is frowned over by the castle celebrated in history, of which, says the author,

"it would be difficult to exaggerate the combined beauty and grandeur, with its lofty walls of stone, its curved outlines, its picturesque white buildings at the corners, its massive tower, its broad moat, and its huge blocks of granite of unexampled size and weight. The whole or most of the walls are notable for these very large blocks of granite, which vie with the largest of those built into the great pyramid of Cheops."

Here also has been established the imperial mint, at which up to the 30th of June, 1878, there had been turned into coin 3,000,000 ounces of gold, 23,000,000 ounces of silver, and an amount of copper that yielded 91,000,000 cash and divisions of cash. The change from the whirr and whirl of the steam-driven machinery of the Osaka mint to the priestly calm of the sacred city of Nara was like passing from the new to the old world, the contrast between the two places being as great as that between the bright, new, gaudy little coins for which the former has become famous, and the huge bronze figure of Buddha, the impressive repose of which has given for more than eleven hundred years a tone of holy quietude to the latter.

"The dimensions of this god," says Sir Edward, "are truly colossal. His height from the base of the sacred lotus-flower on which he sits to the top of his head is 63½ ft., and above this rises a halo 14 ft. wide, above which again rises for several feet the flame-like glory which arches in the whole figure. The face proper is 16 ft. long, its width 9½ ft. The eyes are 3 ft. 9 in. long, the eyebrows 5½ ft., the ears 8½ ft."

But Japan is everywhere full of anachronisms, not the least of which is the existence of a railway station at Kioto, the old capital of the empire, where generation after generation the Mikados lived in sacred seclusion. Here in the imperial palace

"the god-emperor dwelt; here he was enthroned, here married, here lived, here died. When he walked in these gardens, mats were laid before him as he stepped, to keep his foot from touching earth, and when he left them, as he rarely did, he was conveyed in a large carriage closed in by screens, and as he passed along the people stopped and worshipped. Any eye that saw his sacred form would, the people believed, be blinded by the sight."

Such was the state of things thirteen years ago only, and now the Mikado drives about the streets of Yedo in an open carriage, dressed in diplomatic uniform.

We have not space to name even a tithe of the sights witnessed by Sir Edward Reed in this newly awakened country. Suffice it to say that he drank the cup of sightseeing to the dregs. Every ancient institution, every reformed establishment, every sort of festive entertainment, every kind of dramatic performance, from the sacred dances of the Nara priestesses to the anything but sacred dances of the Osaka maidens—all were inspected by him. And the next best thing to seeing them is to read his description of them, which is always graphic and lively. The author writes in high spirits, and he evidently found no difficulty in paying his hosts the compliment of being pleased with everything he saw.

Etienne Dolet, the Martyr of the Renaissance: a Biography. By Richard Copley Christie, Chancellor of the Diocese of Manchester. (Macmillan & Co.)

ETIENNE DOLET may be accepted as a type of the Renaissance. The sanguine, exuberant life, the hunger after learning, the warm brotherhoods and fierce feuds, the cruelty to inflict martyrdom, and the zeal to accept it and convert it into triumph, which characterize an epoch out of the throes of which sprang light and liberty, are illustrated in his career with a fulness such as cannot easily be paralleled. In the great army that fought for freedom of thought and speech he can scarcely be said to have held a command. For a life spent in the arduous pursuit of letters there was no reward, actual or posthumous. Few but those who had cause to dread a similar fate, or his enemies, who raised over his ashes a howl of triumph, heeded his martyrdom, and Time, when the life of turmoil had ended in tragedy, declined to take charge of his reputation or be burdened with more than his name. Such memory of Dolet as survives is the exclusive possession of the bibliophile or the scholar. To the former he is known as one of those erudite printers who have placed Lyons in typographical art by the side of Venice or Florence, or in subsequent times Amsterdam. The latter has gleaned some scanty particulars concerning one who was the friend and the publisher of Marot and Rabelais, the pupil of Villanovanus, the ally of Bonaventure Desperiers, the opponent of Erasmus, and the antagonist of Scaliger. Meagre and inaccurate records are all that French biographical dictionaries supply, and English works of reference not seldom grudge him even that unsatisfactory tribute. Among those, however, to whom the world owes more than it cares to acknowledge or seeks to repay Dolet stands prominent.

It is pleasant to think that an Englishman has been the first to drag to light such particulars concerning Dolet as may yet be found, and to supply a biography which must rank as adequate. So conscientious and so successful have been the labours of Mr. Christie, his work stands in the most important respects outside criticism. When by means of minute research in quarters that are to the ordinary student wholly inaccessible, in the manuscript collections and ecclesiastical or municipal archives of such cities as Paris, Lyons, Limoges, and Toulouse, an author succeeds in establishing that all his predecessors are untrustworthy, no standard by which to measure or judge his work is left. With the exception of some articles in the Gentleman's Magazine which Mr. Christie mentions with praise, the references to Dolet in England are few and almost always inaccurate. In France, meanwhile, things are not so much better as might be expected. In the third volume of the 'Annales Typographiques' of Maittaire a hundred pages are devoted to Dolet, in which the references to himself contained in his own works and in contemporary authors are collected. This work must, however, be regarded as a mémoire pour servir. A life by Née de la Rochelle, published in 1779, is little more than a translation of the compilation of Maittaire with unimportant additions. A third memoir appeared in 1857 from the pen of M. Joseph Boulmier, entitled 'Estienne Dolet: sa Vie, ses Œuvres, son Martyre.' In this life, written by an enthusiast, who himself calls his book a dithyramb, no attempt is made to supply an impartial history. Dolet is treated as a man of noblest character and loftiest intellect, and spoken of as "le Christ de la pensée libre." None of these lives or of the accounts supplied in standard works of reference is free from inaccuracy, and from all of them together it is impossible to extract, says Mr. Christie, "a satisfactory explanation of his misfortunes and fate." An opening was afforded for a work of sound and accurate scholarship, and such Mr. Christie has supplied. Close and conscientious study of the writings of Dolet and his contemporaries, in books "of several of which only a single copy is known," has supplied much fresh and important information. In addition to these sources, Mr. Christie has been "fortunate enough to find in the manuscript correspondence and poems of Jean de Boyssone, preserved in the public library of Toulouse, a mine of interest and information respecting Dolet and his friends."

The matter thus obtained Mr. Christie has used with judgment, and his book may be cited as, in many respects, a model biography. Avoiding the temptation to dwell upon Marot and Rabelais, and "other eminent persons whose lives were to some extent connected with that of Dolet," or to "interweave with the life of Dolet the general history of literature and scholarship in France during the period in question," he has kept steadily to his text, and has furnished a judicious estimate of the man and his work, and a luminous account of the circumstances which aided the development of his character and brought about his death. Not even at the martyrdom of Dolet does Mr. Christie suspend his labours. Concerning his son, Claude Dolet, whose fate has hitherto been a mystery, he obtains information which has every appearance of trustworthiness, and which reflects some light upon the career of Dolet himself, and he points to evidences which show the great printer, scholar, and martyr of Lyons, the "father to a line," if not of kings, at least of respectable lawyers and magistrates.

In using this language concerning Mr. Christie's work, and in stating, moreover, that its interest is such that a student can scarcely seek a surer pathway into the land of the Renaissance, we accord it such praise as it is a pleasure to be able to bestow. One drawback from its merits needs, however, to be mentioned. Occupied in the task of collecting and arranging materials, the author has neglected those graces of style which are only less important than soundness of judgment and accuracy of fact. His English is often inelegant and sometimes slovenly in the last degree. Scarcely a fault of writing is there from which he is wholly free, and some of his errors seem to betray an ignorance almost rudimentary of the laws of prose. In his preface he commences to stumble over the most common obstacle in the path of young writers: "Besides the four books written by Dolet and printed by S. Gryphius (and which are the least rare of his writings), I have seen," &c. When we get into the text we find such expressions as "Of this court Bembo, though still a youth, was the life and soul, and has dedicated," &c. Even worse than this sentence is that which follows it. On p. 27 there is a curiously awkward and, so far as we know, original attempt to escape the difficulties connected with the use of pronouns: "On the death of Longolius he seems to have succeeded the latter as the chief Professor of Latin at Padua." "Latter," it may be said, indicates Longolius. When he says, speaking of Boyssone, "A man of rare ability and love of letters, a poet, a jurist, and a scholar, a somewhat timid sensitiveness of disposition certainly detracted," &c., Mr. Christie seems unaware that the opening words require the second part of his sentence to commence with the name of the man to whom reference is made or the pronoun which stands for it. Impossible comparatives and superlatives abound: "The floral games were among the chief festivals, if not the chiefest of all"; "A more complete list," where a list more nearly complete is meant, and so forth. "But although neither of these edicts were ever actually enforced," &c., is an absolute offence against the simplest of grammatical rules. One more specimen shall be the last; it is a marvel of clumsiness: "His salary was forty livres tournois per annum, being a higher stipend than that of any other of the lecturers, and from which we should infer," &c.

If we dwell upon these offences, it is because there has always been a tendency on the part of those educated in English universities to neglect English style, to the study of which the university itself offers little inducement. In England at the present day a movement has commenced in favour of style, such as has long been seen in France, and a student of Renaissance literature is the last by whom a movement of this kind should be neglected. The only inaccuracy in matters of fact that we have found in a careful perusal of the book is attributable to Dolet rather than his biographer. Mr. Christie supplies from a work of Dolet a description of Lyons, one passage of which is as follows: "Through its centre the Saône rolls its sluggish waters, and on one side it is girded by the Rhone; then each of the two streams, flowing with a gentle current, receives the other into its bosom." One who has breathed the current of the Rhone in Lyons would scarcely think of qualifying as "gentle" what is probably the most impetuous among the large rivers of Europe.

Quitting the ungracious task of fault-finding, and turning from the book to its subject, we find a picture of the man so vivid and lifelike we seem to form with him what may almost be called a personal acquaintance. Fierce, turbulent, suspicious, generous, ardent, he shows in his behaviour the influence of those passions on which mediæval life imposed scarcely a check, and that special kind of ferocity begotten of literary quarrels which was a special outcome of the Renaissance. To understand his life it is absolutely necessary that the reader should know the epoch in which Dolet lived—a time when a university outbreak could send him to prison, and prepare the way for his judicial murder; when two or three words added, for the sake of making more clear the sense, to a translation of a work attributed to Plato could consign him to the stake; and when Scaliger, a man who had assumably never seen him, and whose cause of quarrel was purely literary, could, fifteen years after Dolet's death, rejoice over it and make obscene jokes concerning it.

Born of respectable and middle-class parents in Orleans—for the legends that assign him a more illustrious parentage may be dismissed—Dolet spent the first twelve years of his life in his native city. At twelve he went to Paris, and commenced that worship of Cicero which was the source of his greatness and of his fate. Of his life in Paris we know little. When seventeen years of age he proceeded to Padua, where he imbibed the free-thinking opinions which secured him the hatred both of Geneva and of the Sorbonne. After three years spent in the university, then one of the first in Europe, Dolet was taken to Venice as secretary of Jean de Langeac, Bishop of Limoges, and ambassador from France to the Most Serene Republic. Subsequently, in the hope of getting preferment from the bishop, he joined the University of Toulouse, and commenced to study law. Toulouse was at that time the seat of the most degrading superstition and the blackest obscurantism. Dolet was very soon embroiled with the authorities, and, after passing some time in prison, was released at the intercession of his friends and patrons. After his rescue he saw that Toulouse was no place for him, and proceeded to Lyons. Here commenced a life of scholarship, the features of which we cannot even indicate. Corresponding with his college acquaintance and tutors, continuing his great work, commentaries upon the Latin writers, composing occasional satires or poems, vehemently attacking Erasmus on account of his heresies with regard to Cicero, making and then losing the friendship of Rabelais and others of the celebrities around him, and finding time in the midst of his manifold occupations to commit homicide, Dolet led a life which was common in that age and scarcely possible in another. His commencement as a printer seems attributable to his marriage and the necessity of providing for a wife and a child. Little time was allowed him to enjoy domestic peace. His enemies were always active and vindictive, and he spent the greater portion of the latter years of his life in prison. The pardon obtained from Francis I. by great influence was unavailing; and at length, upon an utterly futile charge, he was condemned under the infamous Liset to be hanged and burned. This sentence was carried out in Paris. So perished an illustrious victim of the Church, whose mission it then was to root out heresy at any cost. The murder was no more effective than other murders accomplished with a like object. Of all the crimes of which, through her sanguinary minister the Sorbonne, Rome was guilty, this seems one of the most stupid and atrocious. Such a termination to a career of letters was, however, familiar enough, and seems constantly to have been anticipated by Dolet himself, whose works contain frequent allusions to it. It may be doubted whether it was not preferable to that of Desperiers and others of Dolet's associates and friends.

About the literary capacity of Étienne Dolet it is not easy to speak, since all taste for the Ciceronian elegances which, in common with most men of letters of his time, he affected, is now lost, and his writings in the vernacular are not important enough to found a reputation. Like many other men of that time, he seems greater than his work. His commentary is none the less a feat of high and accurate scholarship, more philosophical in basis than any work of its class and time. His character is admirably summed up in a few phrases of Mr. Christie's description of Dolet in his twenty-sixth year, when he was so worn with study men judged him to be nearly forty:—

"Mean and squalid in his dress, unattractive in his countenance, full of enthusiasm for learning, and above all for Cicero, filled at the same time with vanity and conceit, and believing that his worthless orations were really deserving the attention of the world, caring only for study and literary fame; such is the impression [of Dolet] which the letter of Odenus makes upon us."

At the time of his death Dolet had just entered his thirty-eighth year. His appearance, as has been said, and the manner in which his life is filled with incident, convey the idea of an older man. His name is likely to be henceforth better known in England, and the knowledge of it cannot but tempt to the study of the terrible days in which he lived, the saddest and in some respects the greatest among recorded times, and so kindle afresh hatred to the intolerant creed of which Dolet was a victim. How strong is Mr. Christie's hatred of persecution his book everywhere attests; how free from sectarian narrowness are his views may be imagined when we find him speaking of Rabelais as "that great man from whom a word of praise is itself sufficient to confer an immortality." The few illustrations to the book are excellent, and the volume is in all typographical respects worthy of high praise.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

Just as I Am. By M. E. Braddon. 3 vols. (Maxwell.)

A Plot of the Present Day. By Kate Hope. 3 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Quite True. By Dora Russell. 3 vols. (Maxwell.)

The Clerk of Portwick. By G. Manville Fenn. 3 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

The Dean's Wife. By Mrs. Elloart. 3 vols. (S. Tinsley & Co.)

Theodora; or, Star by Star. (Lippincott & Co.)

MISS BRADDON still yields to the temptation of success. Murder and mystery have proved attractive and remunerative, and she again employs them with the hope of fascinating those who delight in morbid subjects. It is to be presumed that in this, her latest picture of crime, Miss Braddon intended that the central interest of her story should lie in the detection of the real murderer; but the incidents of Morton Blake's engagement with Dulcis will probably possess much greater interest for the majority of readers. As is usual in most novels in three volumes, there is much irrelevant detail which the reader might have been spared. Miss Braddon does not appear very familiar with the vulgarities of speech which characterize the lower classes, and in her endeavours to convey to the reader their peculiar varieties of pronunciation she constantly trips. For instance, in the first pages Vargas talks of his "dawg," and two sentences further on he makes use of the word "dog." In his long confession he speaks of "edges and 'ay-stacks"; but this tampering with the initial h is not continued. Another trifling detail: hunting men would consider the 19th of December an unusually late date for the first meet of the "Daleshire hounds." Miss Braddon is indefatigable in the production of new works. This prodigality of composition may lead to hasty writing, and this engenders careless writing; yet, notwithstanding its defects, 'Just as I Am' is a novel which will interest its readers. The story is dramatically told. The lights and shades of character are well delineated. There are fewer horrors, fewer sensational scenes, and more thoughtfulness, than are generally to be found in this author's romances; and though, as we have said, she still makes her plot turn on a murder, exaggeration and sensation are giving place to more truthful sentiment and description. In short, Miss Braddon shows that she has made progress in her art, and this work deserves success.

'A Plot of the Present Day' is written in a style of the present day, which certainly has its faults, but is not without attendant virtues. This particular style is an amalgam; it savours of Dickens and Thackeray, and George Eliot and Ouida; it is pathetic, and cynical, and contemplative, and magniloquent by turns. So far as Kate Hope is concerned, she adds to this amalgam an ingredient of her own, hardly to be traced back to the possession of any master in the art of fiction. Her first sentence is a sample of this newest and most original method of narration:—

"I, Proavia, thought I should be permitted to slumber restfully midst the shades of my ancestors; but lo! I am summarily aroused, the pen is peremptorily thrust into my hand, and I am forthwith commanded to open once again these faded eyes of mine, in order to chronicle, not as heretofore the result of their strained gaze into futurity, but to register events indelibly impressed upon the retina in that—to me—outlived period, the 'present day' of your own century."

From this exordium, assisted by the title-page, we are able to gather—what we may do "Proavia" the justice to say we distinctly recollect—that the author of this story was also the author of one entitled 'Through my Spectacles,' which depended for its facts on its vaticinations, and filled in its background without any reference to the retina. In the second of her two stories "Proavia" attempts a more difficult task, inasmuch as she dives into the past in order to produce a present which she herself has outlived, but which apparently her readers have not. And the most ingenious thing of all is that the strained gaze which read the future and the faded eyes which see the past contrive to witness nothing more real or unreal than would occur to the imagination of an ordinary novelist, sitting down to write a plain tale for commonplace readers. Shaking off all this surplussage of construction, and taking the story itself for what it may be worth, 'A Plot of the Present Day' is simple enough. The reader is treated to a love story; an impassioned lover who tells a lady three times in a dozen lines that if she gets tired of him he will release her "instantly," and who goes on to assure her that his rejected rival took his dismissal easily; a "moon to chaperone our lovers' footsteps homewards"; a pebble to make the course of their love run roughly for a while; and a tattoo mark under the hero's elbow to put everything straight again. There is plenty of variety in the tale, some tolerable sketching of character, and no very wild invention—though, to be sure, the pebble does create something of a sensation in the usually placid stream. "Proavia" will not interest all her readers, in the sense of keeping them engrossed in her plot to the end of the third volume; but she will unquestionably interest a large number. Perhaps the best guarantee of this is the fact that she enters with relish and self-delusion into the affairs of her own puppets, and thus sets the right way to work in order to delude other people.

It cannot be a very easy thing to blow one's own trumpet in such a way as to please one's listeners and thoroughly persuade them of one's superior merits. But this is what the heroine of 'Quite True' has set herself to achieve, for she writes her autobiography and describes herself as a virtuous, self-sacrificing, and heroic young lady. Perhaps, however, Miss Margaret Selby—or Miss Dora Russell, if the legend of the title-page is to be taken literally—would object to be called by these good names, in order to escape from the other horn of the dilemma. And, in fact, the heroine of the story does tell three several lies, on account of which she takes herself much to task. But then the lies are of such a character that they rather do her honour than bring discredit upon her. One of them at least proves her to be very weak, and might affect her claim to be considered a sensible young woman, but there is no turpitude about it. Her lies are white lies, and hurt nobody except herself. The greater part of the three volumes is occupied by a narrative of her good deeds—deeds of patient suffering and expiation for the crimes of others; so that, on the whole, it is impossible to acquit Miss Margaret Selby of being a praiseworthy woman. The plot of her story is well woven, and in some of its incidents highly sensational. The will, and the murder, and the old quarry, and the dodging of the law, and the convenient deaths are managed in a workmanlike way; for, like Miss Braddon, the author has had plenty of practice in the combination of the same materials. 'Quite True' is by no means an unreadable novel, whether it is in reality true or fictitious. Miss Russell does not hesitate about describing acts and human relations which a more fastidious or prudish writer might see fit to avoid, but she does it in an unobjectionable manner.

In 'The Clerk of Portwick' the story depends upon many of those extraordinary and all but impossible occurrences which have become the commonplaces of fiction. Still the events are well arranged, and the reader will find some pleasure, if a small one, in watching the author's display of skill in making things fit together. There is one bit of the plot which is left incomplete. A number of jewels are stolen. Some of them are discovered concealed in crevices in the rooms of the hero, who it is hardly necessary to say was not the thief. The author omits to say how the villain contrived to secrete them in his rival's furniture. In spite of its want of novelty in detail the story is certainly interesting—at all events, sufficiently interesting to help the reader, with some skipping, not unpleasantly even through the second volume. But it must be said that this volume is tedious enough when fairly read. There are many chapters which might be entirely omitted without any injury to the story. There is a great deal too much about the routine of the life of the hero while serving as a signalman at a railway station. Possibly the author has not studied this sort of life from nature. It is to be hoped at least that the picture is overdrawn which represents every safe passage of a train past a signal-box as giving the signalman a feeling of relief, and conveys the impression that disastrous accidents are only avoided by coincidences which do not as a rule occur except in novels. In justice to Mr. Penn it should be added that he can at times give simple pathetic touches with good taste and that he has produced a capital sketch of a delightfully naughty boy.

The title of Mrs. Eiloart's story raised expectations which were agreeably disappointed. Though there is a fatal magnetism about the Established Church which brings clerical dignitaries into the pages of Nonconformist novelists as regularly as Charles I. reappeared in Mr. Dick's memorial, on this occasion the reader hears nothing greatly to their disadvantage, while there is some magnanimity in making the dean's wife the heroine, and a certain renegade Wesleyan the villain of the piece. There is a good deal of humour in the contrast between the brilliant Irish girl and the society she finds about her in the cathedral close to which she is introduced by her marriage with the dean. That eminently conventional personage, adoring his wife as he does for the vivacious charm of her manner, is inclined to be shocked at the freedoms she allows herself on the ecclesiastical throne she shares with him. The way in which her beauty and graciousness turn the head of Grantley Germaine, the ambitious Dissenter, and draw him into the fold where more aristocratically bred sheep than those of Weigh Street Chapel are tended; how the man misconstrues, in his coarse egotism, the attentions intended by the lady for his own neglected wife; and how, after the wife's death and the dean's mysterious disappearance, his presumption leads him far enough to receive a crushing defeat, are processes well told and eminently natural. Less probable is the strange fortune which, as the result of a railway accident, leads to the substitution of the hapless dean for a lunatic in custody of a keeper, and to his incarceration in a private asylum till time and the attentions of Mr. Germaine have taught his wife to value him aright. On the whole, this is a readable story, not profoundly weighted with a purpose, and containing a good many studies of commonplace humanity.

The author of 'Theodora' has attempted a portrait the significance of which will be variously interpreted. Persons of the fashionable type of thought will see in Theodora a noble character, whose very intolerance of all weakness in others and utter absence of self-distrust place her on a pedestal superior to that of merely Christian virtue. Others will regard these negative qualities as defects, and will hold that a slight admixture of old-world graces would have made the heroine a happier and more useful woman. There is thoroughness and honesty in the way in which the writer faces the result of the entire abandonment by the society she describes of the conception of duty. Thus we have the heroine flying off from her post of wife, certainly under deadly provocation, but without the slightest previous effort to win back her treacherous husband to his allegiance; the hero relating in detail to an unmarried girl the secret of his unhappiness in marriage—a girl who soon confesses her love for him, and who takes the chief part of mourning at his deathbed, driving from the chamber the wife of whom he has had the meanness to complain. Not a single married couple remains true, except in the most conventional sense, because none is guided by any other law than that of the purest self-love. The story gains in point from the "moral earnestness" with which it is written and the naive unconsciousness that the writer is propounding anything less than the loftiest views of human life. The style is lucid, though dashed with certain Americanisms of language and is the point of view from which English society is regarded.

PHILOLOGICAL BOOKS.

An Attempt towards a Glossary of the Archaic and Provincial Words of the County of Stafford. By Charles Henry Poole. (Stratford-upon-Avon, St. Gregory's Press.)—Mr. Poole's little pamphlet is modestly called an attempt. It has, indeed, no pretensions to be a complete dictionary of the local speech in those things in which it differs from standard English, but it is an attempt in the right direction. It is a grave mistake for word-collectors to put off the publication of their gatherings from year to year in the hope of reaching perfection. Every local glossary must be imperfect, and in the present state of knowledge an imperfect book may well be more useful if published now than a far better one if issued ten years hence. We meet with a few words here—such as "Aside," beside, near, and "Channel," a ditch or water-course—which we regard as good English. It is always, however, an open question what "good English" is, and we see no strong reason to object to them. If Mr. Poole has fallen into error in this matter, he sins in company with all the glossary-makers whose works have merit. The strong point of the book is the useful mining terms it contains. "Timp," the bottom of an iron furnace, and "Rearing mine," a perpendicular vein of coal, are both new to us. The latter is a peculiarly good form, and does credit to the imagination of its inventor. "Timp" we do not understand; it seems an ancient word. "Austro," which Mr. Poole tells us is a "fire-place, the back of the fire, the fire itself," means in the north and north-east of England a screen put before the fire to keep in the heat. It is used in roasting meat, and is commonly spelled "haster" or "hastre," and sometimes "hastener" by auctioneers in their catalogues and other people who have made up their minds that it comes from the verb "to hasten." There is an amusing appendix of colloquial sayings connected with the county.

While the ivy is green and the holly is rough,
This is a lease for the Blast of the Hough.

This is said of a lease of the family of Blest, who held a property at Eccleshall. The point of the distich is, though Mr. Poole does not point this out, that the lease was so long that in popular imagination it amounted to an estate in fee simple. It is strange that in so many places very wide apart the holly should be the particular evergreen selected as a symbol of perpetuity. Not to quote continental examples which might be adduced, there is the Border proverb concerning a liar, "He leas never but when the hollen is green." William Dunbar has some half Latin, half English, verses in which the same idea occurs:—

Willelme Gray, sine gratia
Mynne ains delir cursing, as I wene
Qui nunquam latet mendacis
But quhen the hollyne growis grene;

and during the last general election in one of the eastern shires a person was heard to say of a candidate whom he detested, "He'll alee be a shame to be seen while there's a green leaf or a red berry to be fun on a holly bush."

The Dublin publishers Messrs. Gill & Son have just issued Parts I. and II. of an elementary book entitled Lessons in Gaelic, which can be confidently recommended for the use of those who want to begin the study of Irish Gaelic, and we have no doubt that they will meet with the hearty reception which the former Irish books from the same press have had. The author does not give his name, but he describes himself as one of the founders of the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language and the Gaelic Union.

The believers in Britain-Israel, having found the English people infinitely gullible, are now turning their attention to Wales. So Lazarus and Philo-Israel have issued a pamphlet called Proofs for the Welsh that the British are the Lost Tribes of Israel. There is nothing very new in it, and the delightful suggestion that the Cymry, as the Welsh call themselves, are the people of Omri has been well known ever since it afforded a meeting of antiquaries at Llangollen, some two or three years ago, so much amusement. Such freaks of spelling as "Gaellic," "Neibhr," "Dannaens," and he likes, are valuable, as showing, after all, what sort of education the propagators of this crasse possess, and we find no reason to doubt that it is founded on a sufficient amount of ignorance and folly to become a large sect, if it be not such now. Indeed, the preface says that Britain-Israel has at least one "truly Christian apostle" already, and we happen to know that it has several priests. The "Proofs," which we believe are to be translated into Welsh, appear to have first seen the light of day in the columns of the North Wales Chronicle.

Among the many languages which Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte has studied are those of the Celtic nations, and among them that of the Welsh. A short while ago he called attention to the fact that he had in his possession a unique Welsh book, called Athraweth Gristnogus, published by Griffith Roberts at Milan in 1568, where he also printed the only portion published of his Welsh Grammar, the first book of the kind ever printed in the language. The small quarto before us is a kind of Roman Catholic catechism, the language and orthography of which are highly interesting. The editor tells us that the illustrious owner of this treasure spared no trouble in directing the work, and on inspecting it we are at once convinced of the truth of a remark in the preface, that the printing has been done line for line and word for word, even the obvious typographical errors, in which the text abounds, being scrupulously reproduced. Among other things the Prince points out several arguments supplied by the typography in confirmation of the opinion that "Myles," whence Griffith Roberts dates, is Milan, and not the hypothetical town in Wales suggested by Panizzi some years ago. Prince L. L. Bonaparte deserves the heartiest thanks of the Cymmrodorion for his painstaking generosity, and that society in its turn deserves the thanks of the Welsh for the highly creditable fashion in which the work has been executed.

Dictionnaire de l'Ancienne Langue Française et de tous ses Dialectes du IX^e au XV^e Siècle. Par Fr. Godefroy. 1^{re} Livraison, A—Acolure. (Paris, Vieweg.)—The want of a dictionary of old French has been felt for a long time. Sainte-Palaye's glossary, which has been recently published, is a work of the last century; Roquefort's 'Glossaire de la Langue Romane' was never, even at the time of its appearance (1808-1820), anything but a mere uncritical compilation; and M. Hippelau's glossary, though much more modern, is still worse. It is doubtful whether the vast work of which the first part is before us, though far superior to its predecessors, will satisfy the most modest requirements. In justice it must be said that it is the fruit of immense reading, and one may well believe that when the book is completed few words will have escaped the author's attention. But the extent of the work is of itself an objection to it. A dictionary which, it is announced, will fill ten quarto volumes has several drawbacks on the score of its mass alone—the necessarily long delay in its publication, the cumbersome nature of so voluminous a work, and the high price which will render it hardly accessible to a large number of philologists. Now the most cursory examination of some articles in the first instalment is enough to show that it would have been possible to materially diminish the number of examples cited without at all taking away from the precision of the interpretation of the words. A lexicographer ought to know how to make a selection from the materials which he has amassed, and to cut out citations which do not give any additional light. This is what M. Godefroy has not known how to do. Moreover, the classification of forms and meanings is very defective, and the longer a word is the more sensible is this defect. But there are other faults. Words which are absolutely different are mixed up in the same article. This may be observed in the very first pages, where examples of a (Latin ad) are inextricably confounded with examples of a (Latin apud), the words which in their more ancient forms were ad and ab. To complete the confusion M. Godefroy seems to have had the strange notion that there was in French a preposition a coming from the Latin ab. This is the only instance in which the author has given an etymology; and we can but approve his prudence. The works of modern philology seem to be unknown to M. Godefroy, who mentions none of them, and who writes exactly as if he was the first person who had turned his mind to French lexicography. In short, this dictionary, so far as one can judge from the first sixty-four pages, is the work—and undoubtedly the useful work—of a laborious compiler, but not of a philologist.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE second series of Mr. Hingston's Australians Abroad (Sampson Low & Co.) deals with Ceylon, India, and Egypt. It would be useless to expect much novelty in a description of Ceylon, of Buddhism, Egypt, and Palestine, and Mr. Hingston is a bold man to have attempted the task. In the present volume the author, in narrating the daily incidents of travel, maintains the same light style that characterized his first book. We cannot but feel, nevertheless, that occasionally his jocularity is scarcely appropriate to the sacred scenes of which he writes:—"Here is the house where Dorcas lived, the good woman who made clothes for the needy and got her neighbours to help her, and left her name as lady patroness of all such charitable co-operative movements down to our time." The incongruity of such a style is still more apparent in other passages. Notwithstanding this blamish our author shows shrewdness in observation, and it is interesting to see the impression made by the oldest forms of civilization on an Australian colonist. His observations have made Mr. Hingston a fierce anti-Turk, and he anticipates a massacre of Christians at Damascus and throughout Syria at no distant date.

THUS comes from the Law Times office an Anecdotal History of the British Parliament, compiled by Mr. G. H. Jennings. The work is not very well done, but the idea is good. The book consists of paragraphs arranged in order of date under general headings. There are three parts. The first is called "The Rise and Progress of Parliamentary Institutions," the second "Personal Anecdotes," and the third "Miscellaneous Anecdotes." The preface is the best part of Mr. Jennings's work. In it he lays down the lines upon which such a book as his should be constructed, and his general principles are all that could be wished. Perhaps he does not deserve all the credit of the idea, for he frankly admits that this book is an expansion of another work which he and Mr. W. S. Johnston published in 1872, under the title of 'A Book of Parliamentary Anecdotes.' Mr. Jennings possesses the best of intentions, but not the best of judgment. One readily imagines that if he had only printed his commonplace books without revision his work would have been more satisfactory than it is. He says in the preface, "Reference to authorities is given throughout the work wherever it seemed likely to be useful to the reader or of any importance for verification." Thus Mr. Jennings recognizes the importance of references to authorities, but he ought to have known that they are always useful to a reader and always important for verification. Such a book as this is, indeed, worthless without them. Then Mr. Jennings in practice hardly seems to know what is a reference to an authority. "Haasard," for instance, is absurdly insufficient. "Life of Duncombe" and "Macaulay's History" are not much better. Moreover, the fact is that hardly any references are given. Every paragraph in the book should have been furnished with a reference to the exact title and page of the book from which the anecdote is taken. "The occasion of a particular incident, or the use of a certain phrase, is often matter of dispute and requires verification, both in Parliament and out of it." The author's precept is perfectly right, but then why did he not follow it? He has condemned himself, and cannot blame his readers if they agree with him. In spite, however, of the inefficient manner in which the author has done his work, the book is certainly both amusing and instructive. The personal anecdotes form the largest as well as the best part of the history. They are collected under the names of a number of parliamentary celebrities, and if the means of verification had been pointed out the anecdotes would have been as valuable as they are interesting. Praise may be given to Mr. Jennings for having selected the best of the many parliamentary anecdotes which might be compiled of the men of our own time. Should this book meet with a success which it hardly deserves, Mr. Jennings may have an opportunity of adding references to each paragraph, and then his collection of odds and ends will be worthy of the preface, which at present heralds something very much better than what actually follows. Even as it stands the book affords a good deal of amusement for idle half-hours.

Principles of Property in Land. By J. Boyd Kinnear. (Smith, Elder & Co.)—We rather wonder that what Mr. Dodson calls "the insatiable voracity of statisticians" has not yet procured a return, which should be instructive reading, of the number of books, pamphlets, lectures, and articles on the subject of the land question with which the public has been recently enlightened. Many of these lucubrations may be dismissed as mere electioneering literature, which has either served or failed to serve its purpose; others have taken the form of comment or criticism on the proposals of Mr. Osborne Morgan's Select Committee; but the more serious and solid treatises which have been issued on the subject—books like those of the late Mr. Kay, Mr. Osborne Morgan, and Mr. Arthur Arnold—owe their origin to a conviction that the question is eminently within the sphere of practical politics, and is one which the present Government is pledged to take up at an early date in no half-hearted manner. No doubt to this motive may be ascribed the publication of the vigorously-written little volume by Mr. Boyd Kinnear which lies before us; and we may say at once that few men unite to the same extent as Mr. Kinnear the qualifications necessary for a discussion of the principles on which the tenure of landed property should be regulated by its paramount owner, the state in which it lies. A writer who would approach the land question with a due power of appreciating its various aspects should be something of a jurist and something of an agriculturist. The name of Mr. Kinnear, who is a member as well of the English as of the Scotch bar, stands high both as a practical lawyer and a practical farmer. Scotch agriculture, like Scotch law, differs materially from that of England, and Mr. Kinnear tells us that he is intimately acquainted with, and personally interested in, "the farming in one of the best-managed districts in Scotland, referring, as we gather from a subsequent note, to Fifeshire. He has made a careful study of the comparative merits and results of the English system of "three profits" and the continental system of peasant proprietorship; and during the last ten years he has farmed in Guernsey, an island well known for its successful development of la petite culture. The limits of space forbid us to enter into Mr. Kinnear's preliminary inquiry into principles, which involves an antithesis between "right" and "expediency" which does not strike us as really philosophical. He proceeds to draw an unfavourable contrast between large estates and holdings and those of smaller size, in which he perhaps scarcely attributes sufficient weight to the circumstance that the capital and intelligence he admits to be essential can rarely be possessed by the very small farmer, who, after all, he should remember, is no more "a market gardener" than Mr. Ayrton. The division of landed property, with every facility for transfer, and the discouragement of large estates, are the principal practical changes advocated by our author, and some of the means by which he would attain these objects are of a rather drastic kind. Of the rule of primogeniture he justly observes that "being now, as it still would be, strictly optional, we cannot attribute to it many of the evils we have examined, nor expect from the alteration any material correction of them. Its abolition would strengthen the sentiment of natural justice and equality in families, but it would have no effect at all in increasing the power of an owner over his settled property, nor his means for beneficially managing it if these are deficient." In attacking the system of entails Mr. Kinnear, we fancy, is slaying the albatross. No doubt such cases as that of Squire Newton in Mr. Trollope's novel 'Ralph the Heir' have plenty of foundation in common experience. While abolishing most of the restrictions which now hamper the landowner, and, in his view, constitute an obstacle to the culture of the land up to its full powers of production, the writer would take away the power of mortgaging and creating other charges on land, apparently whether technically real property or not—a prohibition which, if consistently carried out, would obviously revolutionize business transactions of almost every kind. To attain these ends he would abolish trusts of realty, except for purposes of sale, while pointing out the special provisions which might be made to protect the interests of infants, lunatics, married women, spendthrifts, and even hereditary peers. He disapproves, though rather on moral and social than economic grounds, the principle of legitime, at all events unless restricted to a portion of the personality; and he briefly but clearly indicates the inherent vices of the system of an impôt progressif. He suggests, however, a limitation of the amount of property capable of being taken by any individual by donation, inheritance, or bequest, an innovation for which public opinion is certainly far from ripe. Mr. Kinnear's examination of the projects of Mr. Spencer and others for "nationalizing" the land, and of the arguments for establishing fixity of tenure, may be cited as models of sound and flawless reasoning. There are some points on which we are inclined to differ from Mr. Kinnear, but we can confidently recommend his book to every student of the important question with which it deals. His position makes it interesting to know the conclusions at which he has arrived; and the lucid, unpretending style in which his book is written renders the task of following him a pleasant one.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton send us a pleasant monograph on William Wilberforce, by Dr. Stoughton. It tells the story of Wilberforce's life with as much detail as most readers will need; it rather fails, however, to give a clear idea of his character.

We have on our table Albania, by E. F. Knight (Low);—Mountain and Prairie, by the Rev. D. M. Gordon (Low);—Austria-Hungary, by D. Kay (Low);—Guide to the Stock Exchange (Ward & Lock);—A Short Inquiry into the Profitable Nature of our Investments, by R. L. Nash (Wilson);—Silver and the Indian Exchange, by Col. J. T. Smith (Wilson);—Magnetism and Electricity, by F. Guthrie (W. Collins);—The Boilermaker's Assistant, by J. Courtney, revised by D. K. Clark (Lockwood);—The Minor Arts, by C. G. Leland (Macmillan);—Psychic Facts, edited by W. H. Harrison (Harrison);—Political Speeches in Scotland, 2 vols., by the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone (Edinburgh, A. Elliot);—The Literary Ladder, by A. A. Roads (Partridge);—Babylonian Cuneiforms, by a Special Commissioner (E. W. Allen);—Poems, Essays, and Sketches, by Janet Hamilton (Glasgow, MacLehose);—A Love's Gamut, and other Poems (Kegan Paul);—The Circling Year: Poems, by A. B. Todd (Stock);—Imaginary Loves, by J. Harrison (Birmingham, Cornish Brothers);—Golden Gleams from Rev. H. Ward Beecher's Words and Works (The Tyne Publishing Company);—De l'Éducation, by H. Spencer (Williams & Norgate);—Arte de la Lengua de los Indios Baudes, by L. Adam and C. Leclerc (Paris, Maisonneuve & Co.);—and Geschichte des Deutschen Reiches unter König Wenzel, 2 vols., by Dr. T. Lindner (Brunswick, C. A. Schwetschke & Son). Among New Editions we have Young Mrs. Jardine, by the author of 'John Halifax, Gentleman' (Hurst & Blackett);—Cottages Hospitals, by H. C. Burdett (Churchill);—and The Student's Handbook of British and American Literature, by the Rev. O. L. Jenkins (Baltimore, Murphy & Co.). Also the following Pamphlets: Light and Heat, by Capt. W. Sedgwick (Hodgson & Son);—The Theory of Wages, by C. P. J. Van Den Berg (Marlborough);—On an Iron Nail, by the Hon. R. Russell (Stanford);—Land Monopolists of Ireland, by S. Jackson (Stanford);—and Scotland before and after the Union in 1707, by an Anglo-Saxon (Edinburgh, Menzies).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Blackwood's (J. S.) Almuth, the Mosaic Enigma of Psalm XLIX Suggested, Explained, and Vindicated, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Clerical Reminiscences, by Senex, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Dale's (R. W.) Evangelical Revival, and other Sermons, 6/ cl.
De Bunsen's (E.) The Angel-Messiah of Buddhism, Manu, and Christianity, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Dictionnaire Historique: Canterbury, by R. L. Jenkins, 3/6 cl.
Kobler's (J.) Outlines of Instructions or Meditations for the Church's Seasons, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lloyd's (J.) The North African Church, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Maduff's (J. R.) In Christo, or the Monogram of St. Paul, 5/ crmes.
Ormes's (J.) Treasure Book of Consolation, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Palmer's (J.) From Bethlehem to Olivet, a Course of Lessons on the Life of Our Lord, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Sutton's (G.) Theistic Problems, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Law.

Law of Italy relating to Concessions, Railways, &c., translated and annotated by C. W. Walkie, cr. 8vo. 1/ cl.

Fine Art.

Athinson's (J. D.) School of Modern Art in Germany, 31/6 cl.
English Lake Scenery, illustrated with a series of Coloured Plates from Drawings by A. T. Lyden, imp. 8vo. 12/ cl.
Wolmann (Dr. A.) and Woermann's (Dr. K.) History of Painting, from the German, edited by G. Colvin, Vol. 1, imp. 8vo. 25/ cl.

Poetry.

Horne's Odes, Englished and imitated by various Hands, selected and arranged by C. W. F. Cooper, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Merry Ballads of the Olden Times, illustrated, sm. 4to. 4/ cl.
Pretty Peggy, and other Ballads, illust. by R. Emmet, 4to. 3/ Turner's (C. F.) Collected Sonnets, Old and New, 12mo. 7/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Adams's (W. H. D.) Wrecked Lives, First and Second Series, cr. 8vo. 3/6 each, cl.
English Men of Letters: Locke, by T. Fowler, cr. 8vo. 2/4 cl.
Kingle's (A. W.) Invasion of the Crimea, Vol. 4, 18/ cl.
Mortby's (Fleet-Burgess H. F.) The Savoy Brigade in South Africa during 1877-8-9, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Williams's (Rev. W. R.) The Prisoner's Friend, the Life of Mr. J. Bundy, 12mo. 2/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Adams's (W. H. D.) Some Heroes of Travel, cr. 8vo. 1/ cl.
Amick's (E. de) Holland, translated from the Italian by C. Tilton, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Bird's (J. L.) Unbeaten Tracks in Japan, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 24/ cl.
Butler's (Rev. J.) New Zealand, Past and Present, 2/6 cl.
Moberley's (Rev. C. E.) Geography of Southern Europe, 2/6 cl.
Read's (Sir E. J.) Japan, its History, Traditions, and Religion, 3 vols. roy. 8vo. 25/ cl.
Talbot's (Hon. T.) Greece and the Greeks, cr. 8vo. 12/ cl.
Watson's (R. S.) A Visit to Wauzan, the Sacred City of Morocco, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Philology.

Barth's (P.) Graduated French Reader, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Caesar's Gallic War, Selections from, by G. L. Bennett, 2/ cl.
Pliny's Letters, Book 3, Text of H. Kell, with Commentary by J. E. B. Mayes, and Life of Pliny by G. H. Rendall, 12mo. 4/6 cl.
Shakespeare's King Henry V., edited by Rev. C. R. Moberley, 12mo. 3/ cl.

Science.

Arithmetical, or Universal Calculator, 2/6 cl.
Balkwill's (P. M.) Mechanical Dictionary in Gold and Vulgar, 8vo. 10/ cl.
Brodie's (Sir H. C.) Ideal Chemistry, a Lecture, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Buckley's (R. E.) Irrigation Works of India and their Financial Results, 8vo. 8/ cl.
Cayley's (W.) Croonian Lectures on some Points in the Pathology and Treatment of Typhoid Fever, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Owfield's (W. H.) Dwelling-Houses, their Sanitary Construction and Arrangement, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Groom's (S. W.) Practical Treatise on Tumours of the Mammary Glands, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Kite's (J.) Series of Questions and Answers on the Astronomical Instruction, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Petersen's (E. S.) Health Studies, 12mo. 2/6 cl.

General Literature.

Afternoon Tea, Rhymes for Children, illustrated by J. G. Severby and H. M. Emerson, sm. 4to. 6/ cl.
Blackie's Comprehensive School Series, Sixth Reader, 2/6 cl.
Bladen's (W.) The Enemies of Books, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Chilren College Register, a List of Children from September, 1875, to July, 1880, compiled and arranged by E. M. Oakley, 12mo. 6/ cl.
Corbush's (R.) Treasury of English Literature, roy. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Connell's (A. M.) Discontents and Danger in India, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Crommelin's (M.) Orange Girl, 12mo. 2/ cl. (Railway Library).
De Morgan's (M.) The Ecclesiae of Princes Placemans, and other Stories, 12mo. 6/ cl.
Elliot's (G.) Impressions of Theophrastus Such, Cabinet Edition, 12mo. 6/ cl.
Fleming's (G.) The Head of Medusa, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Germann's (Mrs. E. A.) Left to Starve and No One wants the Blame, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Gustafson's (R.) Woodland Notes, Ten-Time Tales for Young Little Folks and Young Old Folks, translated by A. Alberg, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hardy's (J. P.) The Children's Black-and-White Picture and Painting Book, with Poems and Stories, sm. 4to. 3/ cl.
Harte's (E.) Complete Works, Vol. 3, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Haverall's (Miss F. R.) Life Chords, illustrated, post 8vo. 12/ cl.
Hawthorne's (J. S.) Yellow Cap, and other Fairy Stories for Children, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hocking's (R. K.) His Father, or a Mother's Legacy, 3/6 cl.
Ingelow's (J.) Barth de Berenger, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Kali Block and the Phantom Grey, extracted from Selections from Hauff's Stories, edited by W. E. Mullins and P. Horr, 12mo. 3/ cl.
Kingston's (W. H. G.) Cruelty of the Dainties, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Kingston's (W. H. G.) In the Wilds of Florida, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
London Library Vols. 3 and 4, cr. 8vo. 3/ each, cl.
M'Grath's (T.) Pictures from Ireland, cr. 8vo. 1/ cl.
Morris's (J.) The New Nation, 5 vols. 8vo. 42/ cl.
Mother Hubbard's Cashboard for the Amusement of the Young of all Ages, 4to. 2/6 bds.
Nudge and her Chicks, by a Brother and Sister, 12mo. 20/ cl.
Our Little World of Child Life, small 4to. 3/6 cl.
Pansie's Four-Sin, by Author of 'St. Olave's', 12mo. 4/6 cl.
Party-Giving on Every Scale, by Author of 'Manners and Tone of Good Society', cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Pearce's (P. M.) Mother Mollie, 12mo. 4/ cl.
Phillips's (E. C.) Hilda and her Doll, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Reference Handbook of Quotations, English, Latin, and French, 32mo. 3/ cl.
Roe's (E. F.) Success with Small Fruits, small 4to. 12/ cl.
Russell's (D.) Quite True, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Strictly True Up, a Novel, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Wagner's (W.) Legend and the Gods, Tales and Traditions of our Northern Ancestors, by M. W. Macdonald, and edited by W. W. Anson, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Wallace's (L. R.) Troublesome Daughters, cheap edit. 6/ cl.

FRENCH.

Fine Art.

Collinet (E.) et Beaumont (A. de): Ornements de la Four, Recueil de Dessins pour l'Art et l'Industrie, Third Series, 30/ cl.
Deville (A.): Tombes de la Cathédrale de Reims, Part 1, 1/ cl.
Marréte (A.): Catalogue général des Monuments d'Abydos, Vol. 2, 70/ cl.

Philosophy.

Bahmann (Joh.): Der Widerspruch im Wissen u. Wissen der Welt, Vol. 1, 8m.

History and Biography.

Noer (Graf F. A. v.): Kaiser Akbar, Part 1, 4m.

Pietzsch, der Neun, edited by R. v. Gottschall, Part 2, 6m.

Philology.

Pohlitz Byri Bastantia, recensit Otto Friedrich, 6m.

General Literature.

Klacins (J.): Cavallieri Fiorentines, 3fr. 10.
Littre (E.): De l'Établissement de la Troisième République, 8fr.
Maké (H.): La Bohème Papagoue, Raphaëlle, 8fr.
Rochefort (H.): Le Père-fleur, 8fr. 50.
Zola (F.): Le Roman Experimental, 3fr. 50.

THE GIPSES IN NORTHERN EUROPE.

British Museum, Oct. 11, 1880.

On reading the review in your columns last week of Mr. Groom's work, 'In Gipsy Tents,' the concluding remarks of your critic as to the date of the immigration into Europe of the "Egyptians" recalled to my memory a very curious State letter on this subject, which I came across several years ago in cataloguing the volumes of State correspondence among the old Royal MSS.

As this document is, I fancy, generally unknown, and has never been published, I venture to send you a transcript of it, in hopes it may prove interesting to your readers. The writer in James IV. of Scotland, and the person addressed is John, King of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. The epistle is without date, but was written in the year 1506, as appears by its being copied in a register book of correspondence of James IV. and James V. among a number of other letters dated 1506:—

"Illustrissimo, &c. Anthonius Gawiao ex parva egipto comes et cetera eius comitatus gens afflicta et miseranda: dum Christianum orbem peregrinationis studio apostolice sedis (vt refert) Jussu: suorum more peregrinans: fines nostri Regni dudum aduenerat. atque in sortis sue et miseriarum huius populi refugium nos pro humanitate Implorauerat: vt nostros Limites eibi Impune adire: Res cunctas: et quam habet societatem libere circumagere liceret. Impetrat facile: que postulat miserorum hominum dura fortuna. Ita aliquot menses bene et catholice (sic accepimus) hic versatus: ad te Rex et Auuncule In Daciam transitum parat. Sed oceanum transmissurus nostras Litteras exorauit quibus Celitudinem tuam horum certiores Redderemus. simul et calamitatum eius gentis Regis tue munificencie commendaremus. Ceterum errabunde egipti fata moresque et genus eo tibi quam nobis credimus nociora: quo egiptus tuo Regno vicinior: et maior huiusmodi hominum frequentia tuo disarsatur Imperio. Illustrissime," &c.

I forgot to mention that the reference is Royal 13 B. II., f. 15 b. EDWARD SCOTT.

THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AT EDINBURGH.

THE business of Wednesday, the 6th inst., began with a paper by Mr. Mullins, of Birmingham, entitled 'The Librarian and his Work.' The imaginary librarian was presented under three aspects, financial, administrative, and literary, and Mr. Mullins contended that a man of ordinary capacity was hardly fit for the post. The librarians present seemed highly satisfied with the estimate of their powers, which was none the less relaxed for a few quizzical remarks on certain readers who frequent libraries, such as the bore and the clerical reader. One enthusiast was so enraptured with the picture set before him that he asked why—since the lives of painters, sculptors, chancellors, judges, and the like had been published—the lives of librarians had not been published. The suggestion of this addition to the terrors of death was, fortunately for the hapless librarians, not warmly received. In natural sequence to the paper on a perfect librarian came a proposal for adopting some means of training the young to become perfect, and of aiding assistants to acquire the general principles of their profession. The Association could hardly take up a more useful or fruitful question. Many suggestions were put forward in the discussion, but no definite proposal made. It is to be hoped that the Council, to whom the matter was referred, will not let it drop, but take prompt measures to formulate a scheme of apprenticeship, or other kind of pupilage, that will attract a good class of youths to a profession the importance of which is becoming more and more manifest every day.

The most ticklish question of the whole meeting—opening libraries on Sunday—was now brought forward, and threatened the peace of mind of all present. Mutterings of the storm had been heard the day before, when notice of a motion to pass by the subject was given. The proposer, however, was not to be traversed in that way without a vigorous effort, and, undismayed by frowns and cries, he delivered himself calmly of his speech. It was not, however, to be expected that such a proposal would be accepted in the country of Sir Andrew Agnew, and by a majority of thirty votes the question was shelved. A technical paper on 'An Improved System of Press and Shelf Notation' served to soothe the perturbed spirits of the assembly. Mr. Leonard Wheatley's account of the Assyrian libraries of Sennacherib, Eashaddon, and Assurbanipal, though interesting, was not exciting. The convenience of having books made of brick, which could not be destroyed by fire, was pointed out, and led to a joke on the part of the chairman that might have raised Sydney Smith's estimate of the wit to be found north of the Tweed. Libraries of a more modern character, but scarcely less unknown, were next described in a paper on 'The Great Libraries of Scandinavia.' The most precious volume in the Royal Library at Stockholm is the Codex Aureus, a superb Latin MS. of the four Gospels written in the sixth or seventh century. At Upsala is lodged the Codex Argenteus, or Mæso-Gothic Gospels of the fourth century, "perhaps the most precious MS. in the world."

An account of the Library of the Edinburgh Royal Society was read by the librarian. Its main feature is the large collection of Transactions of learned societies.

The account given by Mr. Small, Vice-President of the Association, of the University Library, which he manages with so much care and credit, was admirably illustrated by a visit to its handsome hall, whose ceiling is decorated by the hand of Stothard. Most interesting are the collection of books given by William Drummond of Hawthornden and that of early quarto editions of Shakespeare's plays, given with other Shakspeareana by Mr. Halliwell-Phillips. Many early illuminated manuscript books were also exhibited in the cases.

In the evening a conversation, given by the Royal Scottish Academy in the National Gallery, was largely attended. A special loan exhibition of paintings and sculpture by Scottish artists added to the brilliancy of the scene.

The proceedings of Thursday were marked with those signs of hurry which attend an overcrowded programme. Mr. C. Walford explained his plan of effecting the sale or exchange of duplicate books. Mr. R. A. Macfie in a lengthy paper ventilated his objections to the law of copyright, which, as he seems to think, favours the author at the expense of the public. He was accused by another member present of wishing to kill the goose that laid the golden egg. Nearly all the rest of the day was consumed in discussing a series of rules as to the best mode of cataloguing books, which, though very useful, were too technical to be interesting to the public in general. The officers for the year were elected: President, Rev. H. O. Cox; Vice-Presidents, Lord Landsay, Mr. Mullins, and Mr. Small; Treasurer, Mr. R. Harrison; Secretaries, Mr. E. C. Thomas and Mr. C. Welch. Messrs. Bailey, Frost, Stevens, and Tedder were added to the Council, in place of four members who retire. It was resolved to make Cambridge the place of the next annual meeting.

On Friday morning visits were paid to the works of Messrs. Chambers, the publishers, and of Messrs. Johnston, the map publishers. An entertainment given in the afternoon by the Senate of the University at the Botanic Gardens was rather spoiled by the inclemency of the weather, Sir Alexander Grant and his learned colleagues having to stand under umbrellas while receiving the guests.

Literary Gossip.

THE collection of Mr. Ruskin's scattered letters, which, as we announced some time ago, will shortly appear, is to bear the extremely characteristic title of 'Arrows of the Chase.'

MR. RUSKIN's good resolutions, made in the beginning of the year, with regard to the completion of the 'Fors Clavigera' series, have not been carried out. Only one number has been issued since March. This has just been published, and is specially addressed to the trades unions of England.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN & HALL have in preparation an édition de luxe of the works of Charles Dickens. This edition will contain all the original engravings, both on steel and wood, many of which have not appeared since the original editions were issued.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH's 'Diary,' which is to be published at the end of November by Mr. Bentley, contains a great many details of the lives of George IV. and William IV., anecdotal matter referring to the Russo-Turkish war of 1828-9, Catholic Emancipation, and the French Revolution of 1830, besides illustrations of character of the chief public men engaged in affairs in the later years of the fourth George and the earlier of the fourth William. There is a good deal relating to Ireland which will be interesting at this time, as showing how Irish troubles only change their names and are ever present. The new volumes of Prince Metternich's 'Memoirs,' which Mr. Bentley will publish, come down to 1848.

In the 'Past Hours' of Adelaide Kemble (Mrs. Sartoris), which Mr. Bentley announces, will be found the commencement of a story which she did not live to finish, added to shorter and finished tales. The same publisher promises the fourth volume of Prof. Duncker's history, which takes the reader to India, and to its early conquerors and civilization; 'A Lady's Tour in Corsica,' an account of a stay of some months' duration in the island; and lastly, compressed into one volume, all the material that was published in the two volumes of Dean Hook's biography, which will be offered to the public for six shillings. This is obviously an experiment requiring a large sale to justify it, but it is hoped that the interest attaching to the character and services of Dean Hook renders his life of value to Churchmen and to all who can esteem so robust and honest a character as his was.

M. CALMANN LÉVY will issue next month the letters addressed by Prosper Mérimée to Sir A. Panizzi, of which we have already made mention. Mr. Fagan intends, we are glad to say, to translate a selection of the most interesting, and publish them in England at the beginning of next year.

THE new volume of verse by Mr. James Thomson, author of 'The City of Dreadful Night,' which we have already mentioned, is to open with a piece called 'Vane's Story,' an ambiguous title. This will be followed by 'Weddah and Om-el-Bondin' and 'Two Lovers,' Eastern stories from the 'De l'Amour' of Henri Beyle (Stendhal). Several minor poems and a few brief translations will also be included in the volume.

THE land agitation in Ireland, and the complaints made against the law which regulates the relations of landlords and tenants in that country, must naturally have rendered English readers anxious to learn something about the provisions of a code so bitterly assailed. The Irish Land Acts of 1860 and 1870, lengthy and not too well arranged, can convey little clear information to the unprofessional reader who may attempt to master them, nor can their technically drawn clauses give any clear idea of their practical results. To meet this want Mr. Richey, Q.C., the Professor of Feudal and English Law in the University of Dublin, has completed a treatise, intended to be popular and wholly untechnical, dealing with the legal relations of landlord and tenant, and the peculiar Irish legislation upon that subject. It is not his design to consider whether the law of landlord and tenant as now existing in Ireland should be amended, but to afford in a condensed and readable form to those who may desire to discuss that question useful information upon the present state of the law. Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish the book immediately.

MESSRS. CASSELL & Co. have in the press a work by the Hon. George C. Brodrick, entitled 'English Land and English Landlords: an Inquiry into the Origin, Character, and Reform of the English Land System.' The work will be published under the auspices of the Cobden Club.

A BIOGRAPHY of Dr. Bell, the educational reformer, may shortly be expected from the pen of Prof. Meiklejohn, of St. Andrews University.

THE concluding volumes of the 'Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland from 1641 to 1652,' edited by Mr. John T. Gilbert, F.S.A., for the Irish Archaeological Society, will, it is expected, be issued early in November. The forthcoming volumes include, we are informed, hitherto unpublished letters of Oliver Cromwell and other important personages. The work in its entirety furnishes a vast body of original contemporary material, printed for the first time, and unknown to previous writers on the history of the important period between 1641 and 1652.

It is understood that among the arrangements to be carried into effect in the British Museum when the Zoological Galleries are vacated will be the opening of a refreshment room for the use of visitors. Some concession of this nature has long been demanded. Than the dungeon used for this purpose a few years ago, and since abandoned, nothing could be less convenient. The sooner good accommodation is supplied the better.

LORD CLEMMONT has just completed a new edition of the 'History of the Fortescue Family,' which will shortly be published by Messrs. Ellis & White. The former edition was printed exclusively for private circulation.

EFFORTS are to be made to obtain from the Secretary of State for India some recognition of the literary merits and services in the cause of education of the Rev. M. A. Sherring, who died on the 10th of last August, of cholera, at Benares. Since 1853, when he proceeded to India as a member of the London Missionary Society, Mr. Sherring had been engaged almost continuously in educational work. His labours were remarkably successful, and in particular the great progress made by the Benares Mission School, whose pupils increased from 12 in 1869 to an average of 468 in recent years, is ascribed mainly to his efforts and his popularity amongst the natives. His literary works were 'The Sacred City of the Hindus,' 'Hindu Tribes and Castes,' 'The Indian Church during the Rebellion,' 'The History of Protestant Missions in India,' and 'Hindu Pilgrims.' He also published some writings in the vernacular under the title of the "Mirzapur School Series." Subscriptions for a memorial which it is proposed to raise to him will be received by the Rev. J. A. Lambert, of Benares.

IN the edition of the Stowe Missal which Mr. Warren, of St. John's College, Oxford, is preparing, the pages photographed with Lord Ashburnham's permission are the following:—1. The last eight verses of St. John's Gospel in a seventh century text, with the scribe's name appended in the earliest extant specimen of Ogham handwriting. 2. The first page of the Missal proper, with a large initial letter and a good specimen of a Celtic ornamental border. 3. The earliest extant Latin text of the Nicene Creed, written c. 700, with ninth and tenth century inter-linear alterations, including the addition of the "Filioque." 4. A palimpsest page with Irish rubric and the prayers of oblation. 5 and 6. An old Irish treatise on the Euclid. 7. Three old Irish charms.

THE Curators of the Taylorian Institution nominated at last Saturday's meeting Dr. H. Krebs as locum tenens of the German teachership for the next term (already reported as probable in the Athenæum of the 25th of September), and Dr. Oskar Frankfurter as examiner for the German scholarship at the same Institution.

A SECOND edition of John Oldcastle's 'Journals and Journalism, with a Guide for Literary Beginners,' will be issued immediately by Messrs. Field & Tuer. Added to the new edition are the autographs of Mr. Chenuy, Mr. James Payn, Dr. W. H. Russell, Sir Algernon Borthwick, and other distinguished contemporary journalists, as well as an exhaustive index, and a dedication to Sir Henry Taylor—"a name," says Mr. Oldcastle, "which will remind literary beginners of the dignity and duty of their mission."

TURKISH educationists have solved a problem which they have had long in hand, and which they found difficult. The public schools being free to girls as well as to boys, though girls are chiefly sent by the middle classes, a special school was established many years ago at Constantinople for the advanced instruction of girls and the training of schoolmistresses and governesses. The want of a boarding school was generally felt, but it was almost impossible to find any Turkish lady to conduct it. A principal has now been found in the widow of the late Col. Tahyr Bey, an Hungarian officer in the Turkish service. Madame Tahyr Bey herself teaches Turkish, English, German, French, Italian, the piano, and drawing. For boarders the terms are about 30*l.* per annum, and for day scholars about 5*l.* 10*s.* She began with fifteen daughters of pashas and high functionaries as boarders. A notable feature is that pupils are admitted without distinction of religion or nationality.

MR. J. POTTER BRISCOE, of the Nottingham Free Library, will soon have ready for the press a volume entitled 'Songs and Sonnets of Robert Millhouse.' The editor will preface the work with an account of this local poet. He was born at Nottingham in 1788, and at the early age of six was put to work; at ten he was placed in a stocking-frame, and learned to read at a Sunday school. Many of his best pieces he composed while working at his loom.

MESSRS. BLACKIE & SON will shortly publish 'Flags: some Account of their History and Uses,' by Mr. Macegeorge, author of 'Old Glasgow,' &c.

MR. WILLIAM ANDREWS, honorary secretary of the Hull Literary Club, has in the press a book entitled 'Punishments in the Olden Time,' furnishing historical notes on the brank, ducking-stool, pillory, whipping-post, cage, stocks, drunkard's cloak, public penance, &c. It will be profusely illustrated.

A EUROPEAN edition of Harper's Magazine is to be begun in December by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. It has been through this well-known magazine, in the course of its sixty volumes, that many of the leading novels of Bulwer, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, and other English writers have been introduced to American readers, and the use of such copyright material has hitherto prevented its sale here. This difficulty it is proposed to obviate by securing the right of serial publication both for Europe and America, and Mr. Thomas Hardy is now engaged upon a novel which, with illustrations by Mr. Du Maurier, will appear exclusively in Harper's. It is noteworthy that while English newspapers greatly surpass American in average circulation, the American illustrated magazines have, on the contrary, larger sales, Harper's reaching about 140,000, and its younger rival, Scribner's, which has already gained a footing here, about 100,000, monthly. The great outlay on illustrations, reaching sometimes a hundred in a number, that these magazines incur, would evidently be impossible did they not attain a very large circulation. The European edition will be partly printed here, the American editorial departments being partially replaced by English, and the price is to be one shilling.

A COMMITTEE has been formed at Vienna for the creation of a Littré foundation on the occasion of the eightieth birthday of the veteran lexicographer and chief representative of the Comtists in France. The funds will be devoted to prize essays on subjects selected by M. Littré. We hope that the idea of such a tribute to the author of the great French dictionary may be favourably taken up in France, and also in England and America.

DR. NEUBAUER is engaged upon a monograph on the mediæval Jewish documents concerning the lost ten tribes.

ALTHOUGH Prof. Jagic has been appointed to the chair of Slavonic Philology at the University of St. Petersburg, his well-known periodical, the Archiv für Slavische Philologie, is, we believe, still to appear in Berlin and in the German language. The first part of the eighth volume has appeared. The professor has begun his lectures in the Russian capital.

THE Foreign Translation Committee of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge have published during the past twelve months the following among other volumes:—'The Book of Common Prayer,' in Swahili, for the use of the Zanzibar Mission, for which also a small handbook on the 'Makua Language,' by the Rev. Chauncy Maples, has been published; 'The Gospel of St. Matthew,' in the Hangchow dialect; 'The Gospel of St. Matthew, and Portions of the Prayer-Book,' in Ojibbeway; 'A Manual of Devotion,' in the Beaver Indian dialect; and an Armenian transliteration of portions of the Society's Turkish version of the Book of Common Prayer.

Dr. Annot writes:—

"In your kindly appreciative notice of my 'Par Palimpsestorum Dublinensium' you remark of the fac-similes: 'If they are of Irish workmanship they prove plainly that we have no monopoly of artistic skill on our side of the Channel.' I am glad of the opportunity of stating that these 'exquisite fac-similes' were executed by Forster & Co., Dublin."

A curious collection of the popular songs of Styria has just been published at Graz by Herr A. Schlossar.

COUNT L. G. MANIN has presented to the Venetian Record Office a copy of the memoirs of L. Manin, the last Doge of Venice. They begin with the writer's accession to the Dogeship, so say the continental papers, and they go down to the year of his death, 1802.

It is said that the project is in contemplation of establishing an Anglo-Mohammedan college at Calcutta under the auspices of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

AMONGST other symptoms of greater laxity in the internal government of Russia, under the régime lately instituted by Count Melnikoff, may be mentioned the fact that several authorizations of new daily and weekly papers have just been accorded by the Minister of the Interior. M. Aksakoff, of Moscow, has obtained permission for a weekly review under the title of Russia, whilst among the daily papers will be the New Gazette, the Presser, and a Polish journal to be published in St. Petersburg. Attempts have been made before to establish Polish papers in the Russian capital, but none of them has been a success.

MESSERS. WHITTAKER & Co. have in preparation, to form one of their "Handy Volume Series," 'A Dictionary of English Proverbs,' by the author of 'A Handy Book of Common English Synonyms.'

THE Topographical Society will hold its first meeting on Thursday, the 28th inst., at four o'clock, the Lord Mayor in the chair, at the Mansion House.

'DOROTHY COMPTON: a Story of the '15,' giving details of Jacobite proceedings at that date, and 'The Path of the Just, or, the Christian's Pilgrimage to Glory,' by the Rev. R. Wilkes Gosse, will be published presently by Messrs. Kerby & Endean. They are also about to issue 'Radicalism, and its Effects on the English Constitution,' translated by Mr. Louis Oxley from the Journal des Débats.

A VOLUME of poems in Burns's handwriting has been presented to the Trustees of the Burns Monument at Ayr. It is a small quarto of fifty pages, and was given by the poet to Mrs. General Stewart of Afton in 1787.

THE lectures at Newnham College, Cambridge, this term include courses by four lady lecturers, Miss Crofts, Miss Merrifield, Miss Harland, and Miss Scott. M. Boquel intends to make vers libre translation into French from Lord Lytton's 'Caxtons' a prominent feature of his course. The lectures are now delivered in the North Hall of Newnham College.

SCIENCE

BOTANICAL BOOKS.

The Flora of Plymouth, &c. By T. R. Archer Briggs. With a Map. (Van Nostrand.)

THIS is a local Flora of the modern type, compiled after the fashion of the excellent 'Flora of Middlesex,' and, like it, prefaced by a short account of the topography, geology, and meteorological conditions of the district. We hope we are not too heretical in expressing an opinion that these details concerning the physical geography of the counties are likely to constitute the most permanently and generally useful part of these local Floras. It is of little moment to most readers whether Rubus Balfourianus, for instance, is the same as R. deltoideus, and whether both are equivalent to R. altheifolius. Such distinctions are very often of the nature of those relied on to divide a hair "twixt south and south west side." On the other hand, a careful study of the conditions, terrestrial and aerial, under which the plants of particular districts grow cannot fail to be of value not only to botanists proper, but also to farmers and gardeners. If our local botanists would now turn their attention to the causes which induce the variations they are so keen in copying, they would be rendering more valuable service than by merely recording the fact that a bramble which Mr. A. calls this, and Mr. B. calls that, while Mr. C. agrees with neither, is found in a particular district. In justice to Mr. Briggs, however, it should be stated that he does not confine himself to these minutiae, but that when occasion offers he inserts really interesting remarks on the structure and mode of life of the plants he is recording, and does not disdain to lighten his pages with a little folk-lore. From this point of view we may express our regret that the curious relation between the Celtic varieties of the common pear, as found in Brittany and in South-west England, and the Celtic legends relating to the Isle of Avalon, or apples, as pointed out by Dr. Phéné, was not alluded to. Devonshire botanists, and those of the adjacent counties, will, however, be under great obligations to Mr. Briggs for this carefully drawn-up book.

Familiar Wild Flowers. Second Series. By F. E. Hulme. (Cassell & Co.)

THIS, like its predecessor, is a series of prettily executed plates of common wild flowers, and as such is suitable as a drawing-room table book, but its value in promoting any real knowledge of botany is not great. If not much that is of value can be obtained from its pages, it is only fair to say that they do not contain much that will have to be unlearned. The work is, indeed, much more free from blunders and overights than is customary in similar publications.

British Wild Flowers by Natural Analysis, &c. By Frederick A. Mearns. (Bogus.)

BY means of a series of small illustrations, more or less arbitrary and conventional in design, and intended to be used in combination with the letter-press expressing the same facts in words, the author has produced a "complete series of illustrations of the natural orders and genera" of British plants "analytically arranged." The plan adopted is very ingenious and serviceable as a reminder to the student who has already made some progress, but to the beginner we should imagine it would prove rather embarrassing than otherwise. It is a difficult task to draw up such a scheme, and very difficult to obviate errors. Such errors, when they do occur in schemes of this kind, are more troublesome to eliminate and more mischievous in their consequences than under ordinary conditions. We think, for instance, at p. 19, the placing of the rose under the head "Polypetalous Inferior" is likely to prove a stumbling-block to the pupil, as also would the statement that the flowers of Ranunculaceae are blue or purple (p. 20). Why were yellow and red omitted? Again, it may be questioned whether any student with a flower of wild mignonette before him could ascertain its name from the diagram or the table referring to mignonette. The preparation of this book must have proved a laborious and troublesome task, and we imagine the author himself is the one who most of all will profit by it.

Anatomical and Physiological Atlas of Botany for Use in Schools and Colleges, &c. By Dr. Arnold Dodel Port and Carolina Dodel-Port. Text translated and edited by D. M'Alpine. (Johnston.)

ONE very great advantage accruing from the teaching of modern science is that the pupil is expected, as far as practicable, to rely on his own observations rather than on the statements of others. It is not enough nowadays to learn parrot-like that an alkali is neutralized by an acid, or vice versa, or even to have it demonstrated that such is the case; the pupil must prove it for himself. He must not pin his faith on the ipse dixit of the professor, nor give implicit credence to the statements of his textbook. These things are good enough in their way, and indeed indispensable; but their chief use is as a guide to the student in his endeavours to see everything that can be seen for himself and by himself. As a learned botanist has lately put it, it is not essential to the historical student that he should have been at the battle of Waterloo, but the student of any object of natural history must not deem his knowledge perfect unless he has, as the French say, "assisted at" its birth, watched its development, scrutinized its structure, studied its mechanism at rest and in action, observed the provision made for the reproduction and multiplication of the species, and, finally, been a spectator of its passage from living to inert matter. This, and nothing less than this, is the standard aimed at nowadays by all who would be deemed students—still more, professors—in natural history. The aim is high, and rarely indeed can it be completely attained. Circumstances which do not need to be detailed prevent the full realization of this ideal save in quite exceptional cases. The student has to approach the goal as nearly as circumstances will allow. The beautiful series of botanical diagrams published by Dr. Dodel-Port and his wife are good illustrations of the tendencies of modern botany. Not so very long ago the counting of stamens and pistils and very little else constituted botany. As for the study of fungi, that was rather looked down on than otherwise. It was at this period that Gilbert White's criticisms, so often quoted, were penned; and they were just in those days. Widely different, as we have already intimated, is the state of things now. The diagrams before us are not devoted merely to certain structural details, available as a means of classifying plants with more or less fidelity to nature, but they bring before us, so far as it is possible to do so, the whole biography of the particular plant represented, from the initial cell to the complete organism. They are fully abreast of modern discoveries and modern modes of thought. They form, in consequence, a valuable aid to the teacher of botany, and will be of great service to the student in his endeavour to see for himself that which is described in the text-books. In many cases, as has been said, circumstances render such personal investigation impossible; in other instances the reader may desire to get a general insight into the objects of botanical study, and the method and means of compassing it. For this purpose nothing can be better suited than these very truthfully executed diagrams. Each is complete in itself; so that by the aid of the accompanying handbook an intelligent student may obtain a very good idea of the scope of modern botany from the study of one, or at least of a few only, of these plates. Botanical teachers and students are under great obligations to Messrs. Johnston for placing them at the disposal of English pupils. Mr. M'Alpine's share in the work also deserves a word of commendation.

SOCIETIES.

ARISTOTELIAN.—Oct. 11.—Mr. E. H. Hodgson, President, in the chair.—The President delivered an opening address. After a few introductory remarks relative to the past and future work of the Society, the meaning of the term "philosophy" was defined as being the most complete rationale of the universe possible to man. The axioms and laws of any subject constitute its science; the explanation of the facts which lie at the root of the laws governing it, which connect that subject with higher or larger subjects, is its philosophy. The question as to whether philosophical truth is finite or infinite was then touched upon. In studying the history of the progress made towards a satisfactory rationale of the universe, i.e., the history of philosophy, it is important to note that there is a main high way which leads to the final aim, and that there are side ways. It is for the student to decide whether the work or theory before him is in the high way of philosophy, or is a subsidiary inquiry or a false start. The successive advances and retrogressions made in ancient philosophy, beginning with the Ionic school and ending with Neo-Platonism—the portion of the history of philosophy studied by the Society in its previous session—were then noticed, the grand result being the elaboration of a great philosophical system by Aristotle. The work of this great philosopher was then treated of, and its past and present influence upon the religions of mankind, more especially on Christianity, was indicated. The struggle between Gnosticism on the one hand and Christianity on the other, resulting in the victory of the latter, was depicted, the fusion of this latter theological philosophy with the Aristotelian system producing the great philosophical system known as Scholasticism, which still remains with us; the principal question about Scholasticism to be decided by the student being not whether it could claim to be a philosophy, but whether the rationale offered by it was a true and sufficient one. The influence of the Renaissance, the Reformation, and scientific progress upon philosophy was then mentioned, in the last case the scientific conception of relations taking the place of the scholastic conception of causes. The general difference between ancient and modern philosophy was shown to consist in the increased predominance of subjectivity in the latter, which asks what we know about things and what they appear to us as being, the former inquiring simply into what they are. This change of attitude turned men's attention to the analysis of the mind, its functions and modes of operations, giving rise to modern psychology. The importance of physiological psychology as an indispensable auxiliary of philosophy was insisted upon. The important work accomplished in philosophy by Kant was pointed out as a subject for much deliberation and discussion during the ensuing session. The philosophic systems of modern times then received passing notice. The study of philosophy was shown to be chiefly important for the light which it throws upon the state of philosophy itself at the present time, though it may also advantageously be studied from another point of view, that is, not so much in relation to its subject matter, philosophy, as by treating it as a portion of the general history of mankind. A third method is pursued by those who possess what they consider to be the true, final, and sufficient rationale of the universe, viewing the history of philosophy in relation to their own theory, as is the case with the Scholastics, Hegelians, and to some extent with the Comtists, the last, reading by means of the law of the three stages, not being so strictly dogmatic as either of the first two. The address concluded by dealing with the position of the Society with regard to these three methods of studying the history of philosophy by its adoption of the first plan of study.

MENTIONS FOR THE EXHIBITING WORK.

Win. Education Society.—The Aims of a Model School and the Principles on which its Methods should be Founded. Mr. C. H. Lake.
Third. Westminster.—
Pub. Great and Miraculous.—New Testament Aids found during the Year, Dr. M. C. Cooke.

Science Society.

THE public, who have long had the advantage of the learning and industry of Mr. R. H. Major as Keeper of the Department of Maps and Plans in the British Museum, will regret to learn that he has resigned his post and retired from the establishment altogether. Mr. Major entered the Museum January 10th, 1814, and was appointed to the keepership when that office was created in January, 1867. It is understood that he will have no successor, the Department of Maps and Plans being relegated to its former position as a branch of the Library of the Museum. By this arrangement a considerable portion of the salary attached to the suppressed office—£500 a year—will be saved.

THE secretaries of the Royal Society have once more advertised that applications for grants from the Government fund for the promotion of scientific research must be delivered at Burlington House before the 31st of December next. This announcement brings us to the fifth and last year of the experiment sanctioned by the Lords of the Treasury, and the question, by no means unimportant, arises, What next? Are the results such as will encourage my Lords to repeat the experiment, or do they show that the researches which led to those results might have safely been left to the ordinary course of human activity? Much has been, and more will be, said on both sides. It is admitted that the Treasury would never have asked Parliament to vote 20,000*l.* in five instalments for the furtherance of scientific investigation had they not been swayed by the constant assurances of a small section of the community that without stimulus science could not prosper, and that the duty of the ruling powers was to make it prosper. It is argued, on the other hand, that most of our scientific discoveries have been spontaneous, that it is best not to be in a hurry, and that a scientific man does not dignify his position by soliciting a grant of public money. With these differences of opinion it seems likely that the experiment will be given up at the end of the five years, or that it will be essentially modified. Meanwhile who is to appraise the results already obtained? We shall watch, not without anxiety, for the expected report.

THE next fasciculus of the Zeitschrift für Mathematik und Physik will contain, amongst other articles, an essay on Abraham Ibn Ezra as a mathematician, by Dr. M. Steinschneider.

It is interesting to note that the railway up Mount Vesuvius is lighted by fourteen of Siemens and Halske's electric lamps. The illumination of the crater and the sides of the volcano is, according to the Elektrotechnische Zeitung, grand in the extreme.

HERR PALISA, Director of the Observatory at Pola, has again discovered a small planet there, which will reckon as No. 219. It was found on September 30th, and was of the tenth magnitude. Numerous as have been the discoveries of this kind at Pola, they have been exceeded by those of Prof. C. H. F. Peters, at Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., whose list has again been increased by the discovery, on the night of Monday last, the 11th inst., of No. 230, which is stated to be of the ninth magnitude.

A CABLEGRAM has been received also from America, announcing the discovery of "a large comet" by Mr. Lewis Swift, at Rochester, N.Y., on Monday night, in R.A. 21° 30', N.P.D. 72°, with "motion slow, probably north-west."

M. LÖNNER communicated to the Académie des Sciences, at the Séance of the 13th of September, a note on 'Dragages Profonds exécutés dans le Lac de Tibériade (Syrie) en Mai, 1880.' He states that the lake is 212 metres below the level of the Mediterranean, and that its extreme depth is about 250 metres. The dredging operations yielded twelve species of fishes, some of them being new forms. No alga or conifers was found, the water being brackish and at a temperature of +24 C. The evidences of volcanic action were very satisfactorily established.

MR. R. L. J. ELLERY, the Government Astronomer at Melbourne, sends us the Monthly Records of Observations in Meteorology, Terrestrial Magnetism, &c., taken at the Melbourne

Observatory during the months of March and April in the current year. The mean of the barometer for March was 29.971 inches, for April 30.019 inches, the mean temperature of the air being in March 63° 8, in April 58° 7.

HARTWIG's comet is now not far from α Ophiuchi; it is receding from the earth and becoming rapidly fainter.

M. GOVI read before the Académie des Sciences on September 27th an interesting paper on the invention of the binocular telescope. It is commonly attributed to a Capuchin monk, Schyrleus de Rheita, who published an account of the instrument in 1645. M. Govi finds that M. Pairet, in the 'Bibliothèque Nationale,' describes a binocular made by a spectacle-maker in Paris, D. Chores, which he presented to the king in 1626.

MR. JAMES BLITT, of Edinburgh, has been elected to the chair of Natural Philosophy at Anderson's College, Glasgow.

H. RABINOWSKI, in Liebig's Annalen, publishes his experiments on the carbon compounds which exhibit phosphorescence. According to him, the phenomenon occurs with these compounds which combine in the presence of alkalis with ozone or active oxygen, or possibly in some cases with peroxides.

FINE ARTS.

THREE EXHIBIT WORKS, 'CHRIST LEAVING THE TABERNACLE,' 'CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM,' and 'THE RAZEN SERPENT' (the latter just completed), each 25 by 30 feet, with 'Dream of Philip's Wife,' picture of the Crucifixion, and 'The Crucifixion,' Messrs. W. & A. GALLERIE, 25, New Bond Street, Italy, Two to six.—3s.

THE PRIVATE COLLECTIONS OF ENGLAND.

No. LXXI.—NORTH PRIORY WATERFIELD: CHANTLEY HALL, BRISTOL.

WE shall now proceed to describe some highly meritorious architectural pictures which we observed at North. In the Drawing-Room is the 'Interior of a Cathedral,' by Steenwyck the Elder. It shows the entrance to the sacristy. A man with a torch lights the steps of an ecclesiastic and a lady in a yellow gown, green petticoat, and white veil. Behind is a gloomy vista of darkened architecture, and near the end two little figures appear; one of them carries a torch. Beyond these an arch crosses the way, as if it masked the entrance to the choir, being, in fact, a portion of the jube. Further back, light is distinguishable on the dim vaults, ribs, and smaller mouldings of the rich perspective. The effect, apart from the local colouring of the light, which is not truer than old masters usually made it to be, is really to be marvelled at for its truth; exquisite draughtsmanship is apparent everywhere, with the utmost finish and firmness of execution. The light of the nearer man's torch displays the pilasters, pillars, mortuary slabs and tiles of the foreground, and flickers on the bases, walls, and slender shafts. A lamp burns at the angle of an alley, and in a side chapel reveals a kneeling figure. This is a miracle of finish and delicate handling. On the whole, the subject reminds us of the interior of the cathedral at Antwerp, where we see the continuous impost of the arcade; the thin, ready character of the architecture of that building is observable also in the picture. The colour of the illumination is noteworthy; instead of being ruddy, as from artificial light, it is as chilly as moonlight. By Steenwyck the Younger is another 'Interior of a Church,' a very large work, giving a view looking into the choir from near the jube. The latter structure, with its statues of Christ, Mary, and St. John, is close to us. The pulpit, with a richly carved quasi-Gothic canopy, is against a pillar on our right. On our left is what may be a loft for watchers of the relics, or a chapel, to which access is given by means of a wide flight of stairs. Most of the architecture in front is of a rich Geometrical character and highly ornate, with abundance of statuary and tabernacle work. There are figures in the choir; other figures are walking about in the foreground. This is a very fine example, remarkable for the force and richness of its effect. The colour of the stonework is somewhat cold, the treatment of the architecture is hard; the shadows, though clear in painting and rich in tones, are cold. To Peter Neefs we owe another 'Interior of a Cathedral,' the vista of Gothic architecture, marked by the continuous impost of the arcades of the nave, the presence of the rood and its supports, which are of the late Renaissance style. A wooden confessional is on our left. The picture is a large but not very fine example of its class.

By that rarely represented painter A. Brauwer is an interesting work, called 'A Dance of Boors.' One of the most important instances in this country, it is full of grotesqueness and spirit. The four figures are most animated in their actions and expressions. One, on our left, sits and plays on a fiddle, with a monkey-like laugh which is curiously idiosyncratic and suggests portraiture. On a tub near this man lie his pipe, tobacco box, and beer glass. The other figures are behind in a group on our right; one lolls back, blowing tobacco smoke from his mouth, while sitting and caressing his knee. Another boor stands with a beer glass in his hand and talks to his comrade, who lights his pipe with a coal. A superbly painted gris de Flandre jug occupies the middle of the foreground of the picture; its draughtsmanship is marked by exquisite precision of touch and richness of local colour, light and shade. The interior of the cabaret itself is noteworthy for that partial excess of blackness in the shadows and that clearness of the illumination which distinguish the works of Brauwer. His various studies in character and extraordinary feeling for humour are not wanting here. The same painter produced a smaller picture, called 'The Dentist.' A rustic patient is seated in a chair, and is leaning his head back, while the operator grasps the chin of his victim, and, standing over him, puts in his mouth a fearful instrument of ancient dentistry. An old woman, wife of the patient, grasps his arm, and looks with eager sympathy at him; a boy stands behind the chair; another boy is in front. This is an acceptable, but not an important, specimen of the master; it lacks the rich tones and lustre, the fine softness of his works, but it is redeemed by the humour of the design; the execution somewhat resembles that of Teniers. A third Brauwer (!) shows men drinking and smoking in a cabaret. It is inferior in all respects to the above.

The following pictures belong, by their subjects, to another category of art. We do not know to whom to attribute a painting of game and meat lying on a table in a hall or large apartment. A large deerhound is on our left, looking at the meat. The colouring of this work is rather raw, but the whole has much finish and solidity. A fine upright flower piece reminds us of one of the better productions of Spandouck. It exhibits roses, yellow, white, and red, and is painted with good colouring and in a rich manner of handling and a bold effect. It hangs too high to allow us to form a positive opinion of its authorship. 'Dead Game' comprises snipes, a hawk, pole, with the jesses and hoods of hawks, a flask, tobacco pipe, and gun. It is signed "D. Valkenberg," and has a landscape background of great merit. It was painted throughout with much mastery, frankness, and firmness, in a solid impasto, with beautiful drawing. We admire the wings of a bird lying on its back in front. The distance of this picture has blackened injuriously. It was at Leeds in 1868, No. 772. By De Heem is a beautiful example of consummate brush power, displaying, with a most deliciously "juicy" texture and sound impasto, a oasket and other objects, including a drinking glass, dinner cup, and a covered glass vase, which is fluted and wonderfully transparent. In finish this picture almost equals a Deagoffe, in style it is far finer. It was No. 593 at Leeds. Here is a curious work by J. Van Kessel. It shows flowers disposed at the sides of a cartouche of stone, which stands on a pedestal of the same material, and sustains in the centre a mass of sea-shells in a pendent festoon, combined with flowers and tied with a blue ribbon. About the flowers appear butterflies and other insects, such as grasshoppers, beetles, moths, dragon flies, and caterpillars. The signature, "Jean Van Kessel fecit 1670," is an arrangement of snakes and caterpillars, and it is a specimen of the vagaries of this able, laborious, and most skilful artist. The creatures, being set up erect or curling, form the letters of the inscription. This picture is by no means pleasing and yet most interesting, for it displays the artist's wonderful finish, untiring studies of insects and flowers, his exquisite powers of drawing, and an extraordinary and searching manner of modelling the subjects of his pencil. His brilliant colouring does not charm us so much as it might do if his painted stonework had not so hard a surface, and were not so deficient in local truth and dull in tint.

The name of Murillo is given to one of several pictures of landscapes with figures. It comprises several figures using a fishing net. All the pictures are unfortunately hung, so that no thorough examination of them is practicable. But, although slightly painted, they look silvery, their tones are rich, and there is a great deal of force and good, vigorous colouring. With this Spanish group let us rank a French picture, the work of one of the Le Nains, and showing a woman washing linen, and peasants watching an itinerant musician and tumbler. The last group is not equal to the rest, but the picture, as a whole, is first-rate of its kind.

In one of the rooms of this house is a striking series of painted tapestries, representing on a large scale Teniers-subjects with ample spirit. These specimens of an almost forgotten branch of decorative art are in remarkably fine preservation.

We have now to give an account of a small collection of pictures at Grantley Hall, near Ripon, formed, we believe, by the first Lord Grantley, better known in history as Sir Fletcher Norton, a distinguished lawyer, politician, Attorney-General, and Speaker of the House of Commons. A considerable library of law books and other documents and personal relics of this peer remain at Grantley, nearly as he left them ninety years ago. There is a portrait of Lord Grantley by Sir William Beechey, R.A., whose second daughter married the third Lord Grantley. It is a good official picture, representing the Speaker in his robes of state and in profile to our left; it was No. 638 in the National Portrait Exhibition of 1867.

One of the most interesting pictures here is a very large but much-injured version of Rubens's 'Wise Men's Offering.' It has been torn, and has also been damaged by injudicious reparation; yet it still retains some sumptuous colouring and wealth of tones. The Virgin, a young Fleming, sits in the centre towards our right, and holds the Child upon her knee. He smiles on a kneeling king, and extends his right hand in benediction, while he stretches his left hand towards the gift, a golden goblet filled with coins. The king's mantle is of crimson brocade of Flemish work, and falls in ample folds on his shoulders—a noble piece of colouring, which is conspicuous in the design, and as such supported by surrounding tints of great splendour. It is borne on our extreme left of the composition by three little pages, in one of whom we recognize the fair-haired child of the famous 'Peace and War,' which is in the National Gallery. The king has placed his turban, which has a bird for a plume, on the ground in front of the picture, where it receives ample light, and balances the figure of another little boy, a page to a second monarch, who brings myrrh in a tall gold vase, and wears a red robe trimmed with fur. He advances on our right, and leans over to speak to an attendant, who is at the edge of the picture on that side with other figures, including that of Joseph, which fill this portion of the canvas. Behind the kneeling king stands the lofty and stately figure of a black monarch, wearing a plumed turban, and holding a huge jewelled nautilus shell, mounted in gold and charged with his gift. His robe, a deep sea-green, is girt by a scarf of crimson, blue, and white, and worn under an ample black mantle, richly embroidered at the hem.

Another large picture, by an artist whose name is not known to us, represents the 'Good Samaritan.' It is an excellent and effective design, comprising, among other noteworthy technical achievements, a most elaborately foreshortened figure of the sick man, lying in front of the canvas. The soiled soles of his feet have been drawn and painted with extraordinary felicity and power, and are the most prominent objects in the picture. We do not remember a more successful or difficult example of its kind. The Samaritan, in a huge white turban, stoops over the poor man, and with great deliberation administers a cordial to him. The colour of the picture is crude and cold. Near this is a very fine old copy of the Van Dyck at Turin which represents the children of Charles I., with the two lapdogs on each side in front. All the children stand; the bigger boy lolls on our left, wears an amber satin dress, and extends one hand to the younger child, who clasps it with both its little dimpled fists. By Van Dyck is a picture comprising life-size, whole-length portraits of Charles I. and his queen, two children, and a page holding a bay horse behind the king, who, except his head, is in full armour. He stands on our right of the centre, near the queen, who is about either to place a wreath on his head, or twine the "meed of mighty conquerors" upon his sword-hilt and belt. We cannot say which of these actions is intended. The future Charles II., a boy of about eight years old, wears a deep amber or orange flame-coloured satin dress, and holds a dog in his arms. At the queen's left knee, dressed in crimson laced with silver, and coiffed as children of that day were accustomed to be, is the other child, holding a ball or apple, and of about five years of age. The queen wears her bluish sea-green silk dress, as in other Van Dycks to which we have recently referred, and it is decorated on the front with seraphs of gold, or human-headed doves with wings displayed, their bodies being large gems. These ornaments occur in several portraits of Henrietta Maria, as at Wentworth Woodhouse, the seat of Earl Fitzwilliam, lately described in these columns, with the number 36 from the Wentworth Catalogue. Charles I. looks about thirty-five years of age; his hair is full and flowing, his skin is ruddy, his face unwrinkled. The queen's face, already marked with coldness and a hard, shallow expression, retains much of its youthfulness. On her neck is her well-known carcanet of large pearls. Her coiffure is that usual at this period of her life, and comprises little rings of hair laid closely on her cheeks and forehead. The same coloured dress and the same coiffure occur in her Majesty's portrait at Mulgrave Castle, described in No. XXXVI. of this series of papers, where we see our remarks on the dresses, jewels, and other characteristics of these Van Dycks, the attitudes of which, to say nothing of the accompaniments, differ from each other. The faces of the king and queen at Grantley Hall have been injured or are extremely dirty, but the picture is, on the whole, in fine condition. The scheme of colour is most luminous and fine, and extremely rich in the tones of the armour of Charles and his wife's dress. The children are charming. The picture, like so many Van Dycks, is defective in design, a shortcoming from which some of the master's most wonderfully painted portraits are by no means free. The figures are quite unconscious of each other's presence, and seem to pose themselves severally for our attention; no common motive rules the work and gives to it the charm of a subject. Not far from the last are two anonymous seventeenth century pictures of considerable value in their way, and possessing technical merit. The subjects are 'Joseph and Potiphar's Wife' and 'Ammon and Tamar.'

A large picture of Dutch origin, representing the interior of a church, deserves attentive examination. The church is flecked with sunlight and dashed with black shadows. The view is given across the jube to a chapel, from transept to transept; the architecture is of the Jesuit order, and loaded with baroque decorations. Through an open doorway we have a glimpse of a parlour or vestry. Notwithstanding the black, opaque, and somewhat dull qualities of the shadows as they now exist, there is great wealth of tone and much good local colour in this work, of which the half tints are mellow and lustrous.

We noticed a curious German picture, probably dating from early in the sixteenth century, representing Susanna and the Elders. The figures are life size—that of the woman is nearly naked to the hips, being in front view; the Elders are close to the lady, while, with outstretched finger, one of them approaches her, and she, with a seductive air, turns sideways and uncovers her bosom, as if pretending to look in a glass before the picture, without noticing the Elders. The execution is hard, smooth, and finished to an ivory-like texture; the draperies are drawn with extreme definition of the forms; the modelling is sharp; and the local colour is bright. The queer coquetry of the woman has its amusing side, and masks the simplicity of the designer. Near this is a fine old English portrait of a gentleman of the Norton family, painted in the manner which is often ascribed to Holbein, but is really by no means without traces of Italian influences, probably derived from Girolamo da Treviso or Zucchero. This work is inscribed "Anno 1556 ætatis ævæ 68." An early Rhinish picture deserves our attention, and comprises representations of many subjects connected with the infancy of Christ. The Infant appears in the centre on the knees of the Virgin, and she offers him the symbolic apple of the legend, and he extends both his hands to receive the fruit. Above this group is St. Anne (i), reading from a large book and enthroned in a shrine or tabernacle, the architectonic character of which is curious as reproducing the style of the wood carvings of the Middle Rhine country. Attached to the tabernacle is a red curtain, which is held open by two angels with brilliant parti-coloured wings. Again seated on the Virgin's knees is Christ, to whom a kneeling angel offers grapes, the symbols of the soul. The Virgin holds a fig, which Christ had previously accepted. Seated on the lap of a buxom lady in a white dress, and reading from a book on her knee, is a little St. John, with his appropriate dragon and chalice. Besides these figures there are numerous other representations of saints and children. The costumes are German, and date from the end of the fifteenth century. The treatment of this curious picture is that of a miniature of extreme finish, the execution being very careful, and all the details well studied. The mode of painting is searching. The last example we shall notice here is a Hoppner, being a capital portrait of a gentleman, one of the Norton family, seated in a chair with his hands joined, the face full of character and energy. The painter's reddish carnations are sustained by the red curtain and leather covering of the dais, which together produce a fine mass of rich tones and strong colouring.

Art-3rd Geny.

TWO Institute of Architects has just published a tract containing 'Notices of Deceased Members,' a collection of brief and concise biographies of eminent home and foreign members of the society who have died lately. The subjects were men of note; their histories are likely to be useful, therefore we give the names of the more important among them, which are the following: the Marquis Salvatico P. Estense, Messrs. E. M. Barry, J. P. Cluysenaar, Pascal Coste, J. Louis Duc (the architect of the Palais de Justice, the Colonne de Juillet, the Cour de Cassation, and other admirable works in Paris), B. Ferrey, J. H. Strack, E. Viollet-le-Duc, and T. H. Wyatt.

M. E. MUNTZ reports to the Chronique des Arts the approaching publication in Il Raffaello of an inedited document in which Raphael had part. It is a contract to pay money to divers persons of Montefalcione, dated Oct. 11th, 1507. It is said to throw light on the whereabouts of the master at the period, and his relations with his parents and the court of the Duke of Urbino, matters which until now have been somewhat obscure.

Our readers may like to be reminded that the Print Room, British Museum, contains a large collection of proofs, in various states, from the plates produced by the late Jules Jacquemart for his father's 'Histoire de la Porcelaine,' and a smaller number of similar works by him. These impressions fill three large folio volumes, and were selected by the artist, who sold them, with many autographic notes, to the Museum in 1871. He brought the collection to the Print Room in the preceding year. Our readers are aware that he executed a considerable number of plates, impressions from which, in the "commercial" state, were published in the Gazette des Beaux-Arts. Of these one of the finest represents a tripod, by Gouthière, of chiselled brass, which is in the collection of Sir R. Wallace (see vol. xx. p. 132).

AN art exhibition has been opened at Leek, Staffordshire, in aid of the funds of the Art School in that town. Pictures, &c., have been lent to the value of 40,000. Amongst the artists represented are Constable, Etty, Gainsborough, Hogarth, Leslie, Mulready, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Turner, Vernet, Wilson, and David Cox. Altogether there are nearly 500 pictures and other works on view, including 96 water-colour drawings, illustrating the rise and progress of the art in England from 1710, and 37 drawings for the Arundel Society.

THE Trustees of the British Museum have agreed to the appointment, as a first-class assistant in Mr. Franks's Department of Antiquities, of Mr. Reed, who has been for a long time in serviceable but unofficial connexion with the British Museum under Mr. Franks.

SIR MADAVA RAO has invited Mr. Nettleship to the Gaekwar's court to paint the animals which are displayed in the sports of the arena at Baroda. Long ago the natives of India were able to paint pictures at once truthful and noble, but the bigotry of their Mohammedan conquerors led to the extinction of the art.

THERE are two candidates for the Disney Professorship of Archaeology, which is now vacant: Mr. Percy Gardner, of the British Museum, late Fellow of Christ's College, and the Rev. S. Lewis, Fellow of Corpus Christi College.

THE remonstrances addressed in these columns, and by the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings, to the authorities of Southampton appear not to have saved the old Bargate of that town from being made ridiculous. The Building News says that protests were made at a recent meeting of the authorities, and the committee was asked to reconsider the matter before having the gaunts and the shields repainted. The mayor replied that the question had already been decided. As to there would be no vandalism, for being judiciously touched up, and... tone down and look all right. The gaunts were a different matter altogether—they had been taken away. He considered the appearance of the Bar had been improved by their removal, and they would not be replaced without an order of the Council. An alderman complained that whereas the original resolution had referred equally to the renovation of the shields and gaunts, yet the mayor had implied that the former would be restored and replaced, and that the latter would not. Confusion of ideas as to the nature of an historical monument and of a work of art is but too evident here. Whether the Bargate looks the better for the removal of some of its leading decorations and the "touching up" of others is not the question.

CINCINNATI will shortly have an art museum. Mr. C. W. West, one of the wealthy merchants of that city, having headed a subscription for that purpose with the munificent sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

THE Italians are still busy erecting monuments. One to Antonio Allegri is to be "inaugurated" at Correggio in a few days, and the people of Luino are talking of paying a similar honour to Bernardino Luini.

IN spite of the distress in Constantinople an exhibition of paintings has once more been attempted. The exhibitors were few, mostly Armenians, Greeks, and Levantines. The Turks were two: the Princess Nazli Hanum, the accomplished daughter of an accomplished mother, and Ahmed Bey, who, having studied in Paris, paints history and landscape under the patronage of the Sultan. One of his recent works was 'The Tomb of Sultan Mahmoud.'

ON the 21st and 22nd inst. will be sold the collection of ivories, porcelain, faience of various kinds, goldsmiths' work, books, and bronzes, the property of the late Baroness van Utenhove van Heemstede, of Groenendaal, Jutpha, near Utrecht, Holland. The sale is appointed to take place at Utrecht.

MR. JOSEPH ANDERSON has recommenced at Edinburgh his Rhind Lectures on archaeology. He is still dealing with 'Scotland in Early Christian Times,' and the first lecture of the new series was devoted to 'Decorative Metal-work.' His other topics are 'Decorative Stone-work,' 'The Art of the Monuments,' 'The Symbolism of the Monuments,' and 'Inscribed Monuments.'

THE bulk of the articles shown at the Native Industrial Exhibition of Indian Art, held at Simla this year, are contributed by the makers. The exhibition thus affords an opportunity of gauging the present condition of modern Indian fine art. Many objects are, however, contributed by private owners, amongst others some fine specimens of ancient plastic art, terra-cotta friezes and figures, from 1,000 to 1,500 years old, and coloured architectural tiles, the property of General Cunningham. There are also some handsome pieces of porcelain, made by the Chinese from Indian models for the Emperors Akbar, Jehangir, Shahjahan, &c.

A SCHOOL of art has just been opened at Burnley. Upwards of one hundred and forty names are already enrolled on the student list.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

LEEDS.—Triennial Musical Festival.
CRYSTAL PALACE CONCERT.—Raff's Ninth Symphony.

A PERIOD of but six years has elapsed since the first of the Leeds triennial musical festivals was held, but already the institution has taken firm root, and is regarded by musicians as one of the most valuable of provincial gatherings. Indeed, it may be said with fairness that the conduct of the undertaking has been such as to inspire general confidence, the vigour of youth being associated to a considerable extent with the wisdom which age and experience are alone expected to furnish. One or two errors were committed in previous years with reference to the selection of works for performance, but the scheme of the present festival, of which a synopsis was given in last week's Athenæum, does not contain a single item to which the most exacting critic could take objection. The absence of Handel's 'Messiah' from the festival of 1877 gave rise to considerable comment at the time; but again the oratorio is excluded, the reason being that performances of it are so frequent in Leeds and neighbouring Yorkshire towns that on an occasion of special importance it may fitly make way for works which at ordinary seasons there is no possibility of hearing. The wisdom of this policy is unimpeachable, and it would be well for the promoters of other festivals to lay it to heart. The Leeds Committee has shown itself determined to avoid the reproach of neglecting the claims of English music, an unusually large proportion of the programmes, including the whole of the novelties, consisting of native productions. Not a little boldness was needed to carry this laudable principle of encouragement to English art to the extent of placing the direction of the festival in the hands of an English musician. Mr. Arthur Sullivan is universally admired and respected as a composer, but it is doing him no injustice to say that his claims as a conductor have not hitherto met with appreciable recognition, perhaps for the want of legitimate opportunities for testing them.

It is the custom at all other provincial festivals to allow but one day for general rehearsals, the result being that the more difficult works are frequently but insufficiently prepared, and the executive forces are fatigued before the first performance. At Leeds a wholesome innovation was made in the festival of 1874, two days being set apart for rehearsal, and this plan has worked so well that it is not likely to be abrogated. But, as a consequence, the festival does not commence until Wednesday morning, and we are therefore compelled to defer our criticism on six out of the seven performances. Some general remarks may, however, be made, the fruit of observation at the rehearsals. Perhaps the most prominent feature in the meetings of 1874 and 1877 was the wonderfully fine singing of the chorus. It may be said at once that the present choir is equal, if not superior, in quality to those of past years. Mr. James Broughton, the chorus-master, may again receive the heartiest congratulations, as well on the splendid material he has had to work upon as on his own admirable training. The tenors are slightly inferior to the other contingents, showing a relative weakness in the upper notes; but the sopranos are remarkable not only for power and clearness, but for their excellent attack, and the body of tone from the basses is almost overpoweringly grand. In the orchestra we miss several familiar faces, both among the strings and wind, but its general quality is magnificent.

Paramount attention on Monday and Tuesday was of course given to the works composed expressly for the festival. Mr. J. F. Barnett and Mr. Arthur Sullivan are not novices in composition, and in requesting them to contribute to the scheme the committee were well aware that they would secure works, if not of commanding greatness and originality, at least worthy to be associated with a musical gathering of first-class importance. It is worthy of note, as indicating an increase of caution and carefulness in the selection of words for musical treatment, that both composers have selected themes already before them in preference to placing themselves in the hands of librettists, whose mercies are not always great. Longfellow's 'The Building of the Ship' was not written for music, and it is therefore not surprising that a stanza here and there presents difficulties and incongruities not easy to be surmounted. But, speaking generally, the lines flow smoothly and pleasantly enough, and if the ideas rarely rise to the height of poetry, they are sufficiently varied to enable the composer to avoid monotony in his setting. Mr. Barnett has taken the piece mostly as it stands, some slight excisions and transpositions being allowed for. Our final opinion of the music must be reserved for the present, but this much may be said without rashness, that it will compare favourably with any of the works he has produced since his first conspicuous success in 'The Ancient Mariner.' There is the less cause for hesitation in making this assertion as Mr. Barnett writes with the utmost lucidity, content, apparently, to walk in well-trodden paths, so that his music makes no inordinate demands on the attention of the listener, but may be grasped in its fullest meaning without much effort. The modern theories of a poetic significance in the instrumental themes, and of continuity by means of frequent recurrence of phrases and melodic figures in the vocal parts, are utilized to a limited extent. Mr. Barnett gives an explanation of the opening and close of his work, and it will be as well to quote his words: "The andante with which the instrumental introduction opens is intended to illustrate sunrise on the seashore, with the breath of the morn and the soft sea air. This leads to a cantabile melody in x minor, suggestive of the aspirations of the youth to the hand of the master's daughter. Then the air is filled with the sounds of workmen in the shipyard commencing their morning's toil, described by the allegro moderato, during which, from time to time, can be heard the love-song of the youth whilst directing the labours of the men and carrying out the plans of the master." Again, at the end, he tells us that "the scene of a multitude witnessing a vessel leaving the shore is musically illustrated. The instrumental symphony preceding the chorus describes the vessel receding from the land, whilst the sailors' 'Heave ho!' as the ship gets under weigh, is imitated by notes of the horn.....The vessel now is gradually fading out of sight on the horizon, when the impressive words of the pastor recur to the people, who with one accord join in the melody,—

Like unto ships far out at sea
Outward or homeward bound are we."

It was understood that Mr. Arthur Sullivan had chosen the Scriptural story of David and Jonathan as the foundation for an oratorio, but the design was abandoned, and he has followed the example of several living composers in taking a subject from the traditions of the early Christian Church. To Sir Julius Benedict's 'St. Cecilia,' Mr. William Carter's 'Placida,' and Madame Sainton-Dolby's 'Legend of St. Dorothea' must now be added Mr. Sullivan's 'The Martyr of Antioch.' These stories differ but little from one another in all essentials. In each it is a young girl who professes her readiness to die for her faith, being deaf alike to threats from her pagan foes and entreaties from parent, lover, or friends. Mr. Sullivan showed no ordinary boldness in attacking Dean Milman's so-called poem, which for its generally confused style and extraordinary verbosity has surely but few equals. But out of most unpromising material he has evolved a work of much interest and melodic beauty, the extreme simplicity of the vocal part-writing being atoned for by orchestration of exceeding richness and variety. There remains to be mentioned Mr. Thomas Wingham's new concert overture, but of this it was impossible to form any opinion at rehearsal.

It will not be requisite to devote much space to the performance of 'Elijah,' with which the festival opened on Wednesday morning. It is good policy to commence with a work which, being familiar to all, is certain to go tolerably well, and thus create a favourable impression at the outset; but criticism in detail is for the same reason not required. There was much to admire in this rendering of the most popular of modern oratorios, though it was imperfect in some respects. Nothing could exceed the effect of some of the choruses, the choir showing no trace of fatigue after the long and wearying rehearsals, save that in the early number, "Lord, bow Thine ear to our prayer," the altos and basses commenced flat, to the detriment of the solo voices on their first entry. If the precision which we are accustomed to associate with Sir Michael Costa's conducting was sometimes wanting, on the other hand there was an unwonted delicacy in the piano passages for which Mr. Arthur Sullivan may take credit. Regarding the soloists, those who gave the most satisfaction were Mesdames Albani, Trebelli, and Patey. Mrs. Osgood sang like an artist, as she always does, but she was overweighted in the widow scene, which was also marred by an unreasonably slow tempo. Mr. Frederic King in the title rôle was severely tried by ever-recurring memories of Mr. Santley, but it would be unfair not to give him due credit for what was, on the whole, a very artistic and commendable performance. Dramatic power Mr. King has not as yet, but he possesses great intelligence and a rapidly improving voice. He will do better with further experience. Mr. Maas should be peremptorily informed that Mendelssohn's music must be sung without alteration. Whatever good effect he might have created was marred at the outset by a silly addition to the text in "If with all your hearts." The remainder of what, at the time of writing, promises to be a highly successful festival must be reserved for consideration next week.

In most unfavourable weather the new series of winter concerts at the Crystal Palace was inaugurated last Saturday afternoon. Being desirous, as it would seem, to signalize the first concert by the production of an important novelty, Mr. Manns selected Raff's last published symphony—No. 9, in a minor—for the post of honour. It will be remembered that the same composer's eighth symphony ('Frühlingeklänge,' in a major) was produced at Sydenham last November, and noticed in some detail in these columns (Athen. No. 2717). We remarked then on the very decided falling off shown by that work as compared with the best of Raff's earlier symphonies. We cannot find any improvement in the composer's ninth effort in this style, and are quite unable to agree with the remark of the enthusiastic annotator of the book of the words, that it "certainly is inferior to none of its eight predecessors for ingenuity, fluency, and effect." The ingenuity we admit at once; in contrapuntal skill Raff has no living superior, and few equals; and if the wearisome pouring forth of a string of phrases, which when they are not ugly are too often commonplace, deserve to be called fluency, we are willing to grant that also. But on the question of effect we join issue at once. In this respect the new work will not compare for a moment with either the 'Im Walde' (No. 3) or the 'Lenore' (No. 5), to say nothing of the really charming little Symphony in a minor. The present symphony is entitled 'In the Summer-time,' and as the eighth was a 'Spring' Symphony, we presume that the composer probably intends to illustrate autumn and winter in his Nos 10 and 11. If such is the case we trust Mr. Manns will mercifully spare us the necessity of hearing them at the Crystal Palace, unless they should be very far superior to Raff's recent productions. It is difficult to imagine what could have induced the conductor to bring this very tedious and laboured work forward at all, unless it were the mere fact of its being a novelty, and the fear that somebody else would forestall him in its production. On this point he might probably have been quite at his ease; for we doubt if anybody else would have taken the necessary trouble with such uninteresting music. We do not deny the merit, or even the beauty, of certain isolated passages, especially in the second and third movements, but these do not compensate for or condone the diffuseness, dryness, and frequent vulgarity of other portions. The plain truth is that Herr Raff writes a great deal too much for his reputation; and his later compositions have been (so far as we have seen or heard them) so inferior to his earlier ones that it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that he has written himself out. If Mr. Manns wishes to produce a novelty by Raff which is really worth hearing, let him perform the Second Symphony, in a major, Op. 140—a very fine work, which, we believe, has never yet been heard in this country. It is only fair to add that the performance on Saturday was magnificent throughout, a triumph alike for conductor and orchestra.

The remainder of the concert was far more satisfactory. The overture to 'Euryanthe' and the 'Walküre-ritt' are both familiar to musicians, and a mere record of their performance will suffice. Madame Montigny-Rémaury gave an excellent performance of Schumann's Concertstück in c, Op. 92; and Mrs. Osgood, who was in excellent voice, sang a song from Gounod's 'Reine de Saba' and Thomas's 'Connaissance du pays' from 'Mignon' admirably.

Musical Essay.

THE winter season of Italian opera at Her Majesty's Theatre will commence on Monday next. The arrangements for the opening week are announced as follows. Monday, 'Faust,' debut of Mdlles. Elsa Widmar and Morini; Tuesday, 'La Favorita,' with Madame Trebelli as Leonora, and the first appearance of Signor Cantoni as Fernando; Wednesday, 'La Sonnambula,' debut of Mdlle. Giulia Bressolles; Thursday, 'Lucrezia Borgia,' with Madame Giovannoni Zaccchi as Lucrezia; Friday, 'Carmen,' with Madame Trebelli; and Saturday, 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' in which Mdlle. Rosina Lador will make her first appearance.

THE second of Mr. George Ramey's orchestral concerts for the present season was given at the Colston Hall, Bristol, on the 4th inst., when Mendelssohn's 'Italian Symphony,' Rombert's 'Toy Symphony,' and the overtures to 'Euryanthe' and 'Le Domino Noir' were the principal works performed. Miss Spencer Jones and Mr. J. T. Hutchinson were the soloists.

THE first of Mr. Stephen S. Stratton's chamber concerts for the present season was given at the Masonic Hall, Birmingham, last Tuesday week. The programme included Scharwenka's Piano Quartet in c, Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 78, Omslow's Quintet in c, No. 13, and Schumann's Pianoforte Quintet. Such a selection needs no praise from us; of the performance, which was sustained entirely by local artists, the Birmingham press speaks in high terms. We are glad to learn that Mr. Stratton's efforts in behalf of good music are meeting with the support which they so richly deserve.

A new opera in three acts, 'Le Beau Nicolas,' text by MM. Vanloo and Leterrier, music by M. P. Lacombe, was produced on the 8th inst. at the Théâtre des Folies Dramatiques, Paris. In the current number of the Revue et Gazette Musicale, M. Henri Lavoix fils speaks favourably of the music, but severely criticizes the performance, concluding his notice by saying that never was the term "execution" more truly applied to an opera.

M. PARDELOUP intends during the coming series of his concerts, which commences tomorrow, to give special attention to modern symphonic works. The Russian school will be represented by Glinka, Dargomysky, Rubinstein, Séroff, Tchaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, &c.; the Italian by Verdi, Boito, Ponchielli, &c.; and modern Germany by Wagner, Brahms, Raff, and Goldmark. Besides this a series of works by French composers, from Lulli down to the present time, is to be given in chronological order.

AT the Châtelet Concerts M. Colonne will produce new works by MM. Saint-Saëns ('Suite Algérienne'), Lalo (a violin concerto), and A. Godard (a piano concerto), besides M. Duvernoy's prize composition 'La Tempête,' and a revival of Berlioz's 'L'Enfance du Christ.'

IT is announced that the late Jacques Offenbach's last opera, 'Les Contes d'Hoffmann,' which is already in rehearsal at the Opéra Comique, Paris, is to be produced at that house during the winter. The orchestration, which was all but completed, will receive the finishing touches, it is said, from M. Guiraud. The work is spoken of by those who know it as being far in advance of the composer's usual style.

THE Musikalisches Wochenblatt states that Johannes Brahms has during the summer composed, among other things, two overtures and two piano trios.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEE AND MANAGER, MR. HENRY IRVING.
'THE CORNWALL BROTHERS' Every Night at 8.30. LOUIS and FABIAN DE FRANCHI. MR. IRVING AT 1.30. REYOUNES by A. W. PLACER. Doors open at 7. MORNING PERFORMANCES at THE CORNWALL BROTHERS, SATURDAYS, October 18th, 25th and 29th at 1.30.
Box Office (Mr. Irving) open 10 to 6. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE WEEK.

CORSET.—'Mary Stuart,' a Play in Five Acts. Adapted from Schiller by the Hon. Lewis Wingfield.
ST. JAMES'S.—'William and Susan,' a Play in Three Acts. Founded by W. O. Wills upon Douglas Jerrold's Nautical Drama of 'Black-Eyed Susan.'
BADLER'S WALLS.—'William Tell,' a Play by Maximilian Krasnik, reduced from Five into Four Acts.

AMONG the characters which form, almost of necessity, a portion of the repertory of a tragic artist has to be counted Mary Stuart. A veritable touchstone of capacity, its application seems necessary before a reputation can be said to be won. The experiment once past, however, it is seldom repeated. There are few actresses with whose fame Mary Stuart is associated in the same manner in which Phèdre is associated with the fame of Rachel, Lady Macbeth with that of Mrs. Siddons, Marie Antoinette with that of Signora Ristori, and Juliet with that of Miss Neilson. Of the four artists we have named two only have essayed the rôle. Rachel as Mary Stuart obtained nothing more than a succès d'estime, and Signora Ristori has now almost ceased to assume it. Mrs. Siddons achieved a moderate success as the Queen of Scots, but the play in which she appeared was an original work of the Hon. John St. John, a dramatist now wholly forgotten. Schiller's play was first seen in London on the 14th of December, 1819, with Miss Macauley, an actress of whom little has subsequently been heard, as the heroine. Her success must have been indifferent, since on the 29th of the same month the character was assigned to Miss Foote, subsequently Lady Harrington. In this version, assumably that of Melish, a friend of Schiller, who is said to have lent him the prompt copy before it was printed, Mrs. Buan was Queen Elizabeth, C. Kemble Sir Edward Mortimer, Terry Sir Amias Paulet, and Macready, who, however, forgets to mention the part in his diary, the Earl of Leicester.

THE cause why the play has been so little of a favourite is found in its construction. It contains but two really strong situations: one, due to a deliberate if pardonable departure from history, in which Elizabeth and Mary are represented as meeting at Fotheringhay; a second, which in this country is always omitted in representation, wherein Mary before her death receives the sacraments from Melvil, who tells her he is a priest and brings forth the wine and the wafer. Whatever merit the remainder possesses consists in the clever if fanciful sketch of history which is supplied, and is anything rather than dramatic.

IN subjecting this play to alteration and revision Madame Modjeska has been well advised. The changes that have been made by Mr. Wingfield are in the main judicious. Their effect is, with little if any violence to the story, to quicken greatly the action and strengthen somewhat the interest. In the early scenes Mr. Wingfield mainly aimed at compression. He has sought to humanize the character of Elizabeth and to lighten somewhat the treachery of Leicester. To the bickerings and feuds between Burleigh and Leicester on the one hand and the same shrewd statesman and Shrewsbury on the other, he has, for the purpose of alleviating the gloom, given more prominence, and he has, perhaps for the reason that Mortimer is assigned to a juvenile exponent, cut out the scene of delirious passion in which Schiller sought to indicate the kind of intoxicating influence the charms of Mary were supposed to exercise. In the last act the alterations amount to reconstruction. Those concluding scenes which, in spite of Schiller's effort to show the commencement of Elizabeth's penitence, are an incubrance upon the play, and assign the whole the character of an anti-climax, are omitted, and the act ends with the death of Mary, which is described by Leicester. At the commencement of the act Mary enters among the women, whom the sight of the executioner and of the scaffold has frightened, and distributes to them her parting gifts. To Melvil she entrusts her last messages, and she then receives the envoys from Elizabeth who bring her the warrant. The sight of Leicester disturbs the serenity which she has exhibited, and she freely accedes to his supplication for pardon. Then, following the uplifted cross in the hands of Melvil, she passes from the room into the adjacent courtyard, in which the scaffold is erected. On her way she repeats the Latin psalms for the dying, and her voice, heard through the open doorway, continues until its cessation, with the sharp spasm of Leicester, tells that all is over. From the dramatic standpoint this act is a great improvement upon that previously seen. Its effect is profoundly touching.

Madame Modjeska's representation of Mary Stuart is a singularly fine, intelligent, and suggestive piece of acting. It is decidedly in advance of her performance in 'Heartsease.' Though belonging to the realistic school of acting, it is illumined by flashes of imagination and poetic beauty, and is throughout varied in emotion and admirable in pathos and beauty. In the closing scenes pathos was the most striking quality; in the third act, however, the quick succession and throng of passions enabled the actress to show an extent of range and an adequacy of method rarely seen. The entire performance vindicates Madame Modjeska's right to the laurels which, on the strength of her previous performance, were generally awarded to her. Mr. Clayton assigned to Leicester a bluff manliness, not unminged with plausibility and shiftiness, that suited the character. After the Mary Stuart this was the best piece of acting exhibited. Miss Louise Moodie was powerful in a stagey, conventional way; Mr. Crauford showed power as Sir Edward Mortimer; and Miss Grahame was seen to advantage as Margaret Curl. The mounting and accessories are satisfactory, and the entire performance reflects credit upon the management.

A spectacle such as is now afforded at the St. James's Theatre marks an epoch in theatrical art. No special merit can be claimed for the piece, and the acting, though much of it is excellent in its way, has no such quality as singles it out for exceptional commendation. Not before, however, has an English play been put upon the stage in a manner so admirable, it may almost be said so faultless. Mr. Hare, who has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the best stage managers in England, has profited by the visit to London of the Dutch comedians, and has assigned the drama he has produced a mise en scène as good as that which in 'Anne-Mie' came as a revelation in theatrical art. To see such pictures as those of the cottage at Deal, in which the action of 'William and Susan' commences, the beach with the fleet in the Downs, the cabin of the man-of-war, with the officers with their smooth-shaven faces and in their knee-breeches and silk stockings, and the marines in the quaint but effective costume of the early part of this century, and the final tableau of the deck of the same vessel, in which everything is exact enough to defy scrutiny, is to learn of what the art of theatrical decoration is capable. The improvement, meanwhile, is not confined to matters of dress and to what is inanimate in the picture. For the first time upon an English stage, supers of whom every one is apparently an actor are employed. The pictures afforded accordingly vibrate with life, and the stage illusion is perfect. So thoroughly has Mr. Hare accomplished the task he has set himself, that his example must inevitably be followed, and a definite improvement in the conditions of theatrical representation in England is now a mere matter of time.

Successful as has been the experiment of the management in this direction, it has not been accompanied by a corresponding success in the play. Mr. Wills's alteration of 'Black-Eyed Susan' displays its author's poetical vein and his capacity to produce tender and idyllic pictures. Neither in probability, however, nor in dramatic value is it any advance on the work it seeks to replace. Those types of character which, absurd and preposterous as many of them were, had won acceptance from the public have disappeared, and little of the original scheme is left, except the cutting down by William of Capt. Croastree, and his trial by a court-martial for striking his superior officer. In place of the missing figures we get others which are neither more interesting nor more natural, while the action is even more improbable than that of the earlier piece. Capt. Croastree, for instance, in the original a light-hearted toying sailor, who when he insults Susan is "three sheets in the wind," is converted into a base and ungrateful libertine, who seeks in pure idleness to seduce the wife of a man who has saved his life. This is the cardinal defect of the piece, and its influence is strong enough and repellent enough to prevail over recollections of the touching scenes Mr. Wills has set before us in the earlier act.

As Susan Mrs. Kendal acts with great pathos and with a sincerity that speaks a thorough artist. Mr. Kendal is probably the best William on the stage; Mr. Hare as the Admiral supplies a picture accurate and faithful in all respects; and Mr. Barnes as Capt. Croastree is a type of light-hearted and insouciant villainy. All parts down to the smallest are well played, and the entire representation is of high value.

At Sadler's Wells Theatre Mr. Warner has appeared as William Tell in Sheridan Knowles's melo-dramatic and rather dreary play of the same name. Mr. Warner's face, figure, and stately presence are of use to him in this character, and he delivers the verses with rhetorical effect. The pathos of the later scenes is not, however, extracted, and the termination of the play is heavy. Miss Louise Willes is Emma and Mr. Brooke Geesler. 'William Tell' is mounted in a style which reflects credit on the management.

The Theatres of Paris. By J. Brander Matthews. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Books upon the Parisian theatres are not uncommon in England, and one or two of them have serious value. The most satisfactory in all respects is Mr. W. H. Pollock's recent volume, a work which by some caprices of fortune seems to have escaped the recognition due to its merits. An earlier volume, by Charles Hervey, published in 1846 by Galignani of Paris, conveys a fair impression of the state of the stage at a period when it was still graced by Rachel, and gives some interesting information gleaned from the 'Histoire du Théâtre Français' of Hippolyte Lucas, and other works. Mr. J. Brander Matthews is last in the field, and has in consequence had more authorities at his disposal. In dealing with the Comédie Française he has made special use of the recently published 'Comédiens et Comédiennes' of M. Sarcosy, and the chief grace of his work consists in the reproduction of the œuvres fortes of M. Léon Gauchet, with which M. Sarcosy's volume is illustrated. As Mr. Matthews is an American, the comparisons he institutes are between the stage in the United States and that in Paris. The criticisms have no remarkable value.

Dramatic Society.

In addition to Dr. Westland Marston's 'Donna Diana,' the forthcoming production of which at the St. James's has been mentioned in our columns, the management of that theatre promises Tobin's comedy, 'The Honeymoon,' and a new play from the French by Mr. Charles Coghlan.

Miss Litton has undertaken the management of the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, which will open before long with 'As You Like It.' In January next Miss Litton will appear at the Gaiety Matinees in a series of classical performances, commencing with 'Much Ado about Nothing.'

The new drama by Mr. A. C. Calmoun, produced with the title of 'Trust and Trial' at a Gaiety Matinée on Saturday last, is very similar in plot to 'Hunted Down.' Mr. Macklin acted competently as a husband who discovers that his wife has been wanting in confidence, the wife herself being played with tenderness by Miss B. Henri. As the villain of the piece, a first husband reappearing to claim a wife married to another, Mr. Calmoun, the author, played with much force, though with an imperfect knowledge of the art of acting.

Mr. JOSEPH JEFFERSON has reappeared at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, as Bob Acres in 'The Rivals.' The resumption of a character by an artist who for very many years has scarcely been seen except in the one rôle with which his name is associated inspires exceptional interest in the United States. The impersonation is said to be highly thoughtful and intelligent, and to accentuate more deeply than is customary the well-known features of the character.

To Correspondents.—C. B.—E. G. C.—Dr. D.—F. W. L.—A. W.—A. N.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

PUBLISHED BY J. & A. CHURCHILL.

The OCEAN as a HEALTH-RESORT: a Handbook of Practical Information as to Sea Voyages, for the Use of Tourists and Invalids. By WILLIAM S. WILSON, L.R.C.P. Lond. M.R.C.S.R. With a Chart showing the Ocean-Resorts, and Illustrating the Physical Geography of the Sea. Crown 8vo 7s. 6d.

HEALTHY LIFE and HEALTHY DWELLINGS: a Guide to Personal and Domestic Hygiene. By GEORGE WILSON, M.A. M.D., Medical Officer of Health for Mid-Warwickshire. Fcap. 8vo. 300 pp. 4s.

DANGERS to HEALTH: a Pictorial Guide to Domestic Sanitary Defects. By T. FRIDGIN TRALE, M.A., Surgeon to the General Infirmary at Leeds. Second Edition. With 35 Lithographs. 8vo. 10s.

A MANUAL of PRACTICAL HYGIENE. By E. A. Parkes, M.D. F.R.C. Edited by F. DE CHAMONT, M.D., Professor of Military Hygiene in the Army Medical School. Fifth Edition, with numerous Plates and Engravings on Wood. 8vo. 15s.

HEALTHY SKIN and HAIR. By Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., late Professor of Dermatology in the Royal College of Surgeons. Eighth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

MEDICAL EDUCATION and PRACTICE in all PARTS of the WORLD. By HERBERT JENILS HARDWICKE, M.D. M.R.C.P., Physician to the Sheffield Public Hospital for Skin Diseases. 8vo. 30s.

CLINICAL LECTURES on DISEASES of the URINARY ORGANS. By Sir HENRY THOMPSON, F.R.C.S., Surgeon Extraordinary to H.M. the King of the Belgians. Emeritus Professor of Surgery to University College. Fifth Edition. With 5 Plates and 71 Engravings. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

By the SAME AUTHOR,
PRACTICAL LITHOTOMY and LITOTRITY; or, an Inquiry into the Best Modes of Removing Stone from the Bladder. Third Edition, Revised and in part Rewritten. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

LECTURES on ORTHOPÆDIC SURGERY. By Bernard E. BRODIE, F.R.C.S. Surgeon to the Royal Orthopædic Hospital, late Surgeon to the Orthopædic Department of, and Lecturer on Orthopædic Surgery at, St. George's Hospital. Second Edition. With Engravings. 8vo. 12s. 6d.

HEADACHES: their Causes, Nature, and Treatment. By W. H. DAY, M.D., Physician to the Samaritan Hospital for Women and Children. Third Edition. With Engravings. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

DIPHTHERIA: its Nature and Treatment. By Morell MACKENZIE, M.D. Lond., Senior Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat and Chest, Lecturer on Diseases of the Throat at the London Hospital Medical College. Fcap. 8vo. 4s.

HANDBOOK of UTERINE THERAPEUTICS, and of DISEASES of WOMEN. By EDWARD JOHN TILT, M.D., Past President of the Obstetrical Society of London. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 10s.

By the SAME AUTHOR,
The CHANGE of LIFE in HEALTH and DISEASE: a Practical Treatise on the Nervous and other Affections incidental to Women at the Decline of Life. Third Edition. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The SURGERY of the RECTUM: with Cases Illustrating the Treatment of Hemorrhoids and Prolapse by the Improved Clamp. LETTSOMIAN LECTURES. By HENRY SMITH, Professor of Surgery in King's College, and Surgeon to King's College Hospital. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 4s.

SORE THROAT: its Nature, Varieties, and Treatment; including the Connection between Affections of the Throat and other Diseases. By FROBEN JAMES, M.D., Lecturer on Materia Medica and Therapeutics at the London Hospital, Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat. Fourth Edition. With Hand-Coloured Plates. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

ADVICE to a MOTHER on the MANAGEMENT of her CHILDREN, and on the Treatment of some of their more pressing Illnesses and Accidents. By F. Y. CRAVAT, F.R.C.S. With Notes and Annotations by Sir C. LOCOCK, Bart., M.D. F.R.S. Eighty-ninth Thousand. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

By the SAME AUTHOR,
ADVICE to a WIFE on the MANAGEMENT of her own HEALTH, and on the Treatment of some of the Complaints incidental to Pregnancy, Labour, and Suckling. With an Introductory Chapter especially addressed to a Young Wife. One Hundredth Thousand. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The ORTHOPRAGMS of the SPINE: an Essay on the Curative Mechanisms applicable to Spinal Curvature, exemplified by a Typical Collection lately presented to the Parker Museum of Hygiene, University College, London. By ROBERT HEATHER BIGG, Assoc. Inst. C.E. 8vo. 3s.

COOLEY'S CYCLOPÆDIA of PRACTICAL RECEIPTS and COLLATERAL INFORMATION in the ARTS, MANUFACTURES, PROFESSIONS, and TRADES, including MEDICINE, PHARMACY, HYGIENE, and DOMESTIC ECONOMY. Edited by Professor TUSON, F.R.S., assisted by several Scientific Contributors. Sixth Edition. 2 vols. 8vo. 2s.

FOWNES' CHEMISTRY. By Henry Watts, B.A. F.R.S. Twelfth Edition. PHYSICAL and INORGANIC CHEMISTRY, crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.; ORGANIC CHEMISTRY, crown 8vo. 10s.

VALENTIN'S QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS. By W. R. HODGKINSON Ph.D. (Wienburg), Demonstrator of Practical Chemistry in the Science Training Schools, South Kensington. Fifth Edition. With Engravings. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

CHEMISTRY, INORGANIC and ORGANIC, with Experiments. By C. L. BLOKAM, Professor of Chemistry in King's College, London. Fourth Edition. With 285 Engravings on Wood. 8vo. 12s.

By the SAME AUTHOR,
LABORATORY TEACHING; or, Progressive Exercises in Practical Chemistry. Fourth Edition. With 60 Engravings. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY, including ANALYSIS. By JOHN R. BOWMAN. Edited by CHARLES L. BLOKAM, Professor of Chemistry in King's College, London. Seventh Edition. With 96 Engravings. Fcap. 8vo. 6s. 6d.

PRACTICAL and ANALYTICAL CHEMISTRY, specially adapted for Schools and Colleges, and for Beginners. By FRANK CLOWES, D.Sc., Senior Science Master at the High School, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Third Edition. With 48 Engravings. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

COTTAGE HOSPITALS—GENERAL, FEVER, and CONVALESCENT their Program, Management, and Work. With an Alphabetical List of every Cottage Hospital at present Opened, and Chapters on Mortuaries, the relative Mortality of Large and Small Hospitals, and Cottage Hospitals in America. By HENRY C. BURDETT. Second Edition, Rewritten and much enlarged, with many Plates and Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 14s.

INDIAN NOTES. The Voyage Out—Travelling in India— Upper India—Stations—The Hills—Minerals—Waters—Herbs and Samples. By F. E. HOGG, M.D., Surgeon-Major. Crown 8vo. 3s.

The RIVIERA: Sketches of the Health-Resorts of the North Mediterranean Coast of France and Italy, from Hyères to Spezia; with Chapters on the General Meteorology of the District, its Medical Aspect and Value, &c. By EDWARD I. SPARKS, M.A. M.B. Oxon, F.R.C.P. Lond. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

A MANUAL for HOSPITAL NURSES and OTHERS ENGAGED in ATTENDING on the SICK. By EDWARD J. DONVILLE, L.R.C.P. M.R.C.S., Surgeon to the Exeter Lying-in Charity. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

NOTES on FEVER NURSING. By James W. Allan, M.B., Physician to the Belvidere Fever Hospital, Glasgow. With Engravings. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

On GOUT, RHEUMATISM, and the ALLIED AFFECTIONS. With a Chapter on the Attainment of Longevity. By PETER HOOD, M.D. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

A COMPENDIUM of DOMESTIC MEDICINE and COM-PANION to the MEDICINE CHEST. By JOHN SAVORY, M.S.A. Ninth Edition. 12mo. 4s.

The WIFE'S DOMAIN. By Philothalos. The Young Couple—The Mother—The Nurse—The Nursing. Third Edition, with Explanations. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

FISTULA, HÆMORRHOIDS, PAINFUL ULCER, STRICTURE, PROLAPUS, and other DISEASES of the RECTUM, their Diagnosis and Treatment. By WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, F.R.C.S., Surgeon to St. Mark's Hospital for Fistula. Third Edition, Revised and in part Rewritten. 8vo. 10s.

PRACTICAL HINTS on the PRESERVATION of the TEETH. By N. STEVENSON, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and Licentiate in Dental Surgery. 8vo. 6d.

On the EDUCATIONAL TREATMENT of INCURABLY DEAF CHILDREN. By W. B. DALBY, F.R.C.S. M.B. Cantab., Aural Surgeon to St. George's Hospital. 8vo. 6d.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW LIST.

NEXT WEEK,
Crown 8vo. 400 pages, price 10s. 6d.

PEASANT LIFE IN THE WEST OF ENGLAND.

By FRANCIS GEORGE HEATH,

Author of 'The English Peasantry,' 'The Fern World,'
'Sylvan Spring,' &c.

Part I. A Glance at the Past.—Part II. Peasant Life in 1872.—Part III. Among the Peasantry in 1873.—Part IV.
English Peasants of To-Day.

Contents of Part IV.

ENGLISH PEASANTS OF TO-DAY.

Lights and Shadows—Two Life Histories—Present Money
Earnings—Privileges—Cottages and Sanitation—A Model Village—"Potatoe Ground"—Dress of the Period—Living and "Credit"—Halberton in 1880—A Pig Insurance Society
—Superstition and Folk-lore—Amusements—Poor Farming and "Depression"—Depopulation—Moral and Intellectual Progress.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

"Especially opportune, at this moment, must be any statements regarding our English Peasantry. One half of the volume—relating to the Peasant life of to-day—is written from the freest of materials—gathered, put into literary form, and published without the loss of a single day.
... In dealing with his subject the author has confined himself solely to its social and economical aspect. He would be uncanonid, however, were he to attempt to conceal his knowledge of the fact that, underlying this social question, is a 'burning' political question that is certain, in the immediate future, to be fought out on the arena of parliamentary conflict. But into that question he has not deemed it necessary to enter, contenting himself with the record of facts which will be found in the succeeding pages, and leaving political writers to draw from those facts what deductions they please."

Now ready,

NEW GUINEA: WHAT I DID AND WHAT I SAW.

By L. M. DALBERTIS,

Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Honorary Member and Gold Medalist of the I.R.G.S. C.M.F.S., &c.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, with Maps, Coloured Plates,
and numerous very fine Woodcut Illustrations, price 42s.

"Of all the habitable but unknown portions of the globe,
with the exception of Africa, New Guinea possesses at present the greatest interest for the student and the general reader. Professor D'Albertis may be said to have devoted his life to the unravelling of its mysteries, and his work is
by far the most thorough and complete account of its people, animals, birds, insects, &c., extant."

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION DE LUXE FOR CHRISTMAS, &c.

WASHINGTON IRVING'S LITTLE BRITAIN,

THE SPECTRE BRIDEGROOM,

AND

A LEGEND OF SLEEPY HOLLOW.

Specially illustrated by 120 very fine Engravings on Wood by Mr. J. D. Cooper, designed by Mr. Charles O. Murray.

Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d.

PRIMITIVE FOLK MOOTS;

Or, OPEN-AIR ASSEMBLIES IN BRITAIN.

By GEORGE LAURENCE GOMME, F.S.A.,

Honorary Secretary to the Folk-lore Society, Author of
'Index of Municipal Offices.'

Now ready, 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, price 12s.

THE NEW NOVEL BY JEAN INGELOW is

SARAH DE BERANGER.

In 3 vols.

Now ready, by the Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,'
'John Holdsworth, Chief Mate,' &c.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON,
Crown Buildings, 188, Fleet-street, E.C.

C. KEGAN PAUL & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

With 136 Illustrations, medium 8vo. cloth,

HISTORY OF PAINTING.

From the German of the late Dr. ALFRED WOLTMANN and Dr. KARL WOERMANN.

Edited by SIDNEY COLVIN, M.A.

VOL. I. — PAINTING in ANTIQUITY and the MIDDLE AGES. Cloth, price 28s.; cloth extra, bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 38s.

With Portrait, demy 8vo. cloth, price 16s.

SPINOZA: his Life and Philosophy.

By FREDERICK POLLOCK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

THE ATOMIC THEORY.

By Professor WURTZ.

Translated by E. CLEMINSHAW, F.C.S.

"A Vol. XXX. of the "International Scientific Series."

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 16s.

A COMMENTARY ON THE BOOK OF JOB.

With a Translation.

By SAMUEL COX.

THE PULPIT COMMENTARY.

I SAMUEL.

By the Very Rev. R. P. SMITH, D.D.

With Homilies by Rev. DONALD FRASER, D.D.; Rev.
Professor CHAPMAN; and Rev. B. DALE.

Price 15s.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

THE NEW TRUTH AND THE OLD FAITH:

ARE THEY INCOMPATIBLE?

By a SCIENTIFIC LAYMAN.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 6d.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By W. R. BROWNE.

With a Preface by the Rev. J. P. MORRIS, D.D., Canon of Bristol.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 8d.

THE NEW WERTHER.

By LOKI.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

PICTURES FROM IRELAND IN 1880.

By TERENCE McGRATH.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

DISCONTENT AND DANGER IN INDIA,

AND SOME OF ITS CAUSES.

By A. E. CONNELL.

1, Paternoster-square.

W. SATCHELL, PUBLISHER.

*A Third Edition of My LIFE
as an ANGLER, by William
Henderson, is now ready, crown
8vo. with Portrait and 12 Plates, price 7s. 6d.*

"Will amply reward the general reader."—Spectator.

Royal 8vo. cloth, price 14s.

STUDIES OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY IN ITALY.

By VERNON LEE.

"Throughout the volume we are in the presence of a subtle and imaginative critic, of a picturesque and vigorous writer, of one who has profoundly studied a subject in which he takes passionate interest, and who has written of Italy and Italian art with a wonderful artistic intuition, comparable only with that shown in some of Robert Browning's poems on Italian subjects."

Farfalle della Domenica of Rome.

"A learned volume on the Italian stage by a young English writer of most lively powers."

Nuova Antologia of Rome.

"One of the most fascinating books that it has been our good fortune to meet with for a very long time.....A singularly delightful and very able volume."

Revue des Deux Mondes.

"Treating an important and little-known theme with conspicuous ability."—Athenæum.

"Presents a vivid and attractive picture of the full, rich growth of Italian music."—Academy.

"A thoroughly interesting and admirable book."

St. James's Gazette.

"An unusually pleasant excursion into a rarely visited field of research."—British Quarterly.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 10 fine Plates, price 6s.
(postage 4d.).

GODS, SAINTS, AND MEN.

By EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON.

"Has an attraction that fixes attention, and decided originality of style and conception."—Kennel's Bath Journal.

"Fluent and graceful narrative verse. Readers will be grateful to the author."—Civitas.

THE BOOK OF BRITISH TOPOGRAPHY.

By J. P. ANDERSON, of the Museum Library.

*The Subscription List of this most important Work will Close Next Week.
Prospectuses on application. Subscription price, 15s.; large paper, 30s. For the latter immediate application will be necessary.*

THE ANGLER'S NOTE-BOOK.

Small 4to. 6 Plates, cloth extra, price 6s. (postage 6d.).

"A charming volume."

Professor Brown Goods (U.S. Fisheries Commission).

Imperial 16mo. cloth extra, price 8s. (postage 4d.).

TUSCAN FAIRY TALES.

With 16 Illustrations, engraved by Edmund Evans.

"A thoroughly delightful volume."—Westminster Review.

"Sumptuously printed and prettily bound."—Athenæum.

12, TAVISTOCK-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN, W.C.

MISS BIRD.—THE INTERIOR OF JAPAN.

Next Week, with Map and Illustrations, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

UNBEATEN TRACKS IN JAPAN.TRAVELS OF A LADY IN THE INTERIOR, INCLUDING VISITS TO THE ABORIGINES OF Yezo AND THE SHRINES OF NIKKO AND ISE.

By ISABELLA BIRD,

Author of 'A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains,' 'Six Months in the Sandwich Islands,' &c.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

SIR EDWARD REED'S WORK ON JAPAN.

Next week, with Map and Illustrations, 2 vols. 8vo. 25s.

JAPAN: its History, Traditions, and Religions.

WITH THE NARRATIVE OF A VISIT IN 1879.

By Sir EDWARD J. REED, K.C.B. F.R.S. M.P.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

NEW WORK BY LIONEL S. BEALE.

Now ready, demy 8vo. pp. 280, price 5s.

SLIGHT AILMENTS:

THEIR NATURE AND TREATMENT.

By LIONEL S. BEALE, M.B. F.R.S. F.R.C.P.,

Professor of the Principles and Practice of Medicine in King's College, London.

J. & A. CHURCHILL.

In crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. cloth gilt.

OUR SONS: How to Start them in Life.

By ARTHUR KING.

"The book is a thoroughly practical one, and will, we are sure, be very useful to perplexed parents."—Graphic.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. Bedford-street, Strand.

In crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. each, cloth gilt.

LADY BARKER'S WORKS.

NEW EDITIONS.

SYBIL'S BOOK.
STORIES ABOUT.*RIBBON STORIES.
CHRISTMAS CAKE.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. Bedford-street, Strand.

MRS. FORRESTER'S NEW NOVEL.

Now ready, at all the Libraries.

SECOND EDITION of ROY and VIOLA. By Mrs.
FORRESTER, Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' 'Rhona,' &c.
In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

HURST & BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

GEORGE ELIOT.

This day is published, a New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo. 5s.

IMPRESSIONS

OF

THEOPHRASTUS SUCH.

By GEORGE ELIOT.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

MR. KINGLAKE'S NEW VOLUME.THE WINTER TROUBLES; being the SIXTH VOLUME of the INVASION of the CRIMEA, is published this day. With a Map, 8vo. price 16s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d. of all
Booksellers.NOTES AND QUERIES:A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES
ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY.Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.BIOGRAPHY.Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.BIBLIOGRAPHY.More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their
Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous
Works.POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-
LORE.Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old
Mythologies.BALLADS and OLD POETRY.

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS.

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY.Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our old Poets.GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.Published by JOHN FRANCIS, 20, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN BANKING COM-PANY (Limited).

PAID-UP CAPITAL, £1,000,000.

Having Branches or Agencies at Alexandria, Cairo, Cyprus, &c., affords exceptional facilities to Travellers to Egypt and the Nile.

Head Office: London, 27, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street.

O. FOA, Secretary.
Alexandria Branch: A. E. SIMON, Manager. Cairo Branch: HASSAN
BRYAN, Manager. Agencies at Larnaca and Nicosia (Cyprus).PHENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET and CHARING CROSS, LONDON.—Established 1782.

Prompt and Liberal Loss Settlements.

Insurance effected in all parts of the World.

JOHN J. BROOMFIELD, Secretary.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY,

79, FILL MALL.

For LIVES ONLY ESTABLISHED 1807

Accumulated Funds £2,043,548

Also a Subscribed Capital of more than .. £1,200,000

Bolicies, Prospectuses, and Forms may be had at the Office, or from any of the Company's Agents, post free.

GEORGE HUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary

LOSS OF TIME IS LOSS OF MONEY.

ACCIDENTS CAUSE LOSS OF TIME.

And may be Provided against by a Policy of the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY.

The Oldest and Largest Accidental Assurance Company.

Right Hon. Lord KINNAIRD, Chairman.

Subscribed Capital, £1,000,000. Moderate Premiums.

Bones allowed to Insurers of Five Years' standing.

A fixed sum is paid in case of Death by Accident, and a Weekly Allowance in the event of Injury.
ONE MILLION and a HALF has been paid as COMPENSATION.
Apply to the Clerks of the Railway Stations, the Local Agents, or to the Office, 1, WILLIAM & J. VIAN, 100, St. Paul's Church-yard, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S

STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT ON
MOEDER'S HIRE SYSTEM.
The Original, Best, and most Liberal.No extra charge for time given.
Illustrated Price Catalogue, with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MOEDER, 261, 263, 265, Tottenham Court-road; and 19, 20, and 21, Marwell-street, W.C. Established 1862.F. MOEDER begs to announce that the whole of the above Premises have recently been rebuilt, specially adapted for the Furniture Trade, and now form one of the most commodious Warehouses in the metropolis.Bed-room Suites, from £1. 6s. to 50 Guineas.
Drawing-room Suites, from £1. 6s. to 45 Guineas.
Dining-room Suites, from 7s. to 40 Guineas.
And all other Goods in great variety.
F. MOEDER, 261, 263, 265, Tottenham Court-road; and 19, 20, and 21, Marwell-street, W.C. Established 1862.

HEAL & SON.

THE LARGEST STOCK IN LONDON OF

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.

HEAL & SON'S CATALOGUE, with 600 Illustrations, sent free by post.
105, 106, 107, 108, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, LONDON, W.

KNIVES, FORKS, and SPOONS.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—
The KEAL NICKEL SILVER, when strongly SILVER-PLATED, cannot be distinguished from silver.

With ordinary usage this quality will wear 20 years.

Best Quality, strongly Plated.

		Fiddle or Silver	Band or Thru	King's or Shell
Table Forks	per doz.	1 10 0	2 1 0	2 5 0
Table Spoons	per doz.	1 10 0	2 1 0	2 5 0
Dessert Forks	per doz.	1 2 0	1 9 0	1 11 0
Dessert Spoons	per doz.	1 2 0	1 9 0	1 11 0
Ten Spoons	per doz.	14 0	1 0 0	1 2 0

A SECOND QUALITY of Fiddle Pattern Table Spoons or Forks, 12s. per dozen. Dessert, 12s. Ten Spoons, 12s.

CUTLERY WARRANTED.

Handles, Reversed or Rivetted.

Blades of the Finest Quality.

		Table Knives	Dessert Knives	Cut-throat per pr
3 1/2 in. Ivory Handles, per doz.	15 0	15 0	15 0	15 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	14 0	14 0	14 0	14 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	13 0	13 0	13 0	13 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	12 0	12 0	12 0	12 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	11 0	11 0	11 0	11 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	10 0	10 0	10 0	10 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	9 0	9 0	9 0	9 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	8 0	8 0	8 0	8 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	7 0	7 0	7 0	7 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	6 0	6 0	6 0	6 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	5 0	5 0	5 0	5 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	4 0	4 0	4 0	4 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	3 0	3 0	3 0	3 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	2 0	2 0	2 0	2 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	1 0	1 0	1 0	1 0
3 1/2 in. do. do. do.	0 0	0 0	0 0	0 0

CARRIAGE PAID to any Railway Station.

Samples at above rates post free.

WILLIAM S. BURTON, General Furnishing

Ironmonger, 38 Oxford-street, W., &c.

Catalogue, containing 300 illustrations, post free.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER

PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BAGS.

ALLEN'S REGISTERED ALBERT DISPATCH BOX.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE of 300 articles. Continental Travelling, post free.

17, West Strand, London.

APOLLINARIS WATER.

"Laurae domandae Apollinari."—Hercules, Book iv, Ode 2.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1875.

ANNUAL SALE, 5,000,000.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY, Limited, 10, Regent-street, London, S.W.

M. R. G. H. JONES,

SURGEON DENTIST,

25, GREAT RUSSELL-STREET, LONDON

(Opposite the British Museum).

Will be glad to forward his Pamphlet on Painless Dentistry, free, enclosed by post, which explains the most complete system of the adjustment of Artificial Teeth without pain.

Consultation free, from 10 to 2.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have approved of this Pure Solution as the best remedy for ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEAD-
ACHE, COLIC, and INDIGESTION, and as the safest Agent for Delicate Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness,
tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice.
For these symptoms use

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

Glycerine in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the throat, they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively hot, and only in the throat, and is rapidly absorbed.—James Epps & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.A letter received.—Gentlemen.—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case run they do any harm. Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, L.M.C.P.S., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary.

READERS of FICTION, BIOGRAPHY, HISTORY, TRAVEL,

FRENCH and GERMAN LITERATURE, and Works of every Class, are INVITED to INSPECT the CLUB PREMISES and the CIRCULATING LIBRARY (which contains a large Selection of Vocal and Instrumental Music) of the GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY, NEW BOND-STREET.The following are a few of the advantages offered by the GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY:—1st. The Books asked for are at once supplied. 2nd. Two Volumes of the Newest Books for 1 Guinea a year. 3rd. Three Volumes of the Newest Books for 1½ Guinea a year. 4th. Four Volumes of the Newest Books delivered free for 2 Guinea a year. 5th. Six Volumes of the Newest Books delivered free, together with use of the Club, for 3 Guinea a year.—N.B. Specially advantageous terms are quoted to Country Subscribers. All information promptly supplied on application to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN,

GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW BOND-STREET, W.

SMITH, ELDER & CO'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, royal 8vo. price 2s.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Immediately, crown 8vo. 18s. 6d.

The POETRY of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor,
Author of 'The Borderland of Science,' 'Science Byways,' &c.

NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes. 2 vols. post 8vo.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD.'

On October 23rd, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

The TRUMPET MAJOR. By Thomas Hardy, Author of 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

JUST AS I AM. By Miss Braddon.

THE NEW NOVEL BY FREDERICK TALBOT.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE:

A NOVEL.

By FREDERICK TALBOT,

Author of 'Sophie Crews,' &c.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

JUST AS I AM:

THE NEW NOVEL.

BY MISS

AUTHOR OF 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

Opinion of the WORLD.

"Just As I Am,' Miss Braddon's latest novel, is as fresh, as wholesome, as enthralling, as amusing, as any of the stories with which, for a series of years, she has proved her title as queen of the circulating library; and the thought and polish which mark her more recent fictions in no way interfere with the cerve and 'go' which originally made her reputation.
'Just As I Am' is an excellent example of the author."—Vide World, Oct. 13.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE. By Mr. F. Talbot.

London: JOHN & ROBERT MAXWELL, Publishers, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

THE NEW NOVEL BY MISS RUSSELL.

Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.

QUITE TRUE. By Dora Russell, Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' &c.

SECOND EDITION.—Now ready price 2s. boards, cloth 2s. 6d. (postage, 4d.).

The VICAR'S GOVERNESS. By Dora Russell,

Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' &c.

"Undoubtedly a clever and well-written story. Miss Russell may fairly be congratulated on having written a book which contains a good deal that is interesting, and indicates a reserve of something still better."—Times.

London: J. & R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

EPPS'S

CHOCOLATE

ESSENCE.

Product of a special refining process. It is Chocolate devoided of its over-richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the constance of Coffee. An Afternoon Chocolate. Each packet is labelledJAMES EPPS & CO.
Homoeopathic Chemists, London

NEW WORKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

In demy 8vo. illustrated with 320 Wood Engravings,
AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GÜNTHER, F.R.S., &c.,
 Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.
[Nearly ready.]

In demy 8vo. with Portrait and Fac-simile of Sermon,

MEMORIALS

OF

ROBERT SMITH CANDLISH, D.D.,
 LATE MINISTER OF ST. GEORGE'S FREE CHURCH, AND PRINCIPAL OF THE NEW COLLEGE, EDINBURGH.

By WILLIAM WILSON, D.D.,

With concluding Chapter by ROBERT RAINY, D.D., Principal and Professor of Church History, New College, Edinburgh.
[Nearly ready.]

In crown 8vo.

THE WAY TO THE CITY, And Other Sermons.

By the late ALEXANDER RALEIGH, D.D.,
 Author of 'Quiet Resting Places,' &c.
[Nearly ready.]

ALEXANDER RALEIGH'S WORKS.

- (1.) QUIET RESTING-PLACES. Ninth Edition. Crown 8vo.
 price 7s. 6d.
- (2.) The STORY of JONAH. Fcap. 8vo. price 3s. 6d.
- (3.) The LITTLE SANCTUARY. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d.
- (4.) The BOOK of ESTHER. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d.

MUSICAL STUDIES.

By FRANCIS HUEFFER.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE: a Sketch.

By C. J. LYALL, M.A. C.I.E.

Crown 8vo. sewed, price 1s.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA.

Edited by Prof. T. SPENCER BAYNES, LL.D., Assisted by 500 Contributors, and illustrated with numerous Engravings on Wood and Steel.

Price 30s. in cloth; or 36s. half-russia.

VOLUME I. A-ANA.	VOLUME VII. DEA-ELD.
" II. ANA-ATH.	" VIII. ELE-FAL.
" III. ATH-BOI.	" IX. FAL-FYZ.
" IV. BOI-CAN.	" X. G-GOT.
" V. CAN-CLE.	" XI. GOU-KIP.
" VI. CLE-DAY.

VOL. XII. in the press.

BLACK'S GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

A Series of 56 Maps of the principal Countries of the World, with Descriptive Letter-press and an Index of 68,000 Names.

In folio, half-morocco, 81. 8s.

THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

Illustrated Edition, in 48 vols. fcap. 8vo. containing 1,600 Wood Engravings, and 96 Steel Plates.

Price, complete in cloth, paper labels, 61.

Price, complete in cloth, lettered tops, 71. 7s.

Price, complete in half French morocco, marbled edges, 81. 8s.

NEW ISSUE OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

CENTENARY EDITION (Copyright). In 25 vols crown 8vo.

This popular Edition of the Waverley Novels, edited by the late DAVID LAING, LL.D., contains several Notes by Scott which are to be found in this Edition only, and is enriched with 188 Steel Plates.

VOLUME I. to XII. now ready. Price 3s. 6d. each.

DE QUINCEY'S WORKS.

The COLLECTED WORKS, in 16 vols. crown 8vo. price, in cloth, 81. 12s.; or in Roxburghe binding, gilt tops, 41. 4s.

CONTENTS.

VOL. I. CONFESSIONS of an ENGLISH OPIUM-EATER.	VOL. II. The CESSARS, and other Writings
" II. RECOLLECTIONS of the LAKE POETS.	" X. STYLE and RHETORIC.
" III. LAST DAYS of IMMANUEL KANT.	" XI. COLERIDGE and OPIUM- EATING.
" IV. The ENGLISH MAIL COACH.	" XII. SPECULATIONS, LITERARY and PHILOSOPHIC.
" V. Dr SAMUEL PARR, &c.	" XIII. LETTERS, CONVERSATION, &c.
" VI. RICHARD BENTLEY, &c.	" XIV. AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCHES, 1790-1804.
" VII. PROTESTANTISM, and other ESSAYS.	" XV. BIOGRAPHIES.
" VIII. LEADERS in LITERATURE.	" XVI. SUSPIRIA de PROFUNDIS, and GENERAL INDEX.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS.

EDMUND M. BLISS

Edited by JOHN H. INGRAM.

In 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Memoir and Index. Price 14s.

- | | |
|---------------------|-------------------|
| 1. TALES GROTESQUE. | 3. POEMS. |
| 2. TALES ARABESQUE. | 4. CRITICISM, &c. |

FARRAR'S SCHOOL TALES.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, in 3 vols. illustrated with Frontispieces and Vignettes, viz. —

ERIC; or, Little by Little, price 5s.

JULIAN HOME: a Tale of College Life, price 5s.

ST. WINIFRID'S; or, the World of School, price 6s. 6d.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

COMMENTARY on the BIBLE:—

Vol. V. The APOCRYPHAL BOOKS, ESDRAS to MACCABEES. (Completing the Society's Commentary.) Crown 8vo. cloth boards, red edges, 4s.

The ENGLISHMAN'S BRIEF on behalf of his NATIONAL CHURCH. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

The HOME LIBRARY (New Volumes):—

[The Series of Volumes embraced under this head are intended to form a Sunday Library, though they are adapted for general reading. The works composing it are intended to throw light by way of Biography, Narrative, &c. on the Bible, the Church, or on God's dealing with individual Christians.]

The CHURCHMAN'S LIFE of WESLEY. By R. Denny URLIN, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister, F.S.S. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

The NORTH AFRICAN CHURCH. By the Rev. Julius Lloyd, M.A., Author of 'The Gallican Church,' &c. Crown 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

SKETCHES of the WOMEN of CHRISTENDOM. Dedicated to the Women of India. By the Author of 'The Chronicles of the Schönberg-Cotta Family.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

DIOCESAN HISTORIES:—

[This Series, which will embrace, when completed, every Diocese in England and Wales, will furnish, it is expected, a perfect Library of English Ecclesiastical History. Each Volume will be complete in itself, and the possibility of repetition has been carefully guarded against.]

CANTERBURY. By the Rev. R. C. Jenkins, Rector and Vicar of Lyminge, Hon. Canon of Canterbury. With Map, fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

SALISBURY. By the Rev. W. H. Jones, Vicar of Bradford-on-Avon. With Map and Plan of the Cathedral, fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

CHIEF ANCIENT PHILOSOPHIES:—

[This Series of Books will deal with the Chief Systems of Ancient Thought, not merely as dry matters of History, but as having a bearing on Modern Speculation.]

EPICUREANISM. By William Wallace, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Merton College, Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

STOICISM. By the Rev. W. W. Capes, Fellow of Hertford College. Fcap. 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

FATHERS for ENGLISH READERS (New Volume):—

[The object of this Series is to supply in a handy and readable form accounts of the Chief Fathers of the Christian Church, of their Age, and of their Writings, the Fathers selected being centres of influence at important periods of Church History.]

LEO the GREAT. By the Rev. Charles Gore, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

SOME HEROES of TRAVEL; or, Chapters from the History of Geographical Discovery and Enterprise. Compiled and Rewritten by W. H. DAVENPORT ADAMS, Author of 'Great English Churchmen.' With Map, crown 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 5s.

WRECKED LIVES; or, Men who have Failed. By W. H. DAVENPORT ADAMS. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d. each.

A NEW SERIES OF BOOKS FOR CHILDREN, PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

ELFIN HOLLOW. By F. Scarlett Potter, Esq., Author of 'Cringwood Court,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

PRINCESS MYRA, and her ADVENTURES amongst the FAIRY FOLK. By F. SCARLETT POTTER, Esq., Author of 'Out-of-Doors Friends,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

VOYAGES and TRAVELS of COUNT FUNNIBOS and BARON STILKIN. By the late WILLIAM H. G. KINGSTON, Author of 'Ned Garth,' 'Owen Hartley,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

BOOKS

SUITABLE FOR

GIFTS AND PRIZES.

Bernard Hamilton, Curate of Stowe. By MARY E. SHIPLEY, Author of 'Janetta,' 'Little Helpers,' &c. With 4 Full-Page Illustrations on toned paper, crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.; bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

The Cruise of the "Dainty"; or, Rovings in the Pacific. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON, Author of 'The Settlers,' &c. With 3 Full-Page Illustrations on toned paper, crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.; bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

With 3 Full-Page Illustrations on toned paper, crown 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; or, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. each.

Bertie and his Sister: a Domestic Story. By A. H. ENGELBACH, Author of 'The King's Warrent,' &c.

Captain Eva: the Story of a Naughty Girl. By KATHLEEN KNOX.

Christabel: the Flower Girl of Covent Garden. By the Author of 'Our Valley.'

The Hasselaers: a Tale of Courage and Endurance. By E. E. A.

The Invasion of Ivylands. By Annette LYTHER, Author of 'Fan's Stiken String,' &c.

John Holbrook's Lessons. By M. E. P.

Round my Table.

Mike: a Tale of the Great Irish Famine. By the Author of 'Between the Locks,' &c.

Sweet William. By Mrs. Thomas ERSKINE.

Through the Rough Wind: a Story of the Colliers. By CRONA TEMPLE.

Post 8vo. illustrated, cloth boards, 1s.; or, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. each.

A Tearful Victory: a Tale for Children. By DARLEY DALE.

The Bells of Freiburg: a Christmas Tale, told by Gottfried Benzel (Father and Son). Written by AUSTIN CLARE, Author of 'The Carved Cartoon,' &c.

Her Will was Law: Esther Rayne's STORY.

Is it all Right? a Tale. By F. Harrison, Author of 'Her Very Own.'

Jean Roubaix: a Tale of the Swiss Mountains. By M. MONTGOMERY CAMPBELL.

The Lily of Leyden. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON, Author of 'Two Shipmates,' 'Owen Hartley,' &c.

Lizzie Andrew's First Place. By S. M. SITWELL, Author of 'The Andrews Family,' &c.

The Three Millstones: a Story of the British Legion. By A. H. ENGELBACH, Author of 'Two Campaigns,' &c.

A Guiding Star. By Austin Clare, Author of 'The Carved Cartoon,' 'Left in Charge,' &c.

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO.'S
LAND, HOUSE, AND APARTMENT "REGISTRATION OFFICE,"
NO. 1, GRAND HOTEL BUILDING
(FRONTING CHARING CROSS AND TRAFALGAR-SQUARE), LONDON.

NOTICE.

IMPORTANT to those having PROPERTY "FOR SALE," or HOUSES, &c., "TO LET."

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. would announce to ESTATE AGENTS, AUCTIONEERS, SOLICITORS, and others having Property FOR SALE, or Houses and Apartments TO BE LET, that the First Number of their

"LAND, HOUSE, and APARTMENT INDEX"

will be issued in NOVEMBER (other Editions each month hereafter), and PARTICULARS of PROPERTY REGISTERED upon their Books will be inserted, under appropriate headings, FREE OF CHARGE, when said particulars do not exceed forty words. Additional words will be charged ONE HALFPENNY each for every monthly insertion.

"THE INDEX" will be DISTRIBUTED GRATUITOUSLY by Local Agents and the "Corps of Commissionaires" at all of the PRINCIPAL HOTELS of the Metropolis, and throughout London and the Provinces.

CHARGE FOR REGISTRATION.

LAND, HOUSES, or APARTMENTS "FOR SALE" or "TO LET" with all the privileges of Office (as enumerated in PROSPECTUS), including an ADVERTISEMENT in "THE INDEX."

					£.	s.	d.
ONE MONTH	0	2	0
THREE MONTHS	0	5	0

The above rates are inclusive, no Commission being charged for services or assistance in the negotiation of Property registered.

For the sum of TEN SHILLINGS we Register Houses or Estates UNTIL SOLD or LET (no Commission being charged), but, nevertheless, under the express condition that the Owner thereof, or his Agent, shall during the first week of every month communicate with us by letter (to avoid mistakes) so long as the said Property remains unsold or unlet; failure so to do will be considered as an intimation that the Property registered has been disposed of, and it will therefore be erased from our Books, in order that applicants may not be misled, and thereby put to trouble and expense in regard thereto.

This Special Registration Fee of 10s. includes the insertion of an Eighty-Word Advertisement in "THE INDEX" for three months without extra charge.

Registration also entitles Patrons to have PHOTOGRAPHS at our Office for EXHIBITION in PORTFOLIOS, we giving the Public, who may call upon us, full and gratuitous information in regard thereto, and any Advertisement inserted in Newspapers regarding the Property Registered may direct applicants to our Establishment for information. Patrons who do not wish their Name and Address given to the Public, can send or receive communications through us incognito, and, when desired, may meet their Correspondents at our Office for consultation, or may have their Correspondence directed to our care, and we will forward same, under seal, if requested, charging simply the cost of Postage and Envelopes used therefor.

We desire to call the attention of Owners of Property to the importance of our POSITION as a means of communication with the best portion of the British and Foreign Public.

It has been computed, by actual reckoning, that over ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND persons pass our door each day (we shall be glad to demonstrate this fact, at any time, to the incredulous). It is admitted that these persons comprise the best portion of the British Public as well as Foreigners from all portions of the world, owing, in part, to the Grand Hotel Building being in close proximity to the Charing Cross and Metropolitan Railway Stations, the National Gallery, principal Hotels, leading Club-Houses, Theatres, and Her Majesty's Opera-House hence an Advertisement in our INDEX or the Newspapers calling attention to any particular Property registered upon our Books is likely to attract the attention of those who would be interested, and naturally induce them (from the fact of our central position) to call on us for information. The benefit arising therefrom will suggest itself.

Property other than Houses and Estates will be registered as for Sale or Exchange, if, on personal examination, we find the articles first class and offered bona fide, at fair rates, and space will be allotted for the exhibition of same, if desirable. Particulars on application.

N.B.—Agents Wanted (Local) throughout London Suburban Districts and the Provinces. For particulars address

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. No. 1, Grand Hotel Building, London.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

ETCHING AND ETCHERS.

By F. G. HAMERTON. New Edition, Revised. With 50 New Plates, cumberbund 8vo.

The text of the New Edition has been thoroughly revised, and increased by one-fifth. Several new Chapters and a new Preface have been added, whilst matter which had become unnecessary or disproportionate has been removed to make room for studies of more importance.

LIFE OF WILLIAM BLAKE.

With Selections from his Poems and other Writings. By ALEXANDER GILCHRIST. A New and Enlarged Edition. Illustrated from Blake's own Works, with Additional Letters and a Memoir of the Author. 2 vols. medium 8vo.

VOYAGE OF THE "VEGA."

By ADOLF ERIK NORDENSKIÖLD. With numerous Illustrations. Medium 8vo.

ENGLISH POETS.

Selections, with Critical Introductions by various Writers, and a General Introduction by MATTHEW ARNOLD. Edited by T. H. WARD, M.A. In 4 vols. crown 8vo. Vols. III and IV, 1s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. CHAUCER to DONNE.

Vol. II. BEN JONSON to DRYDEN. [Recently issued.]

ETIENNE DOLET: the Martyr of the Renaissance. A Biography, with a Bibliographical Appendix containing a Descriptive Catalogue of the Books Written, Edited, or Printed by Dolet. By RICHARD COPLEY CHRISTIE, M.A., Lincoln College, Oxford, Chancellor of the Diocese of Manchester. With Illustrations, 8vo. 18s. [Ready.]

GOETHE'S FAUST.

Translated into English Verse with Notes and Preliminary Remarks by JOHN STUART BLACKIE, F.R.S.E., Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. Crown 8vo. 9s. [Ready.]

A VISIT to WAZAN, the SACRED

City of Morocco. By ROBERT SPENCE WATSON. With Map and Illustrations, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

IDEAL CHEMISTRY.

By Sir BENJAMIN BRODIE, Bart., F.R.S. Crown 8vo. 2s.

FIRST LESSONS IN GREEK.

By Professor J. W. WHITE. [In the press.]

MACMILLAN'S

CLASSICAL SERIES.

HOMER'S ILIAD.

The STORY of ACHILLES.

Edited by the late J. H. PRATT, M.A., and WALTER LEAF, M.A., Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. Fcap. 8vo. [In the press.]

OVID'S FASTI.

Edited by G. H. HALLAM, M.A. [In the press.]

PLINY'S LETTERS. Book III.

Edited by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A. With Life of Pliny by G. H. RENDALL, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d. [Ready.]

XENOPHON'S ANABASIS. Books I.—IV.

Edited by Professors W. W. GOODWIN and J. W. WHITE, of Harvard University. [Nearly ready.]

MACMILLAN'S

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.

LIVY.—SCENES from the HANNIBALIAN WAR Adapted for the use of Beginners by G. C. MACAULAY, M.A., Assistant-Master at Rugby. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. [Immediately.]

GOLDEN TREASURY SERIES.

18mo. New Volumes.

ESSAYS of JOSEPH ADDISON.

Chosen and Edited by JOHN RICHARD GREEN, M.A. LL.D.

SELECTIONS from BYRON.

Edited, with an Introduction, by MATTHEW ARNOLD.

ENGLISH MEN of LETTERS.

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. Edited by JOHN MORLEY. New Volumes.

LOCKE. By Professor FOWLER. [Ready.]

WORDSWORTH. By F. W. H. MYERS.

LANDOR. By Professor SIDNEY COLVIN.

MILTON'S LIFE NARRATED in CONNECTION with the POLITICAL, ECCLESIASTICAL, and LITERARY HISTORY of HIS TIME. By Professor MASSON. Vol. I. New and Revised Edition. Vol. II, 18s.; Vol. III, 18s.; Vols. IV and V, 32s.; Vol. VI with Portrait, 21s. [Recently issued.]

ISLAND LIFE; or, the Phenomena of Insular Faunas and Floras, with their Causes, including an entire Revision of the Problem of Geological Climates. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Author of 'The Malay Archipelago,' 'The Geographical Distribution of Animals,' &c. With Illustrations and Maps, medium 8vo. 18s.

TEXT-BOOK of GEOLOGY.

By ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F.R.S., Professor of Geology, &c., in the University of Edinburgh. With Illustrations, medium 8vo.

A TREATISE ON CHEMISTRY.

By H. R. ROSCOE, F.R.S., and C. SCHORLEMMER, F.R.S., Professors of Chemistry in the Owens College, Manchester. With Illustrations.

Vol. III. ORGANIC CHEMISTRY.

Vol. I. The NON METALLIC ELEMENTS. 21s.

Vol. II. Part I. METALS. 18s.

Vol. II. Part II. METALS. 18s. [Recently published.]

Dr. FRANCIS SIBSON'S COL-

LECTED WORKS. With Illustrations, 4 vols. 8vo.

ANTHROPOLOGY: an Introduction to the Study of Man and Civilization. By E. B. TYLOR, F.R.S. With Illustrations, crown 8vo.

GUIDE to the STUDY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. By Dr. LUIGI COSSA, Professor in the University of Pavia. Crown 8vo. Translated from the Second Italian Edition, with a Preface by W. STANLEY JEVONS, F.R.S. [Shortly.]

STUDIES in DEDUCTIVE LOGIC.

By W. STANLEY JEVONS, LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Political Economy in University College, London. Crown 8vo.

MANUAL of ANCIENT GEO-

GRAPHY. From the German of Dr. H. KIEPERT.

HISTORY of the STEAM ENGINE.

By ROBERT L. GALLOWAY. With numerous Illustrations, crown 8vo.

GRAPHICAL DETERMINATION of

FORCES in ENGINEERING STRUCTURES. By J. B. CHALMERS. With Illustrations, 8vo.

The NECKLACE of PRINCESS

FIORIMONDI; and other Stories. By MARY DE MORGAN. With 25 Illustrations by Walter Crane. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s. [Next week.]

Also an Edition, printed by Messrs. R. & R. Clark, on hand-made paper, the Plates, Initial Letters, Head and Tail Pieces being printed on India paper, and mounted in the Text. The Edition is limited to One Hundred Copies. Fcap. 4to.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE TAPESTRY ROOM,' &c.

A CHRISTMAS CHILD: a Sketch of a Boy-Life. By Mrs. MOLESWORTH, Author of 'Carrots,' 'The Cuckoo Clock,' &c. Illustrated by Walter Crane. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d. [Immediately.]

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WHEN I WAS A LITTLE GIRL,' &c.

FANSIE'S FLOUR BIN.

By the Author of 'St. Clare's,' &c. Illustrated by Adrian Stokes. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d. [Next week.]

The WHITE RAT, and some other

Stories. By Lady BARKER. Illustrated by W. J. Hennessy. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d. [Shortly.]

NEW NOVEL.

THE HEAD of MEDUSA.

By GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel' and 'Mirage,' 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d. [Ready.]

A NEW NOVEL. By Henry James,

Jun. 2 vols.

THE ARYAN VILLAGE.

Modern Village Life in Bengal.—The Agricultural Community in Ceylon.—Supposed Rise and Growth of the Indo-Aryan Village System and Social Grades. By Sir JOHN PHEAR. Crown 8vo.

The THEORY of the RELATION of

LANDLORD and TENANT, and the Irish Act of 23 & 24 Victoria, chap. 154 and 33 & 34 Victoria, chap. 46. By ALEXANDER G. RICHEY, Q.C. LL.D., Deputy Regius Professor of Feudal and English Law in the University of Dublin. Crown 8vo.

The EVIDENTIAL NATURE of the HOLY EUCHARIST; being the Boyle Lectures for 1879-1880. By the Rev. Dr. MACLEAR, Warden of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, late Head Master of King's College School. 8vo.

The CHURCHES [of ASIA: a Methodical Sketch of the Second Century. By the Rev. W. CUNNINGHAM, M.A. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

S. PAUL'S EPISTLE to the GALA-

TIANS. A Revised Text, with Introduction, Notes, and Dissertations, by J. B. LIGHTFOOT, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Durham, and Honorary Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Sixth Edition. Demy 8vo. 12s.

RIGUET of the TUFT: a Love Drama.

Small 4to. 6s.

"The author has a real power of poetic expression, and a vein of genuine melody."—Athenæum.

"The author of this little work shows himself considerably superior to the average of verse writers. There are passages in his work which evince powers both of perception and description."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"We can unhesitatingly declare his work to be a poetical gem of the purest water. It is in its way unique."—Examiner.

"The dialogue in 'Riquet of the Tuft' is as remarkable for its point and terseness as the songs are for their rhythmic sweetness."—Westminster Review.

WORKS by STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A.

SELECTIONS from SHELLEY. Golden Treasury Series. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

Also a Large Paper Edition, demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

A PRIMER of ENGLISH LITERATURE.

18mo. 1s.

Also a Large Paper Edition, demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

MACMILLAN & CO. Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor."—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher."—at the Office, 35, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.
Printed by R. J. PEARCE, Athenæum Press, Took's-court, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JAMES PEARCE, at No. 35, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.
Agents: for Scotland, Messrs Bell & Boddie, and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh;—for Lancashire, Mr. John Robertson, Dublin;—Saturday, October 20, 1880.

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880.

[illegible]

CHATTO & WINDUS, PUBLISHERS.

JAMES PAYN'S NEW NOVEL.—2 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.
A CONFIDENTIAL AGENT By James PAYN. With 12 Illustrations by Arthur Hughes.

MRS. LINTON'S NEW NOVEL.
 To be ready immediately, 3 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.
THE REBEL of the FAMILY. By E. Lynn LINTON, Author of 'Patricia Kemball,' &c.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S NEW NOVEL.
 2 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.
ELLICE QUENTIN, and other Stories. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

Vols. III. and IV. (Completing the Work), demy 8vo. 12s. each.
A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES. From the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P.
 "Criticism is demanded before a composition which provokes little but approval. This is a really good book on a really interesting subject, and words piled on words could do no more for it."—Saturday Review.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION of MARK TWAIN'S NEW WORK.
 crown 8vo. cloth extra, with 214 Illustrations. 7s. 6d.
A TRAMP ABROAD. By Mark Twain.
 "A piece of work that is not only delightful as mere reading, but also of a high degree of merit as literature. The book is full of good things."—Athenæum.

To be Completed in Five Volumes, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. each.
BRET HARTE'S COLLECTED WORKS,
 Arranged and Revised by the Author.
 Vol. I. COMPLETE POETICAL and DRAMATIC WORKS of BRET HARTE. With Steel-plate Portraits and Introductions. [Ready.]
 Vol. II. EARLIER PAPERS—THE LUCK of ROARING CAMP, and other SKETCHES—BOHEMIAN PAPERS—AMERICAN LEGENDS. [Ready.]
 Vol. III. TALES of the ARGONAUTS—EASTERN SKETCHES. [Ready.]
 Vol. IV. GABRIEL CONROY. [In the press.]
 Vol. V. STORIES—CONDENSED NOVELS, &c. [In the press.]

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR of 'PRIMITIVE MANNERS and CUSTOMS.'—Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.
CRIMES and PUNISHMENT. Including a New Translation of Boccaccio's 'Decamerone delle Pene.' By JAMES ARBON FARRER.

Second Edition, Revised.—In 1 thick vol. of 1,300 pages, crown 8vo. half-Roxburghe, 12s. 6d.
THE READER'S HANDBOOK of ALLU- SIONS, REFERENCES, FLOTS, and STORIES. By the Rev. Dr. BREWER.
 "Wonderfully comprehensive."—Times.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR of 'FINGER-RING LORE.'
 Crown 8vo. cloth extra, with Frontispiece, 7s. 6d.
CREDULITIES, PAST and PRESENT. By WILLIAM JONES, F.R.S.

NEW VOLUMES of THE MAYFAIR LIBRARY.
 Post 8vo. cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.
THE SPEECHES of CHARLES DICKENS. With an Introduction. LITERARY PRIVILEGES, FANCIES, FOLLIES, and FROLICHS. By William T. Dobson.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS.
 Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. each.
MYTHS and MARVELS of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor.
PLEASANT WAYS in SCIENCE. By Richard A. Proctor.
ROUGH WAYS MADE SMOOTH. By Richard A. Proctor.
LEISURE-TIME STUDIES. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.
A MINISTRY of HEALTH. By Benjamin W. Richardson, M.D., &c.

MRS. G. BOWERS'S NEW HUNTING SKETCHES.
 Beautifully Coloured, and handsomely half bound, oblong 4to. 12s.
LEAVES from a HUNTING JOURNAL. By G. BOWERS, Author of 'Centers in Crumplugh,' &c. Coloured in Fac-simile of the Originals.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 2s. 6d. a New Edition of CONFIDENCE. By Henry James, jun.

Nearly ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo. Illustrated boards, 2s. each.
ROBIN GRAY. By Charles Gibbon, Author of 'Queen of the Meadow,' &c.

For LACK of GOLD. By Charles Gibbon.

A HANDSOME GIFT-BOOK.—Nearly ready, small 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.
THE WOOING of the WATER WITCH: a Northern Oddity By EVAN DALDRUP. With 25 fine Illustrations by J. Mayr Smith.

Nearly ready, crown 8vo. cloth limp, 2s. 6d.
A SIMPLE TREATISE on HEAT. By W. MATTHEW WILLIAMS, F.R.S., F.R.A.S., F.R.C.S., Author of 'The Fuel of the Sun.' [Nearly ready.]

CHATTO & WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

C. KEGAN PAUL & CO.'S
NEW LIST.

With 126 Illustrations, medium 8vo.
HISTORY of PAINTING. From the German of the late Dr. ALFRED WOLTMANN, Professor at the Imperial University of Strasbourg; and Dr. KARL WORMANN, Professor at the Royal Academy of Arts, Düsseldorf. Edited by SYDNEY COLVIN, M.A., Slade Professor of Fine Arts in the University of Cambridge.

VOL. I.—PAINTING in ANTIQUITY and the MIDDLE AGES. Cloth, price 28s.; cloth extra, bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 30s.

With Portrait, demy 8vo. cloth, price 16s.
SPINOZA: his Life and Philosophy. By FREDERICK POLLOCK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
The ATOMIC THEORY. By Prof. WURTZ, Membre de l'Institut, Doyen Honoraire de la Faculté de Médecine, Professeur à la Faculté des Sciences de Paris. Translated by E. CLEMINSHAW, F.R.S.
 "A Vol. XXX. of the 'International Scientific Series.'"

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 15s.
A COMMENTARY on the BOOK of JOB. With a Translation by SAMUEL COX, Author of 'Salvator Mundi,' 'The Genesis of Evil,' &c.

Post 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.
The INSPIRATION of the NEW TESTAMENT. By WALTER R. BROWNE, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. With a Preface by the Rev. J. F. NORRIS, D.D., Canon of Bristol.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.
The NEW TRUTH and the OLD FAITH. Are They Incompatible? By a SCIENTIFIC LAYMAN.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
PICTURES from IRELAND in 1880. By TERENCE McGRATH.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.
DISCONTENT and DANGER in INDIA, and some of its CAUSES. By A. K. CONNELL.

Post 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.
COLLECTED SONNETS, OLD and NEW. By CHARLES TENNYSON TURNER. With Preliminary Poem by ALFRED TENNYSON. Also some Marginal Notes by S. T. COLERIDGE, and a Critical Essay by JAMES SPEDDING.

Large post 8vo. parchment antique, bevelled boards, price 6s.
MARY MAGDALENE: a Poem. By Mrs. RICHARD GREENOUGH, Member of the Society of the Arcadia, and of the Royal Academy of St. Cecilia of Rome.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
The CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP: a Spanish Legend in Twenty-nine Cançons. By Colonel COLOMB, Author of 'Donnington Castle' (a Royalist Story), &c.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
MARIE ANTOINETTE: a Drama.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.
A LOVE'S GAMUT, and other Poems.

1. Paternoster-square.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S
PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS,
 AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

By GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel,' 'Mirage,' &c.
The HEAD of MEDUSA. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

By WILLIAM BLACK.
WHITE WINGS: a Yachting Romance. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

"Mr. Black can translate his vocabulary into an infinity of date and tomes. Nor do we know any living novelist who has more completely the gift of awaiting the bodily senses through the medium of printer's ink."—Times.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
HE THAT WILL NOT WHEN HE MAY. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

"There is a great amount of beautiful work in this book."—Athenæum.

"This is a novel which no one can read without pleasure. The writer from the fulness of experience, with the mastery of methods. We do not know where to look among her sister novelists for any one who could—considering all things—have told the story so well."—Spectator.

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.
LOVE and LIFE: an Old Story in Eighteenth-Century Costume. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

"Miss Yonge has cleverly converted the most delicate fancies of the old allegory into eighteenth-century realism."—Graphic.

By E. A. DILLWYN.
The REBECCA RIOTER: a Story of Kililly Life. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

"A deeply interesting tale. Altogether we must pronounce 'The Rebecca Rioter' to be a remarkable book."—Athenæum.
 "The story is interesting, well sustained, and picturesque."—Academy.

By HAMILTON PAGE.
The LADY RESIDENT. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

"This book has much clever and sprightly writing in it."—Academy.

"It is an unquestionably clever and amusing book."—Globe.

With Illustrations and Maps, demy 8vo. 16s.
ISLAND LIFE; or, the Phenomena and Causes of Insular Fauna and Flora. Including a Revision and attempted Solution of the Problem of Geological Climates. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Author of 'The Malay Archipelago,' 'The Geographical Distribution of Animals,' &c.

ETIENNE DOLET: the Martyr of the Renaissance. A Biography, with a Bibliographical Appendix containing a Descriptive Catalogue of the Books written, edited, or printed by Dolet. By R. C. CHRISTIE, M.A., Lincoln College, Oxford, Chancellor of the Diocese of Manchester. With Illustrations, 8vo. 12s.

"So conscientious and so successful have been the labours of Mr. Christie, his work stands in the most important respects outside criticism. His book may be cited as, in many respects, a model biography."—Athenæum.

A VISIT to WAZAN, the Sacred City of Morocco. By ROBERT SPENCE WATSON. With Map and Illustrations, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ENGLISH MEN of LETTERS. Edited by JOHN MORLEY. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. (New Volumes.)

LOCKE. By Professor FOWLER. [Ready.]

WORDSWORTH. By F. W. H. MYERS. [December.]

DRYDEN. By G. SAINTSBURY. [In the press.]

STUDIES in DEDUCTIVE LOGIC: a Manual for Students. By W. STANLEY JEVONS, LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Political Economy in University College, London. Crown 8vo. 6s.

GUIDE to the STUDY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. By Dr. LUIGI CORSE, Professor in the University of Pavia. Translated from the Second Italian Edition. With a Preface by W. STANLEY JEVONS, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

The CHURCHES of ASIA: a Metaphysical Sketch of the Second Century. By the Rev. W. CUNNINGHAM, M.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE to the GALATIANS. A Revised Text, with Introduction, Notes, and Dissertations. By J. B. LIGHTFOOT, D.D. D.C.L. Bishop of Durham, and Rector of Trinity College, Cambridge. Sixth Edition. Demy 8vo. 12s.

NOTE-BOOK on PRACTICAL, SOLID, or DESCRIPTIVE GEOMETRY, containing Problems, with help for Solutions. By J. H. EDGAR, M.A., Lecturer on Mechanical Drawing Royal School of Mines, London, and G. S. FRITCHARD, late Professor of Descriptive Geometry Royal Military College, Woolwich. Fourth Edition. By ARTHUR D. MEESE, Assistant-Lecturer on Mechanical Drawing, Royal School of Mines, London. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PLINY'S LETTERS, Book III. Text of H. KIRK. With a Commentary by JOHN R. S. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, and Professor of Latin in the University of Cambridge. And a LIFE of PLINY by G. H. RENDALL, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Post 8vo. 8s.

[New Volumes Macmillan's Classical Series.]

MACMILLAN & Co. Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 300. 8vo. 6s.

Contents.

1. RECENT TRAVELS IN JAPAN.
2. CICERO.
3. ART COLLECTIONS.
4. MR. MORLEY'S DIDEROT.
5. THE CAMISARDS.

6. OLYMPIA.
7. THE NEWSPAPER PRESS.
8. THE MARSHAL DUKE OF SALDANHA.
9. SIX MONTHS OF A LIBERAL GOVERNMENT.

MISS BIRD.

UNBEATEN TRACKS in JAPAN. Travels of a Lady in the Interior, including Visits to the Aborigines of Yezo and the Shrine of Nikko and Ise. By ISABELLA BIRD, Author of 'A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains,' &c. With Map and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 3s. [Ready.]

LORD CAMPBELL.

LIFE and LETTERS of LORD CAMPBELL, Lord Chief Justice, and afterwards Lord Chancellor, of England. Based on his Autobiography, Journals, and Correspondence. Edited by his Daughter, the Hon. Mrs. HARDCASTLE. With Portrait. 2 vols. 8vo.

SIR E. J. REED.

JAPAN: its History, Traditions, and Religions. With the Narrative of a Visit to Japan in 1879. By Sir EDWARD J. REED, K.C.B. With Map and Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo. 3s. [Ready.]

LADY EASTLAKE.

Mrs. GROTE: a Sketch. By LADY EASTLAKE. Post 8vo. 6s. [Ready.]

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.

INDIA in 1880. By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.B. C.B. D.C.L., late Governor of Bombay, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and Finance Minister of India. 8vo.

CANON BARRY.

The MANIFOLD WITNESS for CHRIST. Being an attempt to exhibit the Combined Force of Various Evidences of Christianity, Direct and Indirect. The Boyle Lectures for 1877-78.

Part I. CHRISTIANITY and NATURAL THEOLOGY.
Part II. The POSITIVE EVIDENCE of CHRISTIANITY.

By CANON BARRY, D.D., Principal of King's College, London. 8vo. 12s. [Ready.]

DEAN STANLEY.

CHRISTIAN INSTITUTIONS: Essays on Ecclesiastical Subjects. By A. P. STANLEY, D.D., Dean of Westminster. 8vo.
Contents: Baptism—The Eucharist—Baptism in the Early Church—Eucharistic Sacrifice—Real Presence—Body and Blood of Christ—Atonement—Ecclesiastical Vestments—Basilicas—The Pope—The Litany—Festivals of the Early Christians.

MR. CLEMENTE MARKHAM.

A POPULAR ACCOUNT of PERUVIAN BARK, and its Introduction into British India, Ceylon, &c., and the Progress and Extent of its Cultivation. By O. R. MARKHAM, C.B. With Maps and Woodcuts. Post 8vo.

MR. A. S. MURRAY.

A HISTORY of GREEK SCULPTURE. From the Earliest Times down to the Age of Pheidias. By A. S. MURRAY, of the British Museum. With Illustrations. Royal 8vo.

MR. DARWIN.

The POWER of MOVEMENT in PLANTS. By CHARLES DARWIN, F.R.S., assisted by FRANCIS DARWIN. With Woodcuts. Crown 8vo.

MR. SEEBOHM.

SIBERIA in EUROPE: a Naturalist's Visit to the Valley of the Petchora in North East Russia. With Notices of Birds and their Migrations. By HENRY SEEBOHM, F.R.G.S. With Map and Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

THE PSALMS.

The PSALMS of DAVID. With Notes Explanatory and Critical. By the DEAN of WELLS, CANON C. J. ELLIOTT, and CANON F. O. COOK. Medium 8vo. (Reprinted from the 'Speaker's Commentary'.)

DR. SMILES.

The HUGUENOTS: their Settlements, Churches, and Industries in England and Ireland. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL.D. New Edition. Crown 8vo.

MR. RICHARDSON.

A SMALLER MANUAL of MODERN GEOGRAPHY. For Schools and Young Persons. By JOHN RICHARDSON, M.A., Diocesan Inspector of Schools, and Author of 'A School Manual of Modern Geography.'

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

MEMOIRS of the PERSONAL LIFE of DAVID LIVINGSTONE, LL.D., from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence. By W. G. BLAIR, D.D. With Portrait and Map. 8vo.

RIGHT HON. J. C. HERRIES.

MEMOIR of the PUBLIC LIFE of the RIGHT HON. J. C. HERRIES, during the Reigns of George III. and IV., William IV., and Queen Victoria. Founded on his Letters and other Unpublished Documents. By his Son, Sir EDWARD HERRIES, K.C.B. 2 vols. 8vo.

DR. SCHLIEHMANN.

ILIOS: a Complete History of the City and Country of the TROJANS, including all Recent Discoveries and Researches made on the Site of Troy and the Troad in 1871-3 and 1878-9. With an Autobiography of the Author. By Dr. SCHLIEHMANN, Author of 'Myceans and Tiryns.' With nearly 3,000 Illustrations. Imperial 8vo.

DR. S. SMILES.

DUTY. With Illustrations of Courage, Patience, and Endurance. By SAMUEL SMILES, LL.D. A Companion Volume to 'Self-Help,' 'Character,' and 'Thrift.' Post 8vo.

DUKE OF SALDANHA.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE and EVENTFUL CAREER of the DUKE of SALDANHA, Soldier and Statesman. With Selections from his Correspondence. By the CONDE DA CAENOTA. With Portrait and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. 3s. [Ready.]

COLONEL PLAYFAIR.

HANDBOOK to the MEDITERRANEAN. Describing the Principal Cities, Seaports, Harbours, and Border Lands, the Coasts of Africa, Spain, Italy, Dalmatia, Greece, Asia Minor. Forming a Guide to Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily, Malta, the Balearic Islands, Crete, Rhodes, Cyprus, &c. By Colonel E. L. PLAYFAIR. With nearly 50 Maps, Plans, &c. Post 8vo.

MR. A. HAYWARD.

SKETCHES of EMINENT STATESMEN and WRITERS, with other ESSAYS. Reprinted from the Quarterly Review, with Additions and Corrections. By A. HAYWARD, Q.C. 2 vols. 8vo.

Contents: Thiers—Bismarck—Cavour—Metternich—Mackintosh—Melbourne—Wellesley—Byron and Tennyson—Voltaire—St. Simon—Ségur—Dr. Dehmel—Holland House—Strawberry Hill.

DR. STEVENS.

MADAME DE STAËL: a Study of her Life and Times. The First Revolution and the First Empire. By A. STEVENS, LL.D. With Portraits. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

MR. L. J. JENNINGS.

RAMBLES AMONG the HILLS in the PEAK of DERBYSHIRE, and on the SOUTH DOWNS, with Sketches of People by the Way. By LOUIS J. JENNINGS, Author of 'Field Paths and Green Lanes in Sussex.' With Illustrations. Post 8vo.

MR. BURBIDGE.

The GARDENS of the SUN; or, a Naturalist's Journal on the Mountains and in the Forests and Swamps of Borneo and the Sulu Archipelago. By F. W. BURBIDGE. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo.

DR. BRUGSCH.

HISTORY of EGYPT under the PHARAOKHS. Derived entirely from the Monuments. With a Memoir on the Exodus of the Israelites and the Egyptian Monuments. By Dr. HENRY BRUGSCH. Second Edition, Revised. With New Preface and Notes by the Author. Maps. 2 vols. 8vo.

DR. BREWER.

ENGLISH STUDIES. By J. S. BREWER, M.A., late of the Record Office, and Professor of Modern History, King's College, London. 8vo.
Contents: New Sources of English History—Green's Short History of the English People—The Royal Supremacy and the History of its Introduction—Halsford House—The Stuart—Chalons—How to Study English History—Ancient London.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

By LORD ELLENBOROUGH.

A DIARY KEPT. By EDWARD LAW, EARL OF ELLENBOROUGH. Edited by LORD COLCHESTER. Containing Anecdotes of George the Fourth, William the Fourth, the Dukes of Cumberland, Wellington, and Richmond, Lord Hardinge, Sir Robert Peel, Lords Brougham, Grey, Bathurst, and Palmerston, Huskisson, Sir Wm. Knighton, Marchioness of Conyngham, Sir Henry Hallford, Lord Aberdeen, Grant, Lord Melville, &c. In 3 vols. demy 8vo.

By LADY FLORENCE DIXIE.

A RIDE THROUGH PATAGONIA. By LADY FLORENCE DIXIE. In demy 8vo. with numerous illustrations from sketches by Julius Beardsall. Engraved by Whymper and Pearson.

By H.H. PRINCE METTERNICH.

The MEMOIRS of PRINCE METTERNICH, 1815-1848. Containing particulars of the Congresses of Laybach, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Verona—the Eastern War of 1859, and the Revolutionary period of 1848, &c. Edited by his Son, FRINOS RICHARD METTERNICH; the Papers being Classified and Arranged by M. A. DE KINKOWSKY. Translated by MORINA JANSSE. In 3 vols. demy 8vo.

By DR. DUNKER.

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. From the German of Professor MAX DUNKER. By Dr. EVELYN ABBOTT, Balliol College, Oxford. The Fourth Volume, containing the History of India from the Earliest Times down to the Reign of Asoka. It describes the Movements of the Aryas from the Indus to the Ganges and their Settlements in the South of India, and gives an Account of the Conquests of Alexander and the Empire of Chandragupta. The various forms of Indian Philosophy and Religion are also traced, among which the Life and Teaching of Buddha occupies a prominent place. A short Summary is also given of the Indian Epics and the Institutes of Manu. In demy 8vo. 21s.

The Work should form a valuable assistance to Students preparing for Indian Civil Service Examination.

By DR. THIRLWALL.

LETTERS of the late DR. THIRLWALL, BISHOP of ST. DAVIDS. Edited by DEAN STANLEY and DEAN FELLOWES. In 2 vols. demy 8vo.

By MISS WILKINSON.

A LADY'S TOUR in CORSICA. By GERTRUDE FORDE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

By ADELIAIDE KEMBLE.

PAST HOURS. By the late ADELIAIDE SARTON. Edited, and with a Preface, by her Daughter, Mrs. GORDON. In 2 vols. small crown 8vo.

By FREDERICK WEDMORE.

STUDIES in ENGLISH ART. By FREDERICK WEDMORE. The Second Series, containing Romney, Constable, David Cox, George Cruikshank, Mayson, Burns Jones, and Albert Moore. In crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

By M. BURDO.

A TRIP up the NIGER and BENUE. By ADALFUS BURDO. Translated by Mrs. GEORGE STURGE. In demy 8vo. with illustrations, 7s. 6d.

By H. STONEHEWER COOPER.

The CORAL LANDS of the PACIFIC; being an Account of nearly all the Inhabited Islands of the Pacific, their Peoples and their Products. By H. STONEHEWER COOPER. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with illustrations.

CONTENTS:—Volume I. The FIJI GROUP. — Volume II. SAMOA, TONGA, the LINE ISLANDS, the CAROLINES, the MARQUESAS, SOLOMON GROUP, the NEW HEBRIDES, and OTHER ISLANDS.

By CHARLES WOOD.

ROUND ABOUT NORWAY. By CHARLES W. WOOD, Author of 'Through Holland,' &c. In crown 8vo. with numerous illustrations.

By THE REV. W. R. W. STEPHENS.

DEAN HOOK; his Life and Letters. Edited by the Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS, Vicar of Woolbeding, author of 'Life of St. John Chrysostom,' &c. 'The POPULAR EDITION,' in 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6s.

By THE REV. R. H. BARHAM.

The INGOLDSBY LYRICS. By the Rev. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM, Author of 'The Ingoldsby Legends,' Edited by his Son, the Rev. R. DALTON BARHAM. In 1 vol.

By THE REV. R. D. BARHAM.

The LIFE of the REV. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM, Author of 'The Ingoldsby Legends,' &c. A New Edition, Revised and Rewritten by his Son, the Rev. R. DALTON BARHAM. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

By LIEUTENANT CONDER.

TENT WORK in PALESTINE. By Lieutenant CLAUDE R. CONDER, R.E. A Popular Edition, in crown 8vo. with illustrations, 7s. 6d.

By COLONEL WARREN.

The TEMPLE or the TOMB. By CHARLES WARREN, Author of 'Underground Jerusalem.' In demy 8vo. with illustrations, 10s. 6d.

By M. TISSOT.

UNKNOWN HUNGARY. By VICTOR TISSOT. Translated by Mrs. BRODIE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

Standard Works.

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. Translated from the German of Professor MAX DUNKER, by EVELYN ABBOTT, D.C.L., M.A., of Balliol College, Oxford. The First Volume contains: Book I. HISTORY; Book II. THE ARMYING NATIONS. Vols. I and II demy 8vo. 21s. The Second Volume contains an Account of the Rise of Assyria, of the Ptolemian Colonies, the Hebrew Monarchy and the later Ptolemies.

Professor MOMMSEN'S HISTORY of ROME.

from the Earliest Time to the Period of its Decline. Translated (with the author's sanction, and additions) by the Rev. W. P. DICKSON. With an Introduction by Dr. SCHMIDT. 4 vols. crown 8vo. 21s. 6d. Or separately, Vols. I and II 12s., Vol. III 10s. 6d., Vol. IV with Index 12s.

Also, a LIBRARY EDITION, in 4 vols. demy 8vo. 21s. 6d. These Volumes are not sold separately. The Index to the 4 Volumes separately, each 2s. 6d.

Professor CURTIUS'S HISTORY of GREECE.

Translated by A. W. WARD, M.A. Vols. I and II, each 12s., Vols. III, IV, and V with Index, each 12s.

"A history known to scholars as one of the profoundest, most original, and instructive of modern times."—Globe.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S RISE and PROGRESS of the ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. First 8vo. 12s. 6d.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES of the WORLD. from Marathon to Waterloo. Crown 8vo. with Plans, &c. Also, a LIBRARY EDITION, 8vo. with Plans, &c. 6s.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S HISTORY of the OTTOMAN EMPIRE, from the Beginning of their Empire to the Close of the 18th Century. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"It should be added to every library."—Family Fair.

The LIVES of the ARCHBISHOPS of CANTUARY from St. Augustine to Jacon. By the late Very Rev. Walter FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D. Dean of Chichester. 11 vols. demy 8vo. 21s. 6d. Or sold separately, as follows: Vol. I 12s., Vol. II 12s., Vols. III and IV 12s., Vol. V 12s., Vols. VI and VII 12s., Vol. VIII 12s., Vol. IX 12s., Vol. X 12s., Vol. XI 12s. The bound edition accompanied with Vol. VI.

The CHURCH and its ORDINANCES: Sermons by the late WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D. Dean of Chichester. Edited by the Rev. WALTER HOOK, Master of Balliol. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

PARISH SERMONS. By the late WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D. Dean of Chichester. Edited by the Rev. WALTER HOOK, Master of Balliol. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ESSAYS: CLASSICAL and THEOLOGICAL.

By the late CORNOP THIRLWALL, D.D. Bishop of St. David's. Edited by the Rev. GORDON FELLOWES. Demy 8vo. 6s.

The HEAVENS: an Illustrated Handbook of Popular Astronomy. By ANDREW GULLMIN. Edited by J. NORMAN LOCKYER, F.R.S., F.R.A.S. New and Revised Edition, embodying the latest Discoveries in Astronomical Science. Demy 8vo. with over 200 illustrations, price 12s.

MARVELS of the HEAVENS. From the French of Flammarion. By the LOCKYER, Translator of 'The Heavens.' Crown 8vo. with 40 illustrations, 6s.

The LIFE of LORD PALMERSTON. With Selections from his Diaries and Correspondence. By the Hon. EVELYN ABBOTT, M.P. The New Edition, 1 vol. crown 8vo. with illustrations to each Volume, 12s.

The INGOLDSBY LEGENDS; or, Mirth and Marvels.

The ANNOTATED EDITION. A Library Edition with a History of each Legend and other Notes. The illustrations by Cruikshank and Leach. 2 vols. 8vo. 21s.

The ILLUSTRATED EDITION. In crown 8vo. with 40 illustrations by Cruikshank, Leach, and Tenniel. 6s.

The CARMINE EDITION. In crown 8vo. with Garmine Border and 17 illustrations by Cruikshank and Leach. 6s. 6d. 10s. 6d.

The EDINBURGH EDITION. In large type, crown 8vo. With 40 illustrations by Cruikshank, Tenniel, and the Master. Specially re-arranged for this Edition by George Peckham. 6s.

The POPULAR EDITION. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The VICTORIA (Pocket) EDITION. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

FRANK BUCKLAND'S CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY.

The PEOPLE'S EDITION. 4 vols. Illustrated, 12s. Or separately:—

FIRST SERIES, containing Rats, Serpents, Fishes, Molekys, &c. 2s. 6d.

SECOND SERIES, containing Wild Cats, Eagles, Wolves, Dogs, &c. 2s. 6d.

THIRD SERIES, containing Lions, Tigers, Foxes, Porcupines, &c. 2s. 6d.

FOURTH SERIES, containing Giants, Mermaids, Salmon, &c. 2s. 6d.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO., PUBLISHERS.
SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY.
 COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW VOLUME.
ALTERATION IN THE PRICE.

Ten Years since SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE was commenced, and now 150,000 are printed monthly, with an English circulation of many thousands. To win such a position in the world of Art and Letters is a great achievement, and to maintain it so that in the opinion of many authorities it may be considered as

THE GREATEST LITERARY SUCCESS OF THE CENTURY,

Capitalists, Editors, Authors, Engravers, and Printers combine with each other to produce an ideal thing. "America may well be proud of such a Magazine, as in Pictorial Art alone all the English Magazine Annuals together are not equal to a single number of Scribner's Monthly."

On November 1, a New Volume will be commenced, embracing amongst its varied Contents:

PETER THE GREAT AS RULER AND REFORMER. By Eugene Schuyler.

ESSAY ON WALT WHITMAN. By C. Stedman.

NOVELETTES. By George W. Cable, Kate Putnam Osgood, Mrs. Schayer.

LITERARY AND BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAYS AND SKETCHES. By Richard H. Dana, Clarence Cook, R. H. Stoddard, &c.

TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE. By C. F. Gordon Cumming, &c.

THE WHOLE FULLY ILLUSTRATED.

And the Price per Number will be raised from One Shilling to One Shilling and Fourpence.

The determination of the Proprietors to keep this Magazine up to a standard that has hitherto been considered unapproachable, obliges this change of price.

All Volumes, of which Twenty are now published, can be supplied at 10s. 6d. per Volume; or in Parts, at 1s. 4d.

ANY BOOKSELLER IN THE UNITED KINGDOM OR THE COLONIES WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIBERS' NAMES.

ST. NICHOLAS.—SCRIBNER'S CHILDREN'S MAGAZINE.

COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW VOLUME.

On November 1 will be Published, Price One Shilling.

THE NEW NUMBER OF

ST. NICHOLAS.

The Agency now reverts to ourselves, and all back Numbers or Volumes from the commencement of the Magazine can be supplied to Order.

A GRAND CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Will be ready about December 20th, 1880,

And, without exception, it will be the highest production in Juvenile Literature issued in the year 1880.

Immediate Orders are requested to prevent disappointment in Supply.

NOTICE.

Early in November will be issued,

WARNE'S ILLUSTRATED INTERNATIONAL ANNUAL.

In Imperial 8vo. 128 pp., Picture Cover.

With Original Contributions by English and Foreign Authors,
AND CHOICE ILLUSTRATIONS.

A Prospectus announcing the Author's and Editor's Contributions will shortly be issued.

LONDON: BEDFORD-STREET, STRAND.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

POPULAR NOVELS, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DOROTHY FOX.'
ADAM and EVE. By Mrs. Farr,
Author of 'Dorothy Fox.' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MR. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL.

The RED RAG. By R. Mounteney
JEPHSON. Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series.
By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, Author of 'East Lynne,' &c.
3 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE FIRST VIOLIN.'

The WELLFIELDS. By Jessie
FOTHERGILL. Author of 'Probation' and 'The First Violin.' 3 vols. crown 8vo.

BENTLEY'S EDITION.

THE WORKS OF JANE AUSTEN.

THE ONLY COMPLETE EDITION.

Library Edition in Six Volumes, crown 8vo. well printed and bound in cloth, with a Memoir and Portrait of the Author, and Five Illustrations on Steel by Pichers, &c. Each Volume can be had also

I. SENSE AND SENSIBILITY.

"I have now read over again all Miss Austen's novels. Charming they are. There are in the world no compositions which approach mine in perfection."—Monday's Journal.

II. PRIDE AND PREJUDICE.

"The perfect type of a novel of common life; the story is so completely and dramatically told, the language so simple, the shades of human character so clearly presented, and the operation of various motives so delicately traced, that this gifted woman to have been the perfect mistress of her art."—Archer's English Literature.

"One of the best of Miss Austen's unequalled works. How perfectly it is written!"—Spectator.

III. EMMA.

"Shakespeare has neither equal nor second, but among the writers who have approached nearest to the manner of the great master we have no hesitation in placing Jane Austen, a woman of whom England is justly proud."—Monday's Journal.

IV. MANSFIELD PARK.

"Miss Austen has a talent for describing the involvements and feelings and characters of ordinary life which is to me the most wonderful I ever came with. Her exquisite touch, which renders commonplace things and character interesting from the truth of the description and sentiment, is dearly to me."—Sir Walter Scott.

V. NORTHANGER ABBEY.

"Read Dickens's 'Hard Times,' and another book of Fanny's 'Letters.'
Read 'Northanger Abbey,' worth all Dickens and 'Pity' together. Yet it was the work of a girl. She was certainly not more than twenty-six.
Wonderful creature!"—Monday's Journal.

PERSUASION.

"Miss Austen's name will outlive the generations that did not appreciate her, and her works will be ranked with the English classics as long as the language lasts."—Atlas.

VI. LADY SUSAN.

"We do not know a more agreeable writer than Miss Austen. The great charm of her character is in their reality. They are the truest pictures of English middle and country life of her own time."—Literary Gleaner.

"Miss Austen's merits have long been established beyond question;
she is emphatically the novelist of home."—Spectator.

THE WATSONS.

With a Memoir and Portrait of the Author.

"Miss Austen's life, as well as her talent, seems to us unique among the lives of authoresses of fiction."—Quarterly Review.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

Now ready, in 1 vol. 8vo. 1s.

An ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip,
Dramatic, Narrative, and Descriptive: from the Recollections of an Actor in Australia, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, California, Nevada, Central America, and New York. By EDMUND LEATHERS.

Now ready, in 1 vol. 8vo. 1s.

MONSIEUR GUIZOT in PRIVATE

LIFE (1767-1874). By his Daughter, MADAME DE WITT. Translated by Mrs. SIMPSON.

"Madame de Witt has done justice to her father's memory in an admirable record of his life. Mrs. Simpson's translation of this singularly interesting book is in accuracy and grace worthy of the original and of the subject."—Saturday Review.

The VILLAGE OF PALACES; or,
CHRONICLES OF CHILSEA. By the Rev. A. G. L'ESTRANGE.
3 vols. crown 8vo. 2s.

"These volumes show some out-of-the-way research, and are written in a lively and gossiping style."—Times, Oct. 21.

CHEAP EDITION OF YOUNG Mrs.

JARDINE. By the AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.' Forming the New Volume of HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY.
6s. bound and illustrated.

THE NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ST. OLAVS':

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 2 vols.

DIMPLE THORPE.

By the Author of 'ST. OLAVS,' &c.

Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

STRICTLY TIED UP.

A NOVEL.

"This novel may be described as a comedy of life and character, and in the changing society to which we are introduced the author shows abundant knowledge of the world. There is humour as well as sufficient sentiment in the volumes, and not a few of the descriptions, both of people and scenery, are exceedingly graphic and piquant. While the dramatist is happily conceived and carried out with no little ingenuity."—
Saturday Review.

NEW NOVEL BY MISS AMELIA B. EDWARDS.

SECOND EDITION, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

ROY and VIOLA.

By Mrs. FORRESTER,
Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' &c.

"An admirable tale, told by one who can vividly describe and interestively comment on the manners and personal of modern society."—
The World.

"'Roy and Viola' rivets the attention of the reader to such a degree that he is loth to put down the book even for a moment. The characters are genuine men and women, true types of human nature, in whom fortune and in whose lives the reader cannot fail to be deeply interested."—Chart Journal.

NEW NOVEL BY MISS AMELIA B. EDWARDS.

SECOND EDITION, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

LORD BRACKENBURY.

By AMELIA B. EDWARDS,
Author of 'Barbara's History,' &c.

"'Lord Brackenbury' is a very readable story. The author has well conceived the purpose of high-class novel writing, and succeeded in his small measure in attaining it. There is plenty of variety, cheerful dialogues, and general work in the book."—Advertiser.

"A story that can be read with not a little interest. The plot is constructed with much skill."—Saturday Review.

"'Lord Brackenbury' is pleasant reading from beginning to end."— Academy.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By
SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of 'His Last Days,' &c. 3 vols.

"There is freshness and variety in this story and some of its characters are very prettily conceived. The book is well worth reading."— Advertiser.

"A novel of no common merit. It is brightly and vividly written. It abounds in sprightly conversation and shrewdness, and it contains a great deal of dialogue at once lively and natural, at once appropriate and amusing."—Pall Mall.

FORESTALLED. By M.

BETHAM-EDWARDS, Author of 'Kitty,' 'Bridget,' &c. 3 vols. 2s.

"An original, interesting, and carefully written story."—Spectator.

A VERY OPAL. By C. L. Pirklas.

"A novel of considerable merit. There is at times a kind of quiet humour which reminds one of Jane Austen."—Advertiser.

A. & C. BLACK.

In demy 8vo. price 24s.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GÜNTHER, F.R.S., &c.,
Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.
Illustrated with 320 Wood Engravings.

[Next week.

In demy 8vo. with Portrait and Fac-simile of German,

MEMORIALS OF
ROBERT SMITH CANDLISH, D.D.,
Late Minister of St. George's Free Church, and Principal of the New College, Edinburgh.

By WILLIAM WILSON, D.D.,
With Concluding Chapter by ROBERT RAINY, D.D.

[Next month.

In crown 8vo.

THE WAY TO THE CITY, AND OTHER SERMONS.

By the late ALEXANDER RALEIGH, D.D.,
Author of 'Quiet Resting Places,' &c.

[Next month.

NEW ISSUE OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

CENTENARY EDITION (Copyright). In 25 vols. crown 8vo.

This popular Edition of the Waverley Novels, edited by the late DAVID LAING, LL.D., contains several Notes by Scott which are to be found in this Edition only, and is enriched with 150
Steel Plates.

VOLUME I. to XII. now ready. Price 3s. 6d. each.

DE QUINCEY'S WORKS.

THE COLLECTED WORKS, in 16 vols. crown 8vo. price, in cloth, 5s. 12s.; or in Roxburghe binding, gilt tops, 4s. 4s.

CONTENTS.

- VOL. I. CONFESSIONS of an ENGLISH OPIUM-EATER.
" II. RECOLLECTIONS of the LAKE POETS.
" III. LAST DAYS of IMMANUEL KANT.
" IV. THE ENGLISH MAIL COACH.
" V. Dr. SAMUEL PARR, &c.
" VI. RICHARD BENTLEY, &c.
" VII. PROTESTANTISM, and other ESSAYS.
" VIII. LEADERS in LITERATURE.
" IX. The CÆSARS, and other Writings.
" X. STYLE and RHETORIC.
" XI. COLERIDGE and OPIUM-EATING.
" XII. SPECULATIONS, LITERARY and PHILO-SOPHIC.
" XIII. LETTERS, CONVERSATION, &c.
" XIV. AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCHES, 1790-1803.
" XV. BIOGRAPHIES.
" XVI. SCRAPES de PROFUNDIS, and GENERAL
INDEX.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS.

COMPLETE EDITION.

Edited by JOHN H. INGRAM.

In 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Memoir and Index, price 14s.

1. TALES GROTESQUE.
2. TALES ARABESQUE.
3. POEMS.
4. CRITICISM, &c.

Edinburgh: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880.

CONTENTS.

ENGLAND'S HISTORY OF THE CRIMEAN WAR ...	406
MRS. BIRD'S TRAVELS IN JAPAN ...	407
A CAVALIER'S NOTE BOOK ...	408
NOTES OF THE WEEK ...	409
LOCAL HISTORY ...	430
LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	433
SUBSCRIPTION LISTS: THE GIPSIEN IN NORTHERN EUROPE; SARKENT AS A LIVING LANGUAGE; THE ORIGIN OF MONOTHEISM; KING TARRADENES AND HIS COACH; PROFESSOR FOWLER'S 'LOCKER'; 'BURN' ...	432-434
LITERARY Gossip ...	434
SCIENCE—LIBRARY TABLE; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; MEYTINGER; Gossip ...	435-437
FINE ARTS—'JACOB'S DREAM', Gossip ...	437
MUSIC—THE WEEK, Gossip ...	438-441
DRAMA—THIS WEEK, Gossip ...	441

LITERATURE

The Invasion of the Crimea: its Origin, and an Account of its Progress down to the Death of Lord Raglan. By A. W. Kinglake.—Vol. VI. The Winter Troubles. (Blackwood & Sons.)

The sub-heading of this volume, "Winter Troubles," must have led many to expect pages entirely devoted to a description of the fights and sufferings of our troops during the first winter passed in the Crimea. The title is not, however, borne out by what Mr. Kinglake has written. That is, indeed, a valuable contribution to the history of the reign of Queen Victoria, but it is out of place in a work intended to enlighten the general public concerning the military operations during the winter of 1854-55. Mr. Kinglake's style is very attractive, but that fact will not quite reconcile his readers to the absorption of a good third of the book by home politics and the influence of a single newspaper on the course of events. Neither is it satisfactory, when the reader is hungering for brilliant descriptions of the personal heroism of English soldiers, to be put off with elaborate arguments concerning the ill effect of the personal military rule of the sovereign. Besides, the question whether Government departments in London or staff officers in the Crimea should be held responsible for the sufferings and shortcomings of our army has long since been settled. To reopen the controversy is to dissect "a subject" twice, to flog a dead horse. There are, however, some personal matters connected with the relations between Lord Raglan, on the one hand, and the Duke of Newcastle and Lord Panmure on the other, which are new, or at all events set forth in a fresh and attractive manner. Up to the middle of December, 1854, the Duke of Newcastle and Lord Raglan had been on the very best possible terms. The duke was, moreover, kept fully informed, for Lord Raglan supplemented his official despatches by writing private letters. The Secretary of War was therefore thoroughly aware of the condition of the army, Lord Raglan's difficulties, and the progress and prospects of the campaign.

"When unofficial accounts from the Crimea began to pour in upon the Duke of Newcastle, he could hardly have learnt from them anything of really grave moment which had not before been imparted to him by Lord Raglan in drier figures and words, but the detailed though fragmentary narratives conveyed in their new poignant forms impressed his mind more acutely than sober general statement; and perhaps it might be said not inaccurately that what previously he only had known, he now both knew and imagined. Though not throwing any really fresh light on the troubles besetting our army, the numberless anecdotes brought him inflicted new, separate pangs. Whoever has learnt the conditions under which our soldiers were labouring must of course know what room there would be for distressing accounts, and how easily any narrators describing vexatious hindrances and misfortunes and troubles of various kinds might attribute them all to 'mismanagement' instead of the more stubborn causes from which we before deduced them."

Confused and worried by irresponsible and, in many instances, anonymous complaints, and we fear to a great extent terrified by the outburst of popular indignation, the Duke of Newcastle, without due inquiry among the various scattered departments under his control at home, without giving Lord Raglan an opportunity of explaining or denying the accusations made against him, deliberately threw Lord Raglan over. On the 18th of December the duke began a series of letters in which he more or less assumed that Lord Raglan and his staff had been grievously to blame. Yet, in a private letter written in the beginning of December, he spoke of Lord Raglan's having been "so unfairly and ungenerously attacked by the ruffianly Times." Mr. Kinglake on this point remarks:—

"By offering a sort of condolence to Lord Raglan in private, the Duke of course ran no risk of incurring newspaper vengeance, and on the other hand, did nothing at all towards vindicating the assailed commander."

At length, on the 6th of January, the accusations against Lord Raglan and his staff were regularly formulated in an official despatch. This despatch Mr. Kinglake describes as "beyond measure wordy," and how little the Duke of Newcastle was qualified to act as censor is proved by the following facts:—

"Forgetting once more the dispersed state of our manifold London war offices, he imagined that, because he knew of no requisitions sent home from the Crimea by the Adjutant and Quartermaster Generals, none such could have really come in; and it occurred to him that this supposed absence of demands by two members of the Headquarter Staff might be used as a proof of their inattention to the wants of the army. His next mistake was that of attributing to the same two officers the deficiency of land-transport. Upon grounds thus weak, or, to speak more exactly, thus null, he founded his charges against the Adjutant and Quartermaster Generals. By sending an inquiry to the right office, the Duke might have soon learnt his error on the subject of requisitions; and indeed, would have not only found that abundant demands from the Crimea had come in long ago, but that the requisitions of the Quartermaster-General alone (although made for things perfectly simple) had proved greater than London could meet within any fair compass of time; whilst a message sent to the Treasury, or a glance at the Commissariat handbook, would have averted the mistake he committed on the subject of land-transport."

Knowing well that no one could be found to replace him, the duke tried to induce Lord Raglan to sacrifice his adjutant and quartermaster generals, and continually urged that suggestion upon him. Lord Raglan, who was surely the best judge, thought highly of Generals Airey and Estcourt, said so most emphatically, and positively refused to be concerned in superseding them. The Duke of Newcastle was succeeded in the beginning of February, 1855, by Lord Panmure, who seems to have been as coarse in mind as he was in dress and language. Like many other rough, violent men, he was a coward in the face of public opinion, and he joined eagerly in the cry for that old Border style of justice which consists in hanging a man first and inquiring into his guilt afterwards. On the 12th of February he addressed a despatch to Lord Raglan, repeating and strengthening the Duke of Newcastle's accusation—to which there had not yet been time to receive an answer—in a tone which can only be properly described by the French term brutal. Mr. Kinglake ascribes its violence to the approach of a sharp attack of gout. One accusation, at all events, contained in the despatch was utterly unfounded. Lord Panmure complained that Lord Raglan had not kept the Government fully informed. The slightest care in examining Lord Raglan's private and public correspondence with the Duke of Newcastle would have shown Lord Panmure that such a charge was simply preposterous. One phrase stands out as especially insulting: it is, "Your staff seem to have known as little as yourself the condition of your gallant men." Now in his correspondence there is ample proof that Lord Raglan was fully acquainted with the state of the army, frequently visited it, and imparted his knowledge to the Duke of Newcastle. It is scarcely credible that with this despatch went a private letter from Lord Panmure, containing the following passages:—

"I wish.....to stand between you and those who are so angry at all that has happened..... You have done great and gallant deeds..... You have done us great service; nobody could have done better in keeping up friendly relations with our Allies."

The reply to the offensive despatch was firm, dignified, and temperate. The following passage is a fair sample of Lord Raglan's answer:—

"Having now replied to the several points in your despatch, I must be permitted before I close this to express the pain, mortification, and, I might add, surprise with which the abuse that has been unscrupulously lavished upon me by unavowed and irresponsible parties has been entertained by your lordship and your predecessor. My lord, I have passed a life of honour. I have served the Crown for above fifty years. I have for the greater portion of that time been connected with the business of the army. I have served under the greatest man of the age more than half my life, have enjoyed his confidence, and have, I am proud to say, been ever regarded by him as a man of truth and some judgment as to the qualifications of officers, and yet, having been placed in the most difficult position in which an officer was ever called upon to serve, and having successfully carried out difficult operations, with the entire approbation of the Queen, which is now my only solace, I am charged with every species of neglect, and the opinion, which it was my solemn duty to give of the merits of officers, and the assertions which I have made in support of it, are set at naught, and your lordship is satisfied that your irresponsible informants are more worthy of credit than I am."

Lord Panmure on receiving this answer wrote a second despatch, in which he dwelt on the subject of the Balaklava road, harped on the removal of the headquarter staff, and again asserted that the Government had not been kept well informed about the state of the army. He was, however, distinctly apologetic in tone as regarded Lord Raglan personally. That the road could not have been constructed is clear. Lord Raglan simply could not spare a single man from the front for the work. That the horses and mules died in vast numbers was due to non-compliance with the requisitions for forage. That, indeed, the chief causes of the sufferings of the troops were our unprepared condition at the commencement of the war, the incapacity of the Treasury to perform commissariat functions, the severity of the winter, and the great storm is clear. At the same time we cannot disguise from ourselves the fact that some blame was due to a cumbrous system of administration in the field and the routine habits of certain departmental officers in the Crimea and Turkey.

The consequences were indeed terrible, and are briefly yet eloquently set forth by the statistics of mortality and sickness. From the beginning of November, 1854, till the end of February, 1855, 8,898 men perished in hospital; while on the last day of February, out of an average strength for the month of 30,919, no fewer than 13,608 were lying in hospital. The French enjoyed many advantages which were denied to us, yet out of the 309,268 land service troops sent out by France during the war 95,615 were killed, died, or disappeared! Owing, however, to their large and constant reinforcements, they managed to keep up a fair show of strength, whereas towards the close of the winter our regiments had dwindled to mere skeletons. The three battalions of Guards started from England upwards of 2,600 strong, and received heavy reinforcements both in July and November; yet at the end of January they could only muster for duty 312 men. The 63rd almost disappeared, only thirty men remaining fit for duty out of an original strength of over 1,000.

"Thus what seemed to be threatened was—not simply the weakening but—the virtual extinction of our army. In proportion to numbers, the English army was undergoing at one time a fiercer havoc than that which ravaged London in the days of the great plague; but no awe like the awe of a city that is silenced by plague possessed the English camp. The camp, it is true, was quiet, but the silence maintained by our soldiery was the silence of weariness, the silence of men bearing cold and hardships of all kinds with obstinate pride."

The mortality in the hospitals on the Bosphorus was even more appalling than that in the Crimea. In February, 1855, the mortality stood at the awful figures of forty-two per cent.! The increased energy brought to bear, the expenditure of science, money, and administrative skill, soon after began to take effect, and during the last twenty days of June, 1855, the per-centage of mortality in the Levantine hospitals had fallen to two.

A specially interesting portion of this volume is that which is devoted to refuting the assertions of those who defend the administrative system with which we began the Crimean War by saying that somehow or another it worked well in the great war between France and England. Mr. Kinglake shows that during the first seventeen years of that war England, though able to boast of a few isolated victories, could point to no successful campaigns on land, all her triumphs having been achieved by the navy. Then three new forces came into being. The first of these was "an administrative engine established by Wellington personally at the seat of war." The second was the influence of the great duke on the councils of ministers. The third was the temporary weakening of the personal government of the army by the Crown, and the appointment to the Department of War and the Colonies of an able young staff officer, Sir Henry Bunbury, as under-secretary for war business.

"England rose, as we saw, to this pitch of military greatness by the use of aids and contrivances which, because never forming a part of her permanently established administration, may be rightly called 'adventitious' or otherwise 'makeshift resources'; and accordingly, a sailor might say of her at the close of the war that she came into port under jury-masts; but she came in nevertheless—or rather so much the more—with a radiant glory surrounding her, and carried besides such a treasure of warlike experience as she never before had earned in all her old years of strife. To try to remember a little the art of fence learnt in so long, so mighty a war, and to board the experience gathered—this, all see, was what prudence—the simplest prudence—enjoined."

Unfortunately the opposite course was pursued. As the author aptly puts it,

"The strange generation of Englishmen who had dared and achieved giant enterprises against the might of Napoleon were now in a humour for making riotous bonfires of their warlike machinery."

Mr. Kinglake echoes eagerly, but not very wisely, nor in the best taste, Lord Raglan's complaints that the correspondents of the English papers, especially of the Times, were so indiscreet in the reports and criticisms they sent home that they furnished valuable information to the Russians. In doing this he supplies a sketch of the work of the editor of a great daily paper, which is exceedingly interesting, and, though written from an adverse point of view, not ungenerous:—

"Deriving from nature large gifts, and by circumstance clothed with vast means of acting upon the volitions of men, and sometimes even ruling events, Deane, as may well be supposed, did not show the real eagerness of his nature in the weak, bustling way of people reckoned for nothing, whose time is of scarce any worth; and indeed he had the outward composure, the air of power not yet put forth that becomes a strong man of action; but it always could be seen that his energies were rather compressed than lulled—that the furnace, if so one may speak, had its fires 'banked up' in the day-time, yet still was always aglow, always ready to blaze into action an hour or two before midnight. When already in his carriage and moving to the scene of his midnight labours, kind nature used to grant him some minutes of sleep, upon which, because giving fresh strength, he used to set a great value; but from the moment of his entering the editor's room until four or five o'clock in the morning, the strain he had to put on his faculties must have been always great, and in stirring times almost prodigious; for although of course the great bulk of the manifold work required for constructing a number of the Times was performed by subordinates, and although it rested with others—perhaps I might say with one other—to determine what—at least for a while—should be the chosen policy of the journal, as editor had to execute the general design; and these were the hours of night when often he had to decide—to decide of course with great swiftness—between two or more courses of action momentarily different; when, besides, he must judge the appeals brought up to the paramount arbiter from all kinds of men, from all sorts of earthly tribunals; when despatches of moment, when telegrams fraught with grave tidings, when notes hastily scribbled in the Lords or the Commons, were from time to time coming in to confirm, or disturb—perhaps even to annul—former reckonings; and these, besides, were the hours when—on questions newly obtruding, yet so closely, so importunately present that they would have to be met before sunrise—he somehow must cease to spring up sudden essays, invectives, and arguments which only strong power of brain with even much toil could supply.In conversation, one day, a great leading-article writer conveyed an idea of his craft by using one of those metaphors which in half a minute or less did at once all the work of long statements. 'To write a leading article,' he said, 'may take only from two hours to two hours and a half, but then all the rest of your time you are a crouching tiger, waiting, waiting, to make your spring.' To be lord of these 'crouching tigers,' and—before two o'clock in the morning—say which should spring, and at whom—this was one of the midnight tasks devolving on the editor. But only one out of many. If high organization averted a too-anxious hurry, it could not dispense with the strain put on members of men who by consent must achieve great and varied labours within a fast narrowing space of hours, and finally, minutes. And, of course, labours fraught with great consequences to numbers of mortals could not go on uninterrupted by molestation from without. Because of some instant below, great in name, or mighty in earnestness, the janitors charged to protect a great editor's too-precious moments would from time to time be importuned to take in a card with eager words written in pencil; and amongst the misuses thus pressed, there used to be now and then one which could not be safely despised, nor even indeed withstood. Which of any appeals such as these might drive its way through all barriers, would depend upon the vigilance of the outposts, and the discriminating sagacity exercised by an inner line of sentries on guard; but meanwhile comes a time when the editor sees laid before him a strip of newly-printed paper, and understands at a glance that one of the 'crouching tigers' has now made his spring; for what he holds in his fingers is a 'proof' of the 'leading article'—one perhaps of great moment—for which he gave his brief order some three or four hours before. For the delicate task then awaiting him any other than he would require to be in a state of tranquillity, would require to have ample time. But for him there are no such indulgences. Whilst seizing the import and range of the new creation, and bringing it into smooth harmony with his general design—nay, even into conformity with his standard of literary excellence—he sees the hand of the clock growing more and more premonitory, and the time drawing nearer and nearer when his paper must, must be 'made up.'"

Of the work done by the Times Fund Mr. Kinglake speaks in the following terms:—

"When Mr. Macdonald asked Dr. Monro, the chief of the Soutari hospitals, whether anything were wanted, the answer he received was precise. It informed him that 'nothing was wanted.' Upon making a like inquiry in another and more august quarter, he was not only met by a positive unflinching disclaimer of any occasion for help required by our soldiers or sailors, but even received a suggestion pointing out how the fund thus pronounced to be wholly unneeded for any hospital purpose might perhaps, after all, be applied. His adviser solemnly observed that, to disembarass his hands of a fund not required for its purpose, and also meet a real want long said to have made itself felt, he might spend the money in building. Name of Wonder! in building what? Well, in building an appropriate temple for 'Church of England worship at Peru!' Yet at that very time wants as dire as to include want of hospital furniture and of shirts for the patients, and of the commonest means for maintaining cleanliness, were afflicting our stricken soldiery in the hospitals. However, from the Lady-in-Chief Mr. Macdonald soon learnt the truth, and the course he then took was one of the simplest kind, but it worked a mighty change. He bought the things needed, and the authorities succumbing at last to this excruciating form of demonstration had to witness the supplying of wants which before they had refused to confess. So now, besides using the stores which she had at her own command, the Lady-in-Chief could impart wants felt in our hospitals to Mr. Macdonald with the certainty that he would hasten to meet them by applying what was called the 'Times Fund' in purchasing the articles needed."

In conclusion, we cannot but express our regret that Mr. Kinglake has yielded to the temptation of devoting so much space to an exposition of his pet theories concerning the administration of the army. That space is much needed, for in one more volume he undertakes to bring the history of the war to an end, and the period as yet untouched embraces a considerable amount of fighting, and is fruitful in matter for controversy.

Unbeaten Tracks in Japan: an Account of Travels in the Interior, including Visits to the Aborigines of Yezo and the Shrines of Nikkô and Ise. By Isabella L. Bird. 2 vols. (Murray.)

THE present work is in many respects in marked contrast to Sir Edward Reed's book on Japan, which we reviewed in these columns last week. Unlike that author, who was greeted by a number of eager hosts on his landing at Yokohama, Miss Bird disembarked friendless and alone; and instead of travelling by rail and steamer through the "show" parts of Japan, accompanied by a host of native officials who kept from sight all that was out of harmony with progress and contentment, she journeyed, followed only by a native servant, through the wilds of the country, over ways which can scarcely be called roads and on the backs of animals which hardly deserve the name of horses. The title of her book is amply justified.

Miss Bird considers that the ignorance of English people concerning everything relating to Japan is profound, but probably most people are nowadays sufficiently acquainted with the geography of Japan to be aware that the empire consists of four large islands, known as Kiushiu, Shikoku, Honshiu, and Yezo, besides a host of islets; that Yokohama and Tôkiô, as Yedo is now called, are situated at the southern elbow of the largest of the group, Honshiu, just where the coast takes a sudden turn northward; that the richest and most civilized parts of the empire, those through which Sir Edward Reed travelled, extend westward from this point; and that the further the traveller goes in a northerly direction, the wilder becomes the country and the more uncultured become the natives until Yezo is reached, which is mainly inhabited by Aino, a hairy, uncivilized people, who are regarded as remnants of the aborigines of Japan. Rejecting all the allurements of railways, macadamised roads, and Europeanized cities, Miss Bird determined to strike northwards into Yezo over any roads she could find and by any means of locomotion which were obtainable. And she had her reward. Her experiences were more varied and interesting than they could have been in modern Japan; and if the inns were dirty and the travelling rough, she had the satisfaction not only of being on "unbeaten tracks," but of enjoying scenery wilder and more beautiful than any in the southern islands, and of studying the manners and customs of a strange and little known race.

Miss Bird did not form so high an opinion of the Japanese as some travellers have done, and of their physique she speaks with contempt. The men she describes as "small, ugly, kindly-looking, shrivelled, bandy-legged, round-shouldered, concave-chested, poor-looking beings," and "though the women," she says, "especially the girls, are modest, gentle, and pleasing-looking, I saw nothing like even passable good looks. The noses are flat, the lips thick, and the eyes of the sloping Mongolian type; and the common practice of shaving off the eyebrows and blackening the teeth (though less common in Tôkiô than formerly), together with an obvious lack of soul, give nearly all faces an insane, vacant expression."

Most travellers in Japan will endorse the description here given of the men, and though few will deny that there is among the women a great want of that beauty which is dependent upon regularity of feature, they have yet a womanly air and grace which must be pronounced eminently captivating. It was May when Miss Bird landed at Yokohama, and the hot, damp atmosphere of the low-lying plain round Tôkiô gave a stimulus to her desire to start for a higher and less enervating part of the country. After much consideration and no little trouble she completed her outfit for the journey, and having hired a native servant—one Ito, who in his thirst after European knowledge, his absurd contempt for Europeans, his vanity, his kindliness, and childlike fidelity was a perfect type of his countrymen—and having possessed herself of the necessary passports, she started on her tour northwards.

"As we journeyed," she writes, "the country became prettier and prettier.... Great snow-capped mountains looked over the foothills, on whose steep sides the dark blue-green of pine and cryptomeria was lighted up by the spring tints of deciduous trees.... The red gold of the harvest fields contrasted with the fresh green and exquisite leafage of the hamp; rose and white azaleas lighted up the copse-woods; and when the broad road passed into the colossal avenue of cryptomeria which overshadowed the way to the sacred shrines of Nikkô, and tremulous sunbeams and shadows flicked the grass, I felt that Japan was beautiful, and that the mud flats of Yedo were only an ugly dream."

Nikkô, the shrine of the celebrated Shogun Iyêyasu, was the first halting-place, and here Miss Bird lingered, poring over the beauty of the scenery, which has suggested the proverb, "He who has not seen Nikkô must not use the word kek'ke" (splendid, delicious, beautiful). Lovely as the place is by nature, art has added further attractions in the shape of shrines on which have been bestowed the highest efforts of native artistic genius:—

"In their stately setting of cryptomeria, few of which are less than twenty feet in girth at three feet from the ground, they take one prisoner by their beauty, in defiance of all rules of Western art, and compel one to acknowledge the beauty of forms and combinations of colour hitherto unknown, and that lacquered wood is capable of lending itself to the expression of very high art. Gold has been used in profusion, and black, dull red, and white, with a breadth and lavishness quite unique. The bronze fretwork alone is a study, and the wood-carving needs weeks of earnest work for the mastery of its ideas and details. One screen or railing only has sixty panels, each four feet long, carved with marvellous boldness and depth in open work, representing peacocks, pheasants, storks, lotuses, peonies, bamboos, and foliage."

With the disappearance of Nikkô in the distance vanished also comfort, cleanliness, and every sign of prosperity. Instead of the smart, clean-looking houses of modern Japan, the villages consisted of wretched hovels, which were fitting abodes for their poverty-stricken, unkempt inhabitants.

"The men," writes Miss Bird, "may be said to wear nothing. Few of the women wear anything but a short petticoat wound tightly round them, or blue cotton trousers, very tight in the legs and baggy at the top, with a blue cotton garment opened to the waist tucked into the band, and a blue cotton handkerchief knotted round the head.... The persons, clothing, and houses are alive with vermin, and if the word squalor can be applied to independent and industrious people, they are squalid."

It must have required some resolution on Miss Bird's part to continue a route surrounded by so many difficulties and discomforts. Bad roads, miserable horses, and lodgings in rooms which were too often "dark, dirty, vile, noisy, and poisoned by sewage odours," would have driven a less adventurous spirit back in dismay to the hospitable regions of Tôkiô and Yokohama. But Miss Bird had made up her mind to visit the Yezo Aino, and she is evidently a lady who is not lightly to be turned aside from her purpose. In many respects probably the result fully recompensed her for the toils she underwent. The natural scenery was grander and more impressive than that on the more civilized islands, and there was freedom from police control and the innumerable regulations which plague the dwellers on the much-governed islands of the south. But the chief centre of attraction were "the hairy Aino," as the natives are called, who, according to Miss Bird, are "stupid, good-natured, and submissive. They are a wholly distinct race from the Japanese. In complexion they resemble the peoples of Spain and Southern Italy, and the expression of the face and the manner of showing courtesy are European rather than Asiatic. If not taller, they are of a much broader and heavier make than the Japanese; the hair is jet black, very soft, and on the scalp forms thick pendent masses, occasionally wavy, but never showing any tendency to curl. The beard, moustache, and eyebrows are very thick and full, and there is frequently a heavy growth of stiff hair on the chest and limbs.... They are truthful, and, on the whole, chaste, hospitable, honest, reverent, and kind to the aged."

Hospitality to strangers is among these simple savages a binding though unwritten law, and wherever Miss Bird went she met with a ready welcome; the principal house in the place was invariably put at her disposal; and the elders of the district paid formal and respectful homage to her. From these last she succeeded in gaining—through Ito, who acted as interpreter—an insight into the crude religious ideas and simple social customs of their race, and many a weird council she held with them, seated round the fire in their smoke-begrimed huts. Speaking of such an occasion, she says:—

"My candles had been forgotten, and our séance was held by the fitful light of the big logs on the fire, aided by a succession of chips of birch bark, with which a woman replenished a cleft stick that was stuck into the fire-hole. I never saw such a strangely picturesque sight as that group of magnificent savages, with the fitful firelight on their faces, and for adjuncts the flare of the torch, the strong lights, the blackness of the recesses of the room and of the roof, at one end of which the stars looked in, and the row of savage women in the background—Eastern savagery and Western civilization met in this hut, savagery giving and civilization receiving, the yellow-skinned Ito the connecting link between the two, and the representative of a civilization to which our own is but an 'infant of days.'"

Among the Ainos Miss Bird came in and went out for weeks together, and received nothing but courtesy and kindness from them. That they were dirty in their habits, and that their manners were little removed from those of savages, is undeniable, but it is impossible to withhold admiration from an untutored people who could show such undeviating consideration and honesty to a helpless lady, who at any moment of the day or night was completely at their mercy. The novelty of the situation and the interest attaching to the study of these kindly savages made the tour in Yezo the most attractive part of her wanderings to Miss Bird, and her readers will heartily sympathize with her in her regret at exchanging the freedom, the beauty, and even the Ainos of Yezo, for the conventionalities of Tōkiō and the society of the "smooth-skinned, concave-cheeked, spindle-limbed, yellow Japanese." "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan" is interesting throughout, and is especially valuable as giving the opinions of one who is neither an enthusiast, nor interested in "puffing" Japan, on the actual state of the country and the people. The following quotation sums up her view of the strange political and social condition of the empire:—

"An imperial throne founded on an exploded religious fiction, a State religion receiving an outward homage from those who ridicule it, scepticism rampant among the educated classes, and an ignorant priesthood lordling it over the lower classes; an empire with a splendid despotism for its apex and naked coolies for its base, a bald materialism its highest creed and material good its goal, reforming, destroying, constructing, appropriating the fruits of Christian civilization, but rejecting the tree from which they sprang—such are among the contrasts and incongruities everywhere!"

Crosby Records: a Cavalier's Note Book.

Edited by the Rev. T. Ellison Gibson.
(Longmans & Co.)

THE Cavalier whose notes now see the light after a lapse of over two hundred years was William Blundell, of Crosby, near Liverpool, who served as captain of dragoons under the famous Major-General Sir Thomas Tildesley, Knt., in the Royalist army of 1642. The Blundells were an ancient family, and had claims not unwarranted to Norman descent. For many generations they had been settled in Lancashire, and at the time of the Reformation retained their old faith, and consequently suffered much as recusants in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. An account of the family prefaces this book, and as Mr. Gibson has based it upon original documents, which he frequently quotes, it is one of much interest. William Blundell, the Cavalier, was born in 1620, and in 1635, when only fifteen years of age, was married to Ann, daughter of Sir Thomas Haggerston, of Haggerston, co. Northumberland, Bart. He visited Dublin in 1639, and, speaking of the almost regal state assumed by the Lord Deputy, the celebrated Earl of Strafford, he quaintly remarks:—

"I saw the Earl of Strafford in Dublin (June, 1639), where he was then Lord Deputy, in far greater state (in some respects) than the King of England. I saw one princely stable of the Deputy's, wherein I judged the worst of 60 horses for the great saddle to be worth 30*l*. He was an excellent orator, as appears by his speeches at the bar; and a passing wise man. A Colonel of Parliament told me that beyond the seas it is reported of England that it produceth but one wise man in an age, and that the people gaze on him awhile as a monster, then cut off his head. 'So,' said he, 'did they do by Sir Thomas More and the Earl of Strafford.'"

At the outbreak of the Civil War William Blundell took the king's side, and on December 22nd, 1642, received his commission as captain from Sir Thomas Tildesley, a fac-simile of which (slightly reduced) is given as a frontispiece. He joined Lord Derby, and was severely wounded in the attack on Lancaster on March 17th, 1642/3, his thigh being shattered by a musket shot. This disabled him from taking further active part in the Civil War, but he suffered greatly during the whole of that period, and was frequently imprisoned. His house at Crosby was plundered to such an extent by the Parliamentary soldiers that those living there had to bury their bread from meal to meal, and the whole of his estate was sequestered. In 1658 he procured a pass to take his two daughters to Rouen. His journey was toilsome, and he was delayed in London, where "the unexpected death of the greatest person (Oliver Cromwell), as we esteemed him, upon the whole earth, was the occasion, by shutting up of the sea ports, of a notable stop in our journey." Mr. Blundell was still abroad in 1660, and went to Breda, where he had an interview with Charles II. on the night before his embarkation, and accompanied him on the same ship to Dover. Mr. Blundell tells the following anecdote in connexion with this voyage:—

"I was present in the ship (about five miles from Dover) two or three hours before King Charles II. landed in England on Fryday, May 25, 1660, when the king (by reason of an accident) took his own measure, standing under a beam in the cabin, upon which place he made a mark with a knife. Sundry tall persons went under it, but there were none that could reach it. After all I went under it myself,.....so that I find myself about 5 inches lower than that mark, and I think I am 3 inches lower as I stand in my high-heeled shoe than I was before I was lame."

After the Restoration Blundell's loyalty and sufferings were in no way rewarded, and in the subsequent persecution of the Catholics he was in considerable danger, as is shown by some of his letters still preserved. He and other Lancashire Catholics were imprisoned at Manchester in 1689, but this would appear to have been merely a measure of precaution to prevent the disaffected from joining King James in Ireland. Blundell died at Crosby on May 24th, 1698, in his seventy-ninth year. A petition which he intended to present to James II. has preserved some curious features of the times, as when, for instance, he remarks that the township of Crosby was for many years remarkable in "that it hath not a beggar, it hath not an alehouse, and it hath not a Protestant in it." To this Mr. Gibson adds the statement that "it is perhaps still more curious to notice that after the lapse of two centuries things remain in this respect almost wholly unchanged. A direct descendant of the Cavalier, occupying his mansion and estate, can say at this day of his village that there is neither beggar, alehouse, nor Protestant within it. This cannot be altogether spoken now of the township, although the truth is not far from it."

Mr. Blundell was in the habit of noting anything which specially interested him in three commonplace books, which he entitled 'Historia,' 'Adversaria,' and 'Hodge Podge.' Of these the first two are small quartos of perhaps 1,200 pages each, and they are for the most part well filled and closely written in a neat and clear hand. The other is a larger quarto, and contains poetry as well as prose. The extracts from printed books are not now of much importance, but his remarks on current events, &c., which Mr. Gibson has printed in this volume, possess not a little interest and value. Many a curious fact is here fortunately recorded, and as the dates are always carefully given, his notes become of greater importance. Thus, on June 3rd, 1676, Mr. Blundell ascended "the new tower or monument" in "Pudding Lane, London," by 310 steps, "which I twice counted," to the "noble iron balcony which is round the tower, from which I had an excellent view of the town and country." Above this balcony, he adds, "the tower, not then quite finished, is raised 136 steps. This I take to be the intended full height of the tower." On the same day he saw on the Tower Hill about 120 brass guns, the length of one of which was near thirteen feet, and it was said to carry a ball of sixty-three pounds. In 1687/8 he states that he conversed in London with "a natural Chinese," or, as we should now say, a native Chinaman, who went "to the Latin school at the Savoy." The language they had in common was Latin, but "he spoke imperfectly in Latin, as having learnt the same without any rules"; and Mr. Blundell adds, "I had formerly seen his picture admirably well painted at Windsor Castle." He also saw in London "Father Couplet, a Jesuit who had lived in China about twenty years." In November, 1681, he watched the rebuilding of St. Paul's with great interest, and wrote a long note about it, which is as follows:—

"Pauli Basilica Londinensis. In November, 1681, I took great notice of that new building, which I found then to be raised above the earth about 10 or 11 yards. Below the surface of the earth about 14 or 16 feet the foundation seemed to be laid, and all that was hollow like a collar. If I be not mistaken it was arched all over, even with the top of the earth, so that there is an appearance of a church below as well as above the ground. But there was no manner of building at the west end of the same, all being left so open that I guessed that the building would be continued much longer towards the west, which way there was then remaining, betwixt the new buildings and the ruins of the outermost part westward of the old burned church, about 80 yards or more. The east end of this new church was then close built, and the wideness there within the walls was about 41 yards, and the greatest wideness of this church was about 104 yards, whereof 11 yards on the south side and 11 yards on the north side of the same seem to be taken up in porches. At the same time I read a written paper, which hung up on a wall or pillar of this new building, mentioning the contributions given towards that work by the several Bishops of England, the total of which amounted to 14,000*l.*, whereof London gave 2,844*l.*, Winchester 1,028*l.*, Chester 561*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*, Durham 334*l.*, Canterbury 198*l.* I suppose there is a standing fund or revenue belonging to this same church by which in length of time it may come to be finished. There is or was, as I take it, an allowance given by Parliament out of every ton of coals coming to London."

A strange kind of hunting was that witnessed in 1664 in St. James's Park, which is thus described:—

"On Thursday, August 11th, 1664, the Earls of Castlehaven and Arran (whereof the first was about fifty years of age or very near it) in St. James's Park, upon a wager laid with the King, killed a fat strong buck by running on foot, having each a knife in his hand. They had six hours to perform it, but they did it in two and a half. They were a good while before they could unhurd him. Then they run him till, being extremely hot, he took the water in a pond, where they threw stones at him, and toiled and drove him so to a side, till they killed him with their knives. This was told me by a gentleman that was present when the buck was killed, and the thing is very true."

Reference has already been made to the state in which the Lord Lieutenant lived at Dublin. Here is another instance:—

"June 25th, 1666.—I dined in the Castle at Dublin at the Lord Lieutenant's table. There were, besides the Duke and Duchess (Ormond), sixteen persons: we sat with our hats on. The first course had seventeen dishes, the second seventeen dishes, the third fifteen dishes, most of them choice sweetmeats. I had formerly dined there in the year 1662, and there was an excellent concert of instruments, the table being furnished much after the same manner as is above said. And I was told that it was his daily state and custom."

Many other interesting notes will be found scattered throughout this volume. The writer met the celebrated Charlotte, Countess of Derby, the heroic defender of Latham House, and notices the mistakes in "my Lady's English." Whilst living at Breda in April, 1660, he records that he saw "the Dukes of York and Gloucester with their sister, the Princess of Orange, play a long time at nine-pins upon a Sunday, whilst the king [Charles II.], their brother, looked on." There are occasional references to the weather, which may be of service to the meteorologist, and other notes on local events, folk-lore, local persons, &c., which will have an interest for many readers. In fact, the volume is extremely readable, and Mr. Gibson has done well to let the Cavalier's notes of things in general see the light, even after the lapse of two centuries. The account of the swordfish and the thresher killing the whale, given on p. 156, is, however, one well known in natural history, and has no connexion, as Mr. Gibson imagines, with the sea-serpent. The book is excellently printed and got-up.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

Modesta. By GINA ROSE. (Faithfull & Co.)

Cords and Discords. By Charlotte Atcherley. 2 vols. (Remington & Co.)

In Fair Bruges. By C. BEESTON. (Same publishers.)

Lisa Lens. By Edward Jenkins. 2 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Stubble Farm. 2 vols. (Tinsley Brothers.)

Strictly Tied Up. 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The Stillwater Tragedy. By T. B. Aldrich. (Boston, U.S., Houghton & Mifflin.)

MR. TROLLOPE'S recent dictum to the effect that ink, paper, and a table make up all the equipment necessary for a literary career will, it is easy to foresee, entail a heavy responsibility on its author. It is almost equivalent to a direct injunction upon those who can command the commodities in question to put them to the use indicated; and considering how many otherwise estimable ladies were already engaged in a course upon which gods and bookshops look with proverbial disfavour—for fiction has in this respect no advantage over poetry—it seems hardly wise to give those who were hesitating on the brink the impulse requisite to launch them also in the same direction. Of the three books that stand at the head of our list, two are admittedly written by ladies, and the third obviously conceals a feminine name under the ambiguous initial. Of the writers, Miss Rose is the only one, so far as our memory or her title-page informs us, who has hitherto tried her hand at novel-writing. Practice, however, cannot be said in her case to have had its traditional effect, nor has her (presumable) possession of Mr. Trollope's three requisites been followed by any satisfactory result. Indeed, such a book as 'Modesta' would furnish proof enough, if proof were needed, of how short a distance a writer can go without the possession of certain far less common advantages. Accurate observation is perhaps the most important of these, without which that terrible "incredulous od," most fatal of all verdicts to a work of the imagination, is not to be kept out of the reader's mind. What are we to think of a writer who makes her hero propose to fight a duel with his host in an English country house, in the middle of the night, and without seconds, and send the challenge by the hand of his adversary's valet? It is true that the combat never comes off—indeed, the challenge (it does not quite appear why) is never received—and that the challenger is an Italian; but this last fact would presumably make him all the less likely to commit such a string of solecisms. It is, of course, no reproach to an English lady not to be conversant with the etiquette of duelling; but it is a serious fault in a writer of fiction to attempt to heighten the interest of her story by introducing circumstances that, given her characters and their surroundings, could by no conceivable possibility have occurred. After this the slovenliness which represents a man as mortally wounded on one page and progressing favourably on the next is trifling. Probably Miss Rose did not exactly know what "mortally" wounded meant. It is, however, obvious that no charm of style, were such present, could give any merit to work containing such fundamental flaws as these. But, in fact, style itself is in a great measure dependent on observation. Thus, to take an example from the next book on our list, is it possible that if Miss Atcherley had ever attended to the way in which ladies and gentlemen—or, indeed, anybody else outside of fifth-rate "domestic dramas"—talk, she would have given us such a dialogue as this?—

"Oh, dearest, pray don't sing so loudly! You will wake all the household! Remember we are in an hotel, and it is only six o'clock!"

"True," said the singer, "I had forgotten that. The mere idea of a day in the mountains with a gun on my shoulder is so exhilarating [sic] that I am beyond myself; I feel as if the air from the hills already filled my lungs, and forced me to give vent to my buoyant feelings."

"I only reminded you, dear, fearing the gentleman who is ill above might be disturbed," said the lady. "You are rejoicing in the idea of a day's perfect freedom, am I not right?"

"Yes, and no, darling. I am your slave, and would not be free from love's chains for worlds," and so on. It is melancholy to find this attached husband, before the end of the first volume, breaking in a fit of rage his wife's cherished harp. Both in this story and in 'Modesta' there is too much of this violence without vigour. In both also there are attempts to arouse interest by the description of sad events, which fail to touch the reader because, owing to the lack of resemblance, he is unable to realize the persons enough to sympathize with their fortunes, and this, in the case of 'Modesta,' in spite of a good deal of the well-known and irritating pretence of a personal acquaintance between the author and her characters.

'In Fair Bruges' has, in spite of much slipshod writing, this superiority over the two last-named novels, that the author has abstained from overweighting her story in the way the others have, and has kept her incidents properly matched with her characters and their surroundings. It is simply the narrative of a short portion of the life of an English family resident in the city whence the book takes its name. Of course, that portion is chosen which comprises the engagement of the young ladies of the family and the events leading up to that, but that is all right enough. Practically, it may be supposed to owe its existence to the circumstance that its author has stayed at Bruges; and, in fact, much the best parts are those describing the place and its inhabitants. The chapter containing a picture of the humours of the "Vieux Marché" is nicely written, and we see clearly enough the small dealers of the market, who ask twice what they mean to take, and after a little haggling finally give in with a "puisque c'est pour vous." If there had been as much individuality about Sir Guy, his daughter and niece, and their "young men," the story would have been good of its kind. As it is, it must be pronounced, on the whole, respectable but dull.

It is difficult to say with what object Mr. Jenkins's new novelette has been given to the world. It shows, what few would deny, that a girl isolated by the circumstances of her childhood from all protecting and refining influences may very guiltlessly fall into a course of what is in many cases justly called sin. It contains some clever sketches of clowns, horse riders, trapezists, et hoc genus omne, and two most unfavourable portraits of the improvisi who live upon their labours. It also shows much familiarity with American modes of speech and thought, and the sketch might well have been really autobiographical, as it professes to be. But although he raises his model English rose to the peerage, the book contains no trace of the views Mr. Jenkins is known to entertain on social and political matters. The admirers of his previous works will miss the spirit which instigated them. From a literary point of view this is, perhaps, no subject of regret, and at any rate the author deserves credit for treating an unattractive subject with sufficient sympathy and realism to touch the better feelings possibly of real Vanderzoufs. We cannot think that in actual life a man of Vanderzouf's bad experience would have been converted by the unexpected resistance of a girl like Lisa. But the theme is old, and since Shakespeare's days virtue has occasionally been preached with success in apparently hopeless circumstances. The conventional uneasiness of the clergyman with whom Lisa is placed after Vanderzouf's murder and her husband's incarceration, though poor-spirited in one of his functions, is natural from the merely domestic point of view of the ordinary husband and father; and it does not seem likely that Lisa, having repelled the attentions of one who loved her, would, merely to mark her impatience of conventionality, have rushed to a libertinism which before was repugnant to her. But, in fact, neither the person's nor the lady's conduct seems very true to life. Clergymen, in England at least, would be more likely to make their families suffer than lose the chance of a convert so interesting, and Lisa's rush into the broad road of vice is more natural than the motive to which it is ascribed. The appearance of Lisa's unknown sister in time to rescue her at last from the fate she has embraced belongs to the ordinary class of expedients, but gives scope for some pathetic writing at the end, and our author is nothing if not emotional.

"The march of trade and commerce has in 1879 laid its axe at the root of the dearest old ivy-clad oak in the forest," sighs the author of 'Stubble Farm' in his preface; by which the reader is to understand that English farming as it used to be has passed away for ever. Before it is forgotten he is asked to "take one more look under the ivy, one more swing under the old tree," and then, "Good-bye, dearest of old institutions. See, here comes Mr. Gladstone with his sharpened axe—Progress!" This fanciful exordium gives the reader a fair idea of what 'Stubble Farm' is about. The axe in question is certainly not Mr. Gladstone's, any more than it is James Watt's, or Messrs. Bannocks, or that of the emigration agents or the Chicago corn-factors; but no doubt the force of progress, with its "little of steam" and all the rest of it, has turned the homely English farming of our grandfathers into an amachronism, and ruined many a luckless husbandman, as Harold Strong is ruined on Stubble Farm. We have here the annals of three generations of agriculturists, from the rough, laborious, good-tempered, and blundering yeoman, who was hail-fellow with all his men and boys, who fought against the railway and sturdily declined to believe in the steam plough, who did his trip to London like a Gulliver amongst a race of Lilliputians, to the sporting, dinner-giving, extravagant, would-be independent farmer of later days, who soon has his head under water, and is glad to escape across the seas out of the clutches of the money-lenders. It is a sad story, so far as its moral goes; but the writer does his best by his manner of narration to give it a comic side. Whilst he is "looking under the ivy," and describing the rural life of farmers of the old style, he is very amusing, not to say farcical; and in this earlier part of 'Stubble Farm' the reader will find many a theme which will move him to laughter. Of the fidelity of the whole book to fact and nature there can be no doubt; even such as do not know what agricultural life was under the old conditions must see that these pictures are faithful and realistic transcripts. There is a quaint humour, not over refined, about them; there are the tone and the scent of the busy farm, not qualified for dainty readers; there are the roughness and coarseness of truth, only not offending because the author has not cast about to make them inoffensive by departing from the truth. It follows from what has been said that 'Stubble Farm' is no mere fiction, but rather a study—a study of absolute and somewhat sordid reality, in which the writer has employed no art save that of accurate reproduction. For these virtues the book is to be commended.

'Strictly Tied Up' is entertaining. It is Irish in subject, Irish in spirit, and written in the easy, dashing, humorous style which has characterized some of the best English fiction having its origin on the other side of the Channel. The scheme of the story is well proportioned, and worked out in all its complications with much care and skill. The author evidently knows his ground, and rarely conveys to the mind of his reader so much as a suspicion that he is overdrawing his characters for the sake of effect, or painting his scenery with brighter colours than are warranted. If the plot confines the reader chiefly to Ireland and amongst Irish people, this is by no means exclusively the case. He finds himself at different times in the midst of a London season, in Lincolnshire, in Yorkshire, at Bath; and though the epoch of the novel is the present day, and the troubles of Irish landowners and farmers are not ignored, there is no reason why a reader who would shudder at the idea of encountering Irish politics in a circulating library should avoid this book. 'Strictly Tied Up' is thoroughly and in every sense a novel, conceived in a light and happy vein, and scarcely even demanding a serious thought from beginning to end.

Mr. Aldrich seems inclined to poke a little fun at that school of fiction in which M. Gabriel is the master, and many ingenious writers, both English and French, the disciples. At all events, he begins in due form with the crime and the appearance of the detective; then goes back and narrates the events immediately preceding the crime, exhibits his hero, and so on; and, finally, gives us the detective's notes and discovery. But here he departs from the established course, inasmuch as while M. Leocq's "clue" always led him to the right criminal, Mr. Taggett is utterly wrong. There is apparently a touch of burlesque in making part of the chain of evidence depend upon a half-burned "safety" match, and the subsequent discovery in the supposed criminal's room of a box of similar matches lacking one, as if the owner had preserved the remainder by way of relics, lighting his candle, we presume, from a box of less interesting associations. By the way, would it not have made the story more exciting if the hero had turned out to be the murderer? It would seem as if no novelist—unless, perhaps, the author of 'Paul Ferroll'—ever has the sternness of mind to imagine a really pleasant personage, one whom both he and his readers like, who should smile and smile and be a villain, or at least a criminal. There is always a hint dropped somewhere. We should say that Mr. Aldrich's little story is well written, as are most of those which reach us from America. Either the bad novels stay at home, or else the American average is higher than ours.

LITERAL HISTORY.

A History of the Town of Belfast from 1799 to 1810: together with some Incidental Notices on Local Topics and Biographies of many well-known Families. By George Benn. Vol. II. (Marcus Ward & Co.)—In 1877 Mr. Benn published an interesting 'History of Belfast down to the Termination of the Eighteenth Century.' Containing extracts from many documents which illustrated the settlement of the province of Ulster, it was a useful contribution to the general history of Ireland, and deserved more than a local circulation. It was our author's intention to have carried on his history to the year 1870, and given circumstantial accounts of all the great events which occurred during that interval, but most unfortunately his eyesight entirely failed, and, it being impossible for him to complete his project, he has had no choice but to publish in the present small and unpretending volume what he had already collected. Under these circumstances he is fairly entitled to bespeak the favourable consideration of his readers for any shortcomings which they may find in the present work. An examination of the materials which he had collected and has thrown loosely together in this volume convinces us that no amount of industry, nor even literary ability, could produce a history of Belfast during the present century which any one not born and bred in the town could possibly struggle through. The history of Belfast during the present century is merely that of a great manufacturing town, which produces, de anno in annum, some incredible number of yards of linen, and imports in exchange therefor a corresponding amount of miscellaneous articles. That Belfast is a contrast to the other provincial Irish seaports, that it produces more manufactured goods than all the rest of Ireland, that it has wonderfully increased and is still increasing, are patent facts, but all that is worth knowing in its later history might be summed up in a few pages of statistical tables, to which, perhaps, having regard to the political condition of the town and the extraordinary pugnacity of its inhabitants, there might be annexed an analysis of the annual party processions and riots, and a list of the killed, wounded, and missing on both sides. Those who do not reside in Belfast can have little interest in learning the dates at which the several streets, whose names are quite to them unknown, were successively built, and such readers must positively decline to devote time which could be better spent to the study of the early history of the Belfast theatre or the peculiarities and eccentricities of the teachers in the schools of that town. The latter portion of the volume contains biographical notices of the best-known families of Belfast, and of the citizens of the town who have been remarkable for ability, success in life, wealth, or eccentricity. It is remarkable that three natives of Belfast living at the same time have been chancellors—Earl Cairns in England, and Sir J. Napier and Lord O'Hagan in Ireland; but unfortunately the details of their biographies are precisely such as no rational person has the slightest curiosity to learn. Our knowledge of the distinguished career of Earl Cairns is not much increased by confused information like the following:—"A correspondent says, 'Nathan Cairns had resided in Dublin, and he came to this town when he succeeded to Parkmount. He had one brother, who went abroad, and three sisters, who lived in Belfast. One married Mr. Ballantine, but left no issue.' " "Another correspondent sends the following information, which does not exactly agree with the preceding regarding the relationship, as it makes the ladies mentioned aunts of Earl Cairns instead of grand-aunts. It says: 'Molly Cairns was one of three sisters, clever and masculine, aunts to Sir Hugh Cairns. She was a great Unitarian, and gave Dr. Bruce a present of plate.' " "Another informant says 'that Molly Cairns's married sister, Mrs. Ballantine, was very rich, and gave Dr. Bruce many presents, and that it was not her sister Molly who was so generous.' " "For all the information regarding Mrs. Ballantine and her sisters we are, of course, not responsible, and would only observe that the title by which one of them was commonly known is barely as respectful as it might have been. She came to Dr. Bruce's meeting house generally in a sedan chair, then a common mode of conveyance in the town." The memoirs of the lesser men of the town we have been unable to read through, not being curious as to the question whether John Stewart made large additions to Ballyshannon, nor inquisitive as to the details of the funeral of the Rev. W. Bristow, whose body was carried to the grave preceded by a field officer's party of the Limerick Militia and the band of the regiment playing an appropriate piece of music. The only interesting point in this volume relative to the history of Belfast is the mode in which the prosperity of the town was increased by the free trade in building sites, which came into existence through an accident, much to the benefit of the inhabitants.

Mr. E. Peacock sends some Notes from the Court Rolls of the Manor of Scotter, Lincolnshire, which he communicated to the Society of Antiquaries. If the primitive village community ever existed in England as an integral element in the institutions of the country—and all researches on the subject go to prove that it did so exist—there must have been a stage of historical progress at which the village community broke up and transferred its duties to other institutions. With reference to municipal towns the case is tolerably clear. We can almost fix upon the stage when townships gave up their communal possessions for a charter of corporate possession, stopped legislating for agricultural purposes, and began to collect rents—ceased, in point of fact, to be agricultural communities, and began to be commercial corporations. But the transition from the village community to the provincial local communities is not so clear, because it was made in the midst of the old Teutonic contest between the growth of the lord's power and the maintenance of popular institutions. And the result is a twofold development. The parish vestry represents the old corporate unity of the village community, and the manorial jurisdictions represent the old legislative rights over the cultivated land. Of this latter aspect of the case Mr. Peacock's 'Notes' afford interesting testimony. There are the narrow balks of grass land separating the various allotments in the common fields, "le mearesurres," as they are called at Scotter. There is the old custom, Hindoo as well as English, of marking off each allotment of grass lands by "wad-sticks." Then we have such an entry as "no man gleane ani corn untill the furlongs be gotten," that is, until the land has been apportioned into its furlongs—not a measure of land, but the piece held in severalty for the time being. And there are many other indications of the open-field system of husbandry. An entry towards the end of the 'Notes' leads us to a more important element of it than the peculiar methods of cultivation. It runs: "That noe man shall break any pasture with-out meate means consent." Here appears to be a remnant of the old village assembly and its legislative rights. Mr. Peacock supposes the regulation to relate exclusively to the lands held in severalty, but we have only to apply the principle of the village communal assembly to its elucidation, and this supposition falls to the ground. One other subject must be noted in connexion with this early stage of society, and that is the appointment of four "burlymen" for the manor in 1566. An interesting discussion took place in these pages last year upon this important office, and all new examples are of value. It does not appear that these officers were appointed before the year named. Such are a few of the references to early life. Of illustrations of mediæval life and manners, local words, &c., we have not spoken only because our space is limited. Mr. Peacock in these columns (August 2, 1879) has urged the importance of publishing manorial rolls, and it is to be hoped that the Society of Antiquaries may take up the question and issue a volume of selected examples. In the mean time we cannot imagine why Mr. Peacock did not publish the full Roll instead of 'Notes' from it. Surely there can be no reason, either on behalf of Mr. Peacock or of the Society of Antiquaries, for the following passage. The regulations for the year 1578 "are too long to be given in full, and some of them would not be understood by any but those who have a minute knowledge of the neighbourhood." No one knows better than Mr. Peacock that this minute knowledge of local history, when properly put forth, is of the utmost value to the student of national history; and it is most disappointing that the Society of Antiquaries should endorse an opinion that material of such value as the regulations of manors is too long to print in full.

Sir George Duckett, Bart., has already published important documents relating to the repeal of the test and penal statutes in 1688. Those for Yorkshire, Westmoreland, and Cumberland were remarkably interesting. He has now, as we mentioned some weeks ago, continued the series by giving in the Journal of the Sussex Archaeological Society the questions proposed to the justices of peace and deputy-lieutenants of that county. Many of the answers are characteristic not only of the times but of the men who gave them. The genealogical notes will be found of value to those who care for pedigree lore. Appended to the collection are the secret instructions issued to the agents who were sent about the country for the purpose of undermining the corporations. We fancy we have seen them in print somewhere before, but cannot remember where. They are instructive as they show, perhaps more clearly than any other single paper, how extreme was the danger against which those men had to contend who helped William of Orange to displace his father-in-law. The more evidence accumulates with regard to 1688, the more certain it seems that those who look upon James II. as a weak person, who entered on a career quite certain to lead to disaster, have come to a hasty conclusion. His plans were well laid out, and the deliberance which took place must have seemed to those who lived at the time and were fully cognizant of the danger little short of a miracle. It is to be hoped that Sir George Duckett will some day or other collect these scattered papers into one volume. Future historians will find no little difficulty in discovering the good things he has provided for them if he leaves them scattered in provincial publications.

Detling in Days Gone By. By J. Cave Browne, M.A., Vicar. (Bumpkin, Marshall & Co.)—This little book of sixty-six octavo pages contains almost all that could be said about Detling, a long, narrow Kentish parish, situate on high ground near Maidstone, "nestling in its well-timbered nook under the scarped background of the chalk hill, and presenting a pleasing break in the long line of almost treeless downs," and is an excellent example of how all local topographical works might be made interesting to the general reader if their writers had the pleasant style of Mr. Cave Browne and abstained from unnecessary detail as judiciously as he does. The manor belonged to the see of Canterbury, and was one of those violently detached from it soon after the Conquest by the Conqueror's half-brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, who had been created Earl of Kent, but he had to disgorge when Lanfranc was appointed archbishop. Of what race were the sub-holders of the manor who took the name of "de Detling" we know not, but in 1363 one of them, when evicted for murder and felony by his priest-lord, was bold enough to re-ject the archbishop's officers, with the aid of Roger de Leyburne, a turbulent baron not unknown to the readers of the 'Ingoldsby Legends.' Falling eventually into the hands of Richard III., the manor formed part of the reward of Robert Brackenbury, "Esquire of the King's Body," for "services against the rebels," as may be seen by the entry in the Patent Roll, which has escaped our author, who prematurely knights him, but, as may be imagined, his enjoyment of his reward was short indeed. On the direct road to the shrine at Canterbury, Detling had a "pilgrims' rest," of modest proportions, of which only the gate now remains. The church seems to have been almost entirely restored, and the long and heavy "Detling lance" which hung in front of the north chantry, and which prior writers have noticed, has now disappeared, though the grand lectern, one of the oldest (circa 1340) and certainly the best carved in England, still remains. Worm-eaten, damaged, and despoiled, this lectern not long ago suffered the unusual indignity of being pawned by a churchwarden to make up a deficiency in the church-rate. After suitably lamenting the deplorable state of two large modern tombstones, the writer plaintively and forcibly joins in the chorus of all church historians, thus:—"Whatever other bronzes may once have adorned the floor of the church or the chancel, and have helped to illustrate the past history of the place, all have now disappeared. The Puritan zeal of the seventeenth century, the indifference or reckless destructiveness of the eighteenth, and the utilising craze of the early part of the nineteenth, have prevailed over all relics of preceding ages; the brass stolen or sold, the stone chiselled off and converted into flagstones, or broken up to repair roadways, till not a vestige besides the two already mentioned remains to contribute its quota to the story of 'Detling in days gone by.' Even the fragments of painted glass which were in the north window, and according to report defied the seal of a former clerk to rub out what he called 'the dirt,'—in reality the colours,—have now gone; while a poppy-head stall, showing how the chancel was once heated, has only escaped to a place of safety in the Maidstone Museum, to which it was at some time presented, being probably regarded as belonging to an 'extinct species.' Mr. Cave Browne deals with the monumental inscriptions of his church and churchyard carefully and well, and, while he does not omit to satirize the bad taste of some of the pompous and laudatory epitaphs of the last century, very properly notes all the epitaphs in the churchyard, a task omitted by most topographical writers, who usually ignore as unworthy of notice the yeoman families whence spring, if the truth were told, most of the so-called "county" families. Errors, of course, have crept in. The worthy vicar, though a fair archaeologist, is no expert, as may be guessed from his referring at p. 5 to the Pedes Finium (sic) as "the survey of lands made by Richard I." However, the author having been liberally helped (as what topographical writer is not?) by Mr. Selby, of the Record Office, the little book is more valuable than most similar compositions, and Mr. Greenstreet has given his skilled assistance to the genealogical part of the work, though we believe he disclaims the assumption of descents of the Delling family at p. 63. The absence of an index nomenum in a topographical work is inexcusable, especially as the book is so short. The drawings are very bad, that of the lectern being probably the worst ever issued as an illustration of an interesting piece of antiquity.

In Border Counties Worthies (Oswestry, Woodall & Vennables) Mr. E. G. Salisbury, of Chester, gives a voluminous alphabetical list of the "worthies" of the four border counties of Chester, Salop, Hereford, and Monmouth. As, however, Mr. Salisbury includes every person who obtained the slightest notoriety, even as a Methodist preacher, as a "worthy," it will be obvious that his list is very extensive. The compilation, although bulky, is by no means up to the standard of modern historical research, and Mr. Salisbury appears to have been content to take his information from any and every quarter, whilst a more careful worker would have avoided giving further currency to the mistakes of others. There is throughout the volume a grievous want of reference to the sources whence the information has been taken, and instead of being the useful book of reference which it ought to have been, it is spoiled by frequent mistakes and still more frequent assumptions which have little or no foundation in fact. Because a man bears a name common to a county it by no means follows that he was born within that county, or has any connexion whatever with it.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Berry's (A.) Manifold Witness for Christ, being the Boyle Lectures for 1877-8, 2 vols. 12/6 cl.
Cox's (S.) Commentary on the Book of Job, with a Translation, 8vo. 16/6 cl.
Pittman's (Mrs. E. E.) Heroines of the Mission Field, 5/6 cl.
Sharpe's (B.) The Epistle to Barnabas, from the Sinaitic Manuscript of the Bible, with a Translation, 2/6 cl. 1p.

Law.

- Viner's (P. E.) Concise Manual of the Practice of the Court in Bank, 8vo. 5/6 cl.

Fine Art.

- Delisle's Bible Gallery, 96 Illustrations from the Old Testament, from Original Drawings by Sir F. Leighton, E. J. Poynter, Holman Hunt, and others, folio, 10s. vellum.
Little Buttercup's Picture Book, 4to. 3/6 bds.
Tredgold (T.) and Tarr's (R. W.) Carpentry and Joinery, 4/

Poetry and the Drama.

- Angus's (W.) Amateur Acting, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Bryant's (W. C.) Thanatopsis and the Poet of Tears, Illustrated, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Shakespeare's Complete Works, Miniature Library Edition, 13 vols. 15/6 cl. in box.

History and Biography.

- Adams's (D.) Eminent Soldiers, from Wallenstein to Moltke, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Fyffe's (C. A.) History of Modern Europe, Vol. 1, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Grois (Mrs.) A Sketch, by Lady Eastlake, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Galdanah (Duke de.) Memoirs of, with Selections from his Correspondence, by the Comte de Carnot, 2 vols. 12/6 cl.
Spinoza, his Life and Philosophy, by F. Pollock, 8vo. 16/6 cl.

Philology.

- Gulshan-i-Haz. The Mystic Rose Garden, the Persian Text, with English Translation and Notes by R. E. Whinfield, 4to. 10/6 cl.

Sciences.

- Curry's (A.) Wonders of Common Things, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Dale's (H.) British Dogs, their Varieties, &c., 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Davy's (E.) Surgical Lectures delivered in the Theatre of the Westminster Hospital, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Fornander's (A.) An Account of the Polynesian Race, Vol. 2, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Gibbes's (H.) Practical Histology and Pathology, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Guthrie's (A. C. L. G.) An Introduction to the Study of Fluxus, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Gurley's (E.) Power of Sound, imp. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Picturesque Science for the Young, Illustrated, imp. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Reynolds's (M.) Stationary Engine Driving, 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Routledge's (E.) Popular History of Science, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Wank's Rudimentary Series, Davies's (D. C.) Treatise on Slate Quarrying, 12mo. 3/6 cl. wvd., Dobson's (E.) Pioneer Engineering, 12mo. 4/6 cl. wvd.

General Literature.

- Aldrich's (T. B.) The Millwater Tragedy, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Alford's (Miss E. M.) Honor, 3 vols. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Autobiography of an Italian Police Officer, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Balfour's (Mrs. O. L.) Family Honour, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bloomfield's (J. K.) Glenwood, a Story of School Life, 3/6 cl.
Boys and Girls' Book of Story and Tale, edited by A. Strahan, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Braburne's (Lord) The Mountain Sprite's Kingdom, 4/6 cl.
Braneld's (W. A.) In Type and Shadow, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Brown's (P.) What Can Girls Do? 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Burdett's (C. A. M.) Fortune-Telling Birthday Book, 2/6 cl.
Cory Corner Stories: Dot's Story-Book, and Little Chimes for All Times, 12mo. 7/6 each, cl.
Craig's (G. M.) Mark Denison's Charge, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Day Dawn Album, 4to. 2/6 bds.
Doake's (M.) May Darling, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Duffy's (Hon. Sir C. G.) Young Ireland, 8vo. 16/6 cl.
Favourite Album of Fun and Fancy, Illustrated by E. Grant, 3/6 cl.
Fritsch's Schoolboys all the World Over, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Grandmamma's Recollections, by Grandmamma Parter, 3/6 cl.
Hunt's (M. B.) Aunt Tabitha's Waifs, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Kingdon's (W. H. G.) Adventures in Far West, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Knox's (J. Craig) Peggy Ogilvie's Inheritance, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Latham's (E. M.) An Actor Abroad, or Gossip, Dramatic, Narrative, and Descriptive, 8vo. 18/6 cl.
Litching's (L. F.) Through Peril to Fortune, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Locke's (Mrs.) What the Blackbird Said, four illust. by E. Coldecott, 4to. 7/6 cl.
Mason's (G. F.) My Day with the Hounds, and other Stories, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Mehalah, a Story of the Salt Marshes, 3 vols. 8vo. 21/6 cl.
Mooreworth's (Mrs.) Kerry, the Story of a Little Girl, 3/6 cl.
Patch's (O.) Familiar Friends, small 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Paine's (Books) (The), as Said and Sung by English Authors, selected by J. A. Langford, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Prince Darling's Story-Book, 4to. 2/6 bds.
Roe's (Rev. E. H.) A Day of Fate, Book Second, 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Ruffin's Political and Social, in Prose and Verse, edited by W. H. C. Nelson, 3 vols. 8vo. 21/6 cl.
Scrimgeour's (Major) Military Mirandings of Shakespeare, 10/6 cl.
Scrimgeour's (Major T. S.) Story of Prince Hildebrand and the Princess Ida, with 100 illust. by the author, 4to. 6/6 cl.
Silver Key to a Golden Palace, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Smith's (D. M.) Oliver Star, a Romance of the North Land, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Two Fourpenny Bits, by the author of 'Tiny House', 3/6 cl.
Ware's (Mrs. E.) Life's Seven Ages, a Novel, 3 vols. 31/6 cl.
Wigley's (Mrs. W. H.) Workers at Home, 8vo. 6/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Corpus Apologiarum Christianorum Saeculi Secundi, ed. J. Th. Eques de Otto, Vol. 4, 8m. 50.
Katschthaler (D. J.) Theologia Dogmatica Catholica Specialis, 3, Part 1, 8m.
Steinmeyer (F. L.) Beiträge zur Christologie, Part 1, 8m. 80.

Fine Art.

- Lermoloff (I.) Die Italienische Meister im den Galerien v. Berlin, Dresden u. München, 8m.

Poetry and the Drama.

- R. (J. E.) Histoire Complète et Méthodique des Théâtre de Rouen depuis leur Origine jusqu'à nos Jours, Vol. 4, 7fr.
Hugo (Victor) L'Âne, 4fr.

History.

- Sarrazin (Ch. v.) Die Feldzüge Karls XII., 12m.
Weber (G.) Allgemeine Weltgeschichte, Vol. 16, Section 2, Part 1, 8m. 60.

Philology.

- Bentley (F.) Vedicae Linguae, 16m. 50.
Bibliothèque Germanischer Grammatiken: Einleitung in das Sprechstudium, by E. Delbrück, Vol. 4, 8m.
Braune's (W.) Gotische Grammatik, 8m.
Dobson's (E.) Die Deutschen, by Salomon u. Markoff, ed. F. Vogt, Vol. 1, 10m.
Jouffroy's Rittergedicht, ed. H. Hofmann and F. Müncher, 8m.
Napoli's (M. v.) Der Trobador Pons de Capduvill, 4m.
Riese's (J.) L'Usage Syntaxique de Froissart, 2m.

Sciences.

- Hertwig (O. v. E.) Studien zur Ektartheorie, Part 2, 7m.
Schimper (W. F.) and Zittel (K.) Handbuch der Paläontologie, Vol. 1, Part 4, 8m.

General Literature.

- Dahn (F.) Odin's Trust, 8m.
Kirchbach (W.) Salvator Rosa, Roman, 8m.

SUBSCRIPTION ISSUES.

The Mitchell Library, Glasgow.

I DESIRE, with your permission, to point out to authors and publishers who issue books by subscription that a practice now exists which must be injurious to the very useful system of subscription issue. In several recent cases works have been offered by subscription at given prices, and copies have been placed afterwards with booksellers at rates so much lower that they were able to, and did, sell them for less than the subscription rates. One instance will suffice, but others could be cited. A work was recently subscribed at 6s. 6d. On the day following the receipt of the subscription copy a bookseller offered another, similar, and obtained directly from the publishers, for 5s. 10s. In this case the subscriber had engaged to take the book on the faith of the prospectus only; he had, by subscribing early, assisted in its production, and as a return he found himself charged much more than others who did nothing for the book, and who were free to take it or not as it pleased them. Surely this is unfair. Private subscribers are, of course, free; but to those who, like myself, have the responsibility of advising the committee of a public library, a proposal to take a book by subscription is not helped by the knowledge that we may wait to see it, and, if we like it, we may then obtain it for a smaller sum. F. T. BARRETT.

THE GIPEES IN NORTHERN EUROPE.

Fern Bank, Higher Broughton, Oct. 18, 1880.

MR. EDWARD SCOTT is wrong in supposing that the document he quotes is "unknown." If he will consult Mr. H. T. Crofton's "Annals of the English Gipsies under the Tudors" ("Papers of the Manchester Literary Club," vol. vi., 1880), he will find its purport set forth at length, and references given to other authors who have noticed it. WILLIAM E. A. AXON.

MR. SCOTT is mistaken in supposing that the curious letter of James IV. to the King of Denmark, which he has printed in the last number of the Athenæum, had not been published before. It was printed by Pinkerton in his "History of Scotland," vol. ii. p. 444, and more recently by myself in "Letters and Papers of the Reigns of Richard III. and Henry VII.," vol. ii. p. 213. JAMES GARDNER.

United Service Club, Edinburgh, Oct. 19, 1880.

THE curious sixteenth century letter relating to this subject which Mr. Edward Scott has transcribed and sent you (Athen., Oct. 16, p. 499) is well known in Scotland. Under the title "Letter from King James IV. to the King of Denmark in favour of Anthony Gawin, Earl of Little Egypt, &c., anno 1506," it is printed in Pitcairn's "Criminal Trials in Scotland," vol. iii. p. 592, with the reference "MS. Reg. 13. B. 11," to which is added the remark, "taken from Pinkerton's 'History of Scotland,' Lond., 1797, ii. 444."

The letter is not the less interesting on this account, and will have been new to the bulk of your readers, as also would be another, even more curious, given by Pitcairn at the same place, written in old Scotch, and described as a "Letter under the Privy Seal by King James V. in favours of Johnne Faw, Lord and Erle of Little Egypt, Feb. 12, 1540."

These and other curious facts relating to Scotch gipsies, as given by Pitcairn, were pointed out to Mr. Groomer, and I write now to express a hope that when his entertaining book reaches a second edition it may appear in a more "important" form, embracing, along with the details referred to, a larger proportion of the stores of out-of-the-way information, philological and other, which the author evidently has at his disposal.

ALEX. FERGUSON, Lieut.-Col.

SANSKRIT AS A LIVING LANGUAGE.

Oxford, October, 1880.

FEW are aware of the extent to which Sanskrit is at present used as a medium of conversation and correspondence in India, and of its extreme convenience when employed as a kind of lingua franca among learned men in a country where there may be no affinity between the spoken vernaculars, or not sufficient affinity to make two persons living in adjacent districts mutually intelligible.

Mr. Caut has shown that about two hundred languages and dialects are spoken by the inhabitants of our Indian empire. What a barrier would this variety of speech be to the interchange of ideas were it not for the universal employment of Sanskrit and Hindustani as vehicles of intellectual intercourse by the educated classes in all parts of the country! Sanskrit is supposed to be dead, and often called a dead language; but can any language be pronounced devoid of life which still lives and breathes in daily thought and daily speech, which still animates and inspires daily correspondence, and which still exerts a living influence over literature, science, and religion from the Hindü Kshatriya to Ceylon?

The readers of the Athenæum may remember that about a year ago I announced the arrival in this country of a young Hindü of the Kshatriya caste, named Syāmaji Krishna-varma, whose knowledge of Sanskrit and power of speaking and writing that language were so great that the title of Pandit had already been accorded to him. I also mentioned that he had had the advantage of the instruction of a remarkable person who is not only profoundly versed in ancient Sanskrit literature, but is now causing considerable stir in Indian religious circles by denouncing polytheism, pantheism, and idolatry, and preaching pure monotheism as the only true religion of the Aryan race founded on the Veda.

The name of this rising religious reformer is Dayānanda Sarasvati Svāmi. He is an eloquent speaker and writer of Sanskrit, as I can myself testify; for when I was at Bombay I heard him deliver a sermon with great earnestness and fluency, before an attentive congregation of the Arya Samāj, on the original religion of the Aryas. He has lately written a letter in Sanskrit to his pupil, now a member of Balliol College, Oxford, which, with the permission of the addressee, I here translate:—

"May the benediction of Dayānanda Sarasvati Svāmi rest upon Syāmaji Krishna-varma, who deserves all commendation for his learning and his perseverance in the path of Vedic religion, &c. I am sorry you have not cheered me for some time by a letter. I now write hoping you will rejoice my heart by replying to the following questions:—

"What sort of men are there in England? What are their characteristic qualities, dispositions, and actions? What is the nature of the land, water, and air there? What kind of estates, solid and liquid, and what things fit for licking and sucking (lehya, chūshya), can be had there? Have you been in good health ever since you left this country? Is the object of your visit to England being accomplished every day? How many men read Sanskrit with you, and what books do they study?

"What is your monthly income and what are your expenses? What time have you for study, for teaching, and for meditating? How is it that your fame for discoursing on the doctrines of the true religion has not spread so rapidly in England as it formerly did here in different parts of India? Perhaps you have already acquired a reputation without our having heard of it, being at a long distance from you; or perhaps you have had no leisure. If that be the case, it is my earnest recommendation that, as soon as you have finished reading and teaching (pāṭhana, pāṭhana), you should deliver addresses for the propagation of Vedic doctrines, and then return here, but not before; for a good reputation so acquired is preferable to making money, nay, it confers a great blessing (śiva-karṇa). What is the present opinion of our beloved professors Monier Williams and Max Müller (Moksha-müller) about the Vedas and other Śāstras? Have they and others any regard for the dissemination of the meaning of those works (tad-artha-prachārāya)? Is it a fact that the Theosophical Society has established a Vedic branch (Vaidika śākhā) in London (Nanda-nagara, the city of joy)? Have you ever seen Her Majesty, the great Queen, Empress of India? Have you seen the assembly called Parliament (Parliament-ābhya sabhā)?

"Please to answer these questions as soon as you can, and write to me at length about other topics which you may think worth mentioning. This will suffice for the present, as it is not necessary to write long letters to the intelligent. Written on Tuesday, the sixth day of the white half of the month Ashādha of the Samvat year, measured by the earth, the numerical symbols, the Rāmas, and the sages (1937=A.D. 1880)."

The above letter is well and clearly written in pure classical Sanskrit. I constantly receive similar Sanskrit letters from learned Hindüs who live in countries as widely separated and distinct from each other as Cashmere and Travancore. The specimen translated is valuable for other purposes than a mere illustration of the fact that the educated classes of India use Sanskrit as a medium of communication. It affords an insight into the ideas that prevail among learned natives and thoughtful religious reformers in regard to the condition of the country under whose rule they are able to pursue their studies or propagate their reforming opinions in peace and security. I may note, for the benefit of those who were interested in the controversy as to the proper translation of the title "Empress of India," that the expression employed by Dayānanda is Rājā-rājāvari.
MONTIE WILLIAMS.

THE ORIGIN OF ZOROASTRISM.

As the Athenæum has noticed the last annual report presented to the Société Asiatique by M. Renan, allow me to remark to your readers that the learned reporter has altogether misunderstood the system which I explained at great length in the Journal Asiatique ('Les Origines du Zoroastrisme,' art. 1-5), and that he makes me say precisely the contrary of what I have maintained. As will be still more clearly seen in the August issue of the Journal, I have always affirmed that ancient myths formed an integral part of the Avestic beliefs, that they were simply transformed by Zoroastrism, and that this transformation proves a change of doctrine and the impossibility of a simple evolution.

The evolutionist system defended by M. Darmesteter is too simple to be misunderstood; to grasp its nature it is sufficient to read the table of contents of his work. I have handled this system with much less severity than Pischel and other specialists. If certain assents of the first rank have extolled it, it is to be remarked that these assents are not specialists.

C. DE HARLES,

Professor at the University of Louvain.

KING TARKODEMOS AND HIS COINAGE.

23, St. George's Square, S.W., October, 1880.

In Mr. Madden's new work on the Jewish coinage, in which he has applied a great luxury of learning and research, we shall find a minute dissertation on Adarkon and Darkemon(im) in Ezra, Nehemiah, &c. These are considered to represent a gold coin or stater.

One theory quoted is that the name is derived from Darius the Mede or the Persian dāra, king. This latter I was already prepared to connect with the older root. My application as a solution is the Khita title we have lately had to deal with of Tarkodemus, Tarkotimmi, in conjunction with the gold coinage of Lydia. The word is one of the common form of a kingly name applied to a coin. I have already stated that I consider Tarkon or Tarquin to stand for a title or designation of a royal race rather than a proper name. On the early gold coins of Sardis will be found the two heads of the seal and of the Carchamish inscriptions, which designate the king.
HYDE CLARK.

PROF. FOWLER'S 'LOCKE.'

THE public cannot be expected to take much interest in the complaints of one author concerning the treatment he has received from another; but as, unless he resorts to legal proceedings, which in my case would be altogether distasteful, an aggrieved author's only means of seeking redress is in asking the public to judge between him and those whom he considers to have injured him, I trust I may be allowed to make such an appeal through the columns of the Athenæum.

In 1876 I published a 'Life of John Locke' which represented the labour of years, and was the first real attempt ever made to set forth the career of our great philosopher. Lord King's 'Life,' issued fifty years ago, contained a valuable mass of Locke's correspondence and miscellaneous writings supplemental to other collections of letters and papers which had previously appeared. In the way of biography, however, it gave hardly more details than had been over and over again repeated, with more or less confusion of dates and facts, in the biographical dictionaries. The chief source of all the information within reach of the public before my book appeared was, indeed, a short magazine article, written immediately after Locke's death by his friend Jean Le Clerc, the principal item of which was a French translation of a letter by Locke's other friend, Lady Masham, the original of which I discovered among Le Clerc's papers in Amsterdam. It had been my good fortune to obtain access to more than two hundred letters written by or to Locke, and never before printed, as well as several hitherto unpublished treatises and memoranda from his hand, together with numberless references and allusions to him in contemporary manuscripts. I was thus in a position to furnish a far more detailed and correct account of his life and literary history, and of his relations with public men and social and political movements, than had previously appeared. I have no reason to complain of the reception accorded to my book by the critics or the public. I was aware that in filing two stout volumes I made the book somewhat too long for general readers; but I purposely included in it all the important material at my command, desiring in those two volumes to furnish as complete a memorial as I could of the personal history of the man whom I sought to honour, and intending hereafter to embody the most suitable portions of the material I had collected in a work better adapted for popular use.

I confess, therefore, to having felt some surprise a few months ago when I heard that two volumes purporting to deal with the life of Locke were being produced by other writers. Being pretty certain that there is not much information procurable on the subject which has not been published by me, and that no biography of Locke could be written which would not be largely composed of information that I had brought to light, I consider that it would have been, to say the least, an act of courtesy on the part of these writers to ascertain in the first instance whether I objected to their making use of the material I had brought together. No communication, however, has been made to me by either gentleman, and now that the one of them who has contrived to get first into the field has published his volume, I find that it is, in all its biographical chapters at any rate, hardly anything but a compilation from my work.

The volume I refer to is the contribution just made by Mr. Thomas Fowler, Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford, to the series of 'English Men of Letters,' edited by Mr. John Morley, and published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. In his preface, it is true, Mr. Fowler makes what he calls "a general acknowledgment." "In writing the chapters about Locke's life," he says, "I have derived much information from the biographies of Lord King and Mr. Fox Bourne, especially from the latter, which contains a large amount of most interesting documents never before printed." He is good enough also in the body of his book to mention my name seven times, and in all but one instance in a complimentary way. As, however, in all but perhaps ten or a dozen sentences out of his 126 biographical pages, he has obviously done nothing but repeat, in a condensed form, statements already made by me, those seven references are likely, if not intended, to lead his readers to suppose that in only a few cases is he indebted to me, and that in the rest of his book he owes me little or nothing. For, besides the sentence I have already quoted, he says in his preface, "I have also referred to several other authorities, both printed and in manuscript; and in some cases I believe that my account will be found more precise than that given in the larger biographies." I do not doubt Mr. Fowler's statement that he has "referred to several other authorities," but his references have been singularly fruitless. I shall be glad to know whether he can point out a single instance in which, on any point of the least value, he has either corrected or supplemented the information contained in my book. That he has or may have obtained some of that information from Lord King's collection and other printed volumes, I readily admit; indeed, I see that he has quoted from Lord King two or three sentences of Locke's writing which I had not thought of sufficient importance to repeat; and that he has translated for himself two or three Latin sentences contained in 'Some Familiar Letters between Mr. Locke and several of his Friends,' published in 1708. There may be other instances of "original research" of the same sort which I have not as yet detected in his volume. I do not here speak of the account he has given of Locke's writings in seventy-four pages of his volume, as these show that he has studied Locke's writings for himself; but it will be evident to any one who compares the two that nearly all the rest of his book has been compiled from mine. For example, where I had said concerning an early tract of Locke's, "Locke, like the latitudinarians, indulged in many hopes that were never realized as to the issue of Charles II.'s restoration," Mr. Fowler writes, "Locke, at that time, like many other moderate men, seems to have entertained the most sanguine hopes of pacification and good government under the rule of the new monarch." And in the same paragraph Mr. Fowler's statement that "the tendencies of the new government were soon apparent, and the pamphlet was never published," does not differ much from mine, that "Locke lived to discover that Charles II.'s return was not a very happy one for his subjects;.....he probably soon felt that it would be undesirable to publish this treatise, if he had ever thought of doing so." Whether or not Mr. Fowler's "account" is "more precise" than mine, the turns of his sentences and the order of his paragraphs, his digressions and explanatory observations, as well as his direct statements of facts, betray on every page the source from which his book has been paraphrased and epitomized.

Mr. Fowler says that "in a work like the present numerous foot-notes would be out of place." I am well aware that had he acknowledged in every instance his indebtedness to me his pages would have been much defaced and their space greatly contracted by monotonous reiterations of my name. But he might have obviated that difficulty by frankly admitting that he had found it convenient to give in all the biographical pages of his work the substance of mine. Whether that would have been an adequate excuse for the book is another matter. If any man, coveting, we will say, a collection of rare coins which I had been at great pains in bringing together, and which I was exhibiting to the public, were to abstract some hundreds from my store and exhibit them in a slightly different arrangement for his own profit, a judge and jury would hardly hold him innocent on account of his open admission that he had availed himself of my property. But his offence would be somewhat greater if, after making the appropriation, he ticketed six or seven small coins out of the whole number as originally mine, and for the rest made "a general acknowledgment," which left it to be supposed by the public that the bulk of his collection was obtained from "other authorities." But, of course, literary property differs from other property; and, were it not so, it is probable that an Oxford Professor of Logic would be able to adduce a very good chain of reasons for his procedure.

As my main object in devoting much time and energy, which could ill be spared from more remunerative occupations, to the study of Locke's life and writings was to stir up in the minds of nineteenth century Englishmen some interest in one of the greatest and most neglected teachers of the seventeenth century, I rejoice to think that such an interest has been greatly quickened since my book was published; and I do not need to be reminded that for the instruction of the multitude a cheap book of two hundred pages is far more useful (besides being far more profitable to the compiler) than a high-priced one of over a thousand pages; but was it fair of Prof. Fowler, without even consulting me, to avail himself of the results of all my laborious inquiries, in and out of England, in the construction of a volume which any clever hack-writer could have produced in a fortnight?

I have complained of Mr. Fowler's lack of courtesy: I regard his treatment of me as no less unjust than discourteous, and though, as his name stands most prominently on the title-page, my complaint is addressed especially to him, it applies as much to the publishers and the editor who have employed him.

H. R. FOX BOURNE.

"BUSH."

The Memo. Pitt-Rivers.

THIS word is still in common use in at least parts of the north of Scotland. It is applied to almost every kind of plant, e.g., "a bus o' corn," "a rash bus," "a bus o' dockens," "a bus o' grass." When applied to grass, corn, barley, &c., it implies that the spot of grass, &c., spoken of is of a ranker growth than the surrounding parts. It is also used to signify a quantity cut or plucked up and twisted together, as "The man hid (had) a bus o' dockens in's han'." It is applied to the hair of the head when in disorder, as "Her hair wis a' in a bus."

WALTER GREGOR.

Literary Gossip.

MR. GEORGE MEREDITH's new story, 'The Tragic Comedians,' which is appearing in the Fortnightly Review, is to be completed in four numbers. It will, his admirers will be glad to hear, be reprinted in a small volume.

THE November number of Blackwood will contain the opening chapters of a new story, 'The Private Secretary,' by a well-known writer, whose pen will doubtless speedily be recognized.

THE value of the handsome reprint of Mr. Fagan's 'Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi' which is to appear at Boston, U.S., immediately, with the sanction of the biographer, will be enhanced by the addition of personal and bibliographical reminiscences of Panizzi and the Museum during his reign by Mr. Henry Stevens, F.S.A. As Mr. Stevens is an American citizen, these reminiscences, which fill a considerable portion of the second volume, will, it is believed, suffice to protect the reprint from piracy.

MR. R. L. STEVENSON has determined to suppress his 'Amateur Emigrant,' announced by us some little time ago, and has withdrawn it from his publisher's hands. Mr. Stevenson's 'Essays,' however, are in reserve, and will shortly be produced.

MR. AND MRS. MACQUOID have in the press a new work, called 'In the Ardennes,' the outcome of a journey made last autumn in that picturesque region. It will be fully illustrated by Mr. T. R. Macquoid.

DURING the vacation the Spelling Reform Association has been busy. The task of collecting and printing specimens of schemes of reform has been successfully accomplished, and all those that could be printed have been issued to the members of the Association. There now remains the more difficult work of determining the course which the Association is itself to adopt. During the coming session the members will discuss the fundamental questions which must be answered before any recommendations can be publicly made. There is a talk of an International Spelling Congress in 1881.

WE understand that the first number of the Journal of the Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies will be published early next month. It will contain papers on a great variety of subjects, not omitting modern and mediæval Greek questions, but a majority of them treat of inscriptions and antiquities. The contributors are Messrs. Newton, Jebb, Sayce, W. M. Ramsay, Percy Gardner, Sidney Colvin, C. Waldstein, Cecil Smith, A. S. Murray, E. S. Roberts, A. W. Verrall, Ingram Bywater, and H. F. Tomer. The volume will be accompanied by several plates, chiefly representing unpublished Greek vases. Mr. Percy Gardner has acted as editor, with the help of a consultative committee, consisting of Messrs. Hort, Bywater, and Jebb.

THE second volume of Dr. Ginsburg's sumptuous edition of the Masorah is passing through the press, and will be ready in about six months. The first is finished, and as a specimen of typography does great credit to Austria. We fear hardly any press in England could turn out such work. Dr. Ginsburg has just returned from Vienna.

THE Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, U.S., who is now in this country, is preparing an English edition of his lectures in two volumes. They will be published immediately by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. The same firm will issue before long Mr. J. B. Gough's new work, entitled 'Sunlight and Shadow; or Gleanings from my Life-work.'

THE Rev. Arthur Palmer, Professor of Latin in Trinity College, Dublin, has undertaken to prepare for Messrs. Macmillan & Co.'s "Classical Series" an edition of the 'Satires' of Horace. It may be expected to appear in the course of next year. For the same publishers Mr. G. D. Hicks, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, has in hand a translation of Prof. Susmihl's excellent critical notes and commentary to Aristotle's 'Politics,' published in Leipzig last year. Mr. J. E. C. Welldon, Fellow and Lecturer of King's College, Cambridge, is meanwhile engaged upon a new translation of the Greek text of the same work.

THE condition of Ireland seems likely to add largely to the literature of the day. We announced last week a book on the law of landlord and tenant by Prof. Richey, and now we hear that Mr. Barry O'Brien, author of 'The Irish Land Question and English Public Opinion,' has completed a 'Parliamentary History of the Irish Land Question from 1829 to 1869, and the Origin and Results of the Ulster Custom.' It will be published by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co.

UNDER the title 'The English Citizen: his Rights and Responsibilities,' Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have in preparation a series of small books dealing concisely with the actual condition of the various political, legal, economic, and social arrangements which constitute the relations of the citizen to the State. Further details as to subjects and authors will be announced later on.

AT the London Institution this winter Mr. Mark Pattison is to lecture on a wide subject, 'The Thing that Might Be'; Sir H. S. Maine, on 'The Succession to Thrones'; Sir John Lubbock, on 'Fruits and Seeds'; Mr. Frederic Harrison, on 'The French Revolution and the Various Histories of It'; and Prof. Bryce, on 'The Gods of Canaan'; while Mr. J. E. Hodgson, R.A., will discourse on 'Art among the Ancient Greeks,' and Mr. William Morris on 'The Prospects of Architecture in Modern Civilization.' Mr. Leslie Stephen begins the season with a lecture on 'The Relation of Morality to Literature.'

THE Preston Corporation are now hastening the measures requisite to enable them to take over the munificent bequest of Mr. Harris, who gave a sum of 70,000*l.* for the erection of a library, on condition that the town should acquire a suitable site. An Act was obtained for this purpose last session, and the Town Council have nominated a committee to act in conjunction with Mr. Harris's trustees.

MR. I. LYNES, of the Belfast Northern Whig, is going to undertake the editorship of the Northern Echo, the present editor, Mr. Stead, having joined the staff of the Pall Mall Gazette.

MR. BARCROFT's new work is now almost ready for publication. It is entitled 'History of the Formation of the Constitution of the United States, forming a History of the United States from the Treaty of Peace with Great Britain to the Inauguration of Washington as President.'

MESSRS. GRIVIN & Co. (Portsmouth) will publish next month a second series of 'The Ships of the Royal Navy,' quarto, containing portraits in colours of every class of ship in the service at the present time, with descriptive letter-press. The plates will be printed by Messrs. Hanhart.

MR. EYINGHAM WILSON has in the press a work entitled 'Political Economy for Business People,' by Mr. Robert Jamieson, and a new issue, in an enlarged form, of 'The Merchant's Clerk,' by Mr. John Pearce.

LAST week we spoke of the circulation of Scribner's Magazine as about 100,000 copies monthly. Messrs. F. Warne & Co. inform us that it has a circulation in America and England of 150,000. The supply of St. Nicholas is now transferred from Messrs. Scribner & Co.'s previous agents to Messrs. Warne.

FROM Munich it is reported that of the works undertaken by the Historical Commission the following have been printed during the last year:—'Die Chroniken der Deutschen Städte vom 14^{ten} bis ins 16^{te} Jahrhundert,' vol. xvi.; 'Die Chroniken der Niederrheinischen Städte: Braunschweig,' vol. ii.; 'Briefe und Acten zur Geschichte des 16^{ten} Jahrhunderts, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf Bayern,' vol. ii.; 'Beiträge zur Reichsgeschichte, 1552'; 'Geschichte der Wissenschaften in Deutschland, Neuere Zeit,' vol. xviii. part i.; 'Die Recesse und andere Acten der Hansetage von 1256–1430,' vol. v.; 'Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte,' vol. xx.; 'Deutsche Biographie,' parts xlvii. to lvi.; 'Geschichte der Deutschen Rechtswissenschaft,' part i. It is hoped that that gigantic undertaking, the 'History of the Sciences in Germany,' may be completed in a few years.

WE are glad to learn that Petermann's 'Porta Linguarum Orientalium,' of which parts i.–iv. and vi. have appeared, will be completed by other scholars. Dr. Nestle has undertaken the 'Porta Syriaca,' and Dr. Landauer, of Strasbourg, the 'Porta Persica.'

THE new Report of the Syndicate of Madras University compares favourably with the reports of previous years. Of the 3,309 candidates who presented themselves for the matriculation examination, 1,084 passed. Of the successful candidates about two-thirds came from non-Government schools, and it appears that the schools managed by native gentlemen are considerably on the increase. The majority of the 85 candidates who, out of the 175 who presented themselves, passed the B.A. examination were Brahmans.

THE Senate of Calcutta University will next March elect a Tagore professor for the term of one year from the 1st of September, 1881. The professor will receive a salary of 10,000*rs.*, and will be expected to deliver at least twelve lectures on one of the following courses: (1) Undivided Hindu family, status, rights, liabilities, and privileges under the different schools of Hindu law; (2) The law relating to the disposition of property among the Mohammedans; (3) The law of limitation and prescription in British India, including easements; (4) The law of testamentary devise as administered in British India.

A BENGALI writer, Jogenderanath Bidyabhusan, has recently published in the vernacular a life of Mazzini, together with a short account of Italian history, his object being, as he says, to excite patriotic feelings amongst the Hindus, and to teach them to prefer the good of their country to their self-interest.

M. J. DEKENBOURG's edition of the Hebrew text of Kalilah and Dimnah, the preparation of which was mentioned in the Athenæum, is far advanced, and will appear shortly with a French translation in the fasciculi published by the École des Hautes Études in Paris. The introduction, which will contain the literature of the translations of Kalilah, will follow in another fasciculus.

THE forthcoming Program of the Rabbinical School at Buda-Pesth will contain the Hebrew translation of Al-Bathlayusi's philosophical treatise in Arabic, with the title of 'The Figurative Circle,' by Prof. D. Kaufmann. It will be introduced by an essay on the influence of Bathlayusi's theories on the Jewish philosophy of religion in the Middle Ages.

AT a meeting of the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, held on the 24th of August last, the Rev. A. Bourguin read a paper which consisted of a translation, with explanatory notes, of the first three chapters of the 'Dharmasindhu.' This work is a part of the so-called "Dharmasāstras" or "Books of Laws," and appears to have been compiled chiefly for ritual purposes. It is, in fact, a complete Hindu liturgy, and explains the numerous and strange ceremonies of the Hindus, of which so little has hitherto been known. The first two chapters treat of the solar, lunar, and planetary conjunctions; the Brahmins and their gifts, and the fasts and rites appertaining to them; and the Hindu mode of reckoning time, namely, by the synodical lunar month and the lunar year of 354 days. The third chapter shows how this lunar year is harmonized with the solar course by means of intercalary additive and subtractive months. This chapter also gives a list and explanation of the curious rites to be performed or omitted on the epagomenic days, amongst others the rite of "investiture with the sacred waistband," the keystone of all other rites of Hinduism.

A NEW novel, entitled 'Little Pansy,' from the pen of Mrs. Randolph, the author of 'Gentianella,' 'Wild Hyacinth,' &c., will be shortly published by Messrs. Hurst & Blackett.

THE death is announced of Miss M. L. Charlesworth, the author of 'Ministering Children' and other popular religious books. From Germany comes the intelligence of the death of H. v. Schmidt, a novelist highly esteemed by the readers of the Gartenlaube and other admirers of "Dorfgeschichten."

A REACTION is said to be setting in in America against the very shabby race of books which the competition of the "torpedoes" produces. At least, we have before us an early copy of an exceedingly tasteful reprint of 'XXXVI. Lyrics and XII. Sonnets,' by Mr. Aldrich. It is sold at a dollar, and it is said that the publishers have had the boldness to print 20,000 copies. Certainly no European printer need be ashamed of this dainty volume, which does great credit to the Riverside Press.

THE 'Nonconformist Register of Baptisms, Marriages, and Deaths,' compiled by the Revs. Oliver Heywood and T. Dickenson, 1644–1702, 1702–1752, generally known as the 'Northampton or Coley Register,' is shortly to be printed by subscription. It will be edited by Mr. Horafall Turner, and the notes will include unpublished lists of the Popish recusants, licensed preaching places, &c., in the West Riding, from 1682 to 1700.

THERE is now in the press a reprint of 'The Indian Primer; or, the Way of Training Up of our Indian Youth in the Good Knowledge of God, 1669,' written by John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians. To this is prefixed 'The Indian Covenanting Confession,' reprinted from the originals in the library of the University of Edinburgh.

A new magazine, called The Army and Navy, will be started by Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co. next month. Messrs. Cecil Brooks & Co. begin on the 28th inst. a new weekly, called The Ladies' Illustrated Paper.

SCIENCE

A History of the British Marine Polyzoa. By Thomas Hincks, B.A., F.R.S. (Van Voorst.)

THIS volume forms the latest addition to the valuable series of works on British zoology published by Mr. Van Voorst. The group of animals with which it deals are all microscopic, and probably referred to the class of sea-weeds by the majority of visitors to our sea-shores. Uninviting as is their outward appearance, they nevertheless form some of the most beautiful objects for microscopic investigation. To the naturalist, too, they are a most interesting group, and though they have been investigated by many of the distinguished zoologists of the century, their affinities with other types are still uncertain, and many points in their structure and life history are very imperfectly understood. Mr. Hincks's treatise is divided into two parts—an anatomical section, contained in an introduction of about 140 pp., dealing with the structure and life history of the Polyzoa; and a systematic section, containing a description of all the British marine forms. While the systematic section undoubtedly constitutes the most valuable part of the work, the introduction is the part which will be of most interest to the general reader. It contains by far the fullest and most satisfactory account of the Polyzoa to be found in the English language. Mr. Hincks has himself contributed several interesting papers on the anatomy of these forms, and he is thoroughly familiar with the numerous contributions of foreign naturalists. While we fully recognize the value of his introduction, we cannot help regretting that he has adopted, without a word of explanation, a nomenclature of the parts of these animals founded upon an old but erroneous view of their organization. Each individual of a colony of Polyzoa is encased in a cell known as the ectocyst. Within the cell comes the body-wall known as the endocyst, and within the body-wall is a wide body-cavity, in which the alimentary canal is suspended. On the ground of some unwarranted deductions from the development, the alimentary canal and tentacles were at one time believed to constitute a separate individual or zooid, formed by a process of budding from the body of the larva, while the larva itself was believed to persist as the endocyst. The alimentary canal and tentacles thus came to be called a polype or polypide. This misleading nomenclature is retained by Mr. Hincks; not only so, but we have been unable to find that he anywhere explains the true nature of the parts, and some of his expressions seem even to support the mistaken views we have just spoken of. The plates, which are placed in a separate volume, are excellent. The descriptions of the different species are clear and precise; and the whole work will compare favourably with the previous volumes of this series.

The Chain of Life in Geological Time. By J. W. Dawson, LL.D., F.R.S. (The Religious Tract Society.)

It may be doubted whether Dr. Dawson will increase his scientific reputation by the popular works—semi-scientific, semi-theological—which he has been lately writing. No doubt he feels that duty calls him to wage war against the heresies of the new philosophy, and that he would be false to his mission if his pen were idle or his voice silent. Only a few months ago he published his 'Fossil Men,' which may be regarded as a protest against the dogma of man's antiquity and the evolution of culture. And now he brings forth his 'Chain of Life' as an antidote against the evolutionary biology which is so freely taught in most of our schools of science. After a general review of the stream of life on the earth, ascending from the cozoön to man, Dr. Dawson expresses his belief that the testimony of palæontology tends "to show that species come in per saltum rather than by any slow and gradual process."

Outlines of Physiography. By William Lawson-Part I. (Edinburgh, Oliver & Boyd.)

THIS text-book has been prepared with reference to the prescriptions of the syllabus of the Science Department. In the olden time, before we enjoyed the advantages since conferred upon us by the scientific mandarins of South Kensington, it was absurdly supposed that students of physical geography should learn something about the earth as a planet and its relation to the sun before such matters as the distribution of life, ocean currents, and meteorology were entered upon. All this has been changed now—we hardly think for the better—and teachers demure of sharing in the rewards provided by Government are bound to submit to the new rule. Mr. Lawson therefore considers in this first part the earth apart from other portions of the universe, and chiefly in relation to the materials of which it is composed, the forces which act upon these materials, and the distribution of vegetable and animal life. He proposes to deal in a second part with astronomical geography. His task, within the limits prescribed by superior authority, has been fairly well performed, and his little book can be recommended to teachers and learners.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

THE moonless nights of next week being favourable for observation of the comets now in view, we give the places of Hartwig's and Faye's for alternate nights as follows. Those of Hartwig's comet were calculated by Dr. Oppenheim, of Berlin, and apply to Berlin midnight on the respective dates. It has been suggested by Dr. Winnecke that this comet may possibly be the same as one observed in the year 1506. It was in perihelion on September 7th, and is now so rapidly receding from the earth that it will scarcely be seen much longer, except with very powerful telescopes:—

Hartwig's Comet.
Date.	R.A.	N.P.D.
	h. m. s.	°	'
Oct. 23	17 53 1	78	54
" 24	17 58 26	77	18
" 25	18 4 23	77	57
" 26	18 9 43	75	37
" 27	18 14 39	73	13

Faye's periodical comet was nearest the earth on the 3rd inst., but will not reach its perihelion until January 22nd, and is now at about its greatest brightness. The places, from the ephemeris of Prof. Axel Møller, of Lund, also for Berlin midnight, are the following:—

Faye's Comet.
Date.	R.A.	N.P.D.
	h. m. s.	°	'
Oct. 23	22 44 22	86	51
" 24	22 46 58	86	10
" 25	22 49 43	86	28
" 26	22 52 37	86	45
" 27	22 55 39	86	1

Of the comet discovered by Mr. Swift on the 11th inst. nothing further has, so far as we are aware, been heard.

The volume of Greenwich Observations for 1878 has been published. We have already had occasion to announce (Athenæum, September 4th) that the spectroscopic and photographic results for that year and for 1879 were issued in advance of the volumes a few weeks ago. There is nothing of an unusual character in the Observations for 1878 to call for special remark.

Mr. Gill, who, it will be remembered, succeeded Mr. Stone last year in the direction of the Royal Observatory at the Cape of Good Hope, delivered an address at the annual meeting of the South African Philosophical Society at Cape Town, on the 30th of July last, on the determination of the earth's distance from the sun, which has been printed and circulated, and will be read with interest. In addition to a sketch of the previous history of determinations of this most important element in the solar system, he gives some particulars of his own observations of Mars at the island of Ascension in the autumn of 1877, the full details of which will be published by the Royal Astronomical Society. The method adopted in this determination was, as is well known, originally proposed by Sir George Airy in 1857, and consisted in utilizing the rotation of the earth as the means of viewing the planet from two separate stations, instead of employing two observers at different points of the earth's surface. Thus the observations could all be made by the same observer, securing, amongst other advantages, a greater probability of their being made in a similar manner. Mr. Gill had previously satisfied himself of the accuracy to be obtained in measuring the angular distance between two neighbouring celestial objects by the heliometer, and obtained from Lord Lindsay the loan of a very fine one with which he was familiar, having used it in the Transit-of-Venus expedition to Mauritius, and (being aided by a vote of money from the Astronomical Society) transported it to Ascension. With this the observations were accordingly made on twenty-two corresponding mornings and evenings between July 31st and October 3rd; the separate results are fairly accordant, and the mean result is a solar equatorial horizontal parallax of 8".782, giving a distance of 93,070,000 miles. The occasion was a very favourable one, Mars being in perihelion on August 21st, a few weeks after the earth was in aphelion, so that the determination is in every point of view entitled to considerable confidence. Mr. Gill looks forward to being able to make and utilize observations of some of the small planets at the Cape for the solar parallax. Their stellar-like appearance offers advantages for this, notwithstanding their greater distance, and something has (as we have had occasion to notice) been already done in this way on the proposition of Dr. Galle, of Breslau. This is chiefly noteworthy as an encouragement to undertake more complete and extended observations for the same purpose.

The Companion to the British Almanac for 1881 will contain, amongst other articles, a short sketch of the history of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, by Mr. Lynn, F.R.A.S., for many years a member of its staff.

Mr. Burnham contributes to the last number of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society a paper on the double-star measures of the Bedford Catalogue in the well-known 'Celestial Cycle,' giving an examination of a large proportion of those stars, by which it is evident that the measures of distance and position in the 'Cycle' are quite untrustworthy, being affected by very numerous errors, in many cases very difficult to explain. There are, indeed, many accurate measures in the 'Cycle,' but these are mixed up with a large number of observations which seem to have been made without any expectation of their future publication, and, as Mr. Burnham remarks, "without any attempt at special and independent accuracy," a circumstance which "may have been forgotten or to some extent lost sight of when the Bedford Catalogue was prepared." Whatever be the reason of this, there can be no certainty in forming an inference from the difference between the relative places of the components of a double star as given in the 'Cycle' and as at present found to exist. Attention was called to this matter by Mr. Herbert Sadler in the Monthly Notices last year; but Mr. Burnham remarks that he had been led to it even before that by communications relating to the alleged disappearance of the companions to certain stars. The examination contained in the paper now before us shows clearly that no such conclusion can be drawn from a comparison with positions given in the 'Cycle' alone.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

THE most important result of Mr. Leigh Smith's Arctic voyage undoubtedly centres in the excellent promise it gives of future successful exploration in that quarter. The extension of the Franz Josef archipelago to the westward was not unexpected, and confirms the theory originally entertained that that land was more closely connected with the Spitzbergen group than any other. And it is a curious and gratifying confirmation of the accuracy of the old Dutch navigator Giles's observations, that, in the exact position indicated by him so long since, land has now at last been discovered. In Van Keulen's chart, which was founded on Giles's and Utter Reps's observations, and published in Holland during last century, land is delineated a little to the east of North-East Land and in 80° north latitude. Much confusion seems to have subsequently prevailed regarding the land. The late Dr. Petermann, who, in spite of his unquestionable scientific erudition, was the author of some queer geographical misconceptions, shifted "Giles Land" a good deal to the north, and the Norwegians, and even Prof. Nordenfalk, appear to have associated it with Wiche's Land, which lies one degree to the south. But now we find Mr. Leigh Smith, working from the east, lighting upon land in the very position assigned to it by old Giles, or Gillis as he has sometimes been called. It gives very good ground for the expectation, recently expressed by several distinguished Arctic authorities, that a vessel advancing under the lee of that land would be sheltered from the heavy westward drift of the pack in Barents's Sea, and might thus attain a high northern latitude. Another object would be the exploration of the land to the northward, which Mr. Leigh Smith could decry but was unable to reach.

The series of articles which have recently appeared in the Standard, under the title "Gossip from the Alps," are from the pen of Mr. H. Schütz Wilson, the author of 'Alpine Adventures.'

M. Perrier at the meeting of the Académie des Sciences de Paris on October 4th presented his determinations of longitudes, latitudes, and azimuths in Africa made under his direction in 1877 and 1878. He stated that by exchange of signals he was enabled to calculate the mean retardation of transmission of a signal through an aerial conductor from chronograph to chronograph with accuracy. The mean velocity of propagation was found by M. Perrier to be about 40,000 kilometres (of 1093·833 yards), at which rate an electrical signal would pass round the earth in a second.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED BOOKS.

Miss. Artistic. 8.—'The Arabian Philosopher,' Mr. E. Gendy, 'The Technologist,' Mr. A. J. Cooper.

Science Gossip.

DR. HJALMAR STOLPE, Curator of the Royal Archaeological Museum at Stockholm, has been sent by the Swedish Academy of Sciences upon a scientific tour through Europe, more especially for ethnographical and archaeological purposes. The Swedish ascent has spent two months in the Netherlands. He will continue his researches in London accompanied by M. Serrurier, the Conservator of the Royal Ethnographical Museum of Leyden.

MR. T. P. FRIZELL, C.E., publishes in the Journal of the Franklin Institute for September 'Experiments on the Compression of Air by the Direct Action of Water.' The method advocated promises important advantages over existing methods of utilizing water power, putting it in a form to be transmitted to distant points.

PORTLAND cement is amongst the most recent of Indian manufactures. By a simple and almost purely mechanical process, a cement capable of bearing a pressure of 650 to 1,000 pounds and upwards is produced from ordinary sand combined with a certain proportion of purer limestone of local origin. A company has been formed, and works have been erected for the production of the cement at Sealdah.

PROF. SCACCHI, the mineralogist and crystallographer, describes in the Bulletin of the Belgian Academy a new mineral, to which he gives the name of "Vesbine," found by him in a yellow incrustation formed on certain portions of the Vesuvian lava ejected in 1831. He considers vesbine to be a vesbate of alumina, and vesbic acid as the oxide of a new element, "Vesbium."

MR. ALFRED C. HADDON writes:—"Allow me to correct a misstatement which appeared in the Athenæum for October 9th respecting my marine zoology class. This class was started and conducted solely for the study of marine zoology in connexion with our University course of instruction, and without any idea of founding a zoological station."

THE Statistical Registers of the Colony of Victoria for 1879 have been forwarded to us. Part i. contains all official information; part ii. deals with the population, and part iii. with finance.

MM. HAUTEFVILLE and CHAPPELAIN announced at a recent meeting of the Académie des Sciences that they had liquefied ozone. They secured this end by great reduction of temperature, and the passage through the gas of the silent electrical discharge. The gas first assumed an azure blue colour; then, under a pressure of several atmospheres, it appeared of a dark indigo blue. The pressure was then increased to ninety-five atmospheres and suddenly removed; the tube was at once filled with a mist, indicating liquefaction. Ozone was shown to be explosive: if a mixture of oxygen rich in ozone be rapidly compressed at ordinary temperatures an explosion takes place.

HOFMATH VON WAGNER, Professor of Technological Chemistry in the University of Würzburg, is dead. Dr. Wagner was born at Leipzig in 1823. His 'Handbuch der Chemischen Technologie' was translated into English by Mr. Crookes.

PROF. GRAHAM BELL was elected an honorary member of the National Telephone Association at a meeting recently held at Niagara Falls, under the presidency of Mr. G. L. Phillips. It was stated that in 1879 the Bell Telephone Company had about 12,000 telephones in use in America. At the present time over 100,000 of these instruments are in daily use in that country. The postal authorities in this country dispute the title of the telephone companies to do any business without a licence under the Telegraph Act of 1870. The case is expected to be tried in November.

FINE ARTS

DON'TS GREAT WORKS. 'CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM.' 'CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM' and 'THE BRAZEN SERPENT' (the latter last completed, each 21 by 27 feet, with 'Dream of Pilate's Wife'—Soldiers of the Cross, 'Night of the Crucifixion,' 'Moses of Chanaan,' &c., at the DON'TS GALLERY, 25, New Bond Street. 1880, Vol. 1880—32.

'JACOB'S DREAM.'

FIFTY years since I saw the Dulwich Gallery, and during a half century's experience, gained in studying the chief collections of the Continent, have never ceased to remember the 'Jacob's Dream' as not only the gem of the Dulwich pictures, but as one of the most remarkable works of the master. I was astonished, therefore, on revisiting the gallery, to find that, whilst the picture was unaltered, the inscription was changed from "Rembrandt" to the "School of Rembrandt," and that the work was contemptuously treated in the new catalogue as only noticeable for two conspicuous defects!

That my opinion of it is not exclusively mine may be seen by two descriptions. One, by an anonymous writer in 1824, says: "This extraordinary work is one of Rembrandt's very finest efforts, and is, perhaps, the most purely poetical picture he ever produced." The other, by Mrs. Jameson, says: "Within the realm of creative art I know of nothing more wild, visionary, and poetical than this little picture."

Neither of these writers, nor, so far as I know, any one else, ever thought of discussing the originality of the 'Jacob's Dream,' nor shall I waste a moment's time in doing so. As well might one question the authorship of the 'Madonna di San Sisto' at Dresden, or of the 'Bacchus and Ariadne' in the National Gallery at London.

My object is only to protest against what appears to me the most grotesque blunder in art criticism ever committed, and to beg that, if necessary, a competent jury of artistical experts may be impanelled, in order by their verdict to restore the old inscription and to wipe out the indignity committed against the master and the gallery.

SEPTUAGENARIAN.

FINE-ART Gossip.

THE Print Room, British Museum, has recently acquired, by purchase from a private collector, and for less than 200*l.*, a small number of old masters' drawings of exceptional merit and interest, on which the following notes may be welcome:—1. The whole-length figure of a soldier in complete and picturesque armour, of mail and plate, executed in water colours of blue and solid white on lighter blue paper, very carefully and learnedly drawn, with evident labour and considerable skill, in a manner which reminds us of the school of which the Holbeins were members. It is a valuable instance of Swiss art of the period of those painters. Indeed it is almost good enough for Holbein the Younger, and bears a close likeness to the figure of the soldier who stands with his back towards us in the front of the picture of 'Christ before Pilate' (not 'Pilate washing his Hands'). The defective foreshortening of the right arm, which is raised with a two-hand sword or halberd, and the laboured touch of the artist are against the notion that this fine figure is by Holbein himself. Mr. Reid has recognized a likeness between the manner, the drawing, and mode of this work and what we find in the productions of the Swiss artist, N. Manuel Deutsch. 2. A whole-length figure, drawn in bistre with a pen, of 'St. John in the Desert' by Mocetto, from which he engraved his excellent print with certain changes in the background and other portions. D. Campagna copied this example. For the original and the copy see Bartsch, xii. 3. By Wouwermans, in bistre with a pen, representing two sportsmen, one of whom is on horseback, and converses with his fellow; both carry fowling-pieces. It is remarkable for a free and firm touch, an animated design, and spirited motive. 4. Studies, on salmon-coloured paper in silver-point and white, for two draped female figures, probably made for an 'Annunciation,' in a very delicate and somewhat nerveless manner of design and draughtsmanship, but otherwise much resembling the art of Fra F. Leppt, to whom it has been conjecturally attributed. The lack of expression in the lower half of the sitting figure is not decisively opposed to this ascription. 5. A. Altdorfer, a 'Last Judgment,' including a "Majesty," designed in the Gothic type and mode of composition. Christ is in a vesica-shaped glory, and surrounded by the usual figures of the heavenly hierarchy, while below are distinct groups of the redeemed and the condemned, the summoning angel flying between. It is full of energy and is highly interesting. Drawn in ink with a pen, the colour has been affected by damp, so that three tints are observable in the pigment. 6. A whole-length figure of the Virgin seated, with two gnomes supporting her robes at her knees; one hand is in her lap, the other is raised, but its action is not defined. This sketch, which is in red chalk, is most graceful, elegant, and tender, and displays an ornate inspiration which reminds us of Parmigiano, although it may not be by him. 7. By Cuypp, a landscape, drawn with white and touched with indian ink, washed with the latter and yellow ochre; it shows with the most happy freshness and breadth a flat prospect with trees; on the sky-line are the buildings of a town. 8. Another, by the same, similarly executed; a hamlet, with a large church, occupies the centre of a champaign country. 9. An anonymous drawing of the school of Parma, a good example of the eclectic mode, and representing the Virgin with Christ and St. John, accompanied by angels, intended for an altar-piece, and executed in bistre and white on pale olive paper. 10. A design for an elaborate silver, made with a pen in bistre and black ink, to represent in a large circle, to be chased or wrought in repoussé of silver or gold, in distinct groups and in bold relief, the Triumphs of the Gods.

PROF. LEBROS, our readers will be glad to learn, is now a British subject, letters of naturalisation having been granted him a few days since. Prof. Lebros has lived in England for nearly eighteen years.

THE Journal Officiel publishes a paragraph referring to the alarm excited by the recent conflagration of the upper stories of the Pavillon de Flora. The governmental organ endeavours to allay public uneasiness by describing various precautions taken to protect the Louvre. It alleges, with some notwith, that a deluge of water is available for the next occasion. We are led to infer, however, that on the completion of the new Hôtel de Ville the dangers inseparable from the "installations provisoires" of the municipal offices will be reduced.

AMONG the pictures secured by the French Government at the last Salon, and destined for temporary installation in the Luxembourg, are the 'Imani' of M. Cazin; 'Les Derniers Rebelles' of M. B. Constant, depicting the exterior walls of Morocco and numerous figures; the 'Cala' of M. Corimon, that is, the procession of figures in the desert; 'Dans l'Atelier' of M. Dantan, and others, all of which we described in criticising the exhibition at the Palais de l'Industrie.

THE Chronique des Arts records the death of M. Pieme, 'Membre de l'Institut, Conservateur du Musée des Études à l'École des Beaux-Arts,' who was well known to many of our countrymen in his official capacity.

THE death is announced of the Marchese Giovanni Pietro Campana, the distinguished archaeologist and explorer of Etruscan tumuli, Director of the Monte di Pieta, and author of various works on antiquities, including 'Di due Repolehri Romani,' &c., 'Antichi Opere in Plastica,' &c., 'Descriptiones des Marbres Antiques du Musée Campana.' Distinguished for his learning, arumen, and industry, M. Campana acquired a vast, but wonderfully unequal, collection of relics of almost every kind, which was for many years a great attraction to visitors. In his official capacity he incurred charges of malversation of the funds entrusted to him; he was convicted—unjustly, as many of his friends declared, harshly, as most men felt—and sentenced to the galleys. This sentence was commuted for imprisonment—a punishment which he endured for three years, until Napoleon III.

procured his release from the Pope. When his collections were sold, Dr. Birch and Mr. Newton made, in 1866, a special report on them for the British Museum. A great number of articles, including antique jewellery, terra-cottas, &c., 12,000 in all, passed to the Parisian museum for the price of 174,500*l.*; the largest portion of the antique category, being 767 vases, bronzes, and marbles, were sold for 26,000*l.*, and taken to St. Petersburg. M. Guddonow described them; M. Albert Jacquemart described the majolica of the Campana Collection in 1862. Campana's so-called defalcations were alleged to amount to 200,000*l.*, but his collections were valued by his friends at a much larger sum. The antiques alone, except the marbles, were valued by the authorities of the British Museum at 34,260*l.*, and our Government was urged to give so much; this proposal fell to the ground. South Kensington, as represented by Mr. J. C. Robinson, secured a most important collection of eighty-four Renaissance sculptures, including works by De la Robbia, and majolica wares of the reputed Gigli-Campana Collection. The National Gallery failed to obtain any directly of the numerous—almost innumerable—objects, valuable and worthless, which the avidity of the unfortunate collector had stimulated his agents to secure from all parts of Italy.

PROF. NEWTON has, we are asked to say, changed the day of his lectures on archaeology at University College from Wednesday to Friday.

STRAITS are being taken for the formation at Simla of a permanent Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts. There will be an annual exhibition of pictures, and prizes will be given for the best productions of amateurs. The works of professional artists will be exhibited, but will not be allowed to compete for prizes. A collection of works on subjects connected with art will be formed, and a supply of the best art periodicals obtained for the use of members. It is proposed before long to establish a Free Fine-Art Gallery at Simla in connexion with the Society.

THERE is a falling off in the number of pictures exhibited at this year's Fine-Art Exhibition at Simla. There are only 63 oils and 162 water colours, as compared with 86 oils and 277 water colours in 1879. Sir Robert Egerton, in his speech at the opening of the exhibition on the 18th of last month, ascribed the fact to the fewness of the contributors, a result of the Afghan War, and to the Poona Fine-Art Exhibition being this year held at the same time. It is said that the Poona Exhibition shows considerable progress compared with previous years, there being a great increase especially in the number of pictures sent in by lady contributors.

TWO last vestiges of the Palais de Champ de Mars, constructed for the Exhibition of 1878, are being removed. Shortly nothing will remain of the prodigious structures which attracted all the world.

A LEARNED Correspondent calls attention to novel biographical data about two distinguished painters which are supplied by the 'Illustrated Guide to Weymouth,' the district of Sir James Thornhill. This work, on p. 24, has recorded that "he [Thornhill] married a daughter of Hogarth, the celebrated caricaturist and engraver."

WE have received from Messrs. Cassell & Co. Part I. of 'Egypt, Descriptive, Historical, and Picturesque.' It has numerous and brilliant woodcuts, admirably printed, of well-chosen subjects illustrating the text. The letter-press is translated from the German of Prof. Ebers by Miss C. Bell, with an introduction and notes by Dr. Burch. It is bright and well calculated to fix the attention of readers on the most taking, if not the most important, points of the history of Egypt. By-and-by we shall, no doubt, be able to record the appearance of some important notes by the learned English Egyptologist.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

LEEDS.—Triennial Musical Festival.
HER MAJESTY'S.—'Faust,' 'La Favorita,' and 'La Sonnambula.'
CRYSTAL PALACE.—Second Saturday Concert.

LAST week we were only able to chronicle the opening performance of 'Elijah' at the Leeds Festival. On the evening of the first day Mr. Barnett's cantata, 'The Building of the Ship,' was produced with every sign of popular approval. The composer has not laid himself open to the charge of having failed to rise to the level of his theme, as was the case in his 'Paradise and the Peri' and 'The Ancient Mariner.' On the contrary, his music is admirably adapted to the homely nature of the poem. One of the besetting sins of modern composers is an unhealthy striving after profundity of style, a manifest desire to avoid conventionalism at any price. Now the greatest charm in Mr. Barnett's work is its perfect freedom from any suspicion of labour; the aim may not be particularly high, but it is attained with a consummate ease which is in itself pleasant and graceful. In the most vigorous numbers—such as the chorus, "Thus with the rising of the sun," and the well-developed finale—musicians will note the simplicity of the means employed to produce the effects. In the pretty little unaccompanied quartets the part-writing could not well be more transparent, but its elegance and finish are undeniable. Again, in the duet, "When the hot long day was o'er," a quaint phrase for the corno inglese several times repeated suffices to rivet the attention and lend a charm to the entire number. The airs we are inclined to consider the least happy portion of the work, as, with one exception, they are not superior to the ordinary ballad type of composition. Though the orchestration is bright and picturesque, the work would lose comparatively little by performance with a pianoforte accompaniment, the voice parts, especially in the concerted pieces, being written with such perfect elegance and good taste. Thus 'The Building of the Ship' will prove eminently serviceable to small choral societies, and as the demand for music of this kind is ever on the increase, Mr. Barnett may be said to have scored a success. The performance, in which band, chorus, and principals—Miss Anna Williams, Madame Trebelli, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Henschal—laboured with equal zeal, was as near perfection as possible, and the reception of the work must have been most gratifying to the composer. In the second part of the concert the chorus showed the great advance it has made in refinement since the last festival. Better unaccompanied singing than that of "As Vesta was" and 'The Lullaby of Life' could not possibly be desired. Mozart's Symphony in a minor was included, but made little effect.

Thursday morning's performance will be long remembered for the truly superb achievements of the chorus. The programme commenced with Mr. Walter Macfarren's musicianly overture, 'Hero and Leander,' performed at a Philharmonic Concert last season, and duly noticed at the time. Mendelssohn's fine 114th Psalm, for eight-part chorus, came next, and was magnificently rendered, though the tempi in the first and last movements seemed a trifle slow. We might dilate at length on this performance were it not that one still finer immediately succeeded. Beethoven's Choral Symphony is a work to put the capabilities of the best chorus to the test. The greatest of composers had no thought for the convenience of singers, and, however admirably the instrumental movements of the Ninth Symphony are played, as, for example, at the Crystal Palace, the charm generally breaks with the entry of the chorus. These conditions were exactly reversed at Leeds. The first three sections of the work were tamely rendered and coldly received, but the faux was given with a power and intensity such as it has probably never received from the day of its composition until the present time. A highly meritorious interpretation was heard at the Bristol Festival a year ago, but it was thrown into the shade by that of last week. In listening to the glorious voices of the Yorkshire choir sustaining with apparent ease passages which usually are most ineffective, one might almost have fancied that Beethoven was enabled to look into futurity, and know that his work would at length receive full justice in the land for which it was written. The temptation to linger over a performance so unique and to enter into minute details is great, but it must be repressed. Let it suffice that by this morning's work the Leeds chorus stamped itself as the best of such bodies at present before the public, and that it would be well to consider the advisability of including the great Mass in D in the festival of 1883. It was inevitable that whatever succeeded the Choral Symphony should seem like an anticlimax, and Bennett's 'May Queen,' as possessing special interest for Leeds, was as appropriate a selection as could have been made. Music so simple and tuneful made no demands on the executants, and the cantata went with the utmost smoothness.

The performance of Handel's 'Samson' in the evening may be dismissed with few words. The work itself has always been a favourite, as much in consequence of the number of beautiful airs it contains as of its exceedingly fine choruses. As in most of Handel's oratorios, large excisions are necessary in order to bring the work within reasonable length. The curtailments made on this occasion were the same as usual, except that the pretty little soprano air "With plaintive notes" was restored to its place. Concerning the additional accompaniments, written for the performance by Mr. Ebenezer Prout, nothing can be said in this place. There are conscientious musicians—or, more properly speaking, theorists—who object to what they term tampering with the music of Handel and Bach, and who would, if we understand them rightly, rather banish these masters from the concert-room. For, setting aside the practical difficulties in the way of providing a larger number of oboes and bassoons than of strings, we must revive obsolete instruments, remodel our trumpets, and reintroduce the harpsichord on the orchestra, in order to produce every effect indicated by composers of a hundred and fifty years ago. Since this is impossible, the wisest course seems to be to adapt the old scores to modern requirements, insisting only that the additions shall be in the spirit of the original, and that no alterations shall be made except where absolutely necessary. 'Samson,' on the whole, received full justice at the Leeds performance, though several mishaps occurred towards the close. The choruses were grandly delivered, and the solos uniformly well rendered by Miss Williams, Madame Patey, Mr. Mass, Mr. King, and Mr. Henschel.

On Friday morning the most interesting event of the festival, the production of Mr. Arthur Sullivan's sacred musical drama, 'The Martyr of Antioch,' took place. We referred last week to the extraordinary exuberance of the language in Dean Milman's poem, and it may now be added that this verbosity, characteristic enough of the poetry of his time, has necessitated the removal of so much of the original that what remains scarcely constitutes a connected and intelligible story. This might have been of importance, but is not, for though the new work is called a "sacred musical drama," it is precisely in the dramatic element that the composer has failed. This weakness is felt at the very outset. We have an introduction in D, triple time, based on a strongly marked, not very dignified, but decidedly taking theme. This eventually proves to be the martyr's song as she gazes enraptured on the celestial glory unfolding itself to her view. And yet the chorus of Pagans which immediately follows the introduction begins in the same key and practically in the same time and rhythm. Dramatically anything more inappropriate can scarcely be imagined. But having said this we have nothing remaining but praise for this Hymn to Apollo. It is very lengthy, occupying seventy-two pages in the vocal score, but all sense of monotony is avoided by the richness and variety of Mr. Sullivan's treatment. The opening section for male voices pleases on account of the delicate embroidery for the violins in the accompaniment. After a more rugged episode in common time the female voices enter with the first theme, and from this point to the end of the section delicious melody prevails unceasingly. The next portion, set as a contralto solo, is even more charming. The voice is supported by close harmonies in the lower registers of wind and strings, while two clarinets maintain a little figure of three notes with an exquisite dreamy effect. The renewal of the chorus is marked by an access of energy, and the composer works up his materials to an excellent climax, the writing being noteworthy throughout for the florid and picturesque style of the accompaniments. Olybius, the Prefect of Antioch (tenor), then invokes the absent Margarita, priestess of Apollo, in a flowing and elegant song, which has all the elements of popularity; and the scene ends with a brief and flippant chorus. We are now transferred to the Christians' burial-place by night. A prelude for organ gives the required contrast to the preceding music, but the succeeding funeral anthem, "Brother, thou art gone before us," can only be characterized as an exceedingly pretty part-song. As such it may be praised; otherwise it cannot be considered worthy of the situation. The Christians hurriedly disperse, except Margarita, who in a soliloquy preclaims her conversion to the new faith. The first portion of this suggests Wolfram's first song in the tournament scene in 'Tannhäuser'; the air or hymn which follows, "For thou didst die for me," well expresses the rapt devotion of the young convert. The succeeding expostulatory duet between Margarita and her father is the weakest number in the work, and it is a relief to return once more to the lyrical style in a "Maidens' Evening Song," a melodious two-part chorus with a fairy-like accompaniment for muted violins. The middle section of this is too strongly reminiscent of 'Carmen' to escape notice. Olybius then addresses Margarita in an expressive but not very original air, and she replies, offering to be his bride if he will embrace Christianity. This attempt at bribery is repelled with curses, and the maiden announces her intention of proceeding at once to prison. Again Mr. Sullivan fails in dramatic writing, though to a less extent than before. We do not care for the mingled choruses of Christians and Pagans which follows, but the strophic contralto air and chorus, "Io Pagan," with its singular accompaniment, is most effective. Margarita, being called upon, explains the faith that is in her in a declamatory solo, to which the people reply with exclamations of "Blasphemy!" A quartet, "Have mercy, unrelenting Heaven," may be passed over without comment, and then we have the martyr's song at the stake, to which reference has already been made. As has been said, the theme is not conceived in a very lofty spirit, but the delicate orchestration is worthy of all praise; and in the last portion of the scene, when the voice rises higher and higher, accompanied by swelling chords of the brass and massive scale passages, Mr. Sullivan attains the full measure of inspiration demanded by the situation. After this the brief and commonplace chorus with which the work concludes is an inevitable anticlimax. In the foregoing sketch of 'The Martyr of Antioch' praise and blame have been mingled with an impartial hand, and if our verdict seem now and then severe, it is because we have judged the work by the highest standard, as we believe the composer would desire it to be judged. It might be wished that in some portions Mr. Sullivan had taken a loftier view of his theme, but at any rate he has written some most charming music, and orchestration equal, if not superior, to any that has ever proceeded from the pen of an English musician. And, further, it is an advantage to have the composer of 'H.M.S. Pinafore' once more occupying himself with a worthier form of art. The performance cannot have failed to satisfy him, and it is doubtful whether he will ever again hear his work under similarly favourable conditions. Madame Albani fairly surpassed herself in the music allotted to the heroine, Mr. Edward Lloyd and Madame Patey sang their best, and the band and chorus were very little short of perfection. The cheers which followed were too hearty and general to be taken as a mere empty compliment. The work pleased, and may probably enjoy considerable popularity.

The remainder of the festival must be disposed of as briefly as possible. Beethoven's Mass in C, and Schubert's fine motet, 'Miriam's Triumph Song,' with Franz Lachner's orchestral accompaniments, occupied the second part of Friday morning's concert. In the evening Mr. Wingham's new overture, 'More Janus Vites,' headed the programme. It is an earnest, carefully written piece, but rather deficient in colour and variety. The choruses in Bach's cantata, 'O Light Everlasting,' were taken too fast to produce the clearest effect. Raff's 'Lenore' Symphony was well received, but the impression would have been much greater had the programme contained but a few words of explanation of the several movements. The indefatigable choir seemed as fresh as ever on Saturday morning, and the performance of 'The Last Judgment' was masterly. The same may be said of the first and second parts of 'The Creation' and the "Gloria" from Handel's 'Utrecht Jubilate.' This concludes the record of the festival proper; but on Friday and Saturday between the performances Dr. Spark, the popular organist of the Town Hall, gave two organ recitals, his programmes being cleverly designed not only to display the capabilities of his splendid instrument, but to illustrate the various styles of organ music, original and transcribed.

The Leeds Festival of 1880 may be registered as a gratifying success. Errors and imperfections were very few and far between, and the programmes and performances were alike above the average. Mr. Arthur Sullivan amply justified the action of the committee in appointing him as conductor, for if exception had to be taken now and again in matters of detail to his method of leading, still, as a rule, he wielded the baton with skill, taste, and judgment. Financially the festival was the best of the series, the total attendance exceeding 13,000 persons, against 11,700 at the festival of 1877, which in its turn was more successful than that of 1874. The promoters of similar gatherings may lay these results to heart as indicating the wisdom of pursuing a liberal and enlightened course.

The autumn season of Italian opera at Her Majesty's Theatre opened on Monday evening under inauspicious circumstances. An apology was circulated for the promised débütante, Mdlle. Elisa Widmar, who was to have appeared as Marguerite in 'Faust,' and the part was taken by the ever-ready and capable Mdlle. Bauermeister. Signor Vizzani has improved in voice since he was last with us, and his Faust was by no means a bad performance. But here even qualified approval must end. The Mephistopheles of Signor Ordinas, the Siebel of Mdlle. Olga de Morini, and the Valentine of Mr. George Fox were quite unworthy of the theatre, and the general performance was simply disgraceful—band, chorus, organ, and prompter giving almost equal offence. Matters improved somewhat on Tuesday, when 'La Favorita' was revived for the assumption by Madame Trebelli of the title rôle in Donizetti's best opera. Since the departure of Madame Pauline Lucca the character has not been so well played in London. Madame Trebelli so very finely in the last scene, and in general the music is not too high for her voice. But the one defect in her singing is a complete inability to execute florid passages, and these she should rigidly avoid. Signor Cantoni, who made his débüt as Fernando, is no longer in his first youth, but his voice is not wanting in sympathy and his style in cantabile is fairly good. In declamatory passages his powers fail him, and the great scene in the third act produced no effect whatever. Another new comer, Signor Quintilli-Leoni, who appeared as Alfonso, is a heavy bass with a powerful and unmanageable voice. He would have been more acceptable as Baldassare. There were many slips in the general performance, but it was good by comparison with that of Monday. Mdlle. Giulia Bressolles, who made her first appearance on Wednesday in Bellini's threadbare 'Sonnambula,' cannot be considered an acquisition. Her voice is hard and wiry, and her manner wholly devoid of charm. The chorus distinguished itself on this occasion by singing more out of tune than usual, and the promise of improvement in this department is as yet scarcely fulfilled.

The chief interest of last Saturday's concert at the Crystal Palace attached to the soloists, rather than to the music brought forward—at least, so far as the more important items of the programme are concerned. Mendelssohn's 'Italian' Symphony and Beethoven's Overture to 'Leonora' (No. 2), welcome as they always are, are too familiar to need a word of notice. The special features of the concert were the first appearance of Mdlle. Louise Pyk and the pianoforte playing of Mr. Oscar Beringer. Mdlle. Pyk, who comes from the Royal Opera of Stockholm and appeared once or twice at Covent Garden last season, possesses a soprano voice of pleasing quality, though of no very great power; she has evidently been well trained, and her singing is thoroughly artistic. She was heard in the well-known scena from 'Der Freischütz,' an "Ave Maria" by Verdi, and two national Swedish airs. Of these it is only needful to speak of Verdi's aria, which was given for the first time in England. The piece, which is accompanied only by muted strings, was written for an orchestral concert at La Scala, Milan, a few months ago. Similar in style to parts of the Requiem written for Manzoni, it is a highly expressive movement, conceived in a more plaintive or even penitential style than is generally adopted in setting the text, but full of beauty, though hardly of a character to appeal to the popular ear. Mr. Oscar Beringer was heard in an arrangement by Jean Louis Nicodé for pianoforte and orchestra of Chopin's 'Allegro de Concert,' Op. 46, and in an Andante and Presto from his own pen. With regard to Herr Nicodé's arrangement, which opens up the so often discussed question as to the propriety or artistic morality of transcriptions or adaptations of any kind, it appears perfectly simple and evident that there can be no injustice done in such cases, provided that the fact of the arrangement be (as in the present case) clearly and distinctly announced. Each separate work of this kind must stand or fall on its own merits. To take a parallel case from a sister art—supposing that a new edition of one of Shakespeare's plays were published, with additions and alterations by (let us say) Mr. Henry Irving or Mr. W. S. Gilbert, no injustice would be done to the memory of Shakespeare, though the editor might possibly be called a fool for his pains; but supposing that these same editors remodelled an old play which, in its original shape, was not adapted for presentation on our stage, not a valid objection could be raised. So in the present instance. Had the work been merely announced as "Allegro, for piano and orchestra, by Chopin," we should have been the first to cry out; but, as it is, we have simply to consider how Herr Nicodé has discharged his task. The Allegro in its original shape is certainly not effective, not even in the hands of such a player as Dr. von Bulow, who performed it a few years ago at St. James's Hall. Though it may not have been originally written (as Schumann conjectures) with orchestra, it is evidently a sketch for a concerto movement; and it is impossible, therefore, to blame the editor for so adapting it. He has given it more completeness of form by repeating certain passages near the close of the movement, and he has done this in a manner which certainly does not lay him open to the charge of want of reverence for the author's intentions. The only remaining question is whether the work was worth doing at all, and this we are disposed to answer in the negative. It is by no means one of Chopin's happiest inspirations, and even Herr Nicodé's clever orchestration cannot make it very interesting. The piano part, which is brilliant and of no slight difficulty, was admirably played by Mr. Beringer, than whom few, if any, more thoroughly satisfying pianists are now before the public. To a highly finished and beautifully neat mechanism he adds a refined and artistic style, equally removed from exaggeration and coldness, which leaves little or nothing to desire in his rendering. His own composition, brought forward for the first time, is of unequal value. The andante is charming, graceful in its themes, and most admirably scored; but the following presto is less interesting in its subjects, and is in many parts so heavily instrumented that the pianist performs merely in dumb show. Over-orchestration is a most common mistake with inexperienced writers, and the work is, as a whole, of sufficient value to make us wish to hear further essays from Mr. Beringer in the same direction. The recall which followed the piece was earned alike by composer and player. The concert concluded with Svendsen's 'Carnival of Paris,' an orchestral piece given for the first time in England. The incomprehensible—we had almost said absurd—policy which prevails at the Palace of frequently putting important novelties at the end of a long concert, must once more be condemned as an injustice both to composer and audience. The former must suffer from his work being played in so bad a position, while the audience, already satiated by nearly two hours of music, can seldom be in a frame of mind to do justice to a new composition which, as likely as not, makes considerable demands on their attention. Under these circumstances we reserve all notice of Svendsen's work until it can be heard under more favourable conditions. This afternoon Bizet's very interesting posthumous suite 'Roma' is to be performed, and Mr. Sutton, a pupil of M. Sainton, who was lately heard at the Gloucester Festival, will make his first appearance at the Crystal Palace.

Musical Society

MR. WALTER BACHES announces a pianoforte recital at St. James's Hall on the afternoon of Monday week (November 1st), at which he will be assisted by Miss Anna Williams.

WE announced last week that Johannes Brahms had written two new overtures. The current number of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik gives some details with regard to one of these. It appears that the University of Breslau conferred on the composer the honorary degree of Doctor of Music, and that Herr Brahms in return dedicated to the University a Festival Overture founded on students' songs. The work is to be performed at Breslau for the first time on the 4th of January, 1881, under the direction of the composer.

THE death is announced of Signor Capponi, the bass singer, well known to London opera-goers as for many years one of the most useful members of the Covent Garden company.

HERR ROBERT FORERHO, the head of one of the large music-publishing firms in Leipzig, died in that town on the 10th inst., at the age of forty-seven.

M. ALPHONSE DUVERNOY's cantata 'Le Temple,' which gained the prize of 10,000 francs offered last year for composition by the city of Paris, is to be produced at the Châtelet theatre, under the direction of M. Colonne, on November 18th. The solo parts are to be sung by Madame Gabrielle Krauss (Miranda), Madame Frank-Duvernoy (Ariel), MM. Faure (Prospero), Vergnet (Ferdinand), and Gailhard (Caliban). The libretto is written by MM. Armand Silvestre and Pierre Berton.

Two new one-act operas—'Le Bois,' by M. Albert Cahen, and 'Monsieur de Floridor,' by M. Théodore de Lajarte—were produced with success at the Opéra Comique, Paris, on the 11th inst.

M. LUDWIG LOTTO, a distinguished violinist, who, it will be remembered, was heard in London some years ago, has been appointed professor of the violin at the Conservatoire of Warsaw.

HERR WAGNER's 'Rienzi' has been produced with great success at the Politeama theatre in Rome.

WE have received from Boston (U.S.) the prospectus of the Harvard Musical Association's symphony concerts, and also that of the Cecilia, a choral society. At the former, besides familiar works, we find such pieces as Berlioz's 'Symphonie Fantastique,' Overture to the 'Carnaval Romain,' and Marche Nocturne from 'L'Enfance du Christ,' besides works by Raff, Goldmark, Goetz, and Saint-Saëns. Two symphonies by American composers, Messrs. J. K. Paine and F. L. Ritter, are also to be given. The Cecilia announces the 'Romeo and Juliet' of Berlioz and the 'Faust' of Schumann as the specialties of the season, in addition to which Beethoven's 'Ruins of Athens,' Schumann's 'New Year's Song,' and Liszt's 'Bells of Strasbourg' are in the list of arrangements. It is evident that in enterprise and research American musicians need not fear comparison with any on this side of the Atlantic.

THE second and concluding volume of M. Arthur Pougn's supplement to Fétis's 'Biographie Universelle des Musiciens' has been published by Messrs. Firmin Didot.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEES AND MANAGER, MR. HENRY IRVING.

* THE CYPRICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.15. LOUIS and FANTINE. MR. FRANCHI MR. IRVING. * THE STONES by A. W. PIERCE. Doors open at 7. MORNING PERFORMANCES at 2. * THE CYPRICAN BROTHERS. SATURDAYS, October 23rd and 30th, and November 6th and 13th, also on WEDNESDAYS, November 3rd and 10th, at 3.25. * BOX OFFICE (Mr. Irving) opens 10 to 5. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE WEEK.

OLYMPIC.—'Mabel,' a Domestic Drama in Three Acts. By Frederic Hay. SADLER'S WELLS.—Revival of 'Romeo and Juliet.'

AN essential condition of success in a play, as in any other effort in art, is that an author shall respect his own work. It is plainly hopeless to expect from others the consideration which he withholds. This self-evident proposition seems to have been forgotten by Mr. Frederic Hay in the preparation of his new drama of 'Mabel,' which was produced on Saturday last at the Olympic. The chief character in this is a certain "stone-cutter," to use what it appears is the technical name for one who chisels on gravestones the legends, pious, eulogistic, or memorial, they are destined to carry. At the outset this man has a certain appearance of originality and a certain measure of interest. Something not altogether unlike him may be found in the 'Mystery of Edwin Drood' of Dickens, and the principal character in Mr. Albery's grim farce of 'Tweedie's Rights'—in the hands of Mr. David James a masterly creation—bears also some resemblance to him. There is, however, enough that is individual to give the whole a right to attention. This character, which should be the strength and support of the play, drags it to the ground. The responsibility for this must be divided between the author and the actor. While the latter allows what commences finely to grow wearisome and depressing, the former goes out of his way to cast ridicule upon his own creation. That a man who is the grubbier, most drunken, and most mercenary set in existence should be presented as making love to a young lady such as the heroine is so inconceivable as to draw from a not unfriendly audience derision and protest. From the moment that the first word of love was spoken by the stone-cutter the piece collapsed. Its existence had previously been undermined by some comic scenes between servants which were vulgar and inane. Enough interest, however, attended the heroine in her anomalous position in a house in which, to a father coming back after a long absence, she was personating a daughter who had died on the eve of his return, to have overcome minor obstacles. Nothing, however, could resist or excuse a scene like that in which an old man, who in a respectably conducted house would not have been allowed to pass beyond the door-mat, was permitted, during something like half an hour, to insult a girl in what was assumed to be her home. That an actor should not see he is giving the public too much of himself is, perhaps, excusable, since the conviction that an audience can have enough of him can scarcely by any species of "surgical operation" be got into an actor's head. That no one connected with the management should have perceived it is inexplicable.

Mr. Hay acknowledges, in a note to the public printed on the playbill, that his "first act has been suggested by an incident in a French comedy." The resemblance to the first act of 'Le Marbrier' of Alexandre Dumas amounts to something more than suggestion derived from an incident. In both a father returning from abroad takes for his daughter a girl whom accident has brought into his house, and in both a mason comes to receive orders for a tombstone to be erected to the girl who is dead. In 'Le Marbrier,' however, the deception is more strictly due to chance than in 'Mabel,' where a personation of the kind attempted is half planned. In the management of this scene Mr. Hay would have done well to have adhered more closely than he has to the original, since in the really unimportant respects in which he has departed from it he has weakened both probability and interest. After the first act is past the resemblance to the French piece extends only to the fact that the heroine is beloved by the young man of the house she enters—in the French play the son, in the English the nephew. A scene in which the heroine finds herself perplexed by the inquiries of her father concerning a past she cannot possibly recall is new and effective. The success of this shows Mr. Hay the line down which his piece should have travelled. In presenting a young girl such as is the heroine betrothed to a felon and a murderer and bringing her within the pale of the conceivable coquettishness of a man like the stone-cutter, Mr. Hay treats his own work with ridicule and reduces it near the level of burlesque.

So competent is the performance of Mabel the fiasco that attended the play was nearly avoided. When scenes of explanation between comic servants of the most conventional type had tried to the utmost the patience of the audience, a fine display of acting by Miss Addison in a scene of trance or sleep-walking produced loud signs of approval and stirred afresh the smouldering fire of interest. The heat thus aroused was fanned to a flame by a piece of admirable acting of Mr. Anson. Unfortunately, Mr. Anson blew the fire so long that in the end he blew it out. For the failure of the piece the length of time Mr. Anson was allowed to monopolize the stage was principally responsible. Mr. Dacre, as a young barrister, glares a little too much in his effort to display passion. His performance is, however, earnest and satisfactory. As Mr. Fleetwood, an Anglo-Indian, who replaces the M. de Gervais of the original, a character created by Bocage, Mr. Fisher acts quietly and well. Miss Carlotta Leclercq is Mrs. Fleetwood and Mr. Vernon the murderer to whom the heroine is affianced. The theatre has been newly decorated.

'Romeo and Juliet' has been revived at Sadler's Wells. Mr. Warner's performance of Romeo is melo-dramatic, declamatory, and deficient in poetry. The character seems, indeed, wholly unsuited to the actor, who has never been seen to less advantage. Miss Isabel Bateman was Juliet and Mr. Brooks Mercutio.

Dramatic Society.

FUTURE revivals at Sadler's Wells include 'The Lady of Lyons,' to be given on Monday next, and 'Macbeth,' the date for the production of which is not fixed. In the play last named Miss Bateman will play Lady Macbeth. Upon the termination of Mr. Venn's country engagement, 'Othello,' which was withdrawn in the midst of its success, will be reproduced.

'WHICH IS WHICH?' an agreeable comediella of Mr. Thyrre Smith, has been revived as a l'ever de rideau at the Olympic, and is played by Mr. Dacre, Miss Julia Roselle, Miss Thorne, and other actors.

We are requested by Miss Mary Jerrold to give added publicity to the denial which, on her authority, has appeared in many periodicals, that the consent of the family of Douglas Jerrold to the alterations that have been made by Mr. Wills in 'Black-Eyed Susan' has been obtained. This is a matter of little public interest. The authority of the eldest son, who is also accepted as the literary representative of Douglas Jerrold, seems to warrant the notice put forth by the management of the St. James's Theatre.

Dr. Anton Bettelheim is preparing an extensive biography of Beaumarchais, based upon inedited documents in the archives of the Comédie Française, and of many other public and private collections.

'LES GRANDS ENFANTS,' a three-act comedy of MM. Edmond Gondinet and Paul de Margallier, produced at the Vaudeville, has obtained a complete success. It deals, not very clearly nor definitely, with the question of divorce, is not very original in plot, and contains some excellent dialogue.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—T. W. E. H.—M. J.—B. H. C.—M. & W.—P. C.—J. E.—A. K. H.—M. G. C.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

31, SOUTHAMPTON-STREET, STRAND, Oct. 23rd, 1880.

SAMUEL TINSLEY & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

EACH IN THREE VOLUMES.

THE BURTONS OF DUNROE. By

M. W. BISH. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.
The Standard says:—"The book is a specimen of careful and intelligent literary workmanship."

CHARLIE: a Waif's History, told by himself. By Mrs. WOODWARD. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

THE DEAN'S WIFE. By Mrs. Eiloart, Author of 'The Curate's Daughters,' 'How He Won Her,' &c. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

John Bull says:—"Any reader who wants a good story thoroughly well told cannot do better than read 'The Dean's Wife.'"

OCTAVIA'S LOVERS. By the Author of 'Lalage.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

AMY WYNTER. By Thomas A. Pin-
KERTON, Author of 'Cromford.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"A pleasant story of simple English life....Almost every character is firmly and distinctly drawn."—Athenæum.
"A capital book to read."—Daily News.

CARMELA. By the Princess Olga GANTACUENE, Author of 'In the Spring of My Life.' Translated by EUGENE KLAUS, with the Author's approval. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.
The Daily News says:—"Can be read from beginning to end with interest, rising frequently to admiration."

AFTER A DARK NIGHT—THE SUN. By G. G. HAMILTON. 3 vols. 3s.

WITH CUPID'S EYES. By Florence MARYAT. 3 vols. [Immediately.]

SAVED CRIMINALS IN ONE VOLUME.

CIVIL WAR IN HOME AND LAND. By the Author of 'A Bride from the Rhineland.' Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

UNDER THE ROSE: a Prose Idyll. By Mrs. HERBERT DAVY. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Graphic says:—"The work of a gentleman who has the soul of a poet and the refinement of genius. A pleasant companion for a railway or public journey than 'Under the Rose' we cannot conceive. It is impossible to find any fault with it."

DONA PERFECTA: a Tale of Modern Spain. By R. PEREZ GALDO. Translated by D. F. W. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

MILDRED FORRESTER: a Tale of Our Own Times. By "ADMA." Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The RED CROSS. Translated from the German by E. F. FELLOWES. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

London: SAMUEL TINSLEY & Co. 31, Southampton-street, Strand.

SEVENTH THOUSAND,

Crown 8vo. with 73 Illustrations, cloth gilt, gilt edges, &c.

THE FAIRY-LAND OF SCIENCE.

BY

ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY,

AUTHOR OF 'A SHORT HISTORY OF NATURAL SCIENCE,' 'BOTANICAL TABLES FOR YOUNG STUDENTS,' &c.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Her methods of presenting certain facts and phenomena difficult to grasp are most original and striking, and admirably calculated to enable the reader to realise the truth. As to the interest of her story, we have tested it in a youthful subject, and she mentioned it in the same breath with 'Grimm's Fairy Tales.' The book abounds with beautifully engraved and thoroughly appropriate illustrations, and altogether is one of the most successful attempts we know of to combine the dulce with the utile. We are sure any of the older children would welcome it as a Christmas present; but it deserves to take a permanent place in the literature of youth."—Times.

"The ease of her style, the charm of her illustrations, and the clearness with which she explains what is otherwise no doubt the result of much labour; but there is nothing laboured in her pages, and the reader must be dull indeed who takes up this volume without finding much to attract attention and to stimulate inquiry."—Altogether. "The 'Fairy-Land of Science,' with its attractive illustrations and brightly written pages, is one of the pleasantest volumes for intelligent boys and girls that has been produced this season. But, indeed, a book so instructive and entertaining deserves a welcome at all seasons, and is likely to secure a permanent reputation."—Full Mail Gazette.

"Heretical as the opinion may seem, we consider Miss Buckley's Lectures on a Piece of Coal to be better than Professor Huxley's, while her pretty botanical chapters are so utterly superior to anything of the kind ever before done in English, that comparison would be little short of insult. There is nothing in the book which a child of ten may not read with ease and pleasure, so artistically are illustrations used, so perfect is the writer's knowledge of all the difficulties that do most beset the path of ingenious youth."—Vanity Fair.

"A charming book is this for children of the age when the mind is developing and when natural phenomena are most interesting....Each chapter so entitled is, in fact, a gem, and the illustrations are suitable and beautiful."—Dublin Mail.

"Illustrated in a manner which strengthens the writer's purpose of pleasant instruction, Miss Buckley's unaffectedly genial book for the young, entitled 'The Fairy-Land of Science,' deserves the popularity it will doubtless gain....The contents of this admirable book grew out of a series of lectures to large audiences of children and their friends. Deep interest having been raised in the subjects treated by Miss Buckley, she was urged to extend the pleasure and the profit of her discourses to a wider round of young people, and she has done this as well as it is possible for such a thing to be accomplished."—Daily Telegraph.

"When Miss Buckley undertook to write the volume that is now published resplendent in blue and gold, and called 'The Fairy-Land of Science,' she doubtless had no other motive than to induce young people to take an interest in the wonders which scientific inquiry and experiment have disclosed. She has, however, done much more than this; she has produced a book which people who are no longer young may take up with pleasure and read with profit, and which will be prized by every boy or girl who is fortunate enough to get it, and intelligent enough to master its teaching."—Scotsman.

"A most pleasant introduction to science for the rising generation; full of interesting facts (specially suitably for a capital book for a school prize)."—Globe.

"In the schoolroom this dainty little volume with its pretty binding will be a great acquisition, more especially as it is well and copiously illustrated."—Observer.

"It may be put into the hands of any intelligent child, with the satisfaction that it will yield both instruction and pleasure."—Christian World.

"Miss Buckley writes so clearly, simply, and pleasantly, that young readers will have little difficulty in following her meaning intelligently, while the book is so full of accurate information that those of riper years may well be pleased to dwell upon its pages. It is no mere compilation. Science is with the author evidently a passion, and her enthusiasm communicates itself to the reader."—Birmingham Daily Post.

"A volume which, we will venture to say, will not be surpassed for beauty and use to juvenile minds even at this festive season of the year for juvenile literature."—Brighton Herald.

"Miss Buckley has the genius of a true teacher, and so skilfully conceals her scientific pills with sugary anecdotes and fairy-lore that her youthful readers must swallow the driest scientific facts with absolute relish....Her work is admirably illustrated, and it is the most attractive elementary natural science book that we have seen."—Liverpool Advertiser.

"So interesting that, having once opened it, we do not know how to leave off reading. The entire and absolute neglect of science through the greater part of life may be recommended as much as the study of what. Just as things at large begin to pall, poetry to lose, and novels to weary the aged, science becomes diverting. 'The Fairy-Land of Science,' however, will interest children as much as epicureans, and we leave it with a sense of possessing vast and almost unholly knowledge about glaciers, the sun, the sea, and other matters previously taken, as it were, for granted as ultimate facts."—Saturday Review.

Nearly ready, uniform in size and price with the 'Fairy-Land of Science,' by the same Authoress,

LIFE AND HER CHILDREN.

GLIMPSSES OF ANIMAL LIFE FROM THE AMOEBA TO THE INSECTS.

With upwards of One Hundred Illustrations.

CONTENTS.

CHEAP.

1. LIFE and HER CHILDREN.
2. LIFE'S SIMPLEST CHILDREN: how they Live, and Move, and Build.
3. HOW SPONGES LIVE.
4. The LASSO-THROWERS of the PONDS and OCEANS.
5. HOW STARFISH WALK and SEA-URCHINS UNWIND.
6. The MANTLE-COVERED ANIMALS, and How they Live with Heads and without them.

CHEAP.

7. The OUTCASTS of ANIMAL LIFE; and the Elastic-ringed Animals by Sea and by Land.
8. The MAILED WARRIORS of the SEA, with Ringed Bodies and Jointed Feet.
9. The SNARE-WEAVERS and their HUNTING RELATIONS.
10. INSECT SUCKERS and BITERS, which Change their Coats but not their Bodies.
11. INSECT GNAWERS and SIPPERS, which Remodel their Bodies within their Coats.
12. INTELLIGENT INSECTS with HELPLESS CHILDREN, as Illustrated by the Ants.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

YOUNG IRELAND, by the Hon. Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, K.C.M.G., will be published early in November, price 21s.

A HISTORY of MODERN EUROPE, by C. A. Fyffe, M.A., Fellow of University College, Oxford, Vol. I. ready shortly, price 12s.

Now ready, Volumes I. and II. price 7s. 6d. each,

O U R O W N C O U N T R Y.

EACH CONTAINING ABOUT 200 ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

The TIMES of October 21st says:—

"The beautiful work which Messrs. Cassell & Co. are publishing under the above title appeals to a very wide circle of readers. To those who have visited the places and scenes described and pictured it must be a pleasure to turn over the leaves of this richly-illustrated work, and by its aid revive old impressions hidden away in the corners of the memory; while those who are ignorant of the beauties of their native land, and find it impracticable to make personal acquaintance with them, could not go to a better source to have the defect in their education supplied. There are, no doubt, several works on different aspects of these islands, and numerous special guide-books to particular districts, but there is no work that we know of so comprehensive in its aim as the one before us. 'Natural scenery; great commercial cities; ancient castles, abbeys, and manor houses; primeval antiquities like Stonehenge'; the old and existing harbours of the country; battle-fields; cathedrals and great churches—these are among the principal subjects in the comprehensive programme of this interesting panorama....Of course the illustrations—and there are hundreds of them (besides numerous sectional maps)—form the most attractive part of the work. The subjects are chosen with judgment, the execution is nearly all that could be desired, and the printing has been done with care. The text, moreover, has received more attention than is usual in popular pictorial works; it seems a thoroughly honest compilation, often brightly written, and abounding in interest and information. The treatment is full and comprehensive, embracing architecture, scenery, history and antiquities, industry and art, physical geography and natural history. The work is creditable to author, draughtsman, and engraver."

Will be ready for delivery OCTOBER 26th, price 1s.

PART I. OF THE ENLARGED ISSUE OFT H E M A G A Z I N E O F A R T.

NOTICE.—Special attention is directed to the FRONTISPIECE which is issued with this Part, consisting of an exquisitely produced ETCHING entitled 'The TRIO,' from the Painting by ERSKINE NICOL, A.R.A., etched by LALAUZE.

. The NEW VOLUME of The MAGAZINE of ART is now ready, containing about 300 Illustrations and Etching for Frontispiece, price 10s. 6d.

Ready October 26th, Part I. price 7d., of a NEW SERIAL ISSUE of

CASSELL'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

WITH 600 ILLUSTRATIONS.

Ready October 26th, Part I. price 7d., of an ENTIRELY NEW WORK, entitled

T H E C H I L D ' S L I F E O F C H R I S T.

WITH ABOUT 250 ORIGINAL WOOD ENGRAVINGS.

On NOVEMBER 25th will be published, Part I. price 7d., of

CASSELL'S OLD AND NEW EDINBURGH.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

IMMEDIATE ISSUE OF A NEW AND THOROUGHLY REVISED EDITION OF

CASSELL'S POPULAR EDUCATOR,

IN SIXPENNY MONTHLY PARTS.

. Prospectuses at all Bookellers', and at the Railway Bookstalls, or from the Publishers.

CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN & CO. Ludgate-hill, London.

TINSLEY BROTHERS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SHORTLY WILL BE PUBLISHED,
PRICE ONE SHILLING,

HIGH WATER MARK.

A Complete Story by RICHARD DOWLING,
Author of 'Under St. Paul's,' 'The Weird Sisters,' 'The Mystery of Killard,' 'The Sport of Fate,' &c.

Being the CHRISTMAS NUMBER

TINSLEYS' MAGAZINE.

Numerous Illustrations by Harry Furniss.
At all Booksellers' and Railway Stalls in the Kingdom.

PRICE ONE SHILLING,
TINSLEYS' MAGAZINE,
For NOVEMBER.

Will contain Instalments of the New Serial Stories FROM the WINGS, by B. H. Buxton, and UNDER ST. PAUL'S, by Richard Dowling, and the Opening Chapters of a New Serial by Annabel Grey, Author of 'Margaret Dunbar,' 'Walk and Win,' &c., entitled AMARANTH'S MYSTERY—COMPLETE
STORIES by Mabel Collins, Hon. Mrs. Henry Chetwynd, John Augustus O'Shea, &c.—ONE MORE WORD ABOUT
NIAGARA, by Mrs. Duffus Hardy—In MID-OCEAN, by W. J.
Florence (Gaiety Theatre)—TAHITI, by F. Searce, &c.
[Ready on the 25th inst.]

FREE LANCE.—TILTINGS in MANY LISTS. By CHARLES J. DUFFIN and ALBERT KING. 1 vol.
price 7s. 6d.
"Lively and even brilliant essays."—Quarterly Review.

STUBBLE FARM; or, Three Generations of English Farmers. By the AUTHOR of 'BARNET STRUG-GLES.' 3 vols. crown 8vo. price 12s.

LONDON TOWN: Sketches of London
Life and Character. By MARCUS FALL. Illustrated by Harry Furniss. 3 vols. crown 8vo.
"We do much like you, Marcus Fall."—Punch.
"A series of light and humorous sketches."—Court Journal.

RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS of an
OLD ACTOR. By F. BELTON. 1 vol. 8vo.
"One of the most amusing books we ever came across."—Piccolo.
"A more amusing book has not appeared for a long time."—Globe.

SEASIDE MAIDENS. By G. A.
BENTY. Author of 'The March to Magdala,' &c. 10 Pages of Illustrations. Price One Shilling.
"Ten capital stories."—World.

FROM the WINGS. By B. H.
BUXTON. Author of 'Jewels of the Prince's,' 'Well—On and Off the Stage,' &c. 3 vols.
[This day.]

UNDER ST. PAUL'S. By Richard
DOWLING. Author of 'The Mystery of Killard,' &c. 3 vols.
[Shortly.]

SOCIETY'S VERDICT. By Annie
THOMAS (Mrs. Funder Oulip). Author of 'Dante Dumas,' &c.
3 vols.

HONOR. By Miss Alford, Author of
'Metherton-on-Sea,' &c. 3 vols.

A PEAL of MERRY BELLS. By
LEOPOLD LEWIS. Author of the Drama of 'The Bells.' 2 vols.

WHAT WILL SOCIETY SAY? a
Story of Society and the Stage. By H. C. COAPE, Author of 'The Ringwood of Kingwood,' &c. 3 vols.

The SILENT SHADOW. By Jessie
SALE LLOYD. Author of 'The Hazellhurst Mystery.' 3 vols.

INNOCENCE at PLAY. By Jean
MIDDLEMAN. Author of 'Smiled by a Kiss,' 'Wild Georgia,' &c.
3 vols.

ARNOLD LEIGH: a Tale of Ireland
of To-day. By Mrs. DIONY LLOYD. Author of 'Faint Sacrifice.'
1 vol. crown 8vo.

LARRY LOHENGRIN. By William
WESTALL. Author of 'Tales and Traditions of Saxony,' &c. 3 vols.
[Shortly.]

TINSLEY BROTHERS, 8, Catherine-street, Strand.

SOUTH AMERICA. By Antonio Gallenga.

1 vol. demy 8vo.

[On Monday.]

NEW NOVELS.

The TWO DREAMERS. By JOHN SAUNDERS. 3 vols. [Next week.]

The CLERK of PORTWICK. By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN. 3 vols. [This day.]

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, 193, Piccadilly.

NOW READY,

In Two handsome Volumes, price 25s.

HALF-HOURS WITH FOREIGN NOVELISTS.

By HELEN and ALICE ZIMMERN.

With Short Notices of the Lives and Writings of the Various Authors.

The Works of the Twenty-six

LEADERS OF FICTION

here represented present numerous

CHARMING PICTURES

OF THE

HOME LIFE AND HUMORESQUE CHARACTER

OF

CONTINENTAL EUROPE.

REMINGTON & Co. 133, New Bond-street, W.

MISS BRADDON'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

EARLY IN NOVEMBER, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Illustrated with 8 Whole-Page and other Engravings.

THE MISLETOE BOUGH.

THE CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

By the AUTHOR of 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' 'VIXEN,' &c.

"The New Annual will be the best in literary and artistic quality, and the largest in quantity, of any similar work hitherto produced."

London: JOHN & ROBERT MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane, Fleet-street.

THE 100TH THOUSAND OF "THE CROWN TENNYSON."

NOTICE.—The One Hundredth Thousand of the "CROWN EDITION" of Mr. TENNYSON'S POETICAL and DRAMATIC WORKS, complete in One Volume, may now be had of all Booksellers in the United Kingdom. Price 6s. cloth; 7s. 6d. cloth extra, gilt leaves; and in various special bindings, calf, morocco, and russia.

London: C. KEGAN PAUL & Co. 1, Paternoster-square.

Immediately will be published, in 1 vol. large 4to. handsomely bound in cloth, gilt edges, price 63s.

SWITZERLAND: its Scenery and its People.

Pictorially Represented by eminent Swiss and German Artists.

With Historical and Descriptive Text, based on the German of Dr. GSKL-FELS.

Illustrated by about 300 Engravings printed in the Text, and 60 Full-Page Pictures, 16 of which will be in Tint.

London: BLACKIE & SON, 49 and 50, Old Bailey.

ROBERT ROUTLEDGE'S NEW BOOK.

In demy 8vo. 573 pages, cloth, gilt edges, price 12s. 6d.

A POPULAR HISTORY OF SCIENCE.

By ROBERT ROUTLEDGE, B.Sc. F.C.S.,

Author of 'Discoveries and Inventions of the Nineteenth Century,' 'Science in Sport made Philosophy in Earnest,' &c. With Illustrations and Full-Page Plates.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Broadway, Ludgate-hill.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, royal 8vo. price 36s.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

In a few days, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The POETRY of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor, Author of 'The Borderland of Science,' 'Science Byways,' &c.

NEW NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD.'

Ready this day, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

The TRUMPET MAJOR. By Thomas Hardy, Author of 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' &c.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes. 2 vols. post 8vo.

London SMITH, ELDER & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

COMPLETION OF THE CABINET EDITION OF LORD MACAULAY'S WORKS.

Now ready, a New Edition, in 4 vols. crown 8vo. price 24s. cloth, or 46s. bound in tree calf by Riviere.

The MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS, SPEECHES, LAYS of ANCIENT ROME, and other POEMS of the RIGHT HON. LORD MACAULAY.

* * The above completes the CABINET EDITION OF LORD MACAULAY'S WORKS, corresponding in Contents with the LIBRARY EDITION, in 6 vols. demy 8vo. To be had in Sets of Sixteen Volumes, price 4l. 16s. cloth, or 4l. 13s. bound in tree calf by Riviere:—

HISTORY of ENGLAND, 8 vols. cloth £2 8 0

CRITICAL and HISTORICAL ESSAYS, 4 vols. cloth 1 4 0

MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS, SPEECHES, &c., 4 vols. cloth 1 4 0

London: LONGMANS & Co.

THE ARMY AND NAVY:

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE FOR ALL THE GOVERNMENT SERVICES,

TO BE PUBLISHED ON 1st NOVEMBER,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

WILL CONTAIN A PHOTOGRAPH (BY SPECIAL PERMISSION) OF

FIELD-MARSHAL H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE, K.G. G.C.B. K.P., &c., COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF;

And to be followed by PHOTOGRAPHS of the principal MILITARY and NAVAL LEADERS of the WORLD.

CONTENTS.—No. I.

1. PREFACE. By W. R. Russell, Esq., LL.D., &c.

2. KANDAHAR. By Colonel G. M. Maltson, C.S.I.

3. A GARIBOLDIAN EPISODE. By George A. Henty.

4. CHINESE ART of WAR. By Demetrius Charles Boulger.

5. DARVAL HAMPTON. By James Grant, Author of 'The Romance of War,' &c.

6. OUR VOLUNTEERS: their Strength and their Weakness. By Joseph Bennett, Captain Tower Hamlets Rifle Brigade.

7. GREECE: Military, Naval, and Civil. By E. St. John-Brenon.

8. SCARLET COATS and SCARLET FEVER. By Adolphe Smith.

REVIEWS and NOTICES—SERVICE LITERATURE—SERVICE GOSSIP and "GUP."

London: WM. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place.

ZADKIEL'S ALMANAC, 1881.—The GREAT YEAR.—Contents: Voice of the Stars—Weather Predictions—Great Conjunction of Saturn and Jupiter—Probable Effects of the Conjunction—Parables—Comets as Portents, &c. Price 6d.

ZADKIEL foretells the Victories in Afghanistan, the very Days of Kandahar and the Tay Bridge Accident, the Reign of Terror in Ireland, Conquest of Turkey, &c.

London: Coxson & Co. 8, York-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

6vo. cloth, price 10s.

THE OBELISK and FREEMASONRY, according to the Deciphering of BELZONI and Commander GORRHOUGH, also Egyptian Symbols compared with those discovered in American Monuments. By JOHN A. WILKIN, M.D. With Coloured and Plain Illustrations, &c.

Dulwich & Co. 27, Soho-square, London; J. W. Briston, 709, Broadway, New York.

Just published, crown 8vo. price 3s.

THE FIRST QUARTO EDITION OF HAMLET.

TWO ESSAYS,

To which the HARNESSE PRIZE was awarded, 1880.

1. By C. H. HERFORD, B.A. Trinity College, Cambridge.

2. By W. E. WIDGEMAN, B.A. St. John's College, Cambridge.

(The above were declared equal in merit.)

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

IN THE PRESS, AND SHORTLY TO BE PUBLISHED,

In 1 vol. cloth, price One Guinea.

DOMESDAY STUDIES:

AN ANALYSIS AND DIGEST OF

THE STAFFORDSHIRE SURVEY.

By the Rev ROBERT W. EYTON.

Author of 'The Antiquities of Shropshire,' 'A Key to Domesday: the Domesday Survey,' 'Domesday Studies: the Somerset Survey,' &c.

Including an Essay on the Memorization Technique, Phonology, and Method of Domesday, Comparisons with Contemporary Chronicles or Later Traditions, Topographical Tables and Notes in Reproduction of the Domesday Survey of the County in all its main features, Identification and Definition of every House, Town, Manor, and Estate of the County, &c.

* * Subscribers' Names will be published in the Work.

Orders should be addressed to the Publisher, J. Halden, Stafford.

HISTORY OF PAINTING IN ITALY.

ROSINI.—STORIA della PITTURA ITALIANA.

Second Edition, adapted for English Readers, by the addition of Three Indexes: 1. An English List of Painters; 2. An Alphabetical List of Painters and the subjects represented; 3. A Topographical Index, showing which Italian Paintings are found in every Town and Gallery of Italy and elsewhere. 1 vol. 8vo., with 465 fine Outline Engravings (pub. 1861), bound boards, 12s.

—The SAME, 7 vols. 8vo. half-morocco, top edges gilt, 46s.

The Three English Indexes render this Edition a most Complete Work. The whole forming thus one uniform guide to the knowledge of all the celebrated Paintings executed by the Painters of Italy of all times and all Schools. Whoever desires to make a study of Italian Painting must have Rosini's great work as a 'Handbook.' The numerous engravings are done with accuracy and spirit; they truly place the original picture before the mind's eye. Whoever has visited the Art Galleries of Europe or intends to see them, Rosini's History will be a most precious acquisition.

Barnard Quaritch, 15, Piccadilly, London.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Now ready.

MANCHESTER HEALTH LECTURES for the PEOPLE. Issued by the authority of the Manchester and Salford Sanitary Association. In 2 vols. crimson cloth, extra gilt, price 2s. 6d. each.

Vol. I contains LECTURES by the following:—D. Noble, M.D., A. Ransome, M.A., W. L. Sinclair, M.D., R. Angus Smith, F.R.S., H. Simpson, M.D., J. Haslam, M.D., H. E. Vernon, M.D., C. Macdonald, F.C.S.

Vol. II contains LECTURES by Julius Dreschfeld, M.D., A. Ransome, M.A., H. Simpson, M.D., R. Holgate Owen, M.D., J. M. Fox, J. A. Irwin, John Watts, Ph.D., J. Corbett, H. Humphreys, J. Angell, F.C.S., W. N. Macdonald, J. Tatham, E. Ashby, M.B., J. K. Burton.

MANCHESTER SCIENCE LECTURES for the PEOPLE. In 5 vols. uniform, in crimson cloth, hatched boards, gilt extra. Vols. I., II., III., and V. price 2s. 6d. each, Vol. IV. price 3s. 6d.

Vol. I. contains LECTURES by the following:—Professor Boscawen, F.R.S., T. Alcock, Professor Huxley, LL.D., W. Huggins, D.C.L., W. Boyd Dawkins, A. W. Ward, M.A., W. S. Jevons, M.A., J. R. Morgan, Professor Williamson, Dr. Carpenter, A. H. Green, J. E. Lockyer.

Vol. II. contains LECTURES by Professor Huxley, Professor Boscawen, A. R. Watkins, M.A., Professor Odling, F.R.S., Dr. Carpenter, Professor Othello Balfour Stewart, Professor Clifford, Professor Carr, J. H. Gladstone, R. A. Proctor, W. Peppercorn, W. F. Barrett.

Vol. III. contains LECTURES by W. Spottiswoode, A. W. Bennett, T. B. Cobbold, F. A. Abel, F.R.S., S. M. Bradley, C. Robertson, A. Gamgee, W. Fungley, Professor Tyndall, F.R.S., Professor Boscawen, W. Huggins, D.C.L., Professor Thorpe, F. L. Selater, W. C. Williamson, J. Lubbock, M.P., Major Wilson, &c.

Vol. IV. contains LECTURES by Captain J. E. Davies, R.N., Professor Boscawen, R. D. Harpur, P. M. Dawson, M.D., Professor Thorpe, Professor Ferriar, M.D., H. E. Armstrong, W. Peppercorn, Professor Boscawen, J. N. Lockyer, W. C. Williamson.

Vol. V. contains LECTURES by P. M. Dawson, T. B. Thorpe, W. H. Coss, J. Murray, Professor Huxley, Professor Boscawen, W. H. Fox, LL.D., W. C. Williamson, Professor Barrett, Boyd Dawkins, Professor Abel, C.B., Rev. W. H. Dallinger, G. J. Ransome, M.A.

GLASGOW SCIENCE LECTURES, in 1 vol. 8vo. paper boards, price 1s., containing LECTURES by the following:—Professors Flower, Holliston, Tait, Balfour Stewart, Boscawen, Schaffer, Dalling, Boscawen, and Thompson.

John Heywood, Manchester and London.

THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN BANKING COMPANY (Limited).

CAPITAL PAID UP, 1,000,000 £, RESERVE FUND, 100,000 £.

HEAD OFFICE: 27, CLEMENTS-LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Branches: Alexandria, Cairo and Larnaca (Cyprus).

This Bank transacts every description of Banking Business in Egypt, grants Letters of Credit and affords other facilities to Travellers proceeding to Egypt and the Nile.

G. F. A., Secretary.

27, Clements-lane, E.C.

PHOENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET
and CHANCERY CROSS, LONDON.—Established 1781.
Fire and Marine Insurance.
Insurances effected in all parts of the World.
JOHN J. BROOMFIELD, Secretary.

SUN LIFE OFFICE, LONDON.
Established 1810.

CHIEF OFFICE—45, Threadneedle-street.
BRANCH OFFICE—40, Chancery Cross.
And at Oxford-street, corner of Vaux-street.
Life Assurances of all descriptions.
Specially Low Rates for Young Lives, and for Non-Participating Policies.
Prompt Settlement of Claims.
A new and greatly simplified form of Proposal, also the Society's newly-revised Prospectus, will be forwarded on application.
J. G. PRESTLEY, Actuary.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY,
79, Pall Mall.
For Lives Only. ESTABLISHED 1807.
Accumulated Funds £1,043,543
Also a Subscribed Capital of more than .. £1,000,000
Reports, Prospectuses, and Forms may be had at the Office, or from any of the Company's Agents, free of charge.
GEORGE HUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary.

LOSS OF TIME IS LOSS OF MONEY.

ACCIDENTS CAUSE LOSS OF TIME.
And may be provided against by a Policy of the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY.
The Oldest and Largest Accidental Assurance Company.
Right Hon. Lord KENNEDY, Chairman.
Subscribed Capital, 1,000,000. Moderate Premiums.
Bonuses allowed to Insured of Five Years' standing.
A fixed sum in case of Death by Accident, and a Weekly Allowance in the event of Injury.
ONE MILLION and a HALF has been paid as COMPENSATION.
Apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, the Local Agents, or at, Curran, London.
WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S

STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT ON
MORDELL'S HIRE SYSTEM.
The Original, Best, and most Liberal.
Cash Prices.
No money's worth for time given.
Illustrated Price Catalogue, with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MORDELL, 30, 32, 34, Tottenham Court-road, and 20, 22, and 24, New-street, W.C. Established 1852.

F. MORDELL begs to announce that the whole of the above Premises have been removed to the new premises situated in the heart of the metropolis.

Bed-rooms: Suites, from 5 to 40 Guineas.
Drawing-rooms: Suites, from 5 to 40 Guineas.
Dining-rooms: Suites, from 5 to 40 Guineas.
And all other Goods in great variety.
F. MORDELL, 30, 32, 34, Tottenham Court-road; and 20, 22, and 24, New-street, W.C. Established 1852.

A POLLINABIS WATER.

"Largest dispenser Apollinaris."—Hewes, Book IV. Cde 3.
GOLD MEDAL, PARIS 1875.
ANNUAL SALE, 1,000,000.
APOLLINABIS COMPANY, Limited, 10, Regent-street, London, E.W.

PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

BRYANT & MAY'S

PATENT SAFETY MATCHES.

EIGHT PRIZE MEDALS.
ADVANTAGES—
Are not POISONOUS.
Are free from SMELL.
Are manufactured
Without Phosphorus.
Are perfectly harmless
To the Operators employed.
Are very DAMP PROOF.
LIGHT ONLY ON THE BOX.
EIGHT PRIZE MEDALS.

PROTECTION TO HEALTH.

M. R. G. H. JONES,
SURGEON DENTIST.

17, GREAT N. WELL-STREET, LONDON.
(Opposite the British Museum).
Will be glad to forward his Pamphlet on Painless Dentistry, free, enclosed in post, which explains the most complete system of the adjustment of Artificial Teeth without pain.
Consultation free, from 10 to 5.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have approved of this pure substance as the best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, BRANDED, HEAD-ACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION, and as the most effective for bilious Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness,
tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice.

For these symptoms use

EPF'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

Glycerine in its purest condition, being in proximity to the glands of the throat, they are carried by the act of sucking, become actively heating, and only in cases of cold and inflammation, James Eppe & Co. Homoeopathic Chemists, London.
A letter received—Gentlemen.—It may perhaps interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit, with or without medical treatment, in almost all cases of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm. Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, L.M.C.P., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary.

The special attention of the Reading Public is called to the fact that the GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY

ALLOWS

TWO VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS for a Subscription of ONE GUINEA per annum.

FOUR VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS, with free delivery, for a Subscription of TWO GUINEAS per annum.

SIX VOLUMES of the NEWEST BOOKS, with free delivery, together with all the Club privileges of the Institution, for THREE GUINEAS per annum.

CLUB MEMBERSHIP only, TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Sets of Books are divided to meet the convenience and wishes of Subscribers. Specially advantageous terms offered to Country Subscribers. The Public are invited to Inspect the Reading, Writing, and News Rooms, the Ladies' Drawing-Room, Reference Library, &c.

Full particulars forwarded promptly on application to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW BOND-STREET.

Now in the press, and will be published November 1st,

In large crown 8vo. price 8s.

ECHOES FROM THE COUNTIES.

London: BRADBURY, AGNEW & Co. 10, Boulevard-street, E.C.

THE NEW NOVEL BY MISS RUSSELL

New ready, small 18mo. in 2 vols.

QUITE TRUE. By Dora Russell, Author of 'Foot-prints in the Snow,' &c.

The VICAR'S GOVERNESS. By Dora Russell,
Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' &c.

"Undoubtedly a clever and well-written story. Miss Russell may fairly be congratulated on having written a book which contains a good deal that is interesting, and indicates a reserve of something still better."—Times.

London: J. & R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Ghee-lane, E.C.

On the 25th instant will be published, PART I of

WARD & LOCK'S
UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR;
Or, SELF-CULTURE FOR ALL.

IN WEEKLY NUMBERS, 1d.; MONTHLY PARTS, 6d. WITH PART I. WILL BE PRESENTED GRATIS a valuable CHART of the HISTORY of the WORLD, printed in Colours. Prospectuses will be sent post free on application to the Publishers.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS AND THE PUBLIC.

WARD & LOCK'S UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR.

—Anticipating a considerable demand for the First Number of 'The UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR,' the Publishers prepared a large First Edition, which was speedily exhausted, and further Editions have been put to press amounting to four times the number first printed.

The Orders received also for the First Monthly Part are so large that a Second Edition is already being printed.

Orders for both the Weekly Number and Monthly Part will be executed in the order in which they reach the Publishers.

London: WARD, LOCK & Co. Salisbury-square, E.C.

E P P S' S C O C O A.

GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoas, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

JAMES EPPE & Co. HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS, LONDON.

MAKERS OF EPPE'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.—Sold in Labeled Boxes only.

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO.'S
LAND, HOUSE, AND APARTMENT "REGISTRATION OFFICE,"
NO. 1, GRAND HOTEL BUILDING
FRONTING CHARING CROSS AND TRAFALGAR-SQUARE, LONDON.

NOTICE.

IMPORTANT to those having PROPERTY "FOR SALE," or HOUSES, &c., "TO LET."

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. would announce to ESTATE AGENTS, AUCTIONEERS, SOLICITORS, and others having Property FOR SALE, or Houses and Apartments TO BE LET, that the First Number of their

"LAND, HOUSE, and APARTMENT INDEX"

will be issued in NOVEMBER (other Editions each month hereafter), and PARTICULARS of PROPERTY REGISTERED upon their Books will be inserted, under appropriate headings, FREE OF CHARGE, when said particulars do not exceed forty words. Additional words will be charged ONE HALFPENNY each for every monthly insertion.

"THE INDEX" will be DISTRIBUTED GRATUITOUSLY by Local Agents and the "Corps of Commissionaires" at all of the PRINCIPAL HOTELS of the Metropolis, and throughout London and the Provinces.

CHARGE FOR REGISTRATION.

LAND, HOUSES, or APARTMENTS "FOR SALE" or "TO LET," with all the privileges of Office (as enumerated in PROSPECTUS), including an ADVERTISEMENT in "THE INDEX."

					£.	s.	d.
ONE MONTH	0	2	0
THREE MONTHS	0	5	0

The above rates are inclusive, no Commission being charged for services or assistance in the negotiation of Property registered.

For the sum of TEN SHILLINGS we Register Houses or ESTATES UNTIL SOLD or LET (no Commission being charged), but, nevertheless, under the express condition that the Owner thereof, or his Agent, shall during the first week of every month communicate with us by letter (to avoid mistakes) so long as the said Property remains unsold or unlet; failure so to do will be considered as an intimation that the Property registered has been disposed of, and it will therefore be erased from our Books, in order that applicants may not be misled, and thereby put to trouble and expense in regard thereto.

This Special Registration Fee of 10s. includes the insertion of an Eighty-Word Advertisement in "THE INDEX" for three months without extra charge.

Registration also entitles Patrons to have PHOTOGRAPHS at our Office for EXHIBITION in PORTFOLIOS, we giving the Public, who may call upon us, full and gratuitous information in regard thereto, and any Advertisement inserted in Newspapers regarding the Property Registered as well as Foreigners from all portions of the world, owing, in part, to the Grand Hotel Building being in close proximity to the Charing Cross and Metropolitan Railway Stations, the National Gallery, principal Hotels, leading Club-Houses, Theatres, and Her Majesty's Opera-House; hence an Advertisement in our INDEX or the Newspapers calling attention to any particular Property registered upon our Books is likely to attract the attention of those who would be interested, and naturally induce them (from the fact of our central position) to call on us for information. The benefit arising therefrom will suggest itself.

We desire to call the attention of Owners of Property to the importance of our POSITION as a means of communication with the best portion of the British and Foreign Public.

It has been computed, by actual reckoning, that over ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND persons pass our door each day (we shall be glad to demonstrate this fact, at any time, to the incredulous). It is admitted that these persons comprise the best portion of the British Public as well as Foreigners from all portions of the world, owing, in part, to the Grand Hotel Building being in close proximity to the Charing Cross and Metropolitan Railway Stations, the National Gallery, principal Hotels, leading Club-Houses, Theatres, and Her Majesty's Opera-House; hence an Advertisement in our INDEX or the Newspapers calling attention to any particular Property registered upon our Books is likely to attract the attention of those who would be interested, and naturally induce them (from the fact of our central position) to call on us for information. The benefit arising therefrom will suggest itself.

Property other than Houses and Estates will be registered as for Sale or Exchange, if, on personal examination, we find the articles first class and offered bond fide, at fair rates, and space will be allotted for the exhibition of same, if desirable. Particulars on application.

N.B.—Agents Wanted (Local) throughout London Suburban Districts and the Provinces. For particulars address

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. No. 1, Grand Hotel Building, London.

A FIRST LIST OF SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON'S NEW AND FORTHCOMING WORKS.

In 3 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, with Maps, Coloured Plates, and numerous very fine Woodcut Illustrations. price 42s.

NEW GUINEA: What I Did and what I Saw. By L. M. Albertis, Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Honorary Member and Gold Medalist of the I.R.G.R. C.M.E.S., &c.

SEVEN YEARS IN SOUTH AFRICA. Travels, Researches, and Hunting Adventures. By Dr. EMIL HOLER. With some hundreds of Illustrations from the Doctor's own sketches, and Maps. Translated by ELLEN E. FEEVER. In demy 8vo. [In the press.]

HOW I CROSSED AFRICA: from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean; through Unknown Countries; Discovery of the Great Zambesi Alluvial, &c. By Major SERPA PINTO. With 24 Full-Page and about 300 Half-Page smaller Illustrations, 13 small Maps, and 1 large 1 vol demy 8vo. * The long and continued illness of Major Pinto has caused the delay in the publication of this Work. It is now hoped, however, that the issue will not be much longer delayed.

Specially Suitable for Presentation.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION DE LUXE FOR CHRISTMAS, &c., of WASHINGTON IRVING'S LITTLE BRITAIN, together with the Spectre BROOM, and a LEGEND OF SLEEPY HOLLOW. Illustrated by 120 very fine Engravings on Wood by Mr. J. D. Cooper, designed by Mr. Charles O. Murray. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d.

CHEAP SERIES OF

ENGLISH PHILOSOPHERS. Edited by Iwan Müller, M.A., New College, Oxford.

Price and Size: 180 to 200 pages. 8vo., crown 8vo. Price, 3s. 6d.

ADAM SMITH, J. FARRER, M.A., Author of 'Primitive Manners and Customs.' [Just ready.]

ÉDITION DE LUXE OF

The EVE of ST. AGNES. By John Keats. Illustrated in 10 Etchings by Charles O. Murray. Folia, cloth extra, 2s. [Shortly.]

The GREAT MUSICIANS. A Series of Biographies of the Great Musicians. Edited by F. HURFFER.

1. WAGNER. By the EDITOR. [Nearly ready.]

PEASANT LIFE in the WEST of ENGLAND. By Francis George Heath, Author of 'The English Peasantry,' 'The Fera Parades,' 'Sylvan Spring,' 'The Fera World,' 'Our Woodland Trees,' 'Burnham Beeches,' 'Dress and Fairs,' &c. Crown 8vo. about 250 pages, 10s. 6d. [On Monday.]

The STORY of the ZULU CAMPAIGN. By Major Ashe (late King's Dragoon Guards), Author of 'The Military Institutions of France,' &c., and Captain the Hon. R. V. WYATT DOBELL (11th Lancers, killed at Ulundi). Dedicated by special permission to Her Imperial Highness the Empress Eugénie. [Just ready.]

The NAVAL BRIGADE in SOUTH AFRICA. By Henry F. Norbury, C.B. R.N. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, price 10s. 6d.

The PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY of the IRISH LAND QUESTION, from 1820 to 1870, and the Origin and Growth of the Ulster Custom. By R. BARRY O'BRIEN, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Author of 'The Irish Land Question and English Public Opinion.' [Just ready.]

ÉDITION DE LUXE.

SIR EDWIN LANDSEER. By Frederick G. Stephens. Large-Paper Edition, crown 4to, with Permanent Reproductions of Sixteen Engravings, after Sir Edwin's most famous Paintings, and Fac-similes of many of his Etchings. Handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards and gilt edges, price 21s. [Just ready.]

Imperial 4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 25s.

The VOLUME of the GREAT HISTORIC GALLERIES of ENGLAND. Edited by Lord RONALD GOWER, F.R.S., Treasurer of the National Portrait Gallery. [Ready.]

Imperial 4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 21s. 6d.

The VOLUME of the ETCHER. This Volume contains Thirty-six Examples of the Original Etched-work of celebrated Artists; amongst others, Richard Pester, J. E. Hodgson, R.A., Colin Hunter, J. P. Maillart, Robert W. Macbeth, R. S. Chastock, H. E. Robertson, &c. [Shortly.]

MEN of MARK. Volume V. Containing Thirty-six very fine Permanent Coloured-size Photographs of Men of the Day, taken specially from Life by Leek and Whitehead. With brief Biographical Notices by THOMPSON COOPER, F.R.S. Square 4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 35s. [Ready.]

*The photographs are very fine specimens of their art. —Times.

WITH THE SANCTION OF THE SCIENCE AND ART DEPARTMENT.

The SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM. Ninety-six Etchings and many Wood Engravings of Examples of Works of Art in the Museum, and of the Decorations of the Building, with brief Descriptions. Handsomely bound in cloth, with gilt top, price 16s. [Shortly.]

The STORY of a MOUNTAIN. By E. Reclus. Translated by Bertha NEEB. [In the press.]

NEW NOVELS.

SARAH de BERANGER. New Novel. By Jean ENGELW. 3 vols. [Ready.]

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART. By W. Clark RUSSELL. Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,' 'John Holdsworth,' &c. 3 vols. [Ready.]

A PLOT of the PRESENT DAY. By Kate Hope. 3 vols. [Ready.]

BLACK ABBEY. By M. Crommelin, Author of 'Quemle,' &c. 3 vols. [Ready.]

FLOWER o' the BROOM. By the Author of 'Rare Fair Margaret.' 3 vols. [Nearly ready.]

The GRANDIERS: a Tale of Berlin. Translated from the German by Captain WM. SAVILE. 3 vols. [Ready.]

ERRANT: a Life Story of Latter-Day Chivalry. By FERCY GREGG, Author of 'Across the Zodiac,' &c. 3 vols. [In the press.]

The STILLWATER TRAGEDY. By J. E. Aldrich. 1 vol. [Ready.]

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. EUROPEAN EDITION.

Messrs. SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO. have much pleasure in announcing that they have completed arrangements with Messrs. HARPER & BROTHERS, of New York, for the publication (simultaneously with the American issue) of a European Edition of this celebrated Magazine, to commence with the New Volume, Dec. 1, 1880.

Harper's Magazine, Established in 1850, and having in America alone a circulation of about 140,000 Copies, has hitherto been excluded from Great Britain in consequence of its containing copyright matter. This difficulty has now been overcome by special arrangements made with English Authors, and also by specially editing and printing a portion of the work in this country.

The English issue will commence with the first instalment of a Novel by Mr. Thomas Hardy, written exclusively for this Magazine, which will run for the first Twelve Months. Mr. HARDY's Story will be illustrated by George du Maurier.

A large space will be devoted to reviews of English books by a competent English reviewer, and other matter of a scientific, political, and literary character will be substituted for similar material of purely American interest.

In other respects the Magazine will present all the attractive features which have gained for it unprecedented celebrity in the New World.

Whilst the Magazine is sold in America at 35 cents, equal to 1s. 5d., the European Edition will be published at One Shilling, and containing 160 pages, large 8vo., with about a Hundred Illustrations, will be beyond question the cheapest, best illustrated, and most entertaining periodical ever put before the British public.

An Illustrated Prospectus is in preparation, and Booksellers in Town and Country wishing to obtain a supply for distribution are requested to apply immediately to the Publishers.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW, No. 512,
OCTOBER, is just published.

1. LIFE OF THOMAS GRAHAM, LORD LYNEDECH.
2. ANNALS OF ELSTER COLLEGE.
3. RECORDS OF EARLY ENGLISH ADVENTURE.
4. THE CHEMISTRY OF THE STARS.
5. SAINT SIMON'S PARALLEL OF THREE KINGDOMS.
6. HOWORTH'S HISTORY OF THE MONGOLS.
7. GERMANY, PAST AND PRESENT.
8. TRAVELLING'S EARLY HISTORY OF FOX.
9. THE CANDAHAR CAMPAIGN.

London: Longmans & Co. Edinburgh, A. & C. Black.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 300, is published THIS DAY

1. RECENT TRAVELS IN JAPAN
2. CIGERO.
3. ART COLLECTIONS.
4. THE CAMBRIDGE.
5. OLYMPIA.
6. THE NEWSPAPER PRESS.
7. THE MARSHAL DUKE OF SARDANIA.
8. SIX MONTHS OF A LIBERAL GOVERNMENT

John Murray, Albemarle-street

THE CHURCH QUARTERLY REVIEW, for OCTOBER, 1880.

1. THE CATACOMBS OF ROME, AND CERTAIN PREVALENT MISCONCEPTIONS REGARDING THEM
2. THE PAGAN REACTION under the EMPEROR JULIAN
3. S. THOMAS AQUINAS
4. CHRISTIAN IMAGINATIONS OF HEAVEN
5. THE SACRIFICIAL TEACHING OF THE ANCIENT LITURGIES.
6. LIFE OF RICHARD WALDO SPOFFORD.
7. BRIGHT'S ANTI-PAGANISM TREATISES OF S. AUGUSTINE.
8. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CENTENARY.
9. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CENTENARY.

Spottiswoode & Co. New-street-square, London.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

1. ANIMAL INSTINCT IN ITS RELATION TO THE MIND OF MAN. (The Unity of Nature. No. III.) By the Duke of Argyll.
2. HOW TO NATIONALIZE THE LAND: A Radical Solution of the Irish Land Problem. By Alfred R. Wallace.
3. THE RELATION OF CHRISTIAN BELIEF TO NATIONAL LIFE. By the Rev. J. Baldwin.
4. PARTY POLITICS IN THE UNITED STATES. By an American Statesman.
5. THE PROCEDURE OF DELIBERATIVE BODIES. By Alexander Bain, LL.D.
6. HOME RULE IN IRELAND: its Strength as shown by the last Two General Elections. By Alfred Friary.
7. THE PROSPECTS OF LANDOWNERS. By Professor W. Steadman Aldis.
8. THE FUTURE OF THE CANADIAN DOMINION. By William Clarke.
9. OLD AND NEW JAPAN, or, a Decade of Japanese Progress. By Sir Kutherford Alcock, K.C.S.
10. CONTEMPORARY BOOKS.

THE ART JOURNAL, for NOVEMBER (price 2s. 6d.), contains the following—

1. WHITTINGTON After C. M. Birch.
2. A VISIT TO THE INQUINATIONS After D. W. Wyndale.
3. LITTLE BAREFOOT. After B. Vander.

Literary Contents.
The Art of the Renaissance. By W. H. Storer. Illustrated.
Fugitive (from the Renaissance). Illustrated.
Ovid, Theophrastus, and Gellius. By Camille Monod.
Original Designs for Art Manufacture. Illustrated.
Berlin Royal Academy of Arts.
Education in Egypt. By E. T. Rogers and Miss Rogers. Illustrated.
The Process of Modern Fresco Painting.
Walworth.
Social Science Congress.
Art at Home and Abroad, &c.

London: Art Journal Office, 25, Ivy-lane E.C.

FRASER'S MAGAZINE, NOVEMBER, 1880, No. 611,
New series, No. CXXII. Price 2s. 6d.

1. POLITICAL LEADERS AND THE POLITICAL FUTURE.
2. AN EARLY CELTIC COLLEGE. By Hugh Macmillan, D.D.
3. MR. REMPILL'S SETTLEMENT. By Alexander Allardyce.
4. THE SCOTSMAN'S RETURN FROM ABROAD. By E. L. S.
5. THREE PHASES OF LYRIC POETRY. By Thomas Bayne.
6. EDUCATION AND HOPE. By "The Riverside Visitor."
7. THE OLD PACIFIC CAPITAL. By Robert Louis Stevenson.
8. A RELIGIOUS FORM OF THE NINTH CENTURY. By Prof. Otho.
9. WOMAN AS A SANITARY REFORMER. By Benjamin Ward Richardson, M.D. F.R.S.
10. THE BUGLE. From the French. By J. D. Hoppin.
11. AN ENGLISH RURAL WALK. By T. S. Kibbel.
12. CEREALS AND CEREALDISCRIPTION. By a Broad Churchman.

London: Longmans & Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES, for NOVEMBER, contains—Home Music-Worship: The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Mendelssohn's Opera, Don Giovanni & Lucia—Leeds Musical Festival—Jacques Offenbach—Crystal Palace Concerts, &c.—Reviews: Foreign and Country News &c. Price 3d., post free, 6d. Annual Subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES, for NOVEMBER, contains—"Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts," Anthem for Christmas, by Dr. Reuter. Price separately, 1/6.
London: Novello, Nover & Co. 1, Broad-street, W., and 30 and 31 Queen-street, E.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE, for NOVEMBER,
1880. No. DCCCLXXXI. price 2s. 6d.

1. THE PRIVATE SECRETARY Part I.
2. THE WORTLES SCHOOL. Part VII.
3. A JEWISH RABBI IN ROME With a Commentary by Ben Israel. By W. S.
4. VOYAGES IN THE P. O. Reminiscences of an Old Fogey FROM AFRICA. By Marcus Paulus Vennet.
5. THE CLOSER OF THE AFFGHAN CAMPAIGN.
6. THE UNLOADED REVOLVER.—THE DIPLOMACY OF PANATHUM.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

1. ADAM AND EVE. (Continued.)
2. ERASMUS DARIUS.
3. THE NATIONAL PRESS IN IRELAND.
4. UNSPOKEN LOVE.
5. AN EXPERIMENT IN MESMERISM.
6. LADY HESTER STANHOPE.
7. LIFE IN DEATH.
8. A LITTLE BOHEMIAN. Part III.
9. THE GIBALTAR OF THE EAST.
10. IN AND ABOUT MAYFAIR.
11. THE REBEL OF THE FAMILY. By Mrs. Lynn Linton.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE, for NOVEMBER.
With Illustrations by George De Maurier and W. Smith.

1. MY FAITHFUL JOHNNY (With an Illustration). Chaps. 1-4.
2. QUERVO.
3. THE NATURAL HISTORY OF DRESS.
4. LORD MACAULAY AND DR. JOHNSON'S WIFE.
5. THE BURMERS. By Henry Yee.
6. DECORATIVE DECORATIONS.
7. SOCIAL LIFE AMONGST THE ANCIENT GREEKS.
8. WASHINGTON SQUARE. By Henry James, Jr. (With an Illustration). Chaps. 30-35.

ST. NICHOLAS—SCRIBNER'S CHILDREN'S MAGAZINE.
COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW VOLUME.

1. THE NOVEMBER NUMBER OF ST. NICHOLAS.
2. A GRAND CHRISTMAS NUMBER of the above will be ready about DECEMBER 25 1880 and without any exception, it will be the highest production in juvenile literature since the year 1850.

SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for
NOVEMBER commencement of a New Volume price 1s. 6d. (post free, 1s. 7d.). SCRIBNER for NOVEMBER contains Twenty-five distinct articles and upwards of Seventy High-class Illustrations.

SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE.

1. THE BOWER. After the Painting by Jean François Millet. Engraved by T. Cole. (By permission of A. Braun & Co.) Frontispiece.
2. PETER THE GREAT as RULES and REFORMER. I. Eugene Schuyler.
3. BORDERTOWN and the BONAPARTES. Joseph B. O'Shea.
4. "O SILVER RIVER FLOWING TO THE SEA." R.
5. WALT WHITMAN. With Portrait. Edmund Clarence Stedman.
6. THE RACNET OF BLOOD SIGHT. By an An-Compere. Henry James.
7. TWO GUNNERS. Henry Mart Spalding.
8. TIGER-LILY. In Three Parts. Part I. John Schuyler.
9. THE THOUGHT OF ANTI-ANAX. In the U.S. S. M. R. Fleet.
10. KENNETH HOPE. Elizabeth Smart Phelps.
11. THE LOST WELLS. William R. Heywood.
12. A CHARTER ON TAILLAGE. Philip O. Sullivan.
13. JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET—PRAISE AND PAINTEUR. III. Alfred Steiner.
14. "O TELL ME NOT OF HEAVENLY HALLS." Otho Thacker.
15. ELIHU VEDDER. Charles de Kay.
16. ON TWO PICTURES BY VEDDER: I. The Young Man. II. The Common Story. R. R.
17. MR. GLADSTONE. With Portrait from a Photograph (by permission of Marston & Co.).
18. ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. Edith Jones.
19. LEONARD WOODS. (Professor Park's Memorial.) Richard Henry Dana.
20. ARTHUR WARD. E. S. Nadal.
21. "PRAY YOU LOVE, REMEMBER." W. W. Young.
22. TOPIC OF THE TIME—22. HOME AND SOCIETY—23. CULTURE AND PROGRESS—24. THE WORLD'S WORK—25. BRICK-BEAC.

THE REPORTERS' MAGAZINE.

1. JUDY'S ANNUAL, for 1881.
2. Edited by CHARLES H. ROSS.

Coloured Cover, numerous Full-Page Illustrations, and a host of smaller Pictures by eminent Artists.
To be had of every Bookseller and Newsagent, at all Railways Book-shops, and at J. & J. Allen, 30, Fleet-street, London.

CARISBROOKE MAGAZINE,
New ready

Published at 20, Queen-street, Newport, Isle of Wight, and Simpkins, Marshall & Co. Stationers' Hall-court, London.

THE ANTIQUARY—a Magazine devoted to the Study of the Past.

1. The Victorian Revival of Gothic Architecture. Part II. By J. H. Parker, C.B.—The Orthodoxy of Shakespeare's Name. Part I. By R. A. Hughes Llewellyn, LL.D. F.R.S., &c.—The "Ordnance Survey." Part I. By Lord Talbot de Malahide, Smithfield. Part II. By O. Lambert, F.R.A. Two Political Songs of the Middle Ages. By M. R. Hewlett. The Roman Exploration Fund. By J. H. Parker, C.B. Oms and Precious Stones. Part I. By Edward J. Wadsworth, F.R.S.—A Chapter on Early Steam Navigation.—Steamboats in 1842.—The Public Records.—Reviews: The History of Yorkshire Wapentakes of Gilling West (with Illustration). The Past in the Present: The Village of Palace, or Chronicles of Chelsea—One Generation of a Norfolk House—A Cavalier's Note-Book.—The History of Galesley, Yorkshire.—The Organ Inscribed Monuments of the Goodhill—Archaeological and Historical Notices of the Churches of Chesham—The Derbyshire Cathedral.—Meetings of Antiquarian Societies.—The Antiquary's Note-Book.—Antiquarian News.—Correspondence.—The Antiquary Exchange, &c.

CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL, for NOVEMBER 1.

1. Four Madame Damis. By W. Chambers.
2. The Cruise of the Wasp. Hodge and his Masters.
3. A Viking's Tomb.
4. A Rocky Mountain Adventure.
5. Hints to Steamers.
6. Kleptomaniacs.
7. Phosphorescence.
8. Trampism.
9. Co-operative Dairy-Farming to the Jura Mountains.
10. High Spirits.
11. Down the Tames.
12. Odd Tunes.
13. Correspondence Classes.
14. Money Makers.
15. Thomas Carlyle.
16. Some Curious Epitaphs.
17. Ice-Baiting in Canada.
18. Gentleman versus Force.
19. The Way in which Lightning Descends.
20. Nine Days on the Summit of Mount Shasta.
21. About Money Orders.
22. My Memorandum-Book.
23. On the Power of Expansion.
24. How to Identify Lighthouse Lights.
25. The Proposed Royal College of Music.
26. The Story of Plerton of the 90th.
27. Postage-Stamp Savings.
28. The First English Post-Hospital.
29. Improvements Inaugural.
30. The Month Science and Arts.
31. Five Poetical Pieces.

DECORATIVE SUGGESTIONS FROM NATURAL FORMS.—FOR THE BUILDERS (as by post, 4d.). Fests and Plans, Patrick Stone Hospital; St. Mark's, Milverton; and Nicos School, Oxford—Notes in Old London—Sanitary Aspect of Construction—Water Supply—An American Wonder—The Electric Lamp—A Competition for Kansas, &c.—&c., Catherine-street; and all Newsagents.

THE OBELISK and FREEMASONRY, according to the Discoveries of BELZONI and Commander GORDON also Egyptian Symbols compared with those discovered in American Monuments. By JOHN A. WEISER, M.D. With Coloured and Plain Illustrations, &c.
Dulau & Co. 27, Soho-square, London; J. W. Benson, 706, Broadway New York.

E V E R Y D A Y.
"It tantalizes us."—Fort Worth Gazette.
"In R. throughout, a touch of satire, and a catholic taste for what is good."—Times.
"Familiar, and by no means dull."—Chart Journal.
Cloth, 2s.; boards, 1s. 6d.
Bostons & Co. 123, New Bond-street, W.

WORKS by LIONEL S. BEALE, F.R.S.

HOW TO WORK with the MICROSCOPE. Fifth Edition, much Enlarged. 100 Plates. 2s. 6d. (New ready.)

THE MICROSCOPE in MEDICINE. Fourth Edition. 2s. (New ready.)

BIOPLASM: an Introduction to Medicine and Physiology. 2s. 6d.

LIFE THEORIES and RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. Plates, 6s. 6d.

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE. Two Coloured Plates. 2s. 6d.

PROTOPLASM. Third Edition, much Enlarged. Numerous Plates, 10s. 6d.

ON LIFE and on VITAL ACTION. 5s.

London: J. & A. Churchill.

ARTISTIC CONSERVATORIES.—About FORTY
COPIES—LITHOGRAPHS AND LETTER-PRESS, from Designs by E. W. GODWIN, F.R.S., and MAURICE H. ADAMS, on Manuscript & Co.'s Patent System of Conservation.
B. T. Bristow, 22, High Holborn.

B A G S T E R S' B I B L E S.

The FAC-SIMILE POLYGLOT SERIES comprises Bibles in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, German, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, and English, which can be interlined two languages together in any desired combination.
Catalogues free by post.
S. Bagster & Sons, 15, Paternoster-row, London.

DR. WATTS ON ASTHMA, as a Treatise on the only Successful Method of Curing this Disease. By ROBERT G. WATTS, M.D. F.R.S., F.R.C.P., &c., 1, Salisbury-street, Cavendish-square, London.

London: C. Kitchell & Co. Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

SKIN DISEASES TREATED HOMOEOPATHI-
CALLY. By WASHINGTON BEPP, L.R.C.P. One Hundred Cases including forty distinct varieties of Skin Disease.
London: James Nisbet & Co. 45, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

NOTICE.

Now ready at all Libraries, price 1s. 11s. 6d.

NEW NOVEL, by the AUTHOR of 'James Gordon's Wife,' in 3 vols. crown 8vo.
MARJORY: a Study.
Wynnes & Sons, 74 and 75, Great Queen-street, London, W.C.

Just published, crown 8vo. price 3s.

THE FIRST QUARTO EDITION OF HAMLET, 1616.

TWO ESSAYS,

To which the HARRISON PRIZE was awarded, 1880.

1. By C. H. HERFORD, B.A., Trinity College, Cambridge.
2. By W. H. WIDGRIFF, B.A., St. John's College, Cambridge.

(The above were declared equal in merit.)

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

Price to Subscribers, 2s. 6d.; Non-Subscribers, 3s. 6d.

EXTRAORDINARY ADVENTURES of a REPORTER. Giving Twenty Years' experience on the Press, showing the Best and Worst Method of becoming an Efficient and Rapid Photographic Short-hand Writer and containing valuable Hints on all Branches of Reporting. Amusing and interesting to Members of the Press, and invaluable to Young Photographers and Typists in the Art of Reporting. Written and published by FRANCIS J. LOCK, Author of 'The Reporter's Companion,' 'How to become an Expert Author,' 'Martini's Soldier' (20,000), &c.
25, Market-street, Leicester.

SPRUNER'S HISTORICAL ATLAS.

Just completed, the THIRD EDITION, price 4s. 11s. 6d. half-bound.

HISTORICAL ATLAS of the MIDDLE AGES and MODERN TIMES.

By K. v. SPRUNER.

THIRD EDITION, ENTIRELY RE-ENGRAVED.

Edited by Dr. T. MENKE.

20 Coloured Maps, containing also 278 Detail Maps and Plans in their margins, half-bound, 4s. 11s. 6d.

Gotha: Justus Perthes. London and Edinburgh: Williams & Norgate; D. Nutt; Dulau & Co.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

On 1st November, Two Parts, in 1 vol. 7s. 6d.

HARMONIES of POLITICAL ECONOMY.

By FREDERIC BASTIAT. Translated from the French, with a Notice of his Life and Writings, by PATRICK JAMES STIRLING, LL.D. F.R.S.E. Author of 'The Philosophy of Trade.'

"Bastiat speaks with the greatest force to the highest order of intellect. At the same time he is almost the only political economist whose style is brilliant and fascinating."—Richard Cobden.

"Dr. Stirling's excellent translation."—Professor Cairnes.

Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd. London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE'S LIST.

EVALD ON THE PSALMS.

Just published, 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

EVALD'S COMMENTARY on the PSALMS.

(Poetical Books of the Old Testament. Part I.) Translated by the Rev. M. JOHNSON, M.A. (in 2 vols.) Vol. I. Being the Twenty-third Volume of the Theological Translation Fund Library (3 vols. 8vo. for 12s.). Prospectus on application.

Just published, 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

HAUSERATH.—HISTORY of the NEW TESTAMENT TIMES.

The Times of Jesus, by Dr. A. HAUSERATH, Professor of Theology, Heidelberg. Translated, with the Author's sanction, from the Third German Edition, by the Revs. C. F. FOYNTING and F. QUENESTER. Vol. II. Complete, 2 vols. 8vo. 12s.

Subscribers to the Theological Translation Fund Library receive this Volume for 7s. Prospectus, with Contents of the Series, post free on application.

Second Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

MISS F. P. COBBE.—THE HOPES of the HUMAN RACE HEREAFTER and HERE. Essays on the Life after Death, with an Introduction bearing special reference to J. Stuart Mill's Essay on Religion. By FRANCES POWER COBBE.

Fourth Edition, with an Appendix.

Just published, 8vo. cloth, 18s.

HERBERT SPENCER'S FIRST PRINCIPLES.

Fifth Thousand, with an Appendix dealing with Criticism (which may be had separately, price 6s.).

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

LITERARY EDITION (being the Ninth), with a Postscript,

HERBERT SPENCER.—THE STUDY of SOCIOLOGY.

MR. SPENCER'S DESCRIPTIVE SOCIOLOGY.

Now ready, 24mo. boards, No. VII. price 2s.

HEBREW and PHENICIAN, Classified and

Arranged by HERBERT SPENCER. Compiled and Abstracted by Dr. H. SCHLEIER.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

BARNABAS'S EPISTLE, in Greek, from the Original Manuscript of the Bible, with a Translation by G. SHAPE.

HENRY LECTURES, 1880.

Just published, 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

M. RENAN.—ON the INFLUENCE of the IN-

CHRISTIANITY, THOUGHT and CULTURE of ROME

BY ENOCH RENAN, Member of the Institute. Translated by the Rev. CHARLES BRADLEY, of Liverpool.

Uniform with the HENRY LECTURES by MAX MÜLLER and F. LA FLEUR.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; and 25, South Frodo-street, Bristol.

W. SWAN SONNENSCHNEIN & ALLEN,
LONDON.

"A STARTLING STORY."—Liverpool Mercury.

CAROLINE von LINSINGEN and KING WILLIAM IV. Unpublished Love-Letters discovered among the Literary Remains of Baron Reichenbach. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

"Claims to reveal a secret which has been kept for nearly a century. Caroline was none other than the unrecognized first wife of our King William IV."—London.

"Will certainly secure a place in general literature."—Examiner.

"Of extreme interest from a psychological point of view."—Times, in a Two-Column Review.

ASGARD and the GODS: Tales and Traditions of our Northern Ancestors. Translated by M. W. MACDOWALL, and Edited by W. S. W. ANSON. Numerous new Illustrations, extra demy 8vo. extra cloth gilt, 12s. 6d.

"Will be as valuable to grown-up men and women as it will be to boys and girls. The book is handsomely got-up and well illustrated."—Standard, 21st October.

GLIMPSES of BIRD LIFE, Pour-trayed with Pen and Pencil, by J. E. HARTING and L. P. ROBERT. 30 Full-Page Chromo-lithographic Plates, in the highest style of Parisian art, by Lemercier & Co., and numerous charming Woodcuts, folio, rich cloth extra, gilt edges, 42s.

GRIMM'S TEUTONIC MYTH-

OLOGY. Translated from the Fourth German Edition by J. S. STALLYBRASS. Vol. I. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

"The study of folk-lore will, in consequence of this book, make great advances."—Notes and Queries.

"An admirable piece of work."—Academy.

RELIEF ATLAS of all PARTS of the EARTH. 31 Maps in Relief, with Text facing each Map, by G. P. BEVAN, F.G.S. F.R.S. Each Map is framed in cardboard mounts, guarded, in a new style, and the whole half bound in one volume, gilt, 42s. 21s.

The Maps are accurately embossed, and exhibit at a glance the leading physical features of the different countries, rendering as far as possible geographical instruction visible in harmony with the general tendency in all branches of education.

W. S. SONNENSCHNEIN & ALLEN, Paternoster-square.

Just published, in 8vo. with Portrait, price 3s.

LECTURES on the SCIENCE and ART of EDU-

CATION, with other Lectures and Essays. By the late JOSEPH PAYNE, the First Professor of the Science and Art of Education in the College of Preceptors, London. Edited by the Rev. F. PAYNE, M.D., Fellow of Magd. Hall, Oxford. With an Introduction by the Rev. M. H. QUICK, M.A. Trin. Coll. Camb.

"These lectures mark the commencement of an important era in our educational history."—Academy.

"The volume will form an invaluable addition to the schoolmaster's library."—Standard.

"A sound in wise suggestion and striking illustration."—Post and Courier.

"We may confidently offer this book to the teacher as a proof that there is a philosophy of teaching, and that it need not be dull or crabbed."—Journal of Education.

London: Longman & Co.

Now ready, price 3s.

OUTLINES of the PHILOSOPHY of ARISTOTLE.

Compiled by EDWIN WALLACE, M.A.

Followed and Tutor of Worcester College, Oxford.

"Within small compass, the work is very thoroughly done."—Mind.

"The compiler has himself limited the very spirit of the peripatetic school, and by a judicious selection of characteristic passages, arranged in paragraphs, each of which is preceded by a masterly and perspicuous analysis, he has contrived, within the compass of a brochure of twenty pages, to give such a summary of Aristotle's writings as will serve at once as a key and a clue to his logic, metaphysics, ethics, and politics."—Review.

"Mr. Wallace has done a good work in connecting to make more accessible his useful synopsis of the Aristotelian philosophy."—Westminster Review.

"The writer displays throughout independent study of his author, and gives an unobtrusive position of his system."—Philosophical Magazine.

Oxford and London: James Parker & Co.

BUXTORFII (JOHANNIS) LEXICON

CHALDAICUM TALMUDICUM et HEBRAICUM dictione editis et emendatis auct. J. FISCHER. 4to cloth, 2s.

"To the Talmudist it is absolutely necessary; to the Semitic scholar it is of great value. Both will find the new edition not merely a more handy book of reference in its pocket-size, but one enriched with considerable additions."—London Review.

London: Asher & Co. 13, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

Just published, price 12s. 8vo. cloth,

STUDENT'S HEBREW GRAMMAR.

GESENIUS'S HEBREW GRAMMAR. Translated from Rodiger's Edition by BENJAMIN DAVIES, LL.D. Thoroughly revised and enlarged, with the help of Prof. R. Kautzsch's German Edition and other Recent Authorities, by EDWARD C. MITCHELL, D.D. With full Subject, Scripture, and Hebrew Indexes. Fourth Copyright Edition.

Just published, price 12s. 8vo. cloth,

STUDENT'S HEBREW LEXICON.

A COMPENDIOUS and COMPLETE HEBREW and CHALDAIC LEXICON to the OLD TESTAMENT With an English-Hebrew Index chiefly founded on the Works of Gesenius and Furst, with improvements from Dietrich and other sources. Compiled by BENJAMIN DAVIES, LL.D. Translator of Rodiger's Grammar, and of Gesenius's Grammar. Third Edition, carefully revised, and with a Complete Statement of the Principles of Hebrew Grammar, by EDWARD C. MITCHELL, D.D.

London: Asher & Co. 13, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

Now ready, 2 vols. at all Libraries,

SATIRES, POLITICAL and SOCIAL, in Prose and Verse. Edited by W. H. C. NATION.

"There are bits of character hit off to admiration."—Notes of the World.

"Bright, pithy, and smart. Platitudinous passages are not in Mr. Nation's line. The volumes are mighty pleasant reading."—Sunday Times.

"Really amusing while exposing abuses, the poems being especially terse and telling."—Brighton Examiner.

"Deals with political and social questions with true humour and satire. Will be valuable and do good, it is hoped, by calling public attention to matters that require reform."—Barnes County Gazette.

London: Prentiss & Co. 40, Tavistock-street, W.C.

31, SOUTHAMPTON-STREET, STRAND, Oct. 30th, 1880.

SAMUEL TINSLEY & CO.'S
NEW PUBLICATIONS.

EACH IN THREE VOLUMES.

The Burtons of Dunroo. By

M. W. HEW. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"The Standard says:—'The book is a specimen of careful and intelligent literary workmanship.'"

Charlie: a Waif's History, told

by himself. By Mrs. WOODWARD. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

The Dean's Wife. By Mrs.

ELIOT, Author of 'The Canon's Dilemma,' 'How He Was Won,' &c. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"John Bull says:—'Any reader who wants a good story thoroughly well told cannot do better than read 'The Dean's Wife.'"

Octavia's Lovers. By the Author of 'Lancelot.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

Amy Wynter. By Thomas A.

PINKERTON, Author of 'Cromford.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"A pleasant story of simple English life. Almost every character is freshly and distinctly drawn."—Athenaeum.

"A capital book to read."—Daily News.

Carmela. By the Princess Olga

CANTACUZENE, Author of 'In the Spring of My Life.' Translated by EUGENIE KLAUS, with the Author's approval. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"The Daily News says:—'Can be read from beginning to end with interest, rising frequently to admiration.'"

After a Dark Night—The Sun.

By C. G. HAMILTON. 2 vols. 12s.

With Cupid's Eyes. By Florence

MARRYAT. 3 vols. [Illustrated.]

EACH COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME.

Civil War in Home and Land.

By the Author of 'A Bride from the Blackland.' Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Under the Rose: a Prose Idyll.

By Mrs. HERBERT DAVY. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"The Graphic says:—'The work of a gentlewoman who has the soul of a poet and the refinement of a saint. A pleasant companion for a rainy or tedious journey than 'Under the Rose' we cannot conceive. It is impossible to lay any fault with it.'"

Dona Perfecta: a Tale of Modern

Spain. By R. FERRIS GARDON. Translated by D. F. W. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Mildred Forrester: a Tale of

Our Own Times. By "ADMA." Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Red Cross. Translated from the German by R. J. FELLOWES. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Minister's Daughters. By

R. FRANCIS. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Whom Did She Love? By Adair.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

London: SAMUEL TINSLEY & Co. 31, Southampton-street, Strand.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Advertisements for the Fortnightly Review should be sent to ADAMS & FRANCIS, 25, Fleet-street, E.C.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

ADAMS & FRANCIS insert ADVERTISEMENTS

in all Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals.

"Terms for contracting business, and List of London Papers, can be had on application to ADAMS & FRANCIS, 25, Fleet-street, E.C."

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

COMMENTARY on the BIBLE:—

Vol. V. The APOCRYPHAL BOOKS, ESDRAS to MACCABEES. (Completing the Society's Commentary.) Crown 8vo. cloth boards, red edges, 4s.

The ENGLISHMAN'S BRIEF on behalf of his NATIONAL CHURCH. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

CHIEF ANCIENT PHILOSOPHIES:—

[This Series of Books will deal with the Chief Systems of Ancient Thought, not merely as dry matters of History, but as having a bearing on Modern Speculation.]

EPICUREANISM. By William Wallace, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Merton College, Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

STOICISM. By the Rev. W. W. Capes, Fellow of Hertford College. Fcap. 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

DIOCESAN HISTORIES:—

[This Series, which will embrace, when completed, every Diocese in England and Wales, will furnish, it is expected, a perfect Library of English Ecclesiastical History. Each Volume will be complete in itself, and the possibility of repetition has been carefully guarded against.]

CANTERBURY. By the Rev. R. C. Jenkins, Rector and Vicar of Lyminge, Hon. Canon of Canterbury. With Map. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

SALISBURY. By the Rev. W. H. Jones, Vicar of Bradford-on-Avon. With Map and Plan of the Cathedral. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The HOME LIBRARY (New Volumes):—

[The Series of Volumes embraced under this head are intended to form a Sunday Library, though they are adapted for general reading. The works composing it are intended to throw light by way of Biography, Narrative, &c., on the Bible, the Church, or on God's dealing with individual Christians.]

The CHURCHMAN'S LIFE of WESLEY. By R. Denny URBIN, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The NORTH AFRICAN CHURCH. By the Rev. Julius Lloyd, M.A., Author of 'The Gallian Church,' &c. Crown 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

SKETCHES of the WOMEN of CHRISTENDOM. Dedicated to the Women of India. By the Author of 'The Chronicles of the Schönberg-Cotta Family.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

FATHERS for ENGLISH READERS (New Volume):—

[The object of this Series is to supply in a handy and readable form accounts of the Chief Fathers of the Christian Church, of their Age, and of their Writings, the Fathers selected being centres of influence at important periods of Church History.]

LEO the GREAT. By the Rev. Charles Gore, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

AFRICA, seen through its Explorers. By Charles H. Eden, Esq., Author of 'Australia's Heroes,' &c. With Map and several Illustrations. Crown 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 5s.

SOME HEROES of TRAVEL; or, Chapters from the History of Geographical Discovery and Enterprise. Compiled and Rewritten by W. H. DAVENPORT ADAMS, Author of 'Great English Churchmen.' With Map. Crown 8vo. sixteen cloth boards, 5s.

WRECKED LIVES; or, Men who have Failed. By W. H. DAVENPORT ADAMS. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d. each.

A NEW SERIES OF BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

ELFIN HOLLOW. By F. Scarlett Potter, Esq., Author of 'Cringewood Court,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

PRINCESS MYRA, and her ADVENTURES among the FAIRY FOLK. By F. SCARLETT POTTER, Esq., Author of 'Out-of-Doors Friends,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

VOYAGES and TRAVELS of COUNT FUNNIBOS and BARON STILKIN. By the late WILLIAM H. G. KINGSTON, Author of 'Ned Garth,' 'Owen Hartley,' &c. Small 4to. ornamental bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s.

Recent Publications.

AFRICA UNVEILED. By the Rev. H. ROWLEY. Crown 8vo. with Map and 6 Full-Page Illustrations on toned paper, cloth boards, 4s.

AUSTRALIA'S HEROES; being a Slight Sketch of the most prominent amongst the Band of Gallant Men who devoted their lives and energies to the cause of Science and the development of the Fifth Continent. By C. H. EDEN. Crown 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 4s.

CHINA, the LAND and the PEOPLE of: a Short Account of the Geography, History, Religion, Social Life, Arts, Industries, and Government of China and its People. By J. THOMSON, Esq., F.R.G.S. Crown 8vo. with Map, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations on toned paper, cloth boards, 4s.

The FIFTH CONTINENT, with the Adjacent Islands, being an Account of Australia, Tasmania, and New Guinea, with Statistical Information to the Latest Date. By C. H. EDEN. Crown 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 4s.

FROZEN ASIA: a Sketch of Modern Siberia. By CHARLES H. EDEN. Author of 'Australia's Heroes,' &c. Crown 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 4s.

HEROES of the ARCTIC and their ADVENTURES. By FREDERICK WHYMPER, Esq., Author of 'Travels in Alaska.' Crown 8vo. with Map and numerous Woodcuts, cloth boards, 4s.

NON-CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS SYSTEMS.

BUDDHISM; being a Sketch of the Life and Teaching of Gautama, the Buddha. By T. W. RHYSDAVIDS, of the Middle Temple. Fcap. 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

CONFUCIANISM and TAOISM. By ROBERT A. DOUGLAS, of the British Museum. Fcap. 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The CORAN: its Composition and Teaching, and the Tradition it bears to the Holy Scriptures. By Sir WILLIAM MUIR, K.C.B. LL.D. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

HINDUISM. By Monier Williams, M.A. D.C.L., &c. Fcap. 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

ISLAM and its FOUNDER. By J. W. H. STOKART, B.A. Fcap. 8vo. with Map, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

EARLY CHRONICLERS OF EUROPE.

ENGLAND. By James Gairdner, Author of 'The Life and Reign of Richard III.,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

"The book is well and thoroughly done, and makes a very valuable addition to the stock of historical manuals."—Albion.

FRANCE. By Gustave Masson, B.A. Univ. Collie, Assistant-Master and Librarian of Harrow School, &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

ANCIENT HISTORY from the MONUMENTS.

ASSYRIA, from the EARLIEST TIMES to the FALL of NINIVEH. By the late GEORGE SMITH, Esq., of the British Museum. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

BABYLONIA, the HISTORY of. By the late GEORGE SMITH, Esq., of the British Museum. Edited by the Rev. A. E. HAYCK. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

EGYPT, from the EARLIEST TIMES to a.c. 30. By S. RICH, LL.D., &c. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

GREEK CITIES and ISLANDS of ASIA MINOR. By W. S. W. VAUX, M.A. F.R.S. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

PERSIA, from the EARLIEST PERIOD to the ARAB CONQUEST. By W. S. W. VAUX, M.A. F.R.S. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

SINAI, from the FOURTH EGYPTIAN DYNASTY to the PRESENT TIME. By HENRY SPENCER PALMER, Major R.E. F.R.S. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

WARD, LOCK & CO'S NEW SERIAL PUBLICATIONS.

NOW READY, PART I. OF

WARD & LOCK'S UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR;

Or, SELF-CULTURE FOR ALL

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

In WEEKLY NUMBERS, Price 1d., and MONTHLY PARTS, Price 6d.

* With PART I. is PRESENTED GRATIS a Valuable CHART of the HISTORY of the WORLD.

"Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. are adding to their list of cheap popular and useful books one which will be widely welcomed by all classes. In the issue of 'The Universal Instructor; or, Self-Culture for All,' in weekly and monthly parts, the publishers are doing a public service which cannot be over-estimated, as they are offering the means of education to the humblest people in the community as well as to those living far remote from seats of learning. For the 'Universal Instructor' is neither a sham nor a superficial work. On the contrary, it is one prepared by writers whose names guarantee its worth, and the specimens of their work which we have in the opening part are calculated to produce a favourable impression as to the serviceableness of the book. The publishers explain that their aim has been to make the 'Universal Instructor' 'nothing short of a university at home . . . to suit such students as, hampered by slender means or prevented by the inconveniences of distance or of time, are unable personally to attend any of our great seats of learning.' In this laudable aim we think Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. are likely to succeed. It should also be noticed that the 'Instructor' is liberally adorned with illustrations, and that the first monthly part, consisting of sixty-four pages and only costing sixpence, has as a frontispiece a chart of the history of the world, beautifully coloured."—Edinburgh Daily Review.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS AND THE PUBLIC.

Anticipating a considerable demand for the First Number of 'The UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR,' the Publishers prepared a large First Edition, which was speedily exhausted, and further Editions have been put to press amounting to FIVE TIMES the NUMBER FIRST PRINTED.

The Orders received also for the First Monthly Part are so large that a FOURTH EDITION is already being printed.

* The reprinting is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, and orders for both the Weekly Number and the Monthly Part will be executed in the order in which they reach the Publishers.

IN MONTHLY PARTS, PRICE SIXPENCE EACH.—PART I. NOW READY.

WARD & LOCK'S WORTHIES OF THE WORLD.

A SERIES OF ORIGINAL BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF NOTABLE MEN OF ALL COUNTRIES AND ALL TIMES.
WITH PORTRAITS.

Those who read with a desire for mental improvement should study Biography, for it is, undoubtedly, one of the most valuable aids in the formation of character. WARD & LOCK'S WORTHIES OF THE WORLD is the most attractive work ever attempted in connexion with this interesting and valuable branch of study, and the Publishers recommend it with confidence to the pursuit of all ages and every class of society.

The various biographies abound in picturesque incidents, and have in no case been overloaded with uninteresting details. The whole tone of the work is that of vivacity and interest.
Prospectus post free on application.

A COMPANION WORK TO MRS. BEETON'S HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT.

IN MONTHLY PARTS, PRICE SIXPENCE EACH.—PART I. NOW READY.

WARD & LOCK'S HOME BOOK: A DOMESTIC CYCLOPÆDIA.

WITH COLOURED AND OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS.

The enormous popularity—to which there is no parallel in the domestic literature of this country—of Mrs. BEETON'S HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT has induced the Publishers to prepare, under the above title, a Companion Work, which they hope will be received with an equal amount of favour. The aim of the HOME BOOK is to make Home the abode of Comfort, Elegance, and Happiness.

Among the subjects treated of by WARD & LOCK'S HOME BOOK may be mentioned: How to Build, Buy, Rent, and Furnish; Daily Life of the Inmates of the Home; Duties of Servants and Hints on Superintendence of the Home; Children, and what to do with them; The Art of Dressmaking; Home Needlework; The Toilet; Etiquette; How to spend our Leisure Hours, &c., &c.
Prospectus post free on application.

IN MONTHLY PARTS, PRICE SIXPENCE EACH.—PART I. NOW READY.

WARD & LOCK'S FARM BOOK: A COMPLETE GUIDE TO FARM MANAGEMENT IN ALL ITS BRANCHES.

WITH COLOURED AND OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS.

WARD & LOCK'S FARM BOOK is a Work for all Farmers, and will also prove of great use to that yearly increasing body of AMATEURS who take an INTEREST in RURAL PURSUITS.

WARD & LOCK'S FARM BOOK opens with a general account of the Management of the Farm, followed by the Crops of the Farm—Cows and the Management of the Dairy—Sheep, Pigs, Asses, Goats, and Horses—The Fruit and Flower Garden—The Planting of Trees, and, last of all, Field Sports and Rural Recreations. The Author has given the results of his own Observations, and has done his utmost to clothe his Instructions in such language as will be readily understood.
Prospectus post free on application.

NOTICE.—If any difficulty be experienced in obtaining any of the above Publications, they can be obtained direct from the Publishing Office.

* Complete Catalogue of WARD, LOCK & CO'S PUBLICATIONS post free on application.

London: WARD, LOCK & CO; Warwick House, Salisbury-square, E.C.

GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY, NEW BOND-STREET. AVAILABLE FOR BOTH LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

Comprises an ENGLISH and FOREIGN CIRCULATING LIBRARY, provided with all the BEST and NEWEST LITERATURE, a LIBRARY of VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC, a REFERENCE LIBRARY, READING, WRITING, and NEWS ROOMS, supplied with the Daily and Weekly Journals, LADIES' DRAWING-ROOM, DINING and LUNCHEON ROOMS, SMOKING-ROOM, and all the appliances and comforts of a FIRST-CLASS CLUB.

* * All the Books in the Library, both English and Foreign, are available for Subscribers without distinction as to amounts of subscription, and Subscribers, at their option, may have Volumes of Music instead of Books.

SHAREHOLDERS' PRIVILEGES.

Each original Allottee of Ten Shares and upwards shall be thereby entitled for the period of three years to one Annual Subscription of the value of 3*l.* 3*s.* per annum, giving the right to Six Volumes at a time from the Circulating Library, together with all the Club privileges offered to a Subscriber to the Institution, and equivalent to a bonus of 12½ per cent. per annum on the amount proposed to be called up. These Shareholders will throughout participate in the ordinary dividend of the Company. Forms of application for Shares may be had at the Office.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

CLASS.		TOWN.	HALF YEAR.			ONE YEAR.
			£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
A	TWO VOLUMES	0	12	0	1	1	0
B	THREE VOLUMES	0	18	0	1	11	6
C	FOUR VOLUMES, delivered free	1	4	0	2	2	0
D	SIX VOLUMES, ditto	1	16	0	3	3	0
E	EIGHT VOLUMES, ditto	2	8	0	4	4	0

And Two Volumes for each additional Guinea per annum. Sets of Books are divided to meet the convenience of Subscribers.

Subscribers D and E are entitled to all the Club privileges, including the use of the Reference Library, the Reading and Writing Rooms, Ladies' Drawing-Room, &c.; and D are also entitled, upon a further payment of Two Guineas per annum, to introduce One Friend into the Rooms set apart for Members.

CLUBS AND LITERARY INSTITUTIONS.

CLASS.						ONE YEAR.
						£.	s.	d.
F	TWELVE VOLUMES	4	4	0
G	TWENTY VOLUMES	6	6	0

And Ten Volumes for each additional Three Guineas.

CLASS.		COUNTRY.				HALF YEAR.			ONE YEAR.
						£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
H	FIVE VOLUMES	1	4	0	2	2	0
I	NINE VOLUMES	1	16	0	3	3	0
K	TWELVE VOLUMES	2	8	0	4	4	0
L	FIFTEEN VOLUMES	3	0	0	5	5	0
M	EIGHTEEN VOLUMES	3	12	0	6	6	0

Subscription N to Club privileges only, as described above, Two Guineas per annum.

Subscribers I and K are entitled to all the Club privileges as above.

Subscribers L and M are entitled to the Club privileges for themselves and for one additional member of the family.

Boxes for the Conveyance of Books to Country Subscribers are provided by the Library free of charge.

THE FOREIGN CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

In addition to the usual advantages offered by Circulating Libraries, attention is paid to the Foreign Library, which consists of over 5,000 Volumes, and which is kept supplied with all New Works of importance. Subscribers have the option of taking the whole or part of their subscription in Foreign Books.

THE REFERENCE LIBRARY.

The formation of a Permanent Library of Selected and Standard Works has been commenced, and liberal additions will be made from time to time with the growth of the undertaking.

THE READING AND WRITING ROOMS.

Especial care is taken to render this feature of the Library attractive by a regular supply of all the best Periodicals and Reviews. These are always available, and particular attention is paid to the Department of Foreign Periodical Literature.

The Reading-Rooms are open, at present, from 9 A.M. until 10 P.M. on week days, and from 6 P.M. until 10 P.M. on Sundays.

THE MUSIC LIBRARY.

Subscribers of every class have the option of taking either the whole or part of their subscription in music—instrumental and vocal.

THE DINING-ROOMS.

The Dining-Rooms are open for the supply of luncheons, afternoon teas, and dinners, and Members of the Library will also be able to make arrangements for dinners to private parties.

THE TELEPHONE.

Subscribers are now in telephonic communication with the centres at Westminster and in the City.

Cheques and P.O. Orders should be made payable to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, the Librarian, who will promptly furnish all further information upon application.

GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW BOND-STREET, W.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S LIST.

Crown 8vo. cloth, with numerous illustrations, price 2s. 6d.
ACOUSTICS, LIGHT, AND HEAT, intended as an Introduction to the Study of Physical Science.

By T. W. PIPER, late Normal Master, St. John's College, Rochester.
"The plan of the work is different from that of any manual yet issued. It is not a dry epitome. It is an attempt to set forth the great principles of this branch of Physical Science in clear and familiar language, with strong beams of light shining on the 'pitfalls' into which students usually tumble in their lessons on such subjects as the Acoustics, Light, and Heat.
"I had already carefully examined the 'Acoustics, Light, and Heat.' It is by far the best and clearest elementary treatise on the subject."
The Principal, Training College, York.

Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 1s. 6d.
CLASS-BOOK OF ELEMENTARY GEOLOGY.

A CONCISE RESUME OF THE SUBJECT FOR BEGINNERS.
By F. WOLLASTON HUTTON, F.R.S., Lecturer on Geology and Zoology to the Otago University.

Crown 8vo. cloth, with illustrations, price 2s.
CLASS-BOOK OF ELEMENTARY MECHANICS:

An Introduction to Natural Philosophy adapted to the requirements of the Revised New Code.

By WILLIAM NEWITT, B.Sc. Science Demonstrator to the Liverpool School Board.
"Adopted by the Liverpool School Board."

Crown 8vo. with numerous illustrations, price 2s. 6d.
CLASS-BOOK OF INORGANIC CHEMISTRY.

By D. MORRIS, B.A., late Teacher of Chemistry, Liverpool College.
New and Enlarged Edition.

The changes made in the present Edition are intended to render the work more useful for the purpose for which it was originally compiled, viz. to furnish students preparing for the University and other Examinations with a simple yet complete Text-Book.

"These make the book, which was good before, still better, and it is now a capital handbook for students."—School Guardian.
"Will certainly take rank among the best of its kind for both individual and class purposes. The arrangement is excellent, and the style is clear and concise."—Schoolmaster.

Crown 8vo. stiff cover, price 2s.
PHILIPS' ILLUSTRATED ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

First Book, containing full Explanation and Illustration of the Nouns and Verbs. With 18 Original Illustrations.

"A very skilful attempt has been made to initiate the 'young learner' into the mysteries of nouns and verbs."—J. J. Green, Esq., former President of the National Union of Elementary Teachers.

Will be published shortly, a Manual of the Geography of THE OCEANS, PHYSICAL, HISTORICAL, AND DESCRIPTIVE, with Coloured Maps of the Atlantic, Pacific, Indian Arctic and Antarctic Oceans, and Charts of the Currents, Celesities, Trade Winds, &c.

"Special attention is directed to the following Historical Text-Book for Schools."
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 6d.
ENGLISH HISTORY for SCHOOLS.

By JOHN CURNOW, B.A. LL.D.

All the important events printed in red ink, which, the Educational Times says, "cannot fail to impress these facts more firmly on the memory."

"A valuable feature in Mr. Curnow's book is the prominent place he gives to India and the colonies up to the latest date. A model English history."—Literary World.

"Shows accurate thought and learning."—Christchurch Press.
"A positive pleasure to turn to the beautiful paragraphs of this work."—Leitton Times.

Imperial 8vo. strongly bound in cloth, 3s. 6d.
PHILIPS' ATLAS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. A series of 28 Maps, carefully printed in Colour, with Explanatory and Statistical Notes, by JOHN BATHOLICOMEN, F.R.G.S.

"Philips' Atlas of the British Empire stands alone for its fairness and completeness."—Educational Times.

Medium folio, bound in cloth, 15s.
THE TRAINING COLLEGE ATLAS.
A Series of 24 Maps, illustrating the Physical and Political Geography of the Chief Countries of the World.

Originally Designed and Drawn by WILLIAM HUGHES, F.R.G.S.
New and Revised Edition, Revised and Completed, by R. G. HAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S.

"The Training College Atlas is a work altogether distinct in character from any previously published. In its production the Publishers have aimed at combining the fullest and most recent physical and political information with the greatest possible clearness and distinctness, and it is believed that the new Atlas will be found to possess both these important features in a higher degree than any yet issued."

"It would be difficult, if not impossible, to surpass this really handsome and serviceable Atlas, which we think the best of the many successful efforts which Messrs. Philip & Son have yet put forth as geographical publishers."—The School and University Magazine.

London: GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street.
Liverpool: Caxton-buildings, and 49 and 51, South Castle-street.

A. & C. BLACK.

In demy 8vo. pp. 730, price 34s.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GÜNTHER, F.R.S., &c.,
Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.

[Now ready.]

CONTENTS.

1. HISTORY and LITERATURE.
2. EXTERNAL PARTS.
3. The SKELETON.
4. MYOLOGY.
5. NEUROLOGY.
6. The ORGANS.
7. GROWTH and VARIATION.
8. PALÆONTOLOGY.
9. DISTRIBUTION.
10. CLASSIFICATION.
11. COLLECTING and PRESERVING.
12. INDEX.

Illustrated with 330 Wood Engravings.

In demy 8vo. with Portrait and Fac-simile of Sermon,
price 12s. 6d.

MEMOIRALS OF

ROBERT SMITH CANDLISH, D.D.,

Late Minister of St. George's Free Church, and Principal of the New College, Edinburgh.

By WILLIAM WILSON, D.D.,

With Concluding Chapter by ROBERT RAINY, D.D.

[Nearly ready.]

In crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

THE WAY TO THE CITY, AND OTHER SERMONS.

By the late ALEXANDER RALEIGH, D.D.,
Author of 'Quiet Resting Places,' &c.

[Nearly ready.]

NEW ISSUE OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

CENTENARY EDITION (Copyright). In 26 vols. crown 8vo.

This popular Edition of the Waverley Novels, edited by the late DAVID LAING, LL.D., contains several Notes by Scott which are to be found in this Edition only, and is enriched with 189 Mini-Plates.

VOLUME I. to XIII. now ready. Price 3s. 6d. each.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS.

COMPLETE EDITION.

Edited by JOHN H. INGRAM.

In 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Memoir and Index, price 14s.

1. TALES GROTESQUE.
2. TALES ARABESQUE.
3. POEMS.
4. CRITICISM, &c.

DE QUINCEY'S WORKS.

The COLLECTED WORKS, in 16 vols. crown 8vo. price, in cloth, 34. 12s.; or in Roxburghe binding, gilt tops, 44. 4s.

Edinburgh: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK

HODDER & STOUGHTON'S PUBLICATIONS.

New Edition, in 2 vols.

UEBERWEG'S HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY.

FROM THALES TO THE PRESENT TIME.

Translated by GEORGE S. MORRIS, A.M., with Additions by the Translator; by NOAH PORTER, D.D. LL.D., on English and American Philosophy; and by V. BOTA, Ph.D., on Italian Philosophy.

Vol. I. ANCIENT and MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY. Royal 8vo. 15s.

Vol. II. MODERN PHILOSOPHY. Royal 8vo. 21s.

"Professor Ueberweg presents a clear, condensed, comprehensive outline of the different systems which have been propounded from the earliest to the latest time. It may be recommended to students of Philosophy with all confidence as an admirable text-book."

"It is one of those books which the more one knows the more it is valued. For certain purposes—such, for instance, as preparing students for examination—it is admirably adapted, better, perhaps, than any other work of the kind."—Spectator

"It combines in an unusual degree the three qualities of accuracy, clearness, and conciseness, and therefore it is peculiarly adapted for the use of students, while the copious bibliography renders it of value to the scholar. The latter portion of the book is singularly well done. There is so much that is especially excellent in the work, that we regard the appearance of these two volumes as a boon to English readers."—Athenæum.

Now ready, in crown 8vo. with 44 Illustrations, price 1s. 6d.

FOSSIL MEN, and their Modern Representatives.

An Attempt to Illustrate the Characters and Condition of Prehistoric Men in Europe by those of the American Races. By J. W. DAWSON, LL.D. F.R.S. F.G.S.

"A keen observer of the habits of the red man, and a diligent student of American antiquities, he is able, by analogical reasoning, to throw light upon the probable condition of prehistoric man in Europe, and upon the nature of the relics which he has bequeathed to us."—Athenæum.

By the same Author,

THE STORY OF THE EARTH AND MAN.

New Edition (the Birth), with 20 Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

"A very able and interesting sketch of geological science."—Spectator

Second Edition, Enlarged, price 3s. 6d.

THE VOICE AND PUBLIC SPEAKING.

A BOOK FOR ALL WHO READ AND SPEAK IN PUBLIC.

By J. P. SANDLANDS, M.A.

Mr. Gladstone, in a Letter to the Author, says:—"I received your work with great interest and satisfaction... I am truly glad that you are calling public attention to these matters."

2 vols. crown 8vo. 15s. with Maps,

HISTORY OF THE RISE OF THE HUGUENOTS.

By HENRY M. BAIRD, Professor in the University of New York.

"He tells his story so well that it cannot fail to interest the reader."—Saturday Review.

"Mr. Baird, by consulting the archives of England and France, has thrown much new light upon the subject, and we may say that he has done for the Huguenots what Moxley has done for the Low Countries, and what Froide has done for the Reformation. His work is extremely readable, and deserves to be widely circulated. Nothing can exceed in interest and in picturesque description his accounts of Francis I. and Margaret of Angoulême, of the Civil Wars, and of the terrible Massacre of St. Bartholomew."—Westminster Review.

Seventh Edition, Unabridged, price 7s. 6d.

JESUS CHRIST: His Times, Life, and Work.

By R. DE PRESENSE, D.D.,

Author of 'The Early Years of Christianity,' &c.

"This work has been described by Canon Liddon 'as a most noble contribution to the cause of truth,' and by the Contemporary Review as 'one of the most valuable additions to Christian literature which the present generation has seen.'"

By the same Author,

CONTEMPORARY PORTRAITS.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"These bright biographical, literary, and ecclesiastical papers... The great charm of the book is that Mr. de Presense has watched with personal observation the men whom he portrays, and in most instances he was on terms of intimacy, more or less, with the illustrious character."—Financial Review.

London:

HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, PATERNOSTER-ROW, E.C.

ISBISTER'S NEW BOOKS.

FAR OUT: Rovings Retold. By Lieut.-Col. W. F. BUTLER, C.B., Author of 'The Great Lone Land.' Post 8vo. 10s. 6d. [Now ready.]

The EVIDENTIAL VALUE of the ACTS of the APOSTLES. The Bohlen Lectures for 1880. By J. B. HOWSON, D.D., Dean of Chester. Crown 8vo. [Next week.]

ANDREW HARVEY'S WIFE. By L. T. MEADE, Author of 'Scamp and I,' 'Water Gipsies,' &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

ANIMAL PHYSIOLOGY, for Use in Schools. By J. M. FOTHERGILL, M.D. In separate Standards, adapted to the Requirements of the New Code. [Immediately.]

Half-Hours in MANY LANDS. With over 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt extra, 3s. 6d.

STEPPING-STONES: a Story of Our Inner Life. By SARAH DOUDNEY, Author of 'Strangers Yes,' &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3s.

The GAOL CRADLE: who Rocks It? A Plea for the Abolition of Juvenile Imprisonment. By the Rev. BENJAMIN WAUGH, Crown 8vo. 2s.

A DWELLER in TENTS. By L. T. MEADE, Author of 'Scamp and I,' &c. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Cleverly... powerfully written... the moral is excellent. Miss Meade has achieved a success of which better known writers might be proud." Graphic

REMINISCENCES of a HIGHLAND PARISH. By NORMAN MACLEOD, D.D. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the most refreshing and delightful books which can any-where be found. The impression which it makes is the nearest thing possible to the delight of wandering in fine autumn weather on the bosom of the mountains that look forth on the islands and the Atlantic. And the reader will find in the book what the mere wanderer cannot see in nature—a rich storehouse of noble humanity." Scotsman

IN PRISON and OUT. By HENNA STRETTON, Author of 'Jessica's First Prayer.' With Illustrations by R. Barnes. Eighth Thousand. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"A powerful illustration of the way in which the laws and the police together make criminals." Literary World

FIRST READINGS in LATIN. With Vocabulary, and a Short Accidence. By G. F. H. SYKES, B.A., Author of 'Grammar through Analysis.' Crown 8vo. [Next week.]

The SECOND GEOGRAPHICAL READER, for Standard III. ENGLAND and WALES. With Maps and numerous Illustrations. 200 pp. crown 8vo. 1s.

The KINDERGARTEN PRINCIPLE: its Educational Value and Chief Applications. By MARY J. LYBCHINSKA, Superintendent under the School Board for London. With numerous Illustrations. Small 4to. 4s. 6d.

"There are now in England so many institutions offering a curriculum of the Kindergarten system, that Miss Lybchinska has done good service to education in giving a concise view of the doctrine of Pestalozzi and Froebel and of the scholastic practice founded on them. If the principle underlying it were more intelligently grasped by school-managers and teachers, the gain to public elementary education would be immense." Athenæum

"A masterly survey... The principle is operative in every good infant school, but it is only with the aid of such a book as this that its full force can be perceived and applied." Edinburgh News

"The first work on the system which attempts to be more than descriptive and explanatory. It will do much to render the system popular." Newcastle Chronicle

WM. ISBISTER, Limited, 56, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

MISS BRADDON'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

ON NOVEMBER 10, PRICE ONE SHILLING,

Illustrated with 8 Whole-Page and other Engravings,

THE MISLETOE BOUGH.

THE CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

By the AUTHOR of 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' 'VIXEN,' &c.

. The New Annual will be the best in Literary and Artistic quality, and the largest in quantity, of any similar work hitherto produced.

MISS BRADDON'S ILLUSTRATED ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Superbly Illustrated by Gustave Doré and other Artists, and thoroughly Revised by the Author of 'Lady Audley's Secret,' &c., ornamental cover, 3s. 6d., cloth gilt, bevelled edges.

1. ALADDIN; or, the Wonderful Lamp.
2. SINDBAD the SAILOR; or, the Old Man of the Sea.
3. ALI BABA; or, the Forty Thieves.

N.B.—The above Work is the most gorgeous and the cheapest Gift-Book ever produced.

NEW EDITIONS OF MR. G. A. SALA'S GREAT WORK ON LONDON.

Price 2s. 6d.; cloth gilt, 3s. 6d., illustrated with 47 Whole-Page Engravings, from designs by M'Cormell, forming the most attractive description of the hours of the Day and Night in London ever published, and the cheapest.

TWICE ROUND THE CLOCK.

By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

Opinion of the DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"As we go with Mr. Sala 'Twice Round the Clock,' and as hour by hour he, Asmodeus-like, exposes the inner life of this bewildering city, we are more than instructed, we are also entertained. No more genial and chatty guide did ever sightseer have. Philosopher and friend is he, as well as guide—a laughing philosopher often, a weeping one sometimes, a friend always, as he is a friend who points a moral even when adorning a tale. How craftily as well as pleasantly he talks. Does he take us to Billingsgate, he diverts our attention from strong smells and stronger language by quoting Wordsworth, making incidental reference to Voltaire, Racine, and Madame de Sévigné, and an excursion to Lodore. Do we watch with him in Covent Garden Market, he crowds the historic purities with all the men who have made them famous. In the Mall he conjures up for us an interminable procession of majesties and dignities who once knew that spot. In Regent-street he throws a fierce light upon type after type of humanity, shabby and spruce, false and true; and at a charity dinner, amid turtle soup and Macedonian jellies, he reminds us of the Pot of Ointment which was put to a better use than though it had been sold for an hundred pence and given to the poor. But, indeed, everywhere and always, Mr. Sala is equal to the occasion, and as we read on we marvel more at the versatility he displays. Facts are crowded upon facts, in sometimes reckless profusion, yet so rarely is a slip made that when our author speaks of Mozart as dying at Salisbury instead of Vienna our faith in the master's biographers receives a shock. No more than this need be said. On all hands 'Twice Round the Clock' will meet with a hearty welcome, for none who read its teeming pages can do so without adding vastly to their knowledge, or without benefiting both mind and feeling."

Vide Daily Telegraph, August 5, 1879.

CHEAP EDITION OF MISS BRADDON'S LATEST NOVEL.

Price 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.; postage, 4d.

THE STORY OF BARBARA: HER SPLENDID MISERY AND HER GILDED CAGE.

By the AUTHOR of 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

JUST AS I AM. By Miss Braddon.

THE NEW NOVEL BY FREDERICK TALBOT.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE:

A NOVEL.

By FREDERICK TALBOT,

Author of 'Sophie Crowe,' &c.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

JUST AS I AM:

THE NEW NOVEL.

BY THE

AUTHOR OF 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

Opinion of the WORLD.

"'Just As I Am,' Miss Braddon's latest novel, is as fresh, as wholesome, as enthralling, as amusing, as any of the stories with which, for a series of years, she has proved her title as queen of the circulating library, and the thought and polish which mark her more recent fictions in no way interfere with the 'wow' and 'go' which originally made her reputation. 'Just As I Am' is an excellent example of the author." —The World, Oct. 12.

Opinion of the SPECTATOR.

"'The ScarSDale Peerage' is a creditably constructed and well-written story of the romantic kind, very much to be preferred to the doubtful morals and squalid sentiment of much that we are condemned to read." —The Spectator, Oct. 28.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE. By Mr. F. Talbot.

London: J. & R. MAXWELL, Publishers, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

LIST OF NEW WORKS.

FRASER'S MAGAZINE, for NOVEMBER. Price 2s. 6d.

CONTENTS.

HISTORICAL LEADERSHIP AND THE POLITICAL FUTURE
AN EARLY CELTIC COLLOID. By Hugh Macmillan, D.D.
MR. KEMPILL'S SETTLEMENT. By Alexander Macdye.
THE SCOTSMAN'S RETURN FROM ABROAD. By R. L. G.
THREE PHASES OF LYRIC POETRY. By Thomas Bayne.
EDUCATION AND BOOTS. By "The Riverside Visitor."
THE OLD PACIFIC CAPITAL. By Robert Louis Stevenson.

A RELIGIOUS FORM OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. By Prof. Gibb.
WOMAN AS A SANITARY REFORMER. By Benjamin Ward Richardson, M.D. F.R.S.
THE BUGLE. From the French. By J. D. Mappes.
AN ENGLISH RURAL WALK. By T. R. Kobbé.
CREEDS AND CREED SUBSCRIPTION. By a Broad Churchman.

The EARLY HISTORY of CHARLES JAMES FOX. By GEORGE OTTO TREVELYAN, M.P., Author of 'The Life and Letters of Lord Macaulay.' 8vo. price 18s.

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

LAYS of ANCIENT ROME, with IVRY and the ARMADA.
By Lord MACAULAY. New Edition, with 41 Illustrations Engraved on Wood by G. Pearson from Original Drawings by J. E. Wagnelin. Crown 8vo. price 6s. cloth extra, gilt edges.

The MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS, SPEECHES, LAYS of ANCIENT ROME, and other POEMS of LORD MACAULAY. Cabinet Edition (1880), in 4 vols. crown 8vo.
price 24s.

POETICAL WORKS of JEAN INGELOW. New Edition, with Additional Matter and Two Vignettes. 1 vol. fcap. 8vo. price 12s.

MOORE'S LALLA ROOKH. Tenniel's Edition. With
68 Woodcut Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Mrs. BRASSEY'S VOYAGE in the SUNBEAM: our Home on the Ocean for Eleven Months. With Map and 66 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

FAITHS and FASHIONS: Short Essays Republished. By Lady VIOLET GREVILLE. Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

A THOUSAND THOUGHTS from VARIOUS AUTHORS.
Selected and Arranged by ARTHUR B. DAVISON. Crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

BLUES and BUFFS: a Contested Election and its Results.
By ARTHUR MILLS. Crown 8vo. price 6s.

The CROOKIT MEG: a Scottish Story of the Year One. By JOHN SKELTON, LL.D. Advocate, Author of 'The Essays of Shirlie.' Crown 8vo. price 6s.

YELLOW-CAP and other FAIRY STORIES for CHILDREN, viz., Bumpy-Dudget, Callidon, and Theeda: an Allegory. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE. Crown 8vo. price 6s. cloth extra, gilt edges.

The ANGEL-MESSIAH of BUDDHISTS, ESSENEs, and CHRISTIANS. By ERNEST DE BUNSEN. 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

GOETHE'S FAUST. Part I. Translated, chiefly in Blank
Verse. With Introduction and Notes. By JAMES ADEY BIRDS, B.A. F.R.S. Large crown 8vo. price 12s. 6d.

GOETHE'S FAUST. Part I. The German Text, with an English Introduction and Notes for Students. By ALBERT M. SELLS, M.A., Prof. of German in the Univ. of Dublin. Crown 8vo. 6s.

FRAGMENTS of SCIENCE. By JOHN TYNDALL, F.R.S.
Sixth Edition, Revised and Augmented. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 16s.

HEAT & MODE of MOTION. By JOHN TYNDALL, F.R.S.
Sixth Edition (Thirteenth Thousand), Revised and Enlarged. Crown 8vo. 12s.

HINTS on HOUSEHOLD TASTE in FURNITURE, UP-HOLSTERY, and other Details. By C. L. BASTLAKE, F.R.I.B.A. Fourth Edition, with 100 Illustrations. Square crown 8vo. 14s.

HORSES and ROADS; or, How to Keep a Horse Sound on his Legs. By FREE-LANCE. Crown 8vo. price 6s.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

EDWARD STANFORD'S
ANNOUNCEMENTS.

LIFE AND HER CHILDREN,
GLIMPSES OF ANIMAL LIFE FROM THE AMOBA
TO THE INSECT.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY,
Author of 'The Fairy-Land of Science,' 'A Short History of Natural Science,' 'Botanical Tables for the Use of Junior Students.'

Crown 8vo. with upwards of 100 Illustrations, cloth gilt, 6s. 6d.

Extract from Preface.

"The main object is to acquaint young people with the structure and habits of the lower forms of life, and to do this in a more systematic way than is usual in ordinary works on natural history, and more simply than in text-books on zoology. For this reason I have adopted the title 'Life and Her Children,' to express the family bond uniting all living things, as we see the term Nature and her works, to embrace all organic and inorganic phenomena, and I have been more careful to sketch in bold outlines the leading features of each division than to dwell upon the minor differences by which it is separated into groups. I have made use of British examples in illustration wherever it was possible, and small specimens of most of the marine animals figured may have been found upon our coasts at low tide."

[Nearly ready.]

PRE-HISTORIC EUROPE:
A GEOLOGICAL SKETCH.

By JAMES GEIKIE, LL.D. F.R.S., &c.,
Of H.M. Geological Survey of Scotland, Author of 'The Great Ice Age.'

Medium 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations.

[In Press.]

INDEX ONOGRAPHIUS INDICUS:
A GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

By J. F. BARNES.

Super-royal 8vo. with 8 Coloured Maps.

The Index will embrace about 20,000 names of the most important places of India, spelt according to the authorized spelling, the tabulated statements give full information in a clear and concise form, of all the Districts and Native States throughout India, arranged under their respective Divisions and Provinces, while the Contents have been arranged under their respective Military Divisions and Districts.

The names of Geographical, Statistical, Political, and other information, up to date, thus put forward in a handy and convenient sized volume, and specially arranged with a view to easy reference, will supply a desideratum in Educational Establishments and in every Official and Private Library in India as well as in Europe.

INDO-ARYAN:

CONTRIBUTIONS TOWARDS THE ELUCIDATION OF THEIR ANCIENT AND MEDIEVAL HISTORY

By RAJENDRALALA MITRA, LL.D. C.I.E.

Contents.

Origin of Indian Architecture—Principles of Hindu Temple Architecture. Trees and Ornaments in Ancient India—Domestic Furniture and Vehicles in Ancient India—Jest in Ancient India—Spiritus Deities in Ancient India. A Picnic in Ancient India—An Imperial Festival in Ancient India. Human Sacrifice in Ancient India. Funeral Ceremony in Ancient India—On the Supposed Identity of the Greeks with the Varman of the Sanskrit Writings—On the Paks and Sena Dynasties of Bengal—Rajya Raja of Bihar and his Homonym—On the Identification of the Kshatriya of the Vedic Writings—Vestiges of the Kings of Gwalior—On the later Kings of Kanauj—On the Origin of the Hindu Language—On the Early Life of Asoka—The Heroes in Ancient India—The Primitive Aryans.

2 vols. demy 8vo.

TOURIST'S GUIDE THROUGH
LONDON:

Comprising Historical Summary, and Notices of the Principal Objects of Interest which may be Visited during a few days' Residence.
With List of Hotels, Theatres, Railway Stations, Churches, Exhibitions, and other Notes likely to be useful to the Stranger.

By the Rev. W. J. LOFTIE, B.A. F.R.S.,
Author of 'Round About London,' 'In and Out of London,' &c.

Fcap. 8vo. with Map, &c.

THE COAL-FIELDS OF GREAT BRITAIN

THEIR HISTORY, STRUCTURE, AND RESOURCES; WITH NOTICES OF THE COAL-FIELDS OF OTHER PARTS OF THE WORLD.

By EDWARD HULL, M.A. F.R.S.,
Director of the Geological Survey of Ireland, Author of 'The Physical Geology and Geography of Ireland.'

Fourth Edition, demy 8vo. with Map and Illustrations.

[In November.]

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross,
S.W.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1880.

CONTENTS.

TREVELYAN'S LIFE OF FOX ..	561
SINGLETON'S HISTORY OF ENGLISH PROCEDURE ..	563
GABRIEL BRILLANDER ..	564
NOVELS OF THE WEEK ..	567
CHRISTMAS BOOKS ..	567
LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ..	567-568
A TRANSLATION FROM ARISTOPHANES, PROF. FOWLER'S "LOXKE," GIBBS, MS. LETTERS OF SPINOZA IN THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S LIBRARY; NOTES FROM DUBLIN ..	568-570
LIBRARY Gossip ..	570
SCIENCE—BALL'S ELEMENTS OF ASTRONOMY; LIBRARY TABLE; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES, SCIENTIFIC; MEET- INGS, Gossip ..	572-574
FINE ARTS—STEVENSON'S HOUSE ARCHITECTURE; LI- BRARY TABLE; NUMISMATIC LITERATURE, COLOGNE CATHEDRAL; JAKOB BITTKE, Gossip ..	574-577
MUSIC—THE WEEK, Gossip ..	578-579
DRAMA—THE WEEK, Gossip ..	579-580

LITERATURE

The Early History of Charles James Fox. By George Otto Trevelyan, M.P. (Longmans & Co.)

THE name of Charles James Fox still sounds pleasantly in the ears of his countrymen. No English statesman ever left behind him a more genial memory. His faults, which were many, are half forgotten, and have been long since condoned, while his noble qualities are remembered and recorded. We care little for the gaming and the drinking as we call up the image of the Liberal leader, the impassioned orator, the true-hearted man, true alike to his country, his party, and his friends. And so his portrait may be found in every Whig house, and every recurring London season the members of the Fox Club dine together in memory of his political virtues and social gifts. Even men of the opposite party forget party rancour as they think of Fox, and Scott's fine tribute, which sums up his character so tenderly and so strongly, comes home to Tory and to Whig alike:—

For talents mourn, untimely lost,
When best employed, and wanted most;
Mourn genius high, and lore profound;
And wit that loved to play, not wound;
And all the reasoning powers divine,
To penetrate, resolve, combine;
And feelings keen and fancy's glow,—
They sleep with him who sleeps below.

Fox's death was felt as a personal grief by thousands, and Dr. Parr, writing under the title of Philopatris Varvicensis, published, in two volumes of selected eulogies and elegies, 'Characters of Charles James Fox.'

But seventy years have passed since then, and the details of Fox's life, which have begun to fade from the recollection of the old, have never been familiar to those of a younger generation. It is true that much may be gleaned from old memoirs, but such gleanings are hardly sufficient. It is also true that besides two other lives of Fox, which have now fallen into complete obscurity, there are Lord Russell's 'Life and Times of Fox,' in three volumes, and 'Memorials and Correspondence' in four more. These are valuable storehouses, and a new biographer of Fox must be largely indebted to them, but they are not remarkable from a literary point of view. Lord Russell was never an attractive author, and the dust has gathered soon and thickly on almost everything he wrote.

Certainly, then, there was room for a new life, which should once again recall the great statesman's name, and which should itself take rank as a remarkable and brilliant work. Mr. Trevelyan has succeeded in this effort, and though his judgment has in some instances been at fault, yet the evident pains and care that he has taken, and the many fine passages in the book, half disarm criticism, and tempt to almost exaggerated praise. The fact is that the world has of late years been so pestered with books calling themselves biographies, but which are really the mere materials for biography, that it is with a sense of relief that we come across an author who has himself undertaken the duty of selection and arrangement. Readers are so used to having entire letters, of every variety of merit and want of merit, given en masse, that they are grateful when only the essential passages are extracted, and the irrelevant matter excluded.

No one who reads this book is likely to tax Mr. Trevelyan with what he calls in Wilkes

"the hallucination which seduces public men to attempt the historian during their fragments of leisure, with about as reasonable a chance of success as would attend a land surveyor who turned landscape painter in the intervals of his business."

On the contrary, we shall rather be inclined to agree with Fox that literature is in every point of view a "preferable occupation to politics"—at least, it can happen but occasionally to any politician to achieve a success so direct and marked as Mr. Trevelyan has here won.

But we must now "hesitate dislike" as regards certain points in which Mr. Trevelyan seems to have been ill advised. In the first place his canvas appears to be too large. This volume contains 'The Early History of Charles James Fox,' and leaves off when he is but twenty-five years old. It is a volume of 540 pages, and yet it only takes the reader to the point Lord Russell reached in forty pages. At this rate, if Mr. Trevelyan continues the life—and it is to be presumed he will, though no preface or note gives a scrap of information—the entire work will be bulky beyond endurance, and may possibly sink by its own physical weight. Life is short, and after all there have been great men in the world besides Charles Fox, and the world has only a certain amount of time and energy to expend on any one of them. The fact is that Mr. Trevelyan has done somewhat too much. He has added the functions of the historian to those of the biographer, and the latter seems at times merged and lost in the former. There are long pages, indeed whole chapters, in which Fox scarcely appears at all. Although the ostensible subject of the book, he is overwhelmed in discussions on the state of the nation, the course of politics, and the social history of the times. The story of Wilkes is interesting to read, as it was important in fact, but we rather demur to a story which takes over a hundred pages to tell, and which draws us completely away from Fox himself. We could not, however, part with Mr. Trevelyan's third chapter, which by its condensed information and its brilliant style recalls the famous third chapter of his uncle's history, and gives a living picture of London society as it was when Fox first entered it. The fourth chapter, which is purely political, is not so good, and at times seems almost heavy; it might certainly have been shortened with advantage.

We have another flaw of a very different kind to mention, and after that we shall have nothing left but praise. We particularly dislike the way in which Mr. Trevelyan assumes, or appears to assume, that what is known to him is known to everybody else. He is for ever making allusions which half his readers will not in the least understand. Because he may have the gift of omniscience, it does not by any means follow that all the world possesses it. Most men of letters and, of course, Macaulay's typical schoolboy will be able to follow him, but every one is not equally instructed. The effect is to create a certain amount of very natural irritation. It is impossible to give more than one or two instances of what we mean, though the instances themselves are abundant enough. The Duke of Grafton had been good to Bloomfield, but Bloomfield is here only called "the author of 'The Farmer's Boy.'" A little further on and the reader has to fill in for himself three names as best he can: "The first amicable interview between the authors of the 'North Briton' and the 'False Alarm' forms the most entertaining page in the most entertaining of books." Among Fox's favourites in literature were "'The Winter's Tale' and 'The Maid of Honour,' 'The Rape of the Lock' and 'The Flower and the Leaf.'" We wonder how many of Mr. Trevelyan's readers know anything about 'The Maid of Honour.' Here is a still greater puzzle: "The assailant of the Duke of Portland was the Scotchman of Goldsmith's 'Haunch of Venison,' who wrote 'Cinna' and owned to 'Panurge.'" The next problem is easier, but it is certain that only the more classically educated of Mr. Trevelyan's readers will understand to what he alludes. Charles Fox had made a speech after an attack had been made upon him by a London mob, and we are told "those who love to hear a great orator on the stimulating topic of his own personal wrongs would exchange the Pro domo sua, and almost the 'Midias' itself, for a sample of such eloquence inspired by such an injury." In the next instance we confess that we are absolutely without light, and can only hope that Mr. Trevelyan's other readers are more fortunate: "At one-and-twenty he [Fox] had already been dubbed 'the flower of oratory' by a poet too thick-witted to do anything but reproduce the accepted judgment of the world." The next puzzle is easy enough, but what need was there for making a puzzle at all? Horne (afterwards Horne-Tooke) received from Mr. Tooke "the suggestion of that affected title by which, much better than by its contents, his book is known." And now we have done with fault-finding and may give ourselves to the enjoyment of this delightful volume.

Mr. Trevelyan begins his story with an account of old Lord Holland, Charles Fox's father. He was a statesman to whom, if to any, might be applied the well-known lines of Wordsworth—

Whom there were none to praise,
And very few to love;

but among those few were his own family. He might have been faithless to his friends, false to his party, a place-seeker and a tuft-hunter, greedy and unscrupulous, but in his own home he was always the most tender of husbands and the most indulgent of fathers. He might be accused of embezzling money of the State, but at least he was lavish of it in supplying the wants and fancies of his sons. His wife was the daughter of the Duke of Richmond; it had been a runaway match, and it caused much scandal at the time, but a happier marriage there never was.

Charles Fox, who was Lord Holland's third son, was born in 1749. He was the most engaging of children, and his father spoiled him in a careless, reckless way, which would have utterly ruined a less noble nature. One story is told of his having, when a child, declared his intention to destroy a watch. "Well," said Lord Holland, "if you must, I suppose you must." Charles Fox's mother was not unnaturally anxious about her boy, and one day, when expostulating with her husband (Mr. Trevelyan has omitted the curious anecdote, which may be found in Lord Holland's 'Memoirs of the Whig Party'), she said:—

"I have been this morning with Lady Hester Pitt, and there is little William Pitt not eight years old, and really the cleverest child I ever saw, and brought up so strictly, and so proper in his behaviour, that, mark my words, that little boy will be a thorn in Charles's side as long as he lives."

Charles was sent to Eton before he was ten years old, and had for tutor old Dr. Francis, the translator of Horace and the father of Philip Francis, for whom Lord Holland afterwards procured a clerkship in the Secretary of State's office, thus securing for himself (as Mr. Trevelyan rashly believes) immunity from the virulence of Junius in later years. Charles Fox was at the ripe age of fourteen taken off to the Continent by his father, and there initiated into every form of dissipation. At Spa he was sent to the gaming tables with his pockets full of gold, and at Paris he received lessons in other forms of precocious profligacy. He returned to Eton, and thence he went to Oxford. He was dissolute and apparently idle, but he had astonishing power of acquiring knowledge. He was already a good French scholar, and when he again went abroad in 1767 he wrote to his friend Fitzpatrick:—

"For God's sake learn Italian as fast as you can, if it be only to read Ariosto. There is more good poetry in Italian than in all other languages that I understand put together."

Poetry in every language was dear to Fox. His love of the classic poets began early and lasted to the end, and the best poets of his own land were equally loved by him. We have spoken of him as "apparently idle," but he never tried to do anything without throwing himself heart and soul into the task. He had that infinite faculty of taking pains which some men have considered to be genius itself. Mr. Trevelyan tells us:—

"His verses of society were polished with a care which their merit not unfrequently repaid. He ranked high among chess-players, and was constantly and eagerly extending his researches into the science of the game. When Secretary of State he did something to improve his hand by taking lessons and writing copies like a schoolboy. At the head of his own table he helped the turbot and the fowls according to the directions of a treatise on carving, which lay beside him on the cloth. As soon as he had finally determined to settle in the country he devoted himself to the art of gardening, with a success to which St. Anne's Hill still bears agreeable testimony. He could hold his own at tennis after he was well on in years, and of a bulk proportioned to his weight in the balance of political power; and when an admiring spectator asked him how he contrived to return so many of the difficult balls, 'It is,' he replied, 'because I am a very painstaking man.'

But, unhappily for himself, Fox had energy for what was bad as well as for what was good. Of good birth, singularly handsome, and with the most charming manners, the spoiled child of Holland House soon became the spoiled child of London society. Every exclusive circle was open to him, and the more exclusive the circle, the heavier was the gambling and the betting. His father supplied him with almost unlimited money, and in three years he had managed to throw away 140,000*l.*, of which a large proportion had been lost (as is now believed, unfairly lost) at play.

At the age of only nineteen Charles Fox was returned as member for Midhurst, and then began that remarkable career which was to make his name memorable in the history of his country. That a boy of nineteen should be returned to Parliament, and that his seat should be unchallenged, seems strange enough; but these were the bad times in our parliamentary records, when every abuse flourished. Never had there been greater venality and corruption. Boroughs were openly bought and sold, and the Corporation of Oxford refused to return a candidate unless he pledged himself to assist in wiping out their city debt. Scarcely less openly were members themselves bought and sold, and few consciences were fastidious enough to resist the attractions of a sinecure or a pension. Mr. Trevelyan gives many curious details on this subject, and indeed there are few passages in the book more carefully and cleverly written.

When Fox entered Parliament politics seemed always to be taking a personal colour. The king would both reign and govern, and the intrigues, the rivalries, and the jealousies of individual statesmen reached an extraordinary pitch. Of party loyalty there was very little, and, as Lord Russell says,

"the cohesion of politicians, in itself loose and slight, became the sport of interested cabal, of sudden resentment and discordant temper."

Mr. Trevelyan adds:—

"The good attached themselves to a high-handed leader, and the dishonest to an unscrupulous one; while the names of Whig and Tory had altogether lost their deeper meaning, and had ceased to be valued even as convenient badges."

The one leading idea which possessed Charles Fox on entering Parliament was to make his father's quarrels his own, and to treat as enemies all those—and they were somewhat numerous—who disliked Lord Holland. As the best way of showing his filial devotion he joined the ministerial ranks, and it is strange to remember that all his early speeches were intended to shackle the freedom of the press and to restrain the liberty of the subject.

The first important debate in which he took a part was in reference to the expulsion of Wilkes. As we have already hinted, Mr. Trevelyan has treated the story of Wilkes at far too great a length. No doubt the question was an important one, especially in its after results, and it is a pleasure to meet with a writer who, like Mr. Trevelyan, is just to Wilkes; but the immediate bearing of the matter on Fox's life was but slight and incidental. Fox spoke twice against Wilkes with vigour and with insolence enough, as Horace Walpole has reported. He was pleased to consider the contest as one on which all that was respectable was on one side, and all Billingsgate and Wapping on the other. No wonder that Burke answered him with a strong rebuke, and no wonder that old Lord Holland was delighted to hear that his second speech especially, "all offhand, all argumentative," was "excessively well indeed." Fox was already showing his powers. He was, as Macaulay once said, "a great orator, but the great debater." He seemed to see by intuition the weak part of an adversary's guard, and where to thrust most strongly and how to parry most adroitly. And yet at present all his sympathies were on the side of power and of prerogative. How doubly formidable he would be when he should fight as the champion of civil and religious liberty!

On the 28th of February, 1770, after a speech in which he had half annihilated Wedderburn, Fox was appointed a Junior Lord of the Admiralty. He was a somewhat dangerous ally, as he was singularly apt to take lines of his own, and he must have caused Lord North many anxious moments. Two years, indeed, had hardly passed before, to every one's surprise and his father's annoyance, Charles Fox made a strong attack upon Lord North, and then immediately threw up his office. He—this young gentleman of twenty-three—seems to have considered that Lord North did not treat him with sufficient confidence and attention. But he had another reason for his conduct, as he explained in a letter to Lord Ossory:—

"I should not have resigned at this moment merely on account of my complaints against Lord North, if I had not determined to vote against this Royal Family Bill, which in place I should be ashamed of doing. Upon the whole I am convinced I did right, and I think myself very safe from going into opposition, which is the only danger."

But if Charles Fox were a dangerous friend he would be a still more formidable foe, and ministers became uneasy at his secession. It was true, as Mr. Trevelyan says, that "when a matter which had not yet been developed into an article of party faith was before the House, no man could predict anything with regard to him, except that he was quite sure to speak." But now the chances were that he would generally be speaking against his old colleagues. He had already shown himself in favour of Sir William Meredith's motion for an inquiry into the criminal code, and he had uttered a few words against the imposition of religious tests. What if he should go further still? It was no doubt difficult to live with him, but it might be impossible to live without him. Lord North made him the most profuse apologies; Lord Temple tried to persuade the king to give up the Marriage Bill altogether; and Lord Mansfield actually struck out the most objectionable clause. But Charles Fox was inexorable.

Indeed, this Marriage Bill was peculiarly hateful to all Fox's family. They had neither forgotten nor forgiven the way in which Lady Caroline Lennox's marriage with Henry Fox had been spoken of, and the insults which they both had suffered, and now, because the Duke of Cumberland had chosen to marry Mrs. Horton (why does not Mr. Trevelyan give her name?), and the Duke of Gloucester had won as his bride the beautiful Maria Waldegrave, the king was to keep the making of all royal marriages in his own hands. No one of royal blood was to ally himself to any one without the sovereign's sanction, and instead of Love ruling the court, the court was, in a very literal way, to rule love and marriage according to its own caprice and fancy. Charles Fox's family feelings, certain sentiments of gallantry, and a desire to show his power and independence, all prompted him to do his utmost to prevent the Bill from becoming law, but he not unnaturally failed, though by a majority wonderfully small. It was in one of his speeches on this Royal Marriage Bill that Fox made use of an expression which has since become proverbial, "The glorious uncertainty which always attends the law."

Before a year had passed fresh efforts were made to restore Fox to his old allegiance. The Government was reconstructed, and Fox, who had never really joined the Opposition, was prevailed upon to accept a post at the Treasury. But Fox was untamed as ever, and before long he had led Lord North into a false position and a minority by a speech which he made, urging that Woodfall the printer should be committed to Newgate. The king expressed himself as "greatly incensed at the presumption of Charles Fox," and declared that "that young man has so thoroughly cast off every principle of common honour and honesty that he must become as contemptible as he is odious." A few days afterwards Charles Fox was dismissed from his post, and his dismissal was conveyed to him in the following note from Lord North:—

"His Majesty has thought proper to order a new Commission of Treasury to be made out, in which I do not see your name.—NORTH"

The affair created some astonishment and more amusement.

"Charles," said George Selwyn, "for the future I will eat salt fish on the day you were turned out. You shall be my Charles the Martyr now, for I am tired of your great-grandfather, the old one. His head can never be sewed on again; but, as yours can be, I will stick to you."

Fox had now left the Tory party, or rather the old corrupt Court party, for good and all. He had (in the last words of this 'Early History')

"dissolved his partnership with Sandwich and Wedderburn, and united himself to Burke and Chatham and Savile in their crusade against the tyranny which was trampling out English liberty in the colonies and the corruption which was undermining it at home."

This short sketch of the political life of Fox, so far as Mr. Trevelyan has as yet taken us, would give an incomplete idea of the book, if we did not make reference also to the various episodes which give colour and reality to the picture. The description of life in London while Fox was sowing his wild oats is admirable in its way. Not less good is the account of old Lord Holland at King's Gate,

"training ivy over his turrets and cloisters; mounting cannons along the cliff; raffling for statues of Flora and Bacchus and busts of Pericles and Crispina; excavating burial mounds; rearing a pillar to commemorate a battle between Danes and Saxons which in all likelihood never had been fought; and erecting a tower in 'the Roman style' in honour of an anti-Wilkite Lord Mayor of London, who had probably earned his monument by throwing cold water on the demand for an inquiry into the Paymaster's accounts."

Then there is a very interesting account of the Feathers Tavern petition, of Theophilus Lindsey's secession from the Church of England, and of the formation of the Lady Huntingdon connexion.

We will now conclude by quoting a striking passage, showing Charles Fox's love of the classics:—

"Next to Homer among the ancients,—and even above Homer, at the period to which this chapter refers,—Fox placed Virgil, whose pathos (so he declared) surpassed that of all poets of every age and nation, with the single exception which, as an Englishman with the Elizabethan drama at his fingers' ends, he somewhat unwillingly considered himself bound to make. 'It is on that account,' he continued, 'that I rank him so very high; for surely to excel in that style which speaks to the heart is the greatest of all excellence.' His favourite example of the quality that he admired in the 'Æneid' was the farewell with which the aged Evander sent Pallas forth to his last battle. The beauty of this passage, in his years of vigour, Fox was always ready to expound and assert; and, when his time came to die, he solemnized his parting with the nephew whom he loved as a son by bidding the young man repeat aloud, and then repeat once more, lines which, even at a less trying moment, few who have ever cried over a book can read without tears."

History of Procedure in England from the Norman Conquest.—The Norman Period (1066–1204). By Melville Madison Bigelow. (Macmillan & Co.)

WHAT, it may be asked, is the use of a book upon early English legal procedure? The question is one to which no complete answer could be given, just as none could be given to the inquiry, What is the use of expeditions to the North Pole? It would be easy to show that Mr. Bigelow's researches throw light on points of constitutional as well as purely legal history, but they also serve purposes which neither the author himself nor any other living man could point out. Every addition to knowledge not only satisfies the curiosity of some class of inquirers, but becomes a link in the chain of discovery. Not until Mr. Bigelow's work has been sifted by a succession of scholars, and its results compared with those of other and future writers, can its full value be ascertained.

After some account of the Danelag, or

Danish law, existing in parts of England from the ninth until the middle of the twelfth century at least, Mr. Bigelow gives an account of the different English courts during the Norman period—the Great Council, the King's Court, the Court Christian or Ecclesiastical Court, the Court of the Justices in Eyre, the Exchequer, the County Court, the Burghmot, the Hundred Court, the Manor Court, and the Forest Court. The author then traces the procedure in a cause through its various stages, the writ process, summons, distraint, "the issue term," "the medial judgment," "the trial term." With respect to the writ, the point of most general interest brought out by Mr. Bigelow is that sometimes a person was able to obtain from the king at the outset a writ in the nature of final process, like a modern writ of execution, without a trial before the courts:—

"The practice of granting writs of execution without trial in the courts appears to have been common, so as to have been one of the chief grievances of the baronage and commonalty against King John; resulting, with other like influences, in the article of Magna Charta by which it was provided that the king should not disseise or imprison his free subjects unless by the legal judgment of their peers or the law of the land."

Rather inconveniently for the reader, Mr. Bigelow habitually introduces technical terms and phrases, sometimes invented by himself, without explanation, as in the case of "the issue term," to which a chapter is devoted. In a note, however, to one page he states that the word "term" (terminus) commonly meant in the twelfth century simply a day appointed, rather than the general session of the court. The "issue term" thus denotes the period of procedure when the pleadings were conducted to a definite issue to be tried. "The medial or proof judgment" determined the mode of trial; adjudging, according to law, whether it was to be by compurgation, by witnesses, by charters, by record, by the ordeal, by the duel, or by inquisition. The mode of trial was a matter of vital importance to the parties. For instance, if compurgation was the appointed mode, the party brought forward, if he could, the requisite number of persons to swear, not to the facts, but to his credibility, and so proved his case. If, again, trial by witnesses was appointed, the party on whom it was incumbent to adduce the testimony made good his case if the witnesses he brought forward at "the trial term" were competent, and swore to the facts. They were not cross-examined, nor was any counter-evidence adduced, yet their testimony was taken as a verdict, so that they were triers, not mere witnesses in the modern sense.

On the subject of distraint some of Mr. Bigelow's propositions may give rise to controversy. Some of his expressions might seem to indicate an intention to refute a theory put forth by Sir Henry Maine in his 'Lectures on the Early History of Institutions,' while, on the other hand, the silence with respect not only to that distinguished writer's name, but to some of his strongest and most interesting arguments, which surprises an English reader of Mr. Bigelow's pages, would rather convey an impression that, by some accident or oversight, he had not looked into Sir Henry Maine's two lectures on primitive legal remedies. "There is no greater mistake," according to Mr. Bigelow, "than to suppose that private distraint as it has existed in modern times in England and in America—distraint made without judicial permission—is archaic, as having been transmitted in its present form from the period of supposed early Anglo-Saxon law."

In support of this position he urges that it is certain that, from the time when the Germanic nations first appear in legal history, distraint was lawful only when effected under judicial authority, the earliest of the barbaric codes declaring that if any one should distraint his debts without authority of a judge he should lose his debt. Sir Henry Maine, on the other hand, pointing out some conspicuous features of likeness between the ancient Irish law of distress and English law, observes that the great resemblance of all, and the common point of dissimilarity from the most ancient of the leges barbarorum, lies in the fact that the Irish procedure of distraint, like the English, requires neither assistance nor permission from any court of justice. In all the Teutonic bodies of custom, except the English and the Lombardic, some judicial person or body must have been applied to before proceeding to seizure of goods. In English law, on the contrary, seizure is completed before authority is called in, and the Irish law has the same peculiarity. Nor are these two bodies of law without analogy in this respect in Roman law, as Sir Henry Maine remarks. The pignoris capio was at first a wholly extra-judicial proceeding. The person who proceeded by it seized, in certain cases, the goods of a fellow citizen against whom he had a claim, but against whom he had instituted no suit.

The question is by no means one respecting a mere technical point in early law; it involves the whole theory which Sir Henry Maine has so luminously set forth respecting the nature and significance of the forms of archaic legal procedure. They grew out of self-redress, for when judicial arbitration first intervened, it did so only to the extent and in the way of regulating the proceedings that had been customary before its intervention. Men had been used to associate redress with the seizure of goods by the claimant, and when at length regular tribunals were instituted, they followed in this respect the ancient custom, though by degrees they interposed restrictions and brought the procedure under their control. Mr. Bigelow himself would probably not directly dispute this theory, for he observes that "the time, perhaps, was when non-judicial distress was exercised among the Germanic peoples, but that time was prehistoric."

When once courts had taken into their own hands the regulation of procedure, the process of distraint became in many cases a perilous one. If a man deviated by a hands-breadth from the prescribed course, he subjected himself to severe penalties. As Prof. Bohm puts it, the power of seizing a man's property was a two-edged sword, by which you might bring your adversary to the ground, but ran great risk of hurting yourself. The case of Ailward, which Mr. Bigelow cites in support of the proposition that "extra-judicial distress for debt, not arising between lord and man, did not exist in England in the time of Henry II." is in point. Ailward is creditor of a recalcitrant debtor, and determines to secure himself. For this purpose he goes to the house of his debtor, and, tearing off the lock, takes possession of an auger and some gloves as security for the debt. Being discovered he flees, is pursued and captured by the debtor, and charged with stealing before the county court at Bedford, where the ordeal of water is adjudged, and the result is conviction and mutilation.

The field of investigation in which Mr. Bigelow works is one in which, apart from its interest to himself, he can earn only the applause of a very limited class of readers, and he amply merits that recompense.

Memoir of Gabriel Beranger and his Labours in the Cause of Irish Art and Antiquities from 1760 to 1780. By Sir William Wilde, M.D. With Illustrations. (Dublin, Gill & Son.)

THIS volume was begun by Sir William Wilde, but his death intervened, and the conclusion has been written by his widow. It was compiled for the Journal of the Royal Archaeological Association of Ireland, in which it was printed in instalments from January, 1871, to October, 1876, when the final portion appeared from the pen of Lady Wilde. Gabriel Beranger, a Frenchman by descent, settled in Ireland and left behind him a number of sketches, the value of which, artistic and archaeological, is enhanced by the fact that many of the buildings represented have disappeared; for instance, the Round Tower in the city of Dublin. This is supposed to have been built in Danish times, and towards the repairing of it we are glad to find that Dean Swift contributed. However, it became so dangerous after a great storm, which shook it in October, 1775, that it had to be taken down. Sir William Wilde's theory of the origin of the round towers does not appear to have greatly differed from that of Dr. Petrie, and he has been thoughtful enough to give his readers what Gerald the Welshman said of them in the twelfth century, a description which is remarkably short and accurate, but seldom heeded by the more wordy dreamers who have undertaken to wrap these structures in mystery: "Turres ecclesiasticas, quæ, more patriæ, arcæ sunt et altæ, nec non et rotundæ."

Gabriel Beranger was a most painstaking artist, we are told, and a faithful delineator of antiquarian remains, and no one could better draw an old castle, a cromlech, or a round tower, but his landscapes were not equally good, as he failed in trees and green fields. He was no happier with the animals he attempted, with the exception that he could reproduce Phil Purcell's pig to the life, before Tonkeys and Berkshires had as yet improved the Tinnies of former days.

It deserves to be noticed that the artist was not to be led astray by the mistaken theory of the antiquaries about the nature of the old monuments usually called cromlechs, as the following extract, which is of considerable archaeological interest, and therefore given in Beranger's own words, will serve to show:—

"June 23rd, Mr. Bigary not wishing to ride, I went with Mr. Irwin and his son on horseback to Knocknareagh mountain,—seen on the lands of Carrowmore, in the space of a square a quarter of a mile, eighteen circles of huge stones, some with their Cromlechs in the centre standing, some down, but the stones lying on the spot; designed and planned the largest one. Sure it is that they are not Temples, nor the Cromlechs altars, as the antiquarians pretend, but burial places of chieftains. These eighteen together (I think) settle [sic] the matter, and prove this place to have been either a cemetery or the spot where some famous battle was fought, and the heroes which fell to have been interred on the field where they were slain; but I believe, if some of the antiquarians had heard of eighteen being together in one spot, they would not have called them Temples."

Beranger and his companions seem to have had a jovial life of it among the peasantry in different parts of the island, at a time when the relations between landlord and tenant were rather different from what they are now. The artist's notes appear to supply materials for a very curious study of manners. The author gives some extracts, but our space forbids our reproducing them at length; let the following suffice as a specimen:—

"Saw distinctly the mountain of Croagh Patrick, in the county of Mayo, distance sixty miles. Went in every house, but could not converse with the females, as they only speak Irish; remembered the Irish phrase I formerly learned of Torum pogue Calinogue, which I repeated to every girl, who immediately came to kiss me; how unfortunate it was I could ask no more!..... After dinner Mr. Irwin sent notice that we should embark; accordingly, all the inhabitants—men, women, and children, not one excepted—gathered round the door of our barn, and everything being ready, we walked out, followed by the people, and went to a small plain near the creek where our vessel was moored; there Mr. Irwin made them sit down in a semicircle on the grass, and having opened a packet, distributed 1½ yard of fine broad ribbon to every female, whom we embraced at the time; after that each male and female got four feet long of roll tobacco, and a pair of beads each. After which he ordered one of the casks of whiskey to be broached, and be distributed round by glasses. When done we took our leave, embracing again the females, and walked to the vessel upon a pier of natural rock, followed by all the people. When we banded our sails, they saluted us by three cheers, which we returned; they continued looking as long as they could."

This volume is pleasant and instructive reading, and the antiquary will probably not feel disposed, when he reaches Lady Wilde's part of the work, to question too closely her right to take this opportunity of saying so much about her husband, who was, in regard to Irish antiquities, a later edition of Gabriel Beranger so far as the altered manners of the middle of the nineteenth century would allow. Among other things, what Lady Wilde says with regard to her husband having been the first to direct attention to the crannogs, or lake dwellings, is highly interesting; she goes on to say it was an essay of his on the subject that gave the impetus to the works of Keller and others on the lake dwellings of Switzerland, and it must have been very gratifying to Sir William to find such men as the late Prof. Troyon, of Geneva, come over to Ireland to study the Irish crannogs. By the way, we should like to call the attention of Lady Wilde and of Irish archaeologists generally to the word crannog, the literal meaning of which is a wooden platform, from the Irish crann, wood or timber. If they persist in the silly fashion of giving a final e to a word which is not entitled by reason of origin or pronunciation to such an encumbrance, and continue to write it crannage, they must not consider it a wrong done to Ireland when English archaeologists make it into cranneg, as we have often heard it pronounced.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

The Head of Medusa. By George Fleming. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

Honor. By Miss E. M. Alford. 3 vols. (Tinsley Brothers.)

The Lady Resident. By Hamilton Page. 3 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

Freville Chase. By E. H. Dering. 2 vols. (Burns & Oates.)

John Inglesant: a Romance. (Birmingham, Cornish Brothers.)

Or "George Fleming's" previous novels we have spoken with qualified praise, and we can do no more with respect to his latest literary venture. There are no great faults and no great merits; in fact, the book occupies a fairly good place among second-class novels. The author has evidently little talent for the construction of a plot, neither does he attempt to excite the reader by any sensational incidents. There is a certain amount of ability displayed in the analysis of character and motives; there is also a warm sympathy with the beauties of both nature and art. Whether writing about Egypt, Palestine, or Italy, Mr. Fleming always contrives to produce a vivid local colouring. Finally, the book is thoroughly pure, no small merit in these days. Nevertheless, there is a monotony about the novel which is slightly soporific. The author is evidently well acquainted with Italy, but likes it far better than he does its inhabitants; in fact, he implies that Italy would be a charming country were it not for the Italians. Under these circumstances he should not have made his heroine marry a most offensive Roman count. We have only one remark to add, which is that it is difficult to discover any justification for the title of the novel.

There are some pretty conceits in 'Honor' which make it readable; and for the style of its narrator there is at least this to be said, that she makes no pretensions, does not imitate any one, and is not more affected than is natural in a writer scarcely strong enough to feel her strength. Miss Alford has an ideal—perhaps two ideals—and she works at them with simple and unsuspecting fervour; not growing tired of them, as the manner is with some writers, and crowding in fresh characters and lines of action in order to maintain her own interest in her work. A little less timidity and a little more painstaking in the polishing of sentences would have enabled her to write a better book, and may yet cause her to improve on her present effort. It is certainly worth her while to try. Honor Rowe is a delightful damsel, in spite of her tendency to talk good or grand on occasions, and the young man who is introduced to her in the first chapter and carries her off in the last is well fitted to reward her after her deserts. The course of their love is smooth and easy, and their secret is so well kept from them both by Miss Alford, that neither detects the state of the other's heart until the story is drawing to its close. The author plays with them both as though she had a couple of mice leg-bound by a couple of silken threads; when she slackens they approach each other, and when she pulls they scuttle back; and vast is the entertainment of the thread-puller. If the reader will but stand by her side, and enter with simple relish into the charm of the situation, he will not find that his self-illusion has been thrown away.

'The Lady Resident' has practically no plot, and can scarcely be styled a novel, but the entirely imaginary picture of life as it might be in a university town of which a ladies' college was a leading feature affords the author scope for delineations of character and a great deal of amusing dialogue. Bertie Ravenshaw is a high-spirited and warm-hearted girl with intellectual aspirations, the desire of whose young life is the freedom and opportunities of cultivation afforded by college life. She is supported by her father, a shrewd but kindly observer of his favourite daughter's character, and thwarted by an acute but commonplace mother, between whom and her daughter there is no lack of affection, but a hopeless disparity of ideals:—

"Mrs. Ravenshaw always said that her tastes were simple. She liked a room to be perfectly square, and to have cupboards on each side of the fireplace. The wall-paper she liked with a white ground and plenty of it, and the Brussels carpet must invariably have a drab ground and be well covered with bright flowers. These points conceded, she left the rest to Mr. Ravenshaw and his whims. But Mr. Ravenshaw seldom conceded so much."

As that gentleman remarks to his wife,—

"Submission, my dear, is the strong point of your character; and a woman who knows how to yield is in the end always victorious."

Some of the best bits in the book are the passages of arms between this astute husband and his reluctantly submissive wife. When poor Bertie's faith in her lover (for love intervenes in the academic groves of Minster) is ridely shaken by the arrival of a fierce woman with a terrible story, Mrs. Ravenshaw draws upon her powers of anecdote to cauterize the wound:—

"And so," continued Mrs. Ravenshaw, "every one of the seven children met its death on that very night that he left his wife and sailed for America with Miss Higgins. The wife, poor thing, either fell or threw herself into the dock and was drowned. Two children were scalded to death in the bath; one caught fire and was burnt to a cinder—literally to a cinder; one was looking out of the window, crying for its mother, it overbalanced itself, and fell dead with a fractured skull; whilst the three that rushed headlong downstairs were all taken up dead at the bottom of that long flight of stone steps. Really, my dear, you seem to me not to attend to what I am saying!"

The conversations with her friend the Lady Resident are more to Bertie's taste. The society of Minster, lively in itself, is rendered more agreeable by the presence of Prof. Goldworthy Fynes, a Comtist, "a terrible sort of man and not at all original," who nevertheless forms a good foil to the practical ladies who endeavour to understand him. Between him and the Lady Resident, whom he seeks to convert, there occur several suggestive dialogues, but perhaps young Mrs. Brownlow, whose flippancy most distresses him, is a more troublesome proselyte. The lecture on the 'Historical Attitude of Woman' which the professor has the hardihood to address to an audience of more or less aspiring ladies is very lifelike:—

"One of the most original and fundamental doctrines of the new theory is," said the professor, "the following, which, in order to impress it deeply upon the minds of those I see before me, I will place upon the black board": and he wrote again in large and irregular characters, 'L'Homme doit nourrir la Femme.' Mrs. Brownlow gazed on the inscription with interest, and whispered to her cousin: 'Could almost believe I had seen it somewhere before, dear, couldn't you!'"

So discursive a book is somewhat hard to estimate, but, in spite of inequalities in construction, it has the merit of being eminently readable. The author has a keen eye for modern varieties of crotcheters, and is as sympathetic with the simplicity of children—a combination which shows some range of descriptive ability.

Mr. Dering's object in writing 'Freville Chase' was not so much to present to the world a good novel as to teach a good lesson. The higher motives of action which he says he has tried to express in it must be such as animate the pious Catholic who is convinced that Catholicism is the only true religion. Mr. Dering says very clearly that even Anglicanism is to be condemned altogether. There cannot, he thinks, be more than one form of religion, and the truth is only to be found at Rome. Clearly Mr. Dering does not come before his readers to bring peace, but a sword. With the proverbial seal of a convert, he can find nothing to be said for what he has left behind. The way is but too clear before him. 'Freville Chase,' however, though its real object must be more or less to further the author's religious views, stands before the reviewer, at all events, on its merits as a novel. It is not a particularly fascinating book. The story, stripped of the embroidery of its purpose, is commonplace enough, and Mr. Dering, in keeping his object in view, naturally forgets what is due to the work of art by which he desires to attract his readers. Very much of the conversation, though bright and clever and showing a good deal of experience of the world, leads to nothing, and does not help to advance the story or add much to the portraiture of the characters. It displays, however, though the display is often out of place, Mr. Dering's considerable and varied knowledge. Architecture, Italian literature, country life and society are familiar to him, and if he only had the gift of telling a story his many other gifts would go far to adorn his novel and make his lessons palatable.

'John Inglesant' affords a capital instance of the way in which inexperienced authors miss success by trying too much at one time. Mr. Courthouse is a man of wide reading and of many accomplishments; he has travelled much and seen many things; he has kept his eyes open, and has wide sympathies; he has a genuine love for nature and for art, and that gift than which, Horace says, the gods could bestow no greater—sapere, et fari ut possit qua sentiat. But few will read his book through; it will not enjoy anything approaching to the attention or circulation it deserves; it will fall flat even upon the more thoughtful and cultured of the reading public, for one reason which will be strong enough to damn it—it is much too long. Nevertheless, 'John Inglesant' has high merits, and if it be the author's first publication we shall hear of him again. The son of "a shrewd lawyer, a Papist at heart," at fourteen John Inglesant was so profound a Greek scholar that he "knew nearly by heart" the 'Phædo' of Plato, and yet was as vigorous and courtly a young gentleman as father could wish his son to be. At this point in his career he is committed to the training of Father St. Clare, "a Jesuit missionary priest, who travelled in England under the name of Mr. Hall." The Jesuit is, of course, "a profound scholar, . . . a man of science, . . . of elegant and fascinating manners," in fact, an Admirable Crichton, as the Jesuits of romance always must be and always are. Under the astute guidance and unbounded influence of such a preceptor, "Johnny" grows up into a perfectly trained and devoted pupil, ready to sell himself body and soul to the Jesuit cause. Mr. Courthouse evidently believes that such unattached emissaries are wandering about the world, doing the devil's work, still, and that there always has been a small army of amateur conspirators vaguely plotting for the supremacy of the Pope at the bidding of the normal Father St. Clare. When "Johnny"—for he continues to be "Johnny" at intervals till the end of the book—is ripe for it, he becomes a page in the household of Queen Henrietta Maria, and afterwards Esquire of the Body to Charles I. Agitated by doubts and questionings, anxiously fingering at the old Gordian knots,

Unskilled to sunder and too weak to cleave, he is brought into relations with most of the notable personages of that romantic period, when our old English constitution and life and habits and convictions were all breaking up, and resolving themselves into new shapes and new combinations. It is while describing all this in dramatic fashion, making his hero half showman, half actor, in the various scenes, that the author's knowledge of the time appears to greatest advantage. John Inglesant has long interviews with Hobbes one day, with Crashaw another; he attends a science at an astrologer's; he goes down to Little Gidding, and is brought under the influence of Nicholas Ferrar and the saintly life of his strange household; he comes across Quakers and Puritans with extravagant creeds; he fights for the king and is wounded, is used by his Jesuit friends as an agent in the business of Lord Glamorgan's Irish plot, narrowly misses being hung, gets thrown into the Tower, and lies there till his old tutor, the inevitable Jesuit, manages to get his release. It is easy to see that here are abundant materials for a good "romance" if Mr. Courthouse had stopped at this point; but, like a fluent preacher who must needs deliver his soul, he has only half done with us when we are expecting the benediction. At this point the story takes a turn, and the scene changes: Johnny Inglesant is sent wandering through the cities of Italy; he moves among the historic personages of Italian courts, is plotted against and plots spite of himself, is present at Rome when Innocent X. dies, and is even a subordinate actor at the Conclave which elected Fabio Chigi to the Papacy as Alexander VII.; he comes under the influence of Molinos and the Quietists, as he had already come under that of Serenus Cressy; but gradually his courtly life makes him less of a pietist and more of a man of the world. He is fascinated by an Italian lady, whom he eventually marries; he loses his wife and child, and ends by settling down as a melancholy English gentleman, who accepts for want of anything better the compromise offered by the Church of England. In this second half of the book the author displays at least as intimate an acquaintance with Italian history in the seventeenth century as in the first half he had shown with the history of England; and the descriptions of the old cities, of Italian manners, and of the byways of contemporary controversies and intrigues are sometimes characterized by rare pictorial ability and a certain subtlety of thought and expression which only the man of genius can attain. But everywhere diffuseness is the writer's bane. There are elaborate speeches extending over four or five pages; there are pictures of scenery which would be too long for one of Mr. Murray's handbooks; there are explanations which will weary the most patient reader. Life is too short for all this dwelling upon minutiae; and yet there are some noble passages in the book. The account of Little Gidding is admirably done; the ghastly description of Naples during the plague is extremely powerful; the scene in which Mary Colet refuses to marry the hero, that in which he spares his brother's murderer, and that in which punishment overtakes the wretched man at the hands of a ruffian whom he came to slay are finely conceived and skilfully executed; but the prodigality in the method of treatment, the peculiar luxuriance of style which yet is not verbosity, the habit of saying too much and of pointing out too many things, render it extremely difficult to extract any passage which would do the author justice or give the reader a fair idea of the merits and defects of a literary effort which is far too ambitious to bespoken of without respect, and which yet misses the success that so gifted a writer had some claim to expect for the pains he has bestowed upon his book. We give the following as one of the few passages of moderate length which are at once quotable and fairly representative of the author's manner:—

"You, and natures like yours, make this great error, you are moralizing and speculating upon what life ought to be, instead of taking it as it is, and in the mean time it slips by you, and you are nothing, and life is gone. I have heard, and you doubtless, in a fine concert of viola, extemporary descant upon a thorough bass in the Italian manner, when each performer, in turn, plays such variety of descant, in concordance to the bass, as his skill and present invention may suggest to him. In this manner of play the consonances invariably fall true upon a given note, and every succeeding note of the ground is met, now in the unison or octave, now in the concords, preserving the melody throughout by the laws of motion and sound. I have thought that this is life. To a solemn bass of mystery, and of the unseen, each man plays his own descant, as his taste or fate suggests, but this manner of play is so governed and controlled, by what seems a fatal necessity, that all melts into a species of harmony: and even the very discords and dissonances, the wild passions and deeds of men, are so attuned and adjusted, that without them the entire piece would be incomplete. In this way I look upon life as a spectacle, in theatro ludicæ. Have you sat so long that you are tired already of the play?"

CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

- The Hair of Kilfinnan.* By W. H. G. Kingston. (Sampson Low & Co.)
Jack and Jill. By Louisa M. Alcott. (Same publishers.)
The Lily of Leyden. By W. H. G. Kingston. (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.)
Stepping Stones. By Sarah Doudney. (Lubster & Co.)
Two Rose Trees. By Mrs. Minnie Douglas. (Griffith & Farran.)
Dogged Jack. By the Author of 'True under Trial.' (Wells Gardner.)
The Veracious History of a Black-and-Tan Terrier. Edited by Lady Lamb. (Newman & Co.)
Wracked Lives; or, Men who have Failed. By W. H. Davenport Adams. Series I. and II. (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.)
Jane Austen and her Works. By Sarah Tytler. (Cassell & Co.)
Aunt Judy's Annual Volume for 1880. Edited by H. K. F. Gatty. (Bell & Sons.)

'THE HAIR OF KILFINNAN' is a stirring narrative of sea-fights and shipwrecks, Whiteboyism in Ireland, and negro insurrections in the West Indies. These parts of the book are circumstantial enough to satisfy even a schoolboy, though the love story and the identification of the fisher boy Dermot O'Neil with the lost heir of Kilfinnan will appeal less directly to his tastes. But the sentimental passages are not too numerous, and the book will be a favourite.

Jack and Jill in their Transatlantic phase are a boy and girl who, in one of the sliding parties of the village youth, get thrown from their sledge, and are laid up in the same house during winter. It is a harmless and healthy story, though the dialect of the youngsters will, it may be hoped, remain a foreign tongue to English boys and girls. As giving a good deal of insight into the most wholesome sort of child-life in America it is valuable. The tender age at which children in the States begin to live as it were in public, to make speeches, and act parts is very curious.

'The Lily of Leyden' is a successful attempt to condense and popularize for the nursery one of the heroic passages in the revolt of the Netherlands. The facts of the relief of Leyden are accurately given, and the story of the use of the carrier pigeons will impress a brave deed on the memory.

'Stepping Stones' seems rather an immature book for grown people, and somewhat precocious for the young. It is, however, a well-intentioned and simple history of certain young ladies upon whom a change from comparative wealth to poverty has a bracing and beneficial effect; also it relates the vacillation of a curate who, being somewhat of a toady and ashamed of his humble origin, is seduced by the attentions of a lady of title from his allegiance to one of the heroines. He is received into favour again, which is more than he deserves, and Mrs. Westyn recovers her wealth, which is rather a tame conclusion. The manner of it is pathetic, as she finds a missing receipt in a garment of her late husband's with which she has always refused to part, until in her poverty she has recourse to it as the only gift she can bestow upon a poorer neighbour. The book is a girl's novel of the religious sort.

'Two Rose Trees' is also a girl's book, and also relates the downfall of the owners of those plants from a condition of comfort to one of poverty, and their miraculous restoration to wealth. But the poverty is less real and the wealth greater than in Mrs. (!) Doodney's conception; and, on the whole, the rose trees enjoy themselves. What purpose can be served by a description of commonplace life at a girls' school, and of commonplace amusements in the holidays, it is difficult to see.

'Dogged Jack' is the tale of a severe father and obstinate son, their misunderstandings, their love for each other, and their reconciliation by means of Jack's sister Polly. It is well written, and youthful scapegraces are warned by a terrible instance of the results of practical joking. The deathbed piety of infants is but morbid reading for the young, but grown-up people may fairly be touched by little Polly's end.

There are so many excellent books about dogs, from 'Rab and his Friends' downwards, that one is sorry for the black-and-tan terrier. His autobiography is written in fashionable though not quite grammatical English, but boys will despise him, and girls will find it impossible to grow sentimental over him. He is the dullest of dogs.

Mr. Davenport Adams has chosen rather a melancholy theme. His biographies are compiled with his usual care and good sense, and, if not entertaining, are sound and unobjectionable reading.

We shall be glad if Miss Tytler's book induces any girls to read Miss Austen. We are not, however, sanguine. Why, instead of compiling these abstracts, did not Miss Tytler try to write a life of Miss Austen? Mr. Austen Leigh's book is unsatisfactory, and it would be yet possible to recover facts that will soon be forgotten.

Aunt Judy's volume will be most welcome to girls. The letter-press is excellent, but the illustrations are not what they should be.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. BENTLEY & SON send us Five Weeks in Iceland, by Miss C. A. de Fonblanque. Miss de Fonblanque, who informs her readers that the clowns of Reykjavik declared her to be a beautiful girl, went to Iceland last year, and now relates in a handsome volume her experiences of the journey. They mostly ranged from "sad" to "detestable." The ladies went to church in Reykjavik; they heard a bell that brayed like an exasperated donkey; the coats and trousers of the male congregation were ill made. A secular-looking person committed the outrage of robbing the clergyman under the nose of the congregation; this was in a burial chapel temporarily used as a place of worship during repairs at the cathedral. The dean cleared his throat with objectionable vigour. A spittoon for his use desecrated the altar! Singing and music were not excruciatingly bad, but each note took a minute! The dean chanted dismally. Then the church became insufferably hot, and Miss de Fonblanque left in disgust. Miss de Fonblanque finds the Icelanders thoughtful, persevering, and studious; yet when they hear of stirring events that are taking place in Europe, "they are scarcely interested or impressed by them." "Iceland is too poor and too apathetic" to do much for herself. Yet well-informed authorities, like Prof. Fiske and Mr. Rodwell, give accounts of progress which, all things considered, is simply marvellous. Miss de Fonblanque quitted Iceland after having seen next to nothing of it, and returned home "in excessive juxtaposition" with her fellow travellers.

The Forty-first Annual Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records contains two important appendices—the Exchequer Records and the Calendar of the Norman Rolls. We have adverted to the many glimpses into social life and constitutional and family history which the Exchequer Records have given in the periods dealt with in previous Reports, and although they are now calendared to so late a period as from William and Mary to George I., their interest does not seem to lessen. They deal with all sorts of legal matters and refer to all grades of society. We get a peep into a ladies' boarding school of Queen Anne's reign at p. 436, a peep that will supply a good note to the history of English education. The interior of a solicitor's house in Downing Street, Westminster, is given on p. 137: it had "at least six or seven beds in it and sufficient pewter and other necessary household stuff to the value of fifty pounds at y^e least, besides a considerable quantity of plate a silver tankard, two silver tumblers, two silver salves, a sett of silver castors, a pair of silver candlesticks, a large silver tea pot, one or two silver plates, about a dozen of silver spoons and a dozen of silver forks, and one or two silver porringers, and a pair of silver snuffers, and a silver snuffe pan and fower silver salts and a silver ladle, at the value of sixty pounds at the least," besides other goods which are described. A document on p. 376 affords an interesting account of a case before the Stannary Courts of Cornwall, and on p. 363 we learn something about the exchange value between England and East India and Persia. These are a few items culled at random to show the varied information contained in these calendars, and we present the following specimens of curious field-names, which will be interesting to many readers of Notes and Queries, where the subject is being taken up: "The Biggie" (p. 45), lands called "Labour in Vain" (p. 305), "Rugg-hag" (p. 362), and "the Madams" (p. 368). In "Suttdown alias Sutton" (p. 549) we meet with a step in the spelling of an old name. Turning from these to the Calendar of the Norman Rolls of Henry V., we find still more interesting historical documents. This calendar, we are told, completes the work begun in 1845 by Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy in his 'Rotuli Normannie in Turri Londonensi,' and brings down the series to the year 1422. The Rolls fall into several classes. One class consists of Henry V.'s regrants of land in France to those who submitted to his rule, and an examination of these shows that the king's conquest of Normandy was marked throughout by great clemency. The second class consists of grants of French lands to English nobles. Grants of office constitute the third class of entries. Then there are many documents of a diplomatic character—treaties between the king and the Duke of Brittany, truces and prorogations of the truces between the king and the Duke of Burgundy, and other valuable memorials of these stirring times. The compiler has added a most useful and acceptable table showing the modern spellings of the names of French towns mentioned in the Rolls, and this table should be of value to students irrespective of its connexion with these particular documents. The martial character of King Henry V. is remarkably shown by the nature of the services imposed upon the lands he granted out to his followers after the conquest of France. In only one or two cases have we been able to identify any other service by a male tenant than such as "yearly a sword of Gascony," "yearly a lance," "yearly a pair of plated gauntlets," "yearly a belt for a coat of mail," "yearly a pair of gilt spurs," "yearly a pole-axe," "yearly a dagger" to the king; and although these of course belong to some extent to the spirit of the times, they must also reflect the character of Harry of Monmouth, the noble-hearted and gallant prince, even if he be rightly considered a misjudging monarch.

Mr. WILLIAM BLADES has published a pleasant little volume of bibliographical gossip under the title of The Enemies of Books (Trübner & Co.). Mr. Blades discourages agreeably about fire, dust, water, gas, ignorance, the bookworm (the insect, not the two-legged idolator), collectors and binders: they all have done much evil in their day. Fire is the most obvious foe, and Mr. Blades feelingly deplores the greatest loss of modern times, "the magnificent Library of Strasbourg," "burnt by the shells of the German army in 1870"; and every one will sympathize with his denunciation of the bookbinder who does not respect margins and the vandal who cuts illuminated capitals out of missals. But it is impossible to allow without protest even Mr. Blades to speak of "Cæsar's Alexandrian War, A.D. 381."

Cruden's Concordance is not likely soon to lose its popularity, and the edition which Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. send us will probably prove popular, if only for its illustrations, most of which are well selected and appropriate.—Messrs. Routledge have sent us an abridgment, edited by the Rev. C. S. Carey, but a Concordance is almost useless if not complete.

Mr. FLEMING has issued for the fourth time his Index to our Railway System (Edinburgh Wilson). Mr. Fleming takes a most unfavourable view of the management of English railways.—Mr. Bogus has sent us Mr. Fry's useful Guide to the London Charities. Mr. Gardner's bequest of 330,000*l.* is the great event of the year in the world of charity.—Beach's Cash Housekeeping Book is simple and very cheap.

We have on our table Holland, by E. De Amicia, translated from the Italian by C. Tilton (Allen & Co.),—Saint Louis and the Thirteenth Century, by G. Masson (Low),—The Other Side: How It struck Us, by C. B. Berry (Griffith & Farran),—The Class-Book of Mental Arithmetic, by D. Marwood (Walker & Co.),—The Faults of Speech, by A. M. Bell (Trübner),—The Tenth Book of Virgil's Æneid, by J. T. White (Longmans),—An Introduction to Geometry, with Euclid's Elements, Book I., by J. Walmsley (Hodgson & Sons),—Glossaries of England, by J. R. Blakiston (Griffith & Farran),—Professional Book-keeping, by W. J. Gordon (Wyman & Sons),—Queen's College Calendar, 1880-81 (Macmillan),—Dublin University Examinations for Women: Examination Papers, 1880 (Dublin, Hodges, Foster & Figgis),—Vox Populi, by C. Lunn (Reeves),—Brain-work and Over-work (Ward & Lock),—Transcendental Physics of Johann Carl F. Zollner, translated from the German by C. C. Massey (W. H. Harrison),—The Natural History of the Agricultural Art of Texas, by H. C. McCook (Lippincott & Co.),—British Bee-Farming: its Principles and Pleasures, by J. F. Robinson (Chapman & Hall),—Old Cardross, by D. Murray (Glasgow, MacLehose),—Illustrated Guide to Glasgow and the Clyde (Ward & Lock),—Perkins's Congressional District Vote Map of the United States (Trübner),—Blues and Buffs, by A. Mills (Longmans),—The Johnsons, edited by C. Burnell (Brook & Co.),—Sweet William, by Mrs. T. Erskine (S. P. C. K.),—A Decoder in Tracts, by L. T. Meade (Isbister),—The House on the Bridge, by C. E. Bowen (Griffith & Farran),—The Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley, Fourth Series, edited by R. H. Shepherd (Chatto & Windus),—The New Era: a Dramatic Poem, by V. Vaughan (Chapman & Hall),—The Cardinal Archbishop, by Col. Colomb (Kegan Paul),—Mary Magdalene: a Poem, by Mrs. R. Greenough (Kegan Paul),—The Ethical and Social Aspect of Habitual Confession to a Priest, by T. Thornely (Macmillan),—Messianic Prophecies: Lectures, by F. Delitzsch, translated by S. J. Curtis (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Jesus Christ: His Life and Work, by the Rev. F. A. Malleon (Ward & Lock),—A Rational View of Jesus and Religion, by E. W. McComas (New York, J. W. Lovell),—The Divine Problem, by E. W. McComas (New York, J. W. Lovell),—The Endowments of Man, by Bishop Ullathorne (Burns & Oates),—Feldmarschall Fürst Blucher von Wahlstatt, by Dr. F. Wigger (Nutt),—Sir Orfeo, by Dr. O. Zislo (Breslau, W. Koebner),—and Sprachenwelt, Part II, Europa, by Dr. H. A. Manitius (Leipzig, C. A. Koch). Among New Editions we have Black's Picturesque Tourist of Scotland (Edinburgh, A. & C. Black),—A Short History of German Literature, by Prof. J. K. Hosmer (Trübner),—The Boy's Own Book of Natural History, by the Rev. J. G. Wood (Routledge),—The Teacher's Work, by J. Palmer (Hamilton).—A Class-Book of Inorganic Chemistry, by D. Morris (Philip & Son).—and Ambulance Lectures, by L. A. Weatherly (Griffith & Farran).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Burdell's (Rev. F.): The Pasoply, or the Whole Armour of God, 18mo. 3/6 cl.
 Chedleigh's (M. E.): The Jewish Sabbath, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
 Ewald's (Dr. G. H. A.): Commentary on the Psalms, translated by Rev. E. Johnson, Vol. 1, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
 Gish's (C.): Hours with the Bible, Creation to the Patriarchs, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 Jacobus's (M. W.): Notes on the Book of Genesis, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 Jelf's (G. E.): Conclusions of the Christian Seasons, Part 1, Advent to Easter, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 Raleigh's (A.): The Way to the City, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Emphy's (T.): The Likeness of Christ, being an Enquiry into the Verisimilitude of the Received Likeness of our Blessed Lord, edited by W. Baylis, imp. 4to. 10/6 cl.
 Welford's (R.): Descriptive and Historical Account of the Monuments and Tombstones in the Church of St. Nicholas, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 4to. 31/6 cl.

Poetry.

- Leonard's (H. C.): John the Baptist, an Epic Poem, in three books, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Little Wide-Awake Poetry Book, fcap. 4to. 2/6 ds.
 Yonge's (C. M.): Aunt Charlotte's Evenings at Home with the Poets, roy. 18mo. 6/6 cl.

Philosophy.

- Jewson's (W. S.): Studies in Deductive Logic, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 History and Biography.
 Bouquet's (B. E.): Hindu Chronology and Antediluvian History, 8vo. 3/6 cl. 1p.
 Candlish's (R. S.): Memories of, by W. Wilson, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
 Men worth Remembering: Henry Martin, by Rev. C. D. Bell, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Paulist (Sir Anthony): Life of, late Principal Librarian of the British Museum, by L. Fagan, 3 vols. 8vo. 25/6 cl.
 Pizarro, his Adventures and Conquest, by G. M. Towle, 3/6 cl.
 Saunders's (W. H.): Annals of Portsmouth, Historical, Biographical, and Statistical, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 Shene's (W. F.): Celtic Scotland, Vol. 3, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
 Smart's (H.): his Life and Work, by W. Sparck, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
 Timpson and Mallbran: Reminiscences of those Renowned Singers, edited by W. H. M., 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

- Thomson's (W. M.): Southern Palestine and Jerusalem, 21/6 cl.
 Williamson's (A.): Sport and Photography in the Rocky Mountains, folio. 45/6 cl.

Philology.

- Boulter's (A.): Second Book of French Composition for Advanced Classes, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Sachs's German Conversational Grammar, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Xenophon's Anabasis, First Four Books, with Notes adapted to Goodwin's Greek Grammar, edited by W. W. Goodwin and J. W. White, 18mo. 5/6 cl.

Science.

- Smith's (C. M. K.): The Premium Calculator, roy. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
 Tolhausen's (A.): Corliss Engines and Allied Steam Motors, a Translation of W. H. Child's Work, with Additions, Vol. 1, 4to. Text, Vol. 2, folio Plates, 1/2 half-morocco.
 Williams's (W. M.): A Simple Treatise on Heat, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

General Literature.

- Black's (C.): Mercuries, and other Stories, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Buxton's (B. H.): From the Wings, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
 Coase's (Dr. L.): Guide to the Study of Political Economy, translated by W. S. Jevons, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
 Craik's (G. M.): Elly's Love Story, 18mo. 3/6 ds.
 Disraeli's (Benjamin): by Author of 'The Sign of the Cross', 3 vols. 3/6 cl.
 Dodd's (W.): London University Matriculation Examination. What to Read and How to Read It, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Ellis's (A. R.): Sylvestra, Studies of Manners in England from 1170 to 1800, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
 Ewing's (J. H.): We and the World, a Book for Boys, 5/6 cl.
 Hardy's (T.): The Trumpet-Major, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
 In the City, a Story of Old Paris, by Author of 'The Spanish Brothers', cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

- In the Desert, a Story of the Church under the Cross, by Author of 'The Spanish Brothers', cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Jamieson's (R.): Political Economy for Business People, 6/6 cl.
 Jepson's (R. M.): With the Colours, 18mo. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

- Langbridge's (F.): Pencock Alley, or a Boy and Girl against the World, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Leslie's (E.): Caught in the Tolls, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

- "Not Quite a Peck of F—": a Domestic Story for Girls, by Author, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
 Payn's (J. A.): Confidential Agent, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/6 cl.

- Phillips's (Miss): Meyrick's Promise, a Book for Girls, 5/6 cl.
 Play Days, a Book of Stories for Children, imp. 18mo. 3/6 cl.
 Reed's (Rev. A.): Ida Vane, a Tale of the Restoration, 8/6 cl.

- Sands's (J.): Frank Fowerhorn, a Story of Adventure in the Pampas of Buenos Ayres, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Shaw's (C.): In the Sunlight and Out of It, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

- Stingling Quadrille and Lancers, 4to. 2/6 ds.
 Stracey's (Lieut.-Col. M.): An Arrangement of Battalion Drill, 18mo. 2/6 cl.

- Symington's (M.): Marion Scatterthwaite, a Story of Work, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.

- Thorn's (I.): A Six Years' Darling, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
 Two Miss Dawsons (The), by Author of 'The Balmie', 5/6 cl.

- Wale's (M. J.): Sword and Surplus, or Thirty Years' Reminiscences of the Army and the Church, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
 Winthrop's (A. T.): Wilfred, a Story with a Happy Ending, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

- Friedländer (M. H.): Charlme Hadorot, 18mo.
 Felder's (O.): Grundriss der Christlichen Glaubens u. Bittenlehre, 2m.
 Friedemann (G.): De Fidel Notione Ethica Paulina, 1m. 2r.

- Vollers (K. A.): Das Dodekapropheten der Alexandriner, Part 1, 1m. 50.

Law.

- Ogonowski (A.): Oesterreichisches Klagbüchlein, Part 1, 10m.

Music.

- Kieczyński (J.): Frédéric Chopin, 2fr.

Philosophy.

- Roberts (J.): Die Welt als Wahrnehmung u. Begriff, 6m.
 Spitz (A.): Vier Grundfragen, 2m.

History.

- Schultz (A.): Das Hölische Leben zur Zeit der Minnesänger, 12m.

Philology.

- Andor (P. J.): Rhetorische Elementargrammatik, 2m. 50.

- Colluth. Lyopopolitani Carmen de Bapta Helena, ed. E. Abel, 4m.
 Linke (H.): Macrobi Saturnaliorum Fontes, 1m. 50.

- Lots (W.): Die Inschriften Tiglathpilesers I., 2m.
 Möllendorff (G. v.): Anleitung zur Hochchinesischen Sprache, 15m.

- Rotheim (M.): Tiballi Codices, 2m.
 Spitta-Bey (W.): Grammatik d. Arabischen Vulgaridiaktes, v. Ägypten, 2m.

- Thiessen (J. H.): Die Legende v. Klagotami, 2m.
 Zinnow (A.): Psyche u. Eros, ein Mäuschen Märchen, 6m.

Science.

- Auspitz (H.): Die Hautkrankheiten, 7m.
 Bourgon (A. E.): Traité de Pharmacie Galénique, 11fr.

- Griesbach (A.): Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Pharmaco-graphie, 20m.

- Heppe (O.): Die Wärme in der Röhrenheide u. Colomado, 6m.

- Kamowitz (M.): Die Classification u. die Erkrankungen d. Knochensystems, Part 1, 10m.

- Le Cour (P.): Das Phönische Rad, 2m.
 Mittheilungen aus dem Embryologischen Institute in Wien, ed. S. L. Schenk, Vol. 2, Part 1, 4m.

- Neumann (O.): Peripolaren Coordinates, 1m. 50.

- Neumann (C.): Die Vertheilung der Elektrizität auf c. Kugelcalotte, 2m. 40.

- Weiss (J.): Die Psychiatrie, 8m.

- Wölfler (A.): Entwicklung u. Bau der Schilddrüse, 18m.

General Literature.

- Girardin (E. de): L'Épique de l'Homme, Lettre à M. Alexandre Dumas fils, 2fr.

- Malmros (R.): Le Capitaine Brice-à-Dieu, 3fr. 50.

- Steppler (P.): Études sur la Littérature Française, Moderne et Contemporaine, 3fr. 50.

- Vast-Bouvard: La Vieille Garde, 3fr. 50.

GRAND CHORUS OF BIRDS FROM ARISTOPHANES ATTEMPTED IN ENGLISH AFTER THE ORIGINAL METRE.

[I was allured into the antedict of this experiment by consideration of a fact which hitherto does not seem to have been taken into consideration by any translator of the half divine humourist in whose incomparable genius the highest qualities of Rabelais were fused and harmonized with the supreme gifts of Shelley; namely, that his marvellous metrical invention of the anapestic heptameter was almost exactly reproducible in a language to which all variations and combinations of anapestic, iambic, or trochaic metre are as natural and pitiable as all dactylic and spondaic forms of verse are unnatural and abhorrent. As it happens, this higher central interlude of a most adorable masterpiece is as easy to detach from its dramatic setting, and even from its lyrical context, as it was easy to give line for line of it in English. In two metrical points only does my version vary from the verbal pattern of the original. I have of course added rhymes, and double rhymes, as necessary makeweights for the imperfection of an otherwise inadequate language, and equally of course I have not attempted the impossible and undesirable task of reproducing the rare exceptional effect of a line overcharged on purpose with a preponderance of heavy-footed spondaics; and this for the obvious reason that even if such a line—which I doubt—could be exactly represented, not by foot and pause for pause, in English, this English line would no more be a verse in any proper sense of the word than is the line I am writing at this moment. And my main intention, or at least my main desire, in the undertaking of this brief adventure was to renew as far as possible for English ears the music of this resonant and triumphant metre, which goes ringing at full gallop as of horses who canoe as 'twere to the music

Their own hoofs make.

I would not seem over curious in search of an apt or inept quotation, but nothing can be fitter than a verse of Shakspeare's to praise at once and to describe the most typical verse of Aristophanes.]

(The Birds, 685-723.)

Come on then, ye dwellers by nature in darkness, and like to the leaves' generation,
 That are little of might, that are moulked of mire, unenduring and shadowlike nations,

Poor plumelless ephemerals, comfortless mortals, as visions of shadows fast fleeing,
 Lift up your mind unto us that are deathless, and dateless the date of our being:

Us, children of heaven, us, ageless for aye, us, all of whose thoughts are eternal;

That ye may from henceforth, having heard of us all things aright as to matters super-nal,
 Of the being of birds and beginning of gods, and of streams, and the dark beyond reaching,
 Truthfully knowing aright, in my name find Prodicus pack with his preaching.

It was Chaos and Night at the first, and the blackness of darkness, and Hell's broad border, Earth was not, nor air, neither heaven; when in depths of the womb of the dark with out order 10

First thing first-born of the black-plumed Night was a wind-egg hatched in her bosom,
 Whence timely with seasons revolving again sweet
 Love burst out as a blossom,
 Gold wings gleaming forth of his back, like whirlwinds gustily turning.

He, after his wedlock with Chaos, whose wings are of darkness, in Hell broad-burning,
 For his nestlings begat him the race of us first, and upraised us to light new-lighted.

And before this was not the race of the gods, until all things by Love were united:

And of kind united with kind in communion of nature the sky and the sea are Brought forth, and the earth, and the race of the gods everlasting and blest. So that we are Far away the most ancient of all things blest. And that we are of Love's generation

There are manifest manifold signs. We have wings, and with us have the Loves habitation;

And manifold fair young folk that forswore love once, ere the bloom of them ended,
 Have the men that pursued and desired them subdued, by the help of us only befriended,

With such baits as a quail, a flamingo, a goose, or a cock's comb staring and splendid.

All best good things that befall men come from us birds, as is plain to all reason;

For first we proclaim and make known to them
 spring, and the winter and autumn in season:

Bid sow, when the crane starts clanging for Africa,
 in shrill-voiced emigrant number,

And calls to the pilot to hang up his rudder again for the season, and slumber;

And then weave cloak for Orestes the thief, lest he strip men of theirs if it freezes.

And again thereafter the kite reappearing announces a change in the breeze,

And that here is the season for shearing your sheep of their spring wool. Then does the swallow 30 Give you notice to sell your greatcoat, and provide something light for the heat that's to follow.

Thus are we as Ammon, or Delphi, unto you, Dodone, nay, Phoebus Apollo.

For, as first ye come all to get auguries of birds,
 even such is in all things your carriage,

Be the matter a matter of trade, or of earning your bread, or of any one's marriage.

And all things ye lay to the charge of a bird that belong to discerning prediction:

Winged fame is a bird, as you reckon: you sneeze,
 and the sign's as a bird for conviction:

All tokens are "birds" with you—sounds too, and lackeys, and donkeys. Then must it not follow
 That we ask to you all as the manifest godhead that speaks in prophetic Apollo?

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

PROF. FOWLER'S 'LOCKE.'

Oxford, Oct. 23, 1880.

I AM anxious to answer Mr. Fox Bourne's charges against me in the Athenæum of last week in such a way as not to disguise or dis-parage the debt which I really owe to his 'Life of Locke.' To say that it is the best and most complete biography of Locke in existence would be doing it mere justice, and, being such, I presume that any one writing a short life of Locke must be under important obligations to it. I had endeavoured to express, in my own case, the extent of those obligations by a note prefixed to my volume, and by the repeated mention of Mr. Fox Bourne's name in my text.
 To show my anxiety to do full justice to his researches, I may draw attention to the fact that on the very first page of my book I take occasion to refer to Lady Masham's letter (to the transcript of which he attaches so much importance) in the Remonstrants' Library at Amsterdam, though the passage which I quote exists word for word in so well known a work as Le Clerc's 'Eloge.' Indeed, I was actuated throughout in writing my own sketch of Locke by a desire to draw attention to a book which I thought had not obtained the circulation which was its due.

But anxious as I am to do full justice to Mr.
 Fox Bourne, I am bound also, in justice to myself, to say that I believe that at least three-fourths of the biographical matter of my book (and as to the other matter, I understand there is no question) would have been written had Mr. Fox Bourne's work never been published. I have for twenty years or more taken a great interest in everything relating to Locke's life or works, and diligently read anything of the kind which came in my way. Le Clerc's 'Eloge,' Lord King's 'Life,' Locke's published correspondence, the personal matter contained in the editions of his collected works, Humphrey Prideaux's notices of Locke in his letters to Ellis, Christie's 'Life of Shaftesbury,' Lord Campbell's 'Life of King,' besides many minor sources of information, were well known to me before Mr. Fox Bourne's work appeared, and would have furnished material enough for a more complete life than can be given of most of Locke's contemporaries.

Mr. Fox Bourne's 'Life' (though I am not aware that it brought to light any facts of capital importance either in the life or character of Locke which were not previously known) supplied a large amount of curious and interesting information hitherto inaccessible, and reduced the whole of the material to chronological order. It occupies, therefore, the position which the most recent book on any subject, if fairly well executed, must necessarily hold, and its author must be content and should be glad that it should be used by subsequent writers. Of course, it must be used honestly in conjunction with other material. For my own part, I feel confident that the use I have made of it has been a perfectly honest one, and such a use as every author has a right to make of the works of his predecessors.

Mr. Fox Bourne intimates that I have not in any important respect added to or corrected his work. He would have executed his task very ill if, in a biography at least ten times the size of mine, he had left me many important facts to add. With respect to accuracy, I will ask any one acquainted with Oxford to compare Mr. Fox Bourne's notices of Locke's Oxford life with mine, or any one acquainted with Latin to compare our respective translations of any documents the original of which is in that language. I might add other points under this head, but it is far from my wish to disparage the excellent service which Mr. Fox Bourne has done to an author in whom we are both interested.

One word as to the more general question raised by Mr. Fox Bourne. He seems to be under the impression that not only any public documents which he may have been the first to transcribe, but any previously published matter which he has once incorporated into his works, henceforth become his private property, to be used by others only with his permission. I shall not discuss this view, or ask how it would have affected the contents of his own work. I will only observe that if it prevailed literature would be reduced within a very narrow compass indeed.

THOMAS FOWLER.

GIPSIES.

10, Wellington Street, Portobello, N.W.

Your correspondents have missed one point with reference to James IV.'s letter to the King of Denmark, viz., that while the undated draft in the British Museum is ranged among MSS. of the year 1506, the original in the Danish archives bears date 5th July, 1505. It is still not the earliest document attesting the certain presence of gipsies in Great Britain, an entry in the accounts of the Lord High Treasurer of Scotland running: "1505, Apr. 22. Item to the Egyptians be the Kingis command, vij lib." (Crofton, 'Annals of English Gipsies under the Tudors,' pp. 4-5).

The following has, I believe, escaped the notice of every writer on the gipsies:—"In the year 1624 eleven gipsy women were sentenced to be drowned in the North Loch of Edinburgh, in the hollow now covered by the verdure of the Prince's Street Gardens." It comes from a very accessible source, Hill Burton's 'History of Scotland,' vol. vii., p. 253 of 1876 edition. But can any one inform me what was Mr. Burton's authority for the statement, no notice of this episode occurring in Chambers's 'Domestic Annals,' or any other work where one might look for it?

FRANCIS H. GROOMER.

MS. LETTERS OF SPINOZA IN THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S LIBRARY.

It was lately suggested by Dr. Berthold Auerbach (in an article in the Neue Freie Presse) that unpublished portions of Henry Oldenburg's correspondence with Spinoza might possibly exist among the papers of the Royal Society, of which Oldenburg was the first secretary. I have now acted on this hint, which about the same time, when we met at the Hague for the unveiling of the statue of Spinoza, Dr. Auerbach was good enough to communicate privately to me; and I shall be obliged if you will help me to make known the results. It was, of course, too late to use them for my book on Spinoza.

The MSS. collection of the Royal Society contains only a small part of the correspondence in question, namely, two autograph letters from Spinoza to Oldenburg, which appear in Spinoza's published works as Ep. VI. and Ep. XV. There is no trace of Spinoza's answer to Ep. XVI., which is especially noted as missing by the contemporary Dutch translator of the 'Opera Posthuma.' The late Dr. Willis seems to have ascertained this much ('Benedict de Spinoza,' p. 81, where one of the numbers, however, is wrongly given), but not to have thought it worth while to compare the MSS. with the printed text. But in each case the letter itself contains a final paragraph omitted by Spinoza's original editors, and therefore by all subsequent ones. I believe these omissions to have been directed by Spinoza himself, for the following reason. Comparison of the printed text of the body of Ep. XV. with the autograph shows, further, a great number of minute variations in phraseology and order of words, which can be due only to a careful revision of the copy kept by Spinoza; and the reviser can have been no other than Spinoza himself. Editors correct verbal mistakes and slips of the pen, but they do not make such corrections as these. I have not thought it needful for the present to copy all the variants, or to make an equally close examination of Ep. VI., nor do I ask you to print all that I have copied. I propose to communicate a full transcription to Prof. Land, of Leyden, who, in conjunction with Dr. Van Vloten, is about to edit a new text of Spinoza's works for the Dutch Spinoza Committee. Meanwhile a specimen will be enough. I give a few sentences from Bruder's edition, with the readings of the autograph in italics:—

(§ 1) Quod me ad philosophandum tu et nobilissimus (clarissimus) D(omi)n(u)s Boylius benigne hortamini, maximas habeo gratias (habeo gratiam). Ego quidem pro tenuitate mei ingenii, quantum [repeated by mistake in MS.] queo (possum) pergo, &c.

(§ 2) Conabor igitur rationem ostendere, quam me id affirmare cogit; attamen prius monere vellem, &c. (rationem igitur, quam me hoc affirmare cogit, quam paucis potero, explicare conabor. sed prius, &c.).

(§ 3) Circa totum et partes considero [MS. ina. quod] res attentius ut partes aliquas totius [MS. ina. considerantur] quatenus earum natura invicem se accommodat (natura unius nature alterius ita se accommodat) ut [MS. ina. omnes] quoad fieri potest, inter se consentiant, &c.

And so on all through the letter. This establishes beyond reasonable doubt the opinion already expressed (if I remember rightly) by Dr. Land, that Spinoza prepared his own letters for publication. I now give the hitherto unpublished portions. Ep. VI. is undated in the MS. as well as in the printed text, but belongs to the late autumn or winter of 1661-2; it is occupied with detailed criticism on Boyle's physical observations down to the point where, in the editions, "religiosa desiderantur." The MSS. continues as follows:—

"Nec opus est hec fusius explicare. his habes, amicissime, quæ huc usque notanda reperio in specimina Domini Boylii. quod ad primas tuas questiones attinet, cum meas ad ipsas responsiones percurro nihil video me omisisse. et si forte (ut soleo propter verborum penuriam) aliquid obscure posui, quæso ut id mihi indicare digneris. dabo operam ut ipsa clarius exponam. quod autem ad novam tuam questionem attinet, quomodo acil. res conserperit esse, et quo nexu a prima causa dependant: de hac re et etiam de emendatione intellectus integrum opusculum composui, in cuius descriptione, et emendatione occupatus sum. sed aliquando ab opere desisto. quia nondum ullum certum habeo consilium circa ejus editionem, timeo nimirum ne theologi nostri temporis offendantur, et quo solent odio, in me, qui rixas prorsus horreo, invehantur. tuum circa hanc rem consilium spectabo. et ut acies quid in meo hoc opere continetur, quod concionatoribus offendiculo esse possit, dico quod multa attributa quæ ab iis et ab omnibus mihi saltem notis deo tribuuntur, ego tanquam creaturas considero. et contra alia, propter præjudicia ab iis tanquam creaturas consideratas, ego attributa deo esse et ab ipsis male intellecta fuisse contendo. et etiam quod Deum a natura non ita separam ut omnes, quorum apud me est notitia, fecerunt. tuum itaque consilium specto. te nempè ut fidelissimum amicam aspicio de cuius fide nefas esset dubitare. vale interim et ut cepisti me amare perge qui sum

tuus ex aase

BENEDICTUS SPINOZA."

The questions of Oldenburg's here referred to are in Ep. V. Oldenburg's encouragements and exhortations to Spinoza to publish his work at the end of Epp. VII. and VIII., the occasion of which is not clear as they have hitherto stood, are of course in answer to this. Oldenburg's "quæ nostri seculi et moris theologi ardent," Ep. VIII. § 14, takes up Spinoza's "timeo nimirum ne theologi nostri temporis offendantur." It should seem that the "integrum opusculum," planned in 1661 by Spinoza, which was to treat "de hac re"—namely, the origin and causal connexion of things—"et etiam de emendatione intellectus," must have been of a more ambitious scope than the existing fragment on the 'Amendment of the Understanding.' Perhaps the analytical treatise 'De Emendatione Intellectus' was meant by Spinoza to serve as an introduction to the synthetic exposition of the 'Ethics' (and, notwithstanding its fragmentary state, it is still the best introduction); and at this stage he would be not unlikely to underrate the scale of his work, and think of issuing the matter of this treatise and of the 'Ethics' (so far as then designed) in one "integrum opusculum."

Now for the end of Ep. XV., which in the printed book breaks off with an etc. The date is November 20th, 1665.

"Episcopus Monasteriensis postquam male conciliatus friasim, ut hircus Æsopi puteum ingressus est, nihil promovit. imo nisi bruna nimis tempestive incipiat, non nisi cum magni damno friasim relinquit, non dubium est cum suavis unus, aut alterius proditoris, facinus hoc ausum fuisse incipere. sed hec omnia nimis antiqua sunt, ut pro nova scribantur. nec spatium unius, aut alterius septimanæ, aliquid contigit novi, quod scriptio dignum sit. de pace cum Angliis nulla apparet spes. rumor tamen super spargebatur propter conjecturam quandam legati hollandici, in Galliam missi, et etiam, quia ultra islandenses, qui summis viribus principem Arausionem[n]em introducere conantur, idque, ut multi putant, Hollandia magis ut incommodum, quam ut sibi p[ro]p[ri]am, viam quandam somniaverant, nempè ut dictum principem tanquam mediatorem in Angliam mitterent. verum res plane aliter se habet. Hollandi de pace inprocurantur, nec per somnium cogitant, nisi res eo forte veniat, ut pacem pecunia emant. de Sueci conciliis adhuc dubitatur. putant plerique eum Mētē (Mentz?) petere, alii hollandos. sed hæc non nisi ex conjectura.

hanc epistolam præterita septimana scripseram. sed eam mittere non potui, quia aura Hagam proficisci vetabat. hoc incommodi habet habitare in pago. nam raro suo tempore epistolam accipio, nam, nisi detur ex accidenti occasio eam mittendi suo tempore, septimana una aut altera transit antequam eam accipiam. deinde ut eam suo tempore mittere possim non raro oritur difficultas. cum igitur videam me tibi non tam prompte ac debeo, respondere, id non ex eo venire putes, quod tui obliviscar, interim tempus urget, de reliquis alia occasione, jam nihil aliud dicere possum, quam te rogare, ut Nobilissimo D^o Boylio salutem plurimam ex me dicas, et ut me memor vivas, qui sum omni affectu tuus

B. DE SPINOZA.

Voorburg, 20 Novembri, 1665.

cupio scire an omnes astronomi judicant duos fuisse cometas ex eorum motu, an vero ad servandam hypothesin Keplerianam. Vale."

On the back:—

"A Monsieur
Monsieur Hendry Oldenburg
Secrétaire de la Société royale ni the palmall ni at Jameses fields ni
London."

The political news about the Bishop of Münster, the Swedes, and the chances of peace is in answer to Oldenburg's inquiry, Ep. XIV. ad fin.: "Adiungas ea rogo, quæ apud vos forte dicuntur de tractatu pacis, de Suecici exercitus in Germaniam transvecti consiliis, deque episcopi Monasteriensis progressu"; where cf. Bruder's note. In Ep. XVI, ad fin., Oldenburg replies to this and to Spinoza's postscript: "Quid Suecus nunc molitur et Brandiburgicus, si potes, explica.....P.S. Quid de nuperis comētis nostri philosophi statuunt, brevi tibi indicabo Deo volente." It will be observed that Spinoza's Latin, thus seen as it were in undress, is not that of a master. There are one or two slips in spelling, and a verb in the wrong mood; and he apparently speaks of Mentz by its vernacular name, as not knowing the Latin equivalent. Then we find "cepusti" for incepisti at the end of Ep. VI., as preserved in the autograph; and in the same passage he makes an apology for his verborum penuriam. All this throws some light on the labour given by Spinoza to subsequent revision, and goes to show that he wrote Latin with a certain difficulty and hesitation, though much more easily than Dutch. So does the autograph letter to L. Meyer preserved in Victor Cousin's library, and now printed for the first time in an appendix to my book. It is a curious but insoluble question whether, after all, Spinoza to the end of his life thought and worked out his ideas in Spanish or Portuguese, which, as being cut off from Jewish society, he can have had few or no opportunities of speaking.

I am requested by Dr. Land to inform your readers that the Spinoza Committee, finding a balance in their hands after payment of all expenses incurred in the matter of the statue, have determined to establish a permanent Spinoza Fund. The first application of this fund will be to provide for the new edition I have already mentioned. Communications for the editors, or additional contributions to the fund, will be thankfully received by Dr. Campbell, of the Royal Library, the Hague.

F. POLLOCK.

NOTES FROM DUBLIN.

THE death of Mrs. Jellicoe, not only the head, but the heart, of the Alexandra College, has been felt by almost every literary person in Dublin as the loss of a personal friend, and a great blow to the yet struggling system of higher female education in Ireland; for it was chiefly to her energy, her unselfishness, and her power of attracting all that was good and sound in the way of teaching, that the Alexandra College has maintained hitherto its unendowed existence. She was a woman who loved the excitement of work, who hardly knew mental fatigue, and who was always ready to help and advise in every difficulty. Her cheery manner, her quick resource, her womanly sympathy, made friends everywhere, and she will long be mourned, not only by her many pupils, to whom she was a second mother, but by all the best society in Dublin, where she was a well-known and welcome figure. She died simply of overwork, followed naturally by a break up of the nervous system.

The University of Dublin is beginning a new year's work with an altered and strengthened staff on the classical side. Mr. Tyrrell is now Regius Professor of Greek. Mr. A. Palmer has succeeded to the chair of Latin thus left vacant, and during the late summer has produced his critical edition of Propertius, which is indeed a credit to Irish scholarship. Mr. Mahaffy has had the duties of his chair enlarged and its condition improved, so that he was not even a candidate for the chair of Greek, to which he was expected to succeed. He has been making an excursion into his old study, philosophy, during the summer, and has printed a little volume on Des Cartes, which may be expected immediately. In spite of the state of the country the numbers of the undergraduates are not falling off, a singular fact, and one which throws some light on the pretended famine of 1879.

Meanwhile the Queen's University is struggling to maintain its existence, even after its formal condemnation, and is anxiously seeking a reprieve from Mr. Gladstone, who is known to have no fancy for the new concern called into existence by Lord Carnarvon. This new concern, the Royal University as it is called, has at last begun to hold Council meetings and talk about a scheme of education. But nothing has yet been published, and it must wait for funds till a grant is made by Parliament. Some people say that such a grant may be difficult to obtain. Nous verrons. G.

Literary Gossip.

THE editors of 'Charles Dickens's Letters' are anxious to get together more of his correspondence. Miss Dickens and Miss Hogarth will, therefore, be grateful if any persons possessing letters of Dickens which have not been published will send them under cover to Miss Hogarth at 11, Strathmore Gardens, Kensington, W. The letters will be most carefully preserved, copied, and returned to their owners with as little delay as possible.

LORD BRAYBROOKE has presented to the Public Record Office his entire collection of American and East Indian papers of Charles, first Marquis Cornwallis. Much of the correspondence was, of course, included in the work edited by Mr. Charles Ross, and published in 1859. Mr. Jeaffreson has prepared a report upon them, and also upon the family papers still remaining at Audley End, which will appear in the forthcoming Eighth Report of the Historical MSS. Commission.

THE West Riding magistrates are following the example set them by Leicester, Chester, and other corporations, and are having their records set in order. They have also resolved that a catalogue of them be prepared. Unfortunately these records do not go further back than the reign of Charles I.; but the indictment books of that period give much information regarding the state of society, while the registers kept at Wakefield of estates belonging to Catholics in the eighteenth century are of great personal and topographical interest.

DOUBTS having been recently thrown upon the correctness of that part of the modern history of the Jews which represents them as having been readmitted to this country by Oliver Cromwell, Mr. Israel Davis has during the long vacation, with the concurrence of the elders of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, made a search among their archives, and rediscovered the account of a lease granted to Jews of a piece of land at Stepney in February, 1657 (1656 in the document itself, according to the old practice of dating), which is identified by an early endorsement as forming part of a burial-ground. Mr. Davis has also discovered an entry, in a book containing records of interments, of the burial of Isaac Brito in the burying-ground in Ellul, 5617, Jewish era, i.e., about the middle of the year A.D. 1657, and thus during the lifetime of Oliver Cromwell.

THE land laws are calling into being a literature of their own. Mr. J. W. Barclay, M.P., is writing an article for an early number of the Fortnightly Review on the Land Question, in which he will discuss the subject in its bearings on modern agriculture. 'Our Land Laws of the Past: an Essay,' by the Right Hon. W. E. Baxter, M.P., will shortly be published for the Cobden Club by Messrs. Cassell & Co.

MR. THOMAS HARDY's new story, which he is writing for Harper's Magazine, will be called 'A Laodicean,' the title referring, of course, to Revelation iii. 15.

A TRANSLATION into Italian of Vernon Lee's 'Studies of the Eighteenth Century in Italy' will appear during the course of the winter. The work has met with a warm reception in Italy.

AT the Summer School of Philosophy at Concord, Mass., "the historic town in which Hawthorne lived so long, and in whose ancient graveyard he is buried," there happened to gather this year a number of Hawthorne's old friends, of whose conversation about him some interesting notes were taken. Mr. G. William Curtis, another old friend of Hawthorne and one of his associates at Brook Farm, gives these notes, with some added reminiscences of his own, in the "Editor's Easy Chair" of the November number of Harper's Magazine, a department which it is an open secret is edited by him, as "an interesting and valuable supplement" to Mr. Henry James's volume. From these notes we learn that—"Mr. Alcott told some amusing stories of what he called Hawthorne's diffidence. He lived next to him for three years, but he never saw him in the street, and during all that time Hawthorne was in Mr. Alcott's house but twice, and then by stratagem. There were some young women, guests of Mr. Alcott, who one day persuaded Hawthorne to step into the study. But after a little while, hearing his name all the time, he said, suddenly, 'The stove is too hot,' and vanished. Once more the girls took him in their net, but when they had landed him, he said, 'The clock ticks so loud I must go,' and again he disappeared."

THE new edition of Dean Hook's 'Life,' which Messrs. Bentley have already announced, will contain two new incidents: a notice of the support given by Dr. Hook to the Rev. F. Maurice when his appointment to the chapel in Vere Street was opposed, and of the reconciliation between Dr. Hook and Dr. Pusey in 1873, after long estrangement.

MESSRS. HANSARD'S Monthly List of Parliamentary Papers for September comprises forty-five Reports and Papers and thirty Papers by Command. Among the former interest attaches to the Navy Reports of recent Experiments between the Nordenfolt and Hotchkiss Guns (with plans); to the Report and Evidence on the North British Railway (Tay Bridge) Bill; to the Report, with Minutes of Evidence, of the Select Committee on the London Water Supply; and to the Report of the Commissioners on Patents for Inventions for the Year 1879. Among the Papers by Command we call attention to the List of British Merchant Ships Foundered or Missing between the 1st of January, 1873, and the 10th of May, 1880, with the trades in which they were engaged, description of cargo, and numbers of lives lost; to the Report on the Gas Explosion in the Tottenham Court Road on the 5th of July, 1880; to the Replies to Circular of the Board of Trade, dated 10th of June, 1880, on Continuous Brakes; and to the Report by Mr. J. J. Danvers on Railways in India for the Year 1879-1880. There is also a Return of all Officials, Higher and Subordinate, in the Public Service in Cyprus.

It is said that Mr. Giles, the Inspector of the North-Eastern Division of the Bombay Presidency, is to succeed Dr. Buhler, C.I.E., who, as we have already mentioned, has resigned. Dr. Buhler has accepted a professorship at Vienna.

THE recent destruction of Prof. Mommsen's library by fire has drawn the attention of librarians to the necessity of ensuring the safety of rooms in which MSS. are deposited. Thus the Library of Heidelberg has obtained a special grant for building fireproof rooms for its MSS. We are sorry to say that nothing of the kind has been planned as yet for the Berlin Library, in which the MSS. are, so far as we are aware, stored up in those rooms which are nearest the roof.

A new day school for girls under the Perse Trust is about to be opened in Cambridge. The want of a good day school has long been felt, and the scheme has been warmly taken up by University and town residents. The school is open to all classes, and the teaching promises to be very good and liberal. Religious instruction is given, but it is not denominational. On Wednesday last Miss Street, second mistress of the Greycoat School at Westminster, was elected head mistress. The school will begin on January 17th, 1881, in a hired house. The managers are selected from the managers of the Perse school for boys and four ladies appointed by the Endowed Schools Commissioners.

DR. LANDAUER, of Strasbourg, has in the press a grammar of the Chaldean language.

THE Journal of Education for October will contain 'Personal Recollections of the late

Dr. W. B. Hodgson,' by Mrs. Hertz, one of Dr. Hodgson's oldest and most intimate friends; and 'Notes on the Cambridge Teachers' Examination,' by the Rev. R. H. Quick, one of the examiners. The first number of the Squire, a magazine for country gentlemen, will appear on Monday. It is published by Bennett Brothers, of London and Dumbarton, and edited by Mr. Morgan Evans.

ACCORDING to the return of the Registrar of Books in Madras, the total number of publications catalogued in that Presidency during 1879 was 775, as compared with 824 in the previous year. The falling off, however, was under the heading of pamphlets. Of the registered works, 17 per cent. were English, 68 per cent. were in the vernacular languages of the Presidency, 8 per cent. were in the Oriental classical languages, and 7 per cent. were in more than one language. There was an increase in the number of English and Telugu publications, and a decrease in the number of Tamil, Canarese, and Hindustani. Of the classical works, 63 were Sanskrit, 8 Persian, and 8 Arabic, all reprints. Generally, the return shows a falling off in original effort and an increase in the number of translations and adaptations of standard works. Among the works catalogued were a version in Telugu of Shakspeare's 'Julius Cæsar,' and versions in Tamil of some of Lamb's 'Tales from Shakspeare.' Under the head of vernacular poetry the most important original work was a Telugu poem in imitation of the style of Vasucharitra. The only philosophical work was a compendious Sanskrit work on logic, entitled 'Tarka Sangraha.'

PROF. B. STADE, of Giessen, will bring out a new periodical, having for object critical researches regarding the Old Testament. It will be issued half-yearly, beginning on the 1st of April, 1881. The title of it will be Zeitschrift für die Alttestamentliche Wissenschaft.

THE Archdeacon of Calcutta states that the financial position of Doveton College, Calcutta, is unsatisfactory, a capital of 181,000rs. having been reduced to about 41,000rs., and 140,000rs. expended on maintenance out of capital instead of out of income. The fault is ascribed to carelessness on the part of the managers of the institution.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT have in the press a new work, entitled 'My Journey round the World, via Ceylon, New Zealand, Australia, Torres Straits, China, Japan, and the United States,' by Capt. S. H. Jones-Parry, late 102nd Royal Madras Fusiliers, in two volumes. 'Geraldine and her Suitors,' a novel by Mrs. Simpson, author of 'Winnie's History,' &c., in three volumes, will be shortly published by the same firm. Siles K. Hocking, the author of 'Her Benny,' has a new work in the press, entitled 'His Father; or, a Mother's Legacy.' Mr. Francillon is bringing out a new Christmas story.

WE regret to hear of the death, at the age of seventy-six, of Mr. Lewis Smith, publisher and bookseller of Aberdeen, which occurred on Sunday last. For more than fifty years Mr. Smith had been in business, and had filled the offices of City Treasurer and Dean of Guild in Aberdeen, and was one of its most active citizens. In May, 1878, at a large meeting presided over by the Lord Provost of Aberdeen, Mr. Smith's portrait was presented to him, as a token of the respect in which he was held.

It is proposed to erect at Albi a statue of Rouget de l'Isle. An enthusiastic meeting produced liberal subscriptions.

A RECENT resolution of the Bombay Government places educational officers in that Presidency more directly under the control of the district officers. It will be the duty of the latter to visit the primary schools periodically, and to review the reports of the inspectors. It is hoped that this measure will put a stop to the falling off in the numbers attending the schools which has taken place in recent years.

WE understand that Mr. Boscawen has discovered in a private collection of objects coming from Carchemish a gem representing a priest, who stands upon a bee when sacrificing. The cultus of the bee amongst Semitic tribes could be deduced from the name of Deborah, "Bee." Mr. Boscawen's discovery may help the understanding of the passage in Isaiah vii. 18, "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt [the Philistines worshipped the fly], and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria."

NINE distinguished natives of India have recently subscribed sums amounting in all to 19,600rs. towards the Oriental Seminary Building Fund.

It is well known that the contemporaries of Goethe and Schiller published some very strange criticisms upon them. Herr Julius Braun is engaged upon the compilation of a book which is to be made up exclusively of a chronological reprint of the criticisms which appeared in various periodicals upon the two great German poets between the years 1770 and 1834. The articles are collected from well-known contemporary publications of Berlin, Vienna, Leipzig, Dresden, Halle, Jena, Weimar, Stuttgart, and Mannheim.

MR. ELLIOT STOCK's announcements include 'Studies in Genesis,' by the Rev. Stanley Leathes; 'Morning, Noon, and Night: a Book of Private Prayers,' by Clergymen of the Church of England, edited by Canon Garbett; 'A Manual on Nursing among the Poor,' by Mrs. Leonard, Secretary of the London Bible Woman's Mission; 'The District Visitor's Handbook,' by Rev. W. Boyd-Carpenter; 'Work too Fair to Die,' a memorial volume of sermons by the late Rev. C. Bailhache; and 'The Biblical Museum,' containing Jeremiah to Ezekiel.

MESSRS. BENROSE & SONS have in preparation 'Christian Manhood; or, Memorials of a Noble Life,' a biography of the Rev. S. Blackburn, missionary to Fernando Po, West Africa, by Mr. Thomas Mitchell; 'The Chronicles of the Collegiate Church or Free Chapel of All Saints, Derby,' by Mr. J. Charles Cox and Mr. W. H. St. John Hope; and 'An Historical Sketch of the Parish of Croxall, in the County of Derby,' containing full descriptive accounts and pedigrees of the families, by Mr. R. Usher.

SCIENCE

Elements of Astronomy. By Robert Stawell Ball, LL.D., F.R.S. (Longmans & Co.)

ABOUT two years and a half ago we had the pleasure of noticing a short treatise on astronomy written by Dr. Ball for a series of London science class-books. The Royal Astronomer for Ireland now appears with a more elaborate and extensive work on the same subject, which is also one of a new series, called "Text - Books of Science adapted for the Use of Artisans and Students in Public and Science Schools." The plan and scope of the work remind us very much of the excellent and well-known "Cours Élémentaire d'Astronomie" of the late M. Delaunay, from which work, indeed, our author has borrowed several of his illustrations. The early part of the book gives a remarkably clear description, in comparatively small space, of the nature of astronomical observations, and the means used in correcting mechanical errors and performing the adjustments requisite in the use of astronomical instruments; the apparent diurnal motion of the heavens is explained, and a first lesson given in recognizing the most remarkable of the constellations. The circumstances and effects of the earth's motion round the sun and of the moon's in subordination to that of the earth are described with great lucidity of arrangement and fulness of illustration. Chapters on "The Planets," "Comets and Meteors," "Stars and Nebulae," and "The Structure of the Sun" follow, and in them the author selects some of the most interesting and important of the great results obtained through the knowledge of our own solar system and of the regions beyond it. While the mere results may be acquired without any knowledge of the principles by which they have been arrived at, Dr. Ball assumes in the readers of this treatise such an amount of rudimentary mathematics as may enable them to obtain also a general idea of the nature of those principles, and thus reach a more scientific standpoint in their contemplation of the phenomena of the heavens. We know, indeed, but little of these, yet it is wonderful that we know so much; and it is impossible that, knowing what we do, we should not desire to know more. Few only can be votaries of this or any other science; but whoever will thoroughly master the contents of such a work as Prof. Ball's will be thereafter able to follow with intelligible interest the principal lines of the future progress of astronomy. By including a final chapter on "Astronomical Constants," drawn up with much care and judgment, Dr. Ball has made the work of value as a book of reference to more advanced students, and even in some degree to the professional astronomer; and as this chapter only occupies about ninety pages, it does not inconveniently increase the size of the book. We have noticed some casual errors, but these are not numerous, and we may mention one or two. At p. 279, line 8, the word "eclipse," instead of ellipae, makes the sentence read oddly. This is, of course, what is commonly called a misprint, but the author will perhaps forgive our calling his attention to a somewhat curious instance of lepre plume on his part at pp. 344-5, where we read, "It has been ascertained, by the aid of spectrum analysis, that...., and that.... we have been able to ascertain," &c. On the whole, however, the work has been very carefully passed through the press, and the style is remarkably clear and intelligible, so that the book is exceedingly well adapted to its main purpose, of explaining so much of the fundamental principles of astronomy as can be understood by those who have mastered the elements of Euclid and algebra, and possess a rudimentary acquaintance with the geometry of planes and spheres. We cannot forbear remarking that the author, in both places (pp. 183 and 290) where he refers to the distance of the sun, accepts as accurate the result deduced from the English observations of the last transit of Venus. Naturally, in his chapter on astronomical constants, he carefully collects the values of the solar parallax obtained also in other ways, and our own impression is that that derived from the opposition of Mars is entitled to at least as much weight as that from the transit of Venus, and that the sun's mean distance scarcely, if at all, exceeds ninety-three millions of miles.

The British Moss Flora. By R. Braithwaite, M.D., F.L.S. Parts I. and II. (Published by the Author.)

A GOOD systematic work on British mosses has for some time been a desideratum. The classic work of Wilson has long been out of print, and great additions since its issue have been made to the list of species known to inhabit Britain. Moreover, since Wilson's time a great deal has been added to our knowledge of the structure and the life-history of these singular and beautiful plants. The shape and arrangement of the cells of the leaf are now made to form a means of classifying the species, and afford the dilettante microscopist an easy method of doing serviceable work at comparatively little cost to himself. The formation, too, of the capsule containing the spores, so conspicuous an illustration of which is afforded by our common hair moss or polytrichum, presents an interesting analogy (we do not know that any closer connexion can be asserted) to the alleged influence, in certain cases, of the pollen not only upon the germ-cell or rudimentary embryo, but also on the containing fruit itself. There are cases on record where the fruit has been affected by the agency of the pollen. But what is rare and exceptional among higher plants is the rule in mosses. The germ cell in these plants is, in fact, developed, as a direct consequence of fertilization, into the spore-case or fruit within which the spores are formed. Again, there is a curious relationship between ferns and mosses which is very likely to escape the notice of the superficial observer, but which is too important, in these days of pedigree searching among plants, to be passed over. When the spores seen on the back of the frond of a fern germinate, they do not at once grow into the characteristic form of the perfect fern, but they produce a very small green leafy plate, and upon this are formed the organs of fertilization from whose interaction the new fern originates. We have, therefore, two distinct stages of growth, one destined to bear the sexually produced germ, and the other the spores or asexual buds. In a moss the same stages of growth are gone through as in the case of the fern; but while in the latter the germ-stage is represented only by a small green plate, it constitutes in mosses the whole plant as we usually see it. While there is generally this marked contrast between the two groups, there are one or two ferns whose life-history is like that of mosses, and there are certain mosses which resemble ferns in their mode of growth. We have noticed these somewhat technical details in order to illustrate the great interest which now attaches to the study of the life-history of these plants. Dr. Braithwaite's monograph, of which two parts are before us, is most carefully and elaborately worked out on the lines laid down by Lindberg so far as the larger groups are concerned. Dr. Braithwaite has not only shown himself to be a very patient and careful observer, but he exhibits traces of discipline and obedience to salutary rules which botanists dealing with the so-called cryptogamous plants have not always observed. The illustrations, from Dr. Braithwaite's own drawings, are most serviceable as aids to the student. They have been executed in lithography by Mr. Blair.

Greenhouse Favourites, &c. With Coloured Plates. (Groombridge & Sons.)

THIS book consists of a series of plates colour-printed, with accompanying text. The plates are unequal in execution, some, such as that of the Ericas, being very good, while of others a less favourable verdict can be given. The woodcuts are many of them very coarse representations of very ugly flowers, but for the latter point the taste of the "florist" is answerable. It is cruel, for instance, to see the naturally most elegant fuchsia so barbarously distorted. The cultural directions, so far as we have seen, appear to be excellent, and to have been drawn up by persons of much experience. Why are their names withheld?

Science for All. Edited by Robert Brown, M.A. Vol. III. (Cassell & Co.)

WHATEVER branch of science a man may happen to be studying, he is sure to find something to his taste in turning over the pages of this work. Not to go beyond the volume which has just been issued, the astronomer will find articles on Mars, on Jupiter, and on comets; the meteorologist will learn something about clouds and dew, snow and hail, thunder and lightning; the physicist may carry on his studies in electricity and in sound; the zoologist will feel at home with corals and starfishes, butterflies and cockroaches, cuttlefishes, snails, and frogs; the botanist at one time listens to the lessons taught by plants during flowering and at another time learns the origin of the potato disease; the mineralogist may revel among emeralds and beryls, or may descend the depths of a lead-mine; the geologist will find descriptions of extinct volcanoes; while the physical geographer turns his attention to coral islands, to rivers, and to table-lands, or finally diving to the sea-bottom learns the mysteries of deep-sea life. Surely there is here sufficient diversity to please everybody who has a scientific hobby. After looking through the work we are disposed to think that, on the whole, each volume is an advance upon its predecessors, both in the character of the articles and in the excellence of the illustrations.

Shell Mounds of Omori. By Prof. E. S. Morse. Vol. I. Part I. (Tokio, University Press.)

THIS volume, issued by the University of Tokio, is remarkable as being in every sense Japanese. The paper, printing, and lithographic plates are the handiwork of natives. The drawing of the objects, with the exception of those in the last plate, is the work of Japanese artists; and the compositors in the printing office were "not able to speak a word of English." These Omori mounds (length of deposit 294 feet, depth 13 feet) are situated on the west of the railway between Yokohama and Tokio, and are nearly half a mile from the shores of the Bay of Yedo. Hence, it is argued, the land has been elevated since they were made. In these mounds there is an abundance of hand-made pottery, and some of the fractured vessels have been mended, as has been observed in urns found in European dolmens, &c., by boring holes through the clay walls. These vessels are highly ornamented, their forms and designs being very diverse. No personal ornaments have been met with, and very few stone implements, whereas "many finished implements of various kinds are widely distributed in Japan." Thus fact, Prof. Morse thinks, argues great antiquity in the deposits. The great antiquity, he considers, is further shown by the changes, some of them considerable, that have taken place in the forms and sizes of certain species of the shells. Modern shells are smaller and less developed than the more ancient, and as this fact has been noticed in the mollusks found in the Danish and other shell mounds, it is his opinion that "changes more or less great have taken place since the ancestors of those now living along the shore formed the food of the savages who made the deposits." There is another piece of evidence, viz., that of cannibalism. Human bones were "mixed indiscriminately with other remains of feasts," some artificially fractured for the extraction of the marrow, others cut and scratched; and although Japanese historical records reach back for upwards of 1,500 years no allusion is made to such a practice. A drawing is given (Plate xvi. fig. 10) of the canine tooth of a bear ground down to form an arrow point. Among other things found in a shell mound near St. Margaret's Bay, Halifax, Nova Scotia, was a beaver's tooth formed into a cutting instrument (Anthrop. Review, 1864, p. 223). Shell mounds are found in various parts of the world near the sea-shore, and no doubt other heaps of the same kind have disappeared without any examination of their contents. It has been observed with regard to some that, owing to the encroachment of the sea, they are now nearer to the shore than formerly, and in other instances, by the elevation of the land, they are further removed. The former is the case with the Omori mounds, and this was the case likewise with a shell mound situated at a few miles distance from Boulogne-sur-Mer, which was observed in 1849 by an Englishman, who described it as being composed of cockle-shells, 300 feet long, 24 to 36 feet wide, and 10 feet 6 inches high at one end, 6 feet at the other, and which was formerly a league further from the shore than it is now, if it still exists, for in the year just mentioned an embankment was in course of construction, and the materials of the mound were being actively carted away, without any examination of its contents. This volume of the Memoirs of the Science Department of the University of Tokio is a valuable contribution to the evidence of man's antiquity, habits, and customs, as furnished by his kitchen-middens in different parts of the world.

GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

A RECENT number (No. 7) of the Russische Revue gives a far fuller résumé of Col. Prejevalsky's letters than has yet appeared in this country. Amongst other things he mentions that, during his transit of the Tien-Shan and Gobi desert from Zaiman station to the verge of the Tibetan plateau, a distance of 1,370 miles, which he traversed in five months, he but once came across trees under the shelter of which he was enabled to pitch his tent. The specimens of birds collected in this region numbered 176, mammals 30, and plants 406. Fishes were equally scanty, but reptiles, on the other hand, were very numerous. Surveys were continuously made, as well as observations for longitude, latitude, height, and meteorological phenomena. Collections and observations were also made during the progress of the party along the route from Northern Tibet as far as the village of Nak-chu, a place of which frequent mention is made by Huc, the Pandit Nain Singh, and in native itineraries. Politically speaking, Tibet commences at Nak-chu, the bleak highland to the north being inhabited by predatory nomads, who gave Prejevalsky some trouble. His last letter is dated Sining, 8th of March, 1880, and he then contemplated the exploration of the upper Hoang-ho, where he says there are enormous forest-covered mountains. The scanty news since received about Prejevalsky seems to indicate that, owing to the misunderstanding between Russia and China, he was first imprisoned by the Chinese and then compelled to return to Russia without visiting the sources of the Hoang-ho.

Signor Bianchi's diary of a journey to Gurage in L'Esploratore is disappointing. It contains but little geographical information. As to the commercial future which these Italian expeditions are to realise, Count P. Antonelli writes despondingly. In a letter dated Let Marefia (a village to the north of Ankober), March 29th, 1880, he says:—"As respects commerce, Shoes, as such, has nothing to offer. It receives ivory, musk, gold, &c., from the neighbouring Galla countries, but it would be a mistake to imagine that these things could be obtained at remunerative prices, or in exchange for European merchandise. Our weapons and manufactures are objects of curiosity, and readily accepted as presents, but would find no purchasers. They are not wanted. For two dollars a man can dress as a gentleman, for that sum procures him fifty yards of excellent home-made cloth, sufficient for a double shawl or mantle, a pair of trousers, and an ample head-dress. What European cloth can compete with these prices? And thus it is with most other articles. A few days ago I bought for an amulie, worth about 5d., a small scythe and a dagger, of Galla workmanship. A good lance sells for two amulie. Only guns would find a market here, but the number of purchasers is small, and the difficulties of transport from the coast are great. Ivory, musk, &c., can be obtained only for ready money, but the whole venture may be lost on the road to the coast." But though the travellers sent out by the Società d'Esplorazione Commerciale in Africa may not succeed in opening new markets, they certainly add to some extent to our geographical knowledge, and do not therefore labour altogether in vain.

Col. Flatters has once more left Paris for Wargla, on the confines of the Sahara, where an escort of Tuaregs is already expecting his arrival, in order to conduct him through the Hoggar country to Sakatu. The colonel is accompanied by a numerous scientific staff, including a geologist, M. Roche, two surveyors, MM. Beringer and Santin, and a medical man, M. Guard. Forty-eight men of the Algerian Tirailleurs will form his escort.

Dr. Matteucci has after all failed in forcing his way into Waddai, and Don Giovanni Borghese is shortly expected at Rome.

In the person of M. Gaffarel, a new defender of the brothers Zeni has arisen. In his first article, published in the Revue de Géographie for October, M. Gaffarel summarizes the Venetians' narrative, and identifies Zichmni with Henry Sinclair, Lord of the Orkneys. In this identification he agrees with Forster and Mr. Major, but whilst these critics look upon Zichmni as the Venetians' rendering for Sinclair, M. Gaffarel says it is a corruption of the old Norse title "thegn" or thane. In his next article the learned Frenchman will look out for Frieland, and we feel almost sure he will identify it with the Färber, as Mr. Major has done.

The same number of the Revue contains a valuable map of Tonkin, illustrative of a series of able articles on that quasi-French province from the pen of Dr. Maget, Resident Sanitary Officer. In Tonkin the French have evidently acquired valuable privileges. Will they never succeed in turning them to advantage?

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

MR. HARALD WESTERGAARD, of Copenhagen, contributes to the Journal of the Statistical Society an interesting note on mortality in the Farø Islands and in Greenland, which contains some anthropological facts. The inhabitants of the Farø Islands, about 10,000 in number, are of Norwegian origin, a tall, handsome, healthy people, nearly all born on the islands, and the death rate is as low as sixteen in the thousand. In Greenland, on the contrary, the Eskimo features still prevail, the inhabitants of the whole country do not amount to 10,000, and they live under such unfavourable conditions for longevity that in South Greenland the death rate reaches thirty-seven in the thousand. The most fatal months are those of autumn.

The collections of the Paris Anthropological Society are henceforth to be called the Musée Broca, in memory of the late illustrious general secretary of the Society, and in correspondence with the neighbouring museums bearing the names of Dupuytren and Orfila.

Dr. E. B. Tylor, President of the Anthropological Institute, has been elected a Foreign Associate of the Anthropological Society of Paris.

Dr. Gavarrat succeeds Broca as director of the school, and Dr. Mathias Duval as director of the laboratory, of anthropology at Paris. Dr. Topinard takes the direction of the Revue d'Anthropologie.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

THE following are the places of Faye's comet from Prof. Axel Möller's ephemeris, at Berlin midnight, for next week until November 9th, when the moon will again be at her first quarter. Before the end of that month the comet will have become considerably fainter.

Date.	R.A.	N.P.D.
	h. m. s.	° ' "
Nov. 1	22 53 50	90 10
" 2	22 53 36	90 34
" 3	22 54 9	90 51
" 4	22 54 52	90 57
" 5	22 55 37	90 44
" 6	22 56 24	90 30
" 7	22 57 13	90 26
" 8	22 58 4	91 9
" 9	22 58 57	91 7

Hartwig's comet is now out of the reach of any but very powerful telescopes, as Schæberle's has been for some time past. The last number (No. 2343) of the Astronomische Nachrichten contains some observations of Hartwig's comet by Prof. Tacchini at Rome on the 9th and 10th inst. It is described by him as having then a nebulous nucleus and bright coma, with indications of a tail (indizio di coda). Dr. C. F. W. Peters obtained a single observation of it at Kiel on the 14th. Of Faye's comet Prof. Tacchini publishes in the number of the Nachrichten referred to above a series of observations made during the fortnight ending October 9th; and in the Comptes Rendus for the 11th M. Bigourdan gives a continuation of his observations of Hartwig's.

The planet Mercury will be at its greatest eastern elongation a little before midnight on Tuesday, the 2nd of November; but being in the constellation Scorpio, it will set about half an hour after the sun. Venus is in the same constellation, her southern declination is nearly as great as that of Mercury, and she still sets before 6 o'clock, a little later, however, each night, so that there will be time to observe her after sunset. Jupiter is now on the meridian a little before 10 o'clock, and Saturn about half-past.

The next course of the Gresham Lectures on Astronomy will be delivered by the Rev. E. Ledger at Gresham College at 6 o'clock on the evenings of Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the 8th, 10th, 11th, and 12th prox. The subject will be in continuation of the last course, and will comprise the planets Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune.

An interesting series of articles has just appeared in the Astronomical Register on 'Astronomy in Italy,' founded in great part upon the 'Observatoires d'Italie' of M. Rayet, Professor of Physical Astronomy at Bordeaux. The survey naturally includes Sicily, where Prof. Cacciatori (son of the assistant and successor of the famous Piazzi) has, since the removal of Prof. Tacchini to Rome, taken charge of the Observatory of Palermo. With the writer of these articles we much regret that the large expenditure on armaments now deemed necessary prevents the Italian Government from doing as much for the promotion of science as it otherwise might, and hope that at no distant date the astronomers of the land of Galileo may have the means of making full use of its beautiful sky.

Mr. Stone has just published the 'Results of the Astronomical Observations made at the Radcliffe Observatory, Oxford, in the Year 1876,' a work which has been delayed in consequence of the death of the Rev. R. Main, the late director, on May 9th, 1878, at which time less than half the present volume was in type. Mr. Stone took charge of the observatory at midsummer, 1879, but the reorganization of the staff, the cleaning, repair, and adjustments of the instruments, prevented him for some time from devoting much attention to the state of the back reductions; and when he was at last able to do so some further delay was produced by the difficulties usually attendant on "taking up the threads of unfinished astronomical work," a remark which every one who has been connected with observatory work will appreciate.

SOCIETIES.

NUMISMATIC.—Oct. 31.—J. Evans, Esq., D.C.L., President, in the chair.—Mr. Hoblyn exhibited patterns for a penny and halfpenny of George III., 1783, by Pingo, the former being the first copper coin struck of that denomination; also a penny of Jamaica, struck in copper instead of white metal, and patterns for one-cent and half-cent pieces of Nova Scotia, 1861, differing materially from the current coin.—Mr. Pearson exhibited a curious and unpublished leaden medal of Queen Elizabeth, with the inscription MIL NISI CONSILIO, 1588.—Mr. Gill exhibited a stycor of Wulfrid, Archbishop of York, of base silver, and a copper coin of (Unobeline found at Chester Camp, near Wellingtonborough, of the type of Evans, Pl. xlii 6.—Mr. P. Gardner read a paper on some new and unpublished Batavian coins.—Capt. E. Hoare communicated a paper on some early and modern tokens bearing the name of Hoare.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—Oct. 6.—H. T. Stainton, Esq., V.P., in the chair.—Sir A. Scott and Mr. F. E. Robinson were elected ordinary Members.—Mr. McLachlan stated that last year he had exhibited specimens of Anthracoceros, an Hemipterous insect supposed to be doing the hops grown near Canterbury, but had then expressed his opinion that the insect was not the true culprit, its habits being probably carnivorous. This year he had received from the same correspondent some small larvae which had been found in the cones, and these he considered were not only the true enemy of the hops, but were also the food of the Anthracoceros.—Sir K. Saunders exhibited a series of apterous females of the new species of Beteroderma adverted to at the previous meeting, and read remarks thereon.—Messrs. Kirby, Fitch, Raife, and the Rev. E. N. Gilbert exhibited several varieties of Lepidoptera taken in this country and on the Continent, some of which, from the structure of the antennae, were considered "hermaphrodite" forms.—Mr. H. Ramsden communicated a note on Pyrophorus castaneus, a Cuban fire-fly.—Mr. Swinton read two papers entitled 'Some Experiments on the Variability of Lepidoptera undertaken during the Year 1880,' and exhibited specimens and figures in illustration.—Mr. Butler communicated a paper entitled 'Observations on the Lepidopterous Genus Tortrix, with Descriptions of hitherto unnamed Forms from Japan.'—Mr. Waterhouse communicated a paper 'On the Buprestidae from Madagascar.'—Messrs. Kirby, Distant, and McLachlan called the attention of the Society to a method of publishing descriptions of new species pursued by M. André in recent parts of his work on European Hymenoptera. These were not only inserted on the cover of his quarterly parts, but even at the end of sheets of advertisements laid loosely between the pages of a part. It was regretted that no other course than that of protest and disapprobation could be applied in the interest of science to such a practice.

QUEKETT MICROSCOPICAL.—Oct. 22.—T. C. White, Esq., President, in the chair.—Two new Members were elected.—Mr. F. Crisp exhibited an improved form of bottle slide, which could be adjusted to any desired thickness, and might be taken to pieces when required for cleaning.—Dr. M. C. Cooke read a paper 'On New Fresh-water Algae found during the Year,' in the course of which he described nine species which were new to Great Britain, of which three were new to the British Isles. Another species also found was as yet unnamed. The new species were found by Mr. Wills at Capel Curig, and belonged to the genus Staurastrum.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

- Mon. Royal Institution 8.—General Monthly Meeting.
- Tues. Musical Association, 8.—Inquiry into the Origin and Growth of certain Musical Ideas and Improvements, Mr. R. M. Turpin.
- Wed. Society of Engineers.
- Thurs. Royal Academy 8.—Chemistry, Mr. A. M. Church.
- Fri. Institution of British Architects 4.
- Sat. Biblical Archaeology 10.—Biblical History and Chronology: Description of the Temple, Part 4, Mr. H. H. Howarth.
- Sun. Turkish Museum, Mr. T. Tyler.
- Mon. Education Society.—Constitution to a Model Middle-Class School, Mr. H. E. Brown.
- Tues. Geological Society.—Geographical and Associated Results of a Journey with a Note on the geological Serpentine of Portland, Devon, Cornwall, Prof. T. G. Henson.
- Wed. University of London.—Lectures on the History of the Earth, Mr. J. A. Phillips.
- Thurs. Royal Society.—Lectures on the Earth, Mr. J. A. Phillips.
- Fri. Royal Society.—Lectures on the Earth, Mr. J. A. Phillips.
- Sat. Royal Society.—Lectures on the Earth, Mr. J. A. Phillips.
- Sun. Royal Society.—Lectures on the Earth, Mr. J. A. Phillips.

Science Society.

UNDER the title of 'The Abbot's Farm; or, Practice with Science,' Messrs. Macmillan & Co. are preparing for publication a work by Prof. Tanner, the examiner in the principles of agriculture under the Government Department of Science, in which the practical advantages are considered which are likely to arise from the numerous classes now being established throughout the kingdom for instruction in agricultural science.

The Geologists' Association will hold its opening meeting for the session 1880-81 on Friday next, when the President, Prof. T. Rupert Jones, will read a paper on 'The Geologists' Association: its Origin and Progress.'

The following changes are proposed in the constitution of the Council of the London Mathematical Society for the ensuing session: Mr. S. Roberts, President; Dr. Hirst and Mr. J. W. L. Glaisher, Vice-Presidents; Mr. Merrifield, Treasurer; Prof. H. J. S. Smith and Mr. R. F. Scott to take the places of Lord Rayleigh and Mr. Leudeke, who retire. The retiring President, Mr. Merrifield, proposes to offer some 'Considerations respecting the Translation of Series of Observations into Continuous Formulas' as his valedictory address at the annual general meeting on November 11th.

The new part of Abhandlungen der Naturwissenschaftlichen Verein in Hamburg shows proof of industry on the part of the members in the papers descriptive of specimens in the Hamburg Museum, 'Species Pucium Novae Minusque Cognita,' by P. Bleeker, and 'Die Familie der Hyaleiden, nach ihren Schalencharakteren betrachtet,' by Dr. G. Pfeffer. Among the coloured plates with which the part is illustrated is a drawing of a new deer from the Amurland, supposed to be the Cervus eristophanus of Blanford. The same Society has published a continuation of its Verhandlungen, with papers interesting to physicians among those on natural history subjects. Dr. H. Kries contributes 'Ueber die Grenze der Leistungsfähigkeit der Mikroskope,' and Dr. A. Voller 'Ueber ein neues Absorptionshygrometer' and 'Ueber die Nichtexistenz strahlender Materie in den Crookes'schen Röhren.' In this last some of Mr. Crookes's conclusions are called in question.

MM. MACÉ AND NICATI have made a careful study of the distribution of light in the solar spectrum. They state, in their communication to the Academy of Sciences on the 11th of October, that the maximum intensity of illuminating power exists in the yellow ray near the line D.

Dr. BAZZANI, Director of the Magnetical and Meteorological Observatory at Batavia, has sent out the fourth volume of the series of meteorological observations for which he is responsible, comprising results of the three years 1876 to 1878 inclusive, together with thirteen years' results, commencing with 1866, in tabular arrangement. Under barometric pressure, among many details, the mean change from hour to hour and the monthly and annual oscillation are given, and similarly under temperature and humidity of the air and tension of the atmospheric vapour. The particulars under the head of rain are copious and instructive; the monthly and annual quantities are stated, and are followed by tables showing how much per cent. of the total daily amount fell during each of the twenty-four hours; how much every two, three, and six hours; how much from midnight to noon, and from noon to midnight; how much during the hours of the day, and how much during the hours of the night; and how much during each of the three seasons which make up a Batavian year. The book, a spacious folio, is published by order of the Government of Netherlands India, and is a praiseworthy specimen of colonial printing.

Mr. EDMON, in the North American Review, has an article on his system of domestic electric lighting. He now uses for the production of his incandescent light loops of carbon prepared from a Japanese bamboo, enclosed in oval bells of glass from which the air is exhausted. He proposes that the electricity employed for illumination at night should be used as a motive power during the day.

M. CAOS drew the attention of the Académie des Sciences, on October 11th, to a memoir presented by him in 1872, in which, guided by theoretical considerations, he drew conclusions on the mechanical action of light, which he thinks have a great similarity to those of Prof. Bell. For example, a ray of light sent into a tube resonating with a certain note was interrupted a corresponding number of times in a second, and thus by the alternate condensation and rarefaction of the air sounds were produced.

FINE ARTS.

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is NOW OPEN at THOMAS MURRAY'S Gallery, 1, Maymarket, near the Theatre.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

DOES ANY GREAT WORKER LEAVING THE PRESENT? 'CRUISE ENTERING JERUSALEM' and 'THE POLAR EXPEDITION' (the latter just completed, each 25 by 25 feet, with Dreams of Polar's Wife, Soldiers of the Crown, Night of the Crucifixion, House of Caliph, &c.) at the DOME GALLERY, 25, New Bond Street, 1880. The list is—

House Architecture. By J. J. Stevenson. 2 vols. Illustrated. (Macmillan & Co.)

This handsome work is written by one of the ablest leaders of the so-called "Queen Anne" movement. The first volume is exclusively devoted to "Architecture," the second to "House Planning." To anything like full consideration of the latter subject our pages are unsuited; suffice it, therefore, to say that the author has devoted a great deal of space and care to practical matters, and that on such topics as materials and construction, heating, ventilation, lighting, warming, cold and hot water, sewage, and the disposition of the numerous parts of a house, he has contrived to arrange an extremely large mass of practical advice in such a manner that it is available for instant reference. He is, of course, not infallible. For instance, when speaking of the use of marble for exterior work in towns, he says nothing of its extreme destructibility; and while bestowing limited commendation on what is absurdly called the Mansard roof, he omits to warn the builder against the danger of fire which this kind of roof entails. We have no sympathy with his preference for little panes of glass in windows and his detestation of large sheets. He overlooks the facts that repose and simplicity are desirable in modern windows, as seen from without, and that repose and simplicity are destroyed by those little squares of glass which "Queen Anne" architects affect. Nor does he say anything about the obstacles to looking out which the clumsy wooden gratings of his favourite panes impose. Neither do we agree with him about the artistic merits of the example he brings forward when discussing this subject, a house in the Strand, which, according to our author, has been aesthetically ruined by the substitution of large single panes for many little ones, whereas, he says, the adjoining buildings retain their grated casements, and therefore their ancient charm. Even his example is not in point, for if its clumsy architecture can be classed at all, it is Italian, while its neighbours are nearer to the right Dutch model, but applied, it is true, with exceptional good taste. However that may be, the decisive argument is that in gloomy London clumsy wooden gratings exclude a great deal of light. But while we must take exception to Mr. Stevenson's theories about windows, we are free to confess that his remarks on roofs are pertinent, and so are those scattered through this volume on the ventilation of school-rooms—a matter of vital importance, but so much neglected that even in large public establishments few rooms are ventilated at all. As Mr. Stevenson quietly remarks, one of the disadvantages of living in a well-ventilated house is that every other house feels close and stifling.

In his introduction Mr. Stevenson deplores the ignorance and lack of feeling for art which have covered the country with miles on miles of hideous streets, and dotted every landscape with "villas" alike pretentious and false. Yet, as he rightly remarks, there is prevalent a desire for better knowledge; there is wealth, and a wish to spend it on architecture. He hints that one of the causes of this state of things is that we know too much about architecture, but he is probably nearer the truth when he says that our restlessness prevents us from adhering to any one style till we have perfected it and made it our own. This is, most probably, the true explanation of our deficiencies. Any style which suited the climate in which it is employed would do to begin with; development must follow if architects will give up obeying the whims of mere fashion, and adapt the chosen model to current service. Good taste would grow if we thus constructed our houses loyally, and that sense of proportion on the importance of which our author waxes emphatic and enthusiastic would exert more and more power over the minds of those who build. "People," Mr. Stevenson tells us, "have often amused themselves calculating proportions by mathematics, which undoubtedly has the power of expressing them, but only after the proportion has been invented, just as mathematics can express musical harmonies."

Mr. Stevenson includes under the term "proportion" more than is commonly expressed by it. By proportion is usually meant the relationship of parts to parts, the sizes of each, and the amount of light and shadow they comprise or contain. Mr. Stevenson goes further, and includes the giving of emphasis where it is wanted as a factor of proportion. Emphasis is, of course, not less noble than any other function of good architecture, but we reckon it among the elements of expression. When Mr. Stevenson says that in the "old Italian palaces, where the great entertaining rooms were at the top of the house, it was fitting that the great cornice should be immediately over them," we admit the force of his remark, but we fail to see what it has to do with proportion.

Symmetry and harmony are rightly called essentials of good architecture, and Mr. Stevenson is not to be accused of want of appreciation of them when he expresses strong doubts of the wisdom of those who are finishing two great steeples alike (!) in the Cathedral of Cologne. Symmetry is "not essential in every case, as when of the two western towers of a cathedral which had been originally intended they [the old architects] carried up only one," as at Strasbourg. On the other hand, a morbid feeling for harmony has led to the destruction of countless works of art by "restorers" of ancient buildings, simply because they were out of keeping with the architecture surrounding them; nay, the very architecture itself, to say nothing of the fittings it enshrined, has been wrecked in order that all may "match." In speaking of the nature and limits of contrast and ornament, Mr. Stevenson controverts Mr. Ruskin's dictum that "a mere utilitarian building like a fortress cannot be considered architecture." He adduces as examples two towers on the walls of Nuremberg, which are wholly without ornament, and certainly they are not unworthy of Dürer, whose name they bear. The fact is that we recognize the primary impressions of art wherever fitness to function is obvious. As the author says a few pages further on, ornament for its own sake is weakness, and it is valuable only when it assists the meaning of a design.

It is one of Mr. Stevenson's cardinal points of belief that Gothic architecture had spent its vitality when it was superseded by the enthusiasm for everything classic. He disposes of the classical craze by pointing out the absurdities to which it was reduced when it adopted features unsuited to modern wants. This, of course, leads to the goal of our author's efforts, that is, the answer which should be given to the question, "What style of architecture is most suited to our houses?" In speaking of the "renaissance of architecture"—a much truer term would have been the "architecture of the Renaissance"—Mr. Stevenson declares that the state of architecture at the present day is similar to that which produced "these national Renaissance styles":—

"For thirty years we have been trained in the principles and freedom of Gothic. The world can never again accept the dominion of classic rules, a dominion founded on an ignorance which recognized no difference between the Greek and Roman orders, and considered the clumsy Roman expedient of amalgamating the Greek orders and the Roman arch to be the ultimate outcome of architecture. We accept with knowledge and consciousness the freedom from classic restraint which the Renaissance builders took unconsciously; while classic details and classic forms are the basis of our style, as they were of theirs. The attempt of the last thirty years to introduce the Gothic style into domestic and civil architecture has failed. In churches the case is different; their associations are to a great extent mediæval; but the traditional habits of our daily life are too deep-seated to be altered, and Classic has still remained the domestic style of the country. Let us accept it as the basis, the material of our style, but infuse into it the Gothic spirit and freedom which we have lately learned."

Mr. Stevenson says that it is the aim of his own professional career to carry this doctrine into effect. He believes the theory has been so successfully applied that to advocate his views would be useless, "for the world has come round to them." It is fair to say that by "Queen Anne" Mr. Stevenson does not mean the vulgar and "cheap" displays of ignorance which find favour in the eyes of speculative builders; but at the same time it is impossible to admit that the popularity which he claims for "Queen Anne" is so great as he assumes, or that people are so much at one on the subject as he supposes. Wherever in the wealthy commercial cities of England anything grandiose is desired and effectiveness is sought after, the pompous modes of the later, not the true, Renaissance are employed, because they allow of the display of the most costly labour and expensive materials, such as polished granites and elaborate and rich if not fine carvings. The measure of success which has attended the introduction of genuine "Queen Anne" is due rather to the predominance of the Gothic spirit in recent domestic and civil examples than to that love for "classic" forms which our author rather boldly declares to be the inheritance of the Renaissance. We trust that the growth of taste and knowledge may lead to the adoption of the purer and simpler kinds of Gothic forms of detail as most in harmony with the freedom Mr. Stevenson desires; but to obtain these forms at their best we must educate a class of workmen as well as the public. At present "Queen Anne" supplies an excuse for the employment of most clumsy forms, such as the most ignorant workmen can be trusted with. The "style," or rather "fashion," itself is essentially Gothic; its purest manifestations have most of Gothic in their planning, massing, and details. But whether we call the new architectural movement we all desire Gothic, "Queen Anne," or Renaissance, at least let us have a refined mode of building suited to the climate. Mr. Stevenson himself has laboured in vain if this refinement be not obtainable along with the grace, harmony, dignity, and, above all, the expressiveness of true Gothic, but it is incompatible with the besetting sin of "Queen Anne," which is a temptation to use "bulbous curves and ugly forms."

The general reader will find these volumes interesting, not only on account of the animated and picturesque way in which the subject has been treated, but also because of the independence of the author's views, and, although we decline to accept all his conclusions, his earnestness and fine taste. Those who are interested in the question whether or not "workmen only can be trusted to produce good architecture," a theory which has received much more attention than it deserved, will find some sharp remarks in the section which deals with the "conditions of producing good architecture." Mr. Ruskin and Mr. James Fergusson are dissected in the same chapter, and much to Mr. Stevenson's satisfaction.

We have received a volume of patterns of old German linen embroidery for modern imitation, Musterbuch altdeutscher Leinen Stickeren (Berlin, Lipperheide). This, which is the third instalment, consists chiefly of initial letters, corners, and mottoes of the quaint nature loved by our forefathers upon their table and hand linen. The modern revival of taste for artistic needlework will make this volume very welcome. It is an édition de luxe, printed on fine paper, the patterns most clearly marked, and yet so cheap as to be within reach of every one. The patterns have been selected from good specimens of old needlework to be found in German museums and private collections. Most of them date from the sixteenth, the seventeenth, and the early years of the eighteenth century.

Messrs. WARD, LOCK & Co. publish two children's books, being the Pussie Cat's A B C and the Punch and Judy Alphabet, both of which works are illustrated with designs in colours which are not without spirit.

NUMISMATIC LITERATURE.

Guide to the Select Greek and Roman Coins exhibited in Electrotypes in the British Museum. By Barclay V. Head.—Visitors to the British Museum who have passed through the King's Library of late must have observed a new and extensive series of electrotypes of Greek and Roman gold and silver coins. The Trustees have now published a 'Guide,' describing these coins and the principles of their arrangement. This 'Guide' is sold in two forms, either plain or illustrated with photographic plates. We believe that this is the first of the Museum guides to be illustrated. The idea is excellent. Photography renders good illustrations cheap, and a few pictures have a wonderful influence in making a handbook attractive. Visitors who have been interested in the study of any class of objects will generally find an illustrated guide a pleasing and useful record to keep by them. The old exhibition of Greek coins at the British Museum followed the inconvenient geographical arrangement of Eckhel. Coins were arranged only according to the place of their mint, and no account was made of the period to which they might belong. In the new exhibition Mr. Head has proceeded on quite another plan, subordinating geographical to historical considerations. He divides the time between the invention of coinage and the birth of Christ into seven periods, of which each covers about a century. Under each period there is a geographical subdivision, which naturally cannot be other than three-fold—Asia, Greece, and Italy with Sicily. Of course the arrangement in chronological series of the works of Greek art is a matter of great difficulty as well as of great importance. In the case of coins there are many considerations, besides those of style and epigraphy, which help one to fix their date. Weight and fabric are even safer guides than style, and lend themselves far less to the jugglery of prejudice and imagination. Nevertheless no one could arrange eight or nine hundred Greek coins under periods without making some errors; and it is no disparagement to the merit of the Museum arrangement to say that it will doubtless have hereafter to be modified in some points. Yet we do not believe on the whole that the student could find a safer guide. In the exhibition cases of electrotypes, then, there is a lateral arrangement according to date and a vertical arrangement according to place. The 'Guide,' of course, follows the same lines, but a very useful feature in it is a short account, at the head of each period, of the chief currencies which circulated in the Levant during its course. Thus we have a very brief history of ancient coinage, but one of no small value and merit. Mr. Head is thoroughly steeped in the knowledge of coins, and sets down in the most matter-of-fact way pieces of information which he must have gathered by a large induction and which are of considerable value to students of antiquity. Take the following: "The defeat of Antiochus by the Romans at the battle of Magnesia, B.C. 190, was for western Asia Minor no less important than the defeat of Philip V. at Cynoscephalæ in B.C. 197 had been for European Greece. The freedom of many Greek cities in Asia was forthwith proclaimed by the Romans, in consequence of which they again obtained the right of coining money. This privilege they immediately took advantage of, by issuing coins either in their own names, as, e.g., did Lampascus, Alexandria Troas, Rhum, Tenedos, Cyne, Myrina, Erythra, Heraclea Ionis, Lebedus, Magnesia, Smyrna, Perga, &c., or on the pattern of the money of Alexander the Great, and in his name, but with the addition of their respective badges and of the names of their local magistrates in the field. Among these towns were some of the above, which thus appear to have coined simultaneously money of both sorts, and Tannous, Mitylene, Phocæa, Miletus, Chios, Samos, Cos, Rhodes, with many others." Again, in B.C. 400–336, "Ephesus, Samos, Chios, and Rhodes furnish the larger portion of the silver currency of western Asia Minor, while in the East the Phœnician cities of Sidon, Tyre, and Aradus begin about B.C. 400 to strike large silver coins, the circulation of which extended along the caravan routes across the desert as far as the banks of the Euphrates and the Tigris." These are the generalities which the student of history expects from the scientific numismatist, but he may search for them in vain in numismatic literature. In the body of the 'Guide' all the coins in the exhibition are sufficiently described, and useful notes added as to inscription or type. As to the way in which this part of the work is done we need say nothing, Mr. Head's reputation for accuracy and care being a sufficient guarantee for the presence of those qualities. On comparing the 'Guide' with that published by the authorities of the museum at Berlin as an index to their exhibition of coins, we find it decidedly superior. Although the German book contains more matter, it conveys far less information, and the arrangement is not so scientific. Amid the general neglect of archaeology in England, it is pleasant to find that in some branches of the study Englishmen can hold their own.

The Coins of Elis. By Percy Gardner, M.A. (Trübner & Co.)—We are glad to see that Mr. Gardner has followed the plan, more or less inaugurated by his colleague Mr. Head, of preparing for special groups of coins a special essay or monograph. Of old, numismatic writers preferred large, and what were supposed to be exhaustive, treatises on the various branches of the subjects under their inquiry. Yet, though no one will find fault with the great volumes of Eckhel, De Saulcy, Lindsay, Leake, and others, it is impossible not to feel that the more recent plan, though far less pretentious, is in many ways the more satisfactory. It is of course requisite to determine the natural limits of the group under review, and if this be attended to, as it has been most carefully by Mr. Gardner, we shall not tire of any such essays, however numerous, provided they are illustrated by such knowledge and scholarship as the one before us, and, we may add, by such beautiful plates as the autotype process has provided for illustration. The coins of Elis, the subject of Mr. Gardner's monograph, are peculiarly well fitted for separate treatment as one subject, as they illustrate, in a way as remarkable as any other distinct series, how much of actual history can be preserved on artistic representations. Mr. Gardner, in a minute analysis, shows that no less than fifteen well-marked periods of Greek history find on the coins of Elis their appropriate illustration; but it is enough to remark here that they range from B.C. 471, or earlier, to A.D. 217, the most marked periods being their early connexion with Sparta—first aristocratically and then democratically—and the evidences of their alliance at various periods with Argos, Thebes, Macedon, Ætolia, and Achæa, with, of course, their ultimate suppression under the levelling tyranny of the Roman eagle. Upon each of these branches Mr. Gardner is as full as he is accurate, and it is not too much to say that, though dealing with what in general history might be called a very small and special point, he has given to this small point a wealth of illustration few other archaeologists could have provided.

The Indian Sankata and its Western Counterparts. By Edward Thomas, F.R.S. (Trübner & Co.)—The object of Mr. Thomas's paper is to bring together as one whole the various ideas tending to show that the symbol commonly termed the sankata represents the sun in motion, the crossbars conveying the notice of the solar rays, as in the almost similar and still clearer idea of the wheel and its radii, and in this he has succeeded, if we take the broad outline he has traced of the progress of this symbol from what seems to have been its original home, wherever the Aryans came from, to the most distant corners of the globe. Indeed, the most remarkable fact about the sankata is its wide diffusion. We find it on the coins of Greece (i.e., the triquetra of Lycia and Sicily and the labyrinth types of Crete), on the monuments discovered in vast numbers by Schliemann at Troy, on the Assyrian sculptures, under the form of the Maltese cross, on Græco-Italian vases, and on relics from Mexico. The whole of Mr. Thomas's paper is full of curious coincidences carefully arranged.

COLOGNE CATHEDRAL.

British Museum, Oct. 28, 1880.

THE interest which has been shown all over the world during the past three months in the completion of the Cathedral of Cologne is sufficient excuse for bringing before the eyes of your readers any information which may throw light on the earlier stages of the erection of the Kölner Dom. Among the Additional Charters in the British Museum is the original contract made by the Dean and Chapter of Cologne with the Burgrave of Drachenfels in the year 1285 to quarry stones out of Mount Drachenfels to be employed in the building of the church. The foundation stone of the present structure was laid in 1248, so that this contract was actually made within forty years after the beginning of the task. This document is peculiarly interesting, in that it gives us the name of the architect or director of the works at this early period, "Rudengerus procurator fabricæ Ecclesiæ Coloniensis"; and as Master Gerhard of Riehl was the first known director in 1257, it is very probable that Rudinger was the second, and his immediate successor. These stones from Mount Drachenfels were (I have seen it somewhere stated) of such a bad sort, that before they had been long introduced into the fabric they began to grow weatherbeaten and show unmistakable signs of crumbling away. They were, therefore, all removed from their positions, and replaced by others of a more enduring quality. The deed of contract runs as follows:—

"Vniuersis presentes litteras inspecturis Henricus Burgravius de Drachinval. Notum esse volumus et tenore presentium protestamur nos recepisse a Capitulo Coloniensi et Rudengero procuratore fabricæ Ecclesiæ Coloniensis XV. marcos Coloniensium denariorum. Tali videlicet condicione intraposa quod nos consentire debemus et licenciare Immo jam consentimus et licenciamus quod Capitulum et Rudengerus predictus vel quemcumque ad hoc Capitulum deputaverit cum vii^{is} viris de quibus nos ipsi proudebimus seu ipsi in nostro monte acquiramus sub suis tamen expensis quorum quatuor lapides frangent qui viganter Brechere dicuntur alii vero tres lapide qui Vorelegere nuncupantur in Monte Drachinvolu et si plures lapides qui Vorelegere dicuntur habere voluerint ipsi proudebant qui secturam lapidum faciant et exercent per ^{anno} [sic] annos qui currere incipient anno domini M^oCC^oXXXI^o quinto. In festo palmarum, ad opus structure Colonienais in quantitate et qualitate lapidum prout hoc ipse visum fuerit expedire Hoc adiecto quod si Capitulum vel quemcumque Capitulum ad hoc duxerit ordinandum Anno vno vel duobus vel tribus supersedere voluerit Ita quod dictam secturam lapidum non fecerint seu exercentur extunc erit eis liberum eodem annos recuperare in annis subsequenibus quando voluerint prout hoc ipse competet et structure memorate. Volumus etiam ut si nos quod abiat infra tempus prescriptum mori contigerit heredes nostri condicione predictas suppleant inuolabiliter et conseruent. In cuius rei Testimonium et firmitatem presentes litteras nostri ac Frederici nostri avunculi Canonici Hunnenais Ecclesie sigillorum munitione dicto Capitulo contulimus roboratas. Datum anno Domini M^oCC^oXXXI^o quinto.

At the foot of the document are two insertions, written to be added in the body of the deed; thus, at line 7 of the original, for "ipsi" read "ipsi per se sibi"; and at line 8, for "XXXI^o quinto In festo palmarum" read "nonaginta octo in die cinerum."

Attached is the only remaining seal, of which the legend has unfortunately been broken away, but the shield of arms, bearing a dragon, in allusion to Mount Drachenfels, is still perfect.

EDWARD SCOTT.

JAKOB BINCK.

SOME interest having been naturally excited by the recent appearance of my friend Mr. W. B. Scott's account of the 'Little Masters,' the moment is not inopportune to call attention to one of them, Jakob Binck, of whose career little is known, mainly from his having early in life left Germany to settle in Copenhagen, under the patronage of Christian III.

Another inducement to call attention to Jakob Binck at the present moment is furnished by an accident, which has brought to light a rather interesting fact in connexion with his career which I am led to believe has never been made public.

At the sale of the last portion of the late Mr. David Laing's books, a little volume printed on vellum attracted considerable attention. It is thus described:—"231. Passional von Herris Jesu Christi Pinis, or Doda Historie (boner-Boeg), printed on vellum in black letter, within woodcut borders, and ornamented with fifty-one elegant wood engravings from designs by Albert Durer, Lucas Cranach, &c., fine copy in Danish calf—Kiubenhaffen, h. Benedicht, s.a." It has also the following note in Laing's handwriting in the fly-leaf:—"This copy on vellum is supposed to be unique. A mistake. I have seen another copy of this edition in vellum in the Royal Library, Copenhagen. D.L."

Observing the monogram VB on a few of the borders of the illustrations, which are fifty-one in number, I naturally looked in the last and recently issued volume of Dr. Nagler's 'Monogrammisten,' where the monogram is found as that of an "unbekannter dänischer Formschneider." This is probably true as far as the borders of the designs are concerned. It proceeds to say that the designs are engraved with spirit and a light hand, &c., and adapted from the designs of Albrecht Durer and Hans Holbein.

Now I should hardly imagine the artist of the 'Passional' had ever seen Holbein's Bible prints; but if he had, and at the same time had any perception of their beauty of design, and felt inclined to borrow an idea from them, he might have made his own designs far more elegant. For Holbein, in his 'Icones Historiarum Testamenti,' the first edition of which appeared at Lyons in 1533, has divested his designs of German conventionalities, rendering them simple and beautiful in the extreme, and entirely his own. We may therefore regard Von Rumohr and M. Thiele's statement, referred to in the short article in the 'Monogrammisten,' that the artist took his ideas from Holbein, as quite erroneous.

But in regard to Dürer the statement to a certain extent is correct, for the artist of the 'Passional' has followed a few of Dürer's compositions so closely as almost to repeat them, while others are adaptations; still, a great many are entirely his own designs. In fact, he has illustrated a much greater number of subjects. With his thirteenth design we arrive at the third of Dürer's in chronological order.

On some of the borders of this series of prints, as mentioned in the 'Monogrammisten,' the VB appears with the date of 1567. The borders are made in four pieces, so as to allow the block to be placed conveniently at the sides, and with the addition of a few small ornaments a small block answers the purpose of larger ones, and no doubt would be found so used in other Danish books of the sixteenth century. But the artist who executed the borders has nothing to do with either the conception or execution of the designs for the Passion; and when we remember that Binck* lived so long at Copenhagen, and died the same year the 'Passional' was published, or the year before, we may reasonably conclude that he was the designer.

This I am inclined to infer not only from the circumstances last mentioned, but from technical points, in which the designs are similar to other and better-known works of the master; for instance, the type of many beauty Binck has chosen in Christ giving the benediction (B 14) and the Creation in the 'Passional,' and others; they are not only in harmony with one another, but they are different from anything by other masters of the same period.

Then, again, a striking peculiarity of Binck is that he is invariably unfortunate not only in drawing legs and feet, but also in their general treatment. It evidently was a weak point with him. This is also a characteristic of this volume, and it is particularly obvious in the design for the Temptation, where, to save drawing Eve's feet, the artist has hidden them behind a bank, and by so doing destroys the harmony of the whole composition. In fact, the nude figures in this volume, particularly the lower portions of them, recall to mind the twenty divinities and their attributes, in niches, after H. Rosso of Florence, which Binck copied in 1530, and which were evidently the source of his inspiration when treating the human form. Probably he thought with Barthel Beham that by studying the Italian masters he might improve his own style; but it must be admitted that he did not choose his authorities with the same judgment as his contemporary; moreover, he only copied the engravings after Rosso by Jacopo Caraglio.

In conclusion, I cannot help calling attention to the inaccuracies in the article I have mentioned in the last volume of the 'Monogrammisten,' for, in addition to the absurdities in reference to Holbein in the title of the 'Passional,' I find no less than six mistakes in the simple transcription. I am led to fear that in the five meagre parts, which form the whole of the fifth and last volume, that have been issued since the death of Dr. Nagler but scant justice has been done to the material left by him to be put in order by another hand, although he evidently imagined it would fill a full volume corresponding with the first four.

GEORGE WILLIAM REID.

Five-3rd Series.

THE exhibition of Thomas Bewick's original drawings, which we announced some months ago, will be opened next week at the Fine-Art Society's galleries in New Bond Street, the Miss Bewicks having lent for exhibition the whole of their father's works in their possession. From these a selection has been made, principally from the 'British Birds.' Bewick's well-known woodcuts will be arranged by the side of his original drawings for them, and the exhibition will surely raise his reputation. At the same time there will be exhibited a large collection of modern etchings, including works of Messrs. Samuel Palmer, J. C. Hook, Whistler, and Seymour Haden. In order that the display may be as instructive as possible, Mr. Goulding the printer of engravings, will be in attendance one half of the week printing etchings; on other days a woodcut printer will print from original Bewick blocks.

THE private views of the Winter Exhibition of Pictures by British and Foreign Artists, French Gallery, and of drawings at Mr. M'Lean's Gallery in the Haymarket are appointed for to-day (Saturday). They will be opened to the public on Monday next. So will Mr. Tooth's Winter Exhibition at 5, Haymarket.

THE Grosvenor Gallery Exhibition will be opened as usual on the 1st of January next, and comprise, besides a valuable selection of water-colour drawings by French artists, a collection of similar works by Englishmen, among which latter a number of examples by painters of Liverpool are expected.

THE task of hanging and arranging the large selection from the Crace collection of plans and drawings of London localities, which has been for several weeks in progress in the King's Library, British Museum, is now finished.

THE new arrangements for the admission of visitors to the armouries of the Tower, involving virtually a return to the old system, have been brought into effect.

THE Institute of Art, 9, Conduit Street, Regent Street, invited the press to a private view of the contents of its galleries on Friday, the 29th inst.

THE Society of Arts having caused Barry's pictures in the Great Room of its house in the Adelphi to be cleaned, that is, carefully washed, which was all these famous works required, has invited the public to inspect them in their improved condition in the room where Johnson spoke and Goldsmith broke down. The Society has published a pamphlet which contains a brief history of the paintings and the cleanings they have undergone. We are rather sorry to find that no regret is expressed for the removal from their original places in the Great Room, where they were in keeping with the works of Barry, of Gainsborough's fine whole-length portrait of Lord Folkestone, and its fellow, by Reynolds, of the Earl of Romney. Two raw, commonplace portraits badly fill the places worthily occupied for more than a century by the pictures of the first and second Presidents of the Society. If the Society of Arts is discontented with its older history, it would surely have done well to begin by expelling the demonstrative marble statue by Carlini of Dr. Joshua Ward, that impudent quack who —tried on puppies, and the poor, his drop, the hero of "the drop and pill," who, dying wealthy, desired by will to be buried in Westminster Abbey, "as near the altar as may be."

M. J. Tmor has finished the series of illustrations of a modernized version of the parable of the Prodigal Son which we described briefly a few weeks ago.

* The name of Cranach is introduced simply by the Oshlign, without the slightest authority by existing facts.

* For some account of Jakob Binck see the Fine Arts Quarterly Review for 1874 vol. II, p. 571.

Mr. W. H. Fox will deliver lectures on the simplification of the method of teaching perspective to the pupils of the Girls' Public Day School Company at 21, Queen Anne's Gate, on the 6th and 13th prox., at 10.30 A.M.

EARLY next month will appear a new work by the Rev. R. St. John Tyrwhitt, Christ Church, Oxford, entitled 'Greek and Gothic: Progress and Decay in the Three Arts of Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting.' The book will be published by Mr. Walter Smith.

Mr. A. W. HUNT will deliver a lecture in Birmingham on the 24th of November on 'Turner in Yorkshire.'

It was suggested at the late Congress of the British Archaeological Association at Devizes that a few days' excursion for some of the country members during the autumn in London might be arranged; the Council of the Association, therefore, out of a desire to do honour to these members, and to aid in the undertaking as far as possible, appointed a sub-committee, and some excursions have been made this week.

M. HENRI SCHOPIN died last week at Montigny, near Fontainebleau, aged seventy-six. He obtained the Prix de Rome in 1831, and was employed in the decoration of the Hôtel de Ville, Paris, and of the Palace at Versailles. He gained a first-class medal in 1838 and the Legion of Honour in 1864.

M. ALEXANDRE MARIE GUILLEMIN, painter, one of the few surviving pupils of Gros, died on the 26th of October at Bois le Roi, near Fontainebleau, aged sixty-three. He was born in Paris, obtained a medal of the third class in 1841, one of the second class in 1845, a roquet in 1859, and the Legion of Honour in 1861.

THE death of the distinguished Roman archaeologist, the Baron Pietro Ercole Visconti, grand-nephew of the better-known E. Q. Visconti, is recorded as having occurred at Rome on the 14th of October. He was the author of several lectures and books on archaeology, antiquities, and discoveries. Among these are 'Aperçu sur l'Origine et les Antiquités de Rome pour servir d'Explication au Panorama de la Tour du Capitole,' 1826; 'La Via Appia,' 1832; 'Gemme Incise del Cav. G. Girometti,' 1836; 'Antichi Monumenti Sepolcrali nel Ducato di Ceri,' 1836; 'Lettera di R. d'Urbino a P. Leone X.,' 1836; 'Città e Famiglie nobili e celebri dello Stato Pontificio.' Acting as Commissioner of Antiquities in Rome, Baron Visconti was fortunate in being concerned in the recovery of several sites which threw light on the topography of the city.

MADRID has added to its artistic and literary institutions a Water-Colour Society, under the honorary presidency of Señor Pradilla and the management of Señor Manresa. The members opened their first session a short time since with a class sketching from life that popular type of Spanish life, the "manola." Water-colour art, which may be said to have been commenced by Fortuny, has become a favourite study with the new school of Spanish artists.

FROM Germany comes news of the death of Herr L'Allemand, an eminently fashionable painter of portraits at Hanover in the reign of the late king.

A sum of 5,000*rs.* is about to be expended by the authorities of Pondicherry on the preservation of "historical monuments" in French India.

THE 'Jeanne d'Arc' of M. Bastien Lepage, which was so much admired at the last Salon, has been sold to an American millionaire for 20,000 francs.

THE Moniteur des Arts gives the following curious statistics about the number of times distinguished contributors to the last Salon were named by critics:—"On verra dans cette longue nomenclature que les préférés de la presse sont aussi ceux du public. Ainsi, MM. Bonnat et Bastien Lepage arrivent en tête de la liste avec 199 articles ou citations; viennent ensuite MM. Bouguereau, 160; Puvis de Chavannes, 151; J. A. Breton, 139; Henner, 136; Alex. Cabanel et Carolus Duran, chacun 133; Cormon, 130; Suchetet, 129; Roll, 124; Morot, 128; J. P. Laurens, 120; Gervex, 118; Becker, 117; Feytaud Perrin, 113; Dagnan-Bouveret, 112; Lerolle, 105; Manet, 103; et Luminais, 102."

MUSIC

MR. WALTER BACKE'S PIANO-FORTE RECITAL. (Fourth Season). St. James's Hall, MONDAY, November 1st, at Half-past Three. Vocalist: Miss Anna Williams. Soloist: Mr. B. J. Adlam. In the evening, 7.30. Chappell & Co., Musical Agents, and Artists & Ticket Office, St. James's Hall.

THE WEEK.

HER MAJESTY'S.—'Lucia,' 'Norma,' and 'Faust.' CRISTAL PALACE.—'Blossie's' 'Roma.'

A FAVOURABLE début was made by Mdlle. Rosina Isidor last Saturday evening in the character of Lucia. Youth, a pleasing appearance, and obvious dramatic intelligence are among the attributes of Mdlle. Isidor, and as these are united to vocal capabilities of no mean order, she must be regarded as an acquisition. Her voice is full rather than "light" in quality, and of sufficient power to enable her to assume some of the more dramatic parts. The mad scene was sung in the original key, and she made no attempt to reach exceptionally high notes, though her floriture were executed with fluency and neatness. Mdlle. Lorenzini Gianoli, who appeared on Tuesday in 'Norma,' was engaged somewhat suddenly in place of another lady whom illness detained abroad. Mr. Armit's endeavours to keep faith with his public at any cost and risk are worthy of commendation, but it is questionable whether the revival of such an antiquated opera is wise policy. The state of the house did not betoken any large amount of interest in the experiment. Even in the lifetime of Tietjens 'Norma' barely kept the stage, and where the great German artist failed Mdlle. Gianoli will not succeed. She is an experienced performer, and quite equal to the stage business of a dramatic rôle. But her voice is worn, and the vibrato is developed to a painful extent. The vocalization of Mdlle. Bauermeister as Adalgisa was far more pleasing, though this clever little singer was not in full possession of her means. Signor Vizzani as Pollio seemed to labour much with the music, and he might consider the advisability of attempting some of the lighter baritone parts, as the compass of his voice is so limited. Mdlle. Elisa Widmar, who was to have opened the season as Marguerite in 'Faust,' having recovered from her indisposition, made her début on Wednesday in Gounod's favourite opera, and fairly won the suffrages of the audience. Her voice is small, but its quality is sympathetic, and her method is happily free from the vices of the French school. It was evident that Mdlle. Widmar was suffering from a severe attack of nervousness, which caused her to hurry the tempo in many passages, and she was apparently unaccustomed to sing in so large a theatre; but her performance on the whole, though far from great, was pleasing and artistic, and, as she is still in her first youth, there is ample reason to hope that a satisfactory career may be in store for her. Signor Ordinas had to a considerable extent recovered his voice, and was fairly acceptable as Mephistopheles; but Signor Runcio does not invest the music of Faust with any charm, his phrasing being very rough and unfinished, and his mezza voce quite ineffective. He is more acceptable as Don José in 'Carmen,' an opera which seems to have lost nothing of its popularity. It is but just to record a marked improvement in the general performances. The orchestra and chorus are now working well together, and for the last two or three evenings there has been very little of which to complain.

Georges Bizet adds, by his history, another to the numerous instances of composers whose genius has been fully recognized only after their death. It is true that in this case his fame has not been entirely posthumous; for his greatest opera, 'Carmen,' was produced during his lifetime, though he lived but for two months to enjoy its success. It is only within the last few years, however, that the composer's works have been estimated at their right value, and that musicians have felt how much has been lost by Bizet's early death. The suite entitled 'Roma,' which formed the special feature of last Saturday's concert at the Crystal Palace, will undoubtedly add to his reputation. Though entitled a "suite," it might almost more appropriately have been termed a symphony, to the form of which it somewhat closely approximates. We are informed, indeed, in the book of the words, that the manuscript score bears the inscription by the author, "Symphonie, No. 1." If this be so, the change of name is probably due to the publishers.

Whether it be called symphony or suite, there can be no doubt that 'Roma' is a work of high inspiration, and (in spite of occasional suggestions of Beethoven) of far more than average originality. The first movement opens with a rather long andante in c major, the charming theme of which is first announced by four horns, and then repeated and extended by other wind instruments. Further developments of this theme lead at length to an allegro agitato in c minor, full of energy and passion. In this movement we find a peculiar rhythm which is identical with one playing a prominent part in the first movement of Beethoven's Symphony in A. The treatment is, however, so different that there can be no question of a reminiscence. The "second subject" of the movement, given in the first instance to the clarinet, is of special beauty. In the second part of the movement the various themes are subjected to new treatment. Thus far everything has been in the orthodox symphonic form; but at the point where in general the first theme of the allegro would be reintroduced, Bizet makes an important innovation; he brings back, not the subject of the allegro, but that of the introductory andante, which, with slight modifications, is repeated almost in its entirety. The second movement, which is in reality a scherzo with trio, is altogether symphonic in form. We are inclined to consider this the gem of the whole work. It is full of light and sparkling melody, absolutely original, and most delightfully scored. The following andante molto, though the opening phrase has a distinct resemblance to a melody in the slow movement of the 'Choral' Symphony, is charmingly fresh in character. A subject which occurs as an episode, and which here much resembles a chorale, is used again under totally changed conditions in the finale. This andante is one long stream of melody, which, with much variety of detail, preserves perfect unity of character. The finale (allegro vivacissimo), entitled "Carnaval," is in musical value inferior to other portions of the work. It is full of character, and overflowing with animal spirits; but the chief subjects lack the refinement which we find in the other movements, and have even a certain tinge of vulgarity about them. This, however, does not make the finale ineffective: it is extremely pleasing music, but it appeals to a lower order of emotions than the rest of the work; it tickles the ear rather than satisfies the heart. The orchestration of the whole suite is most masterly, and many of the effects which Bizet has obtained from his instruments are, so far as our experience goes, quite new. We have no hesitation in ranking 'Roma' among the most interesting novelties that have been heard in this country for a considerable period. The performance was one of those triumphs of execution of which, in this country, Mr. Manna and his orchestra appear almost to possess a monopoly. The work is of very great difficulty for all concerned; but the fire, finish, and delicacy with which it was given were such as can only be heard at the Crystal Palace.

Schubert's pleasing overture to 'Des Teufel's Lustschloß,' which was performed for the first time in London at the concert of the London Musical Society in St. James's Hall last June, and was then criticized in these columns, was the opening piece of the concert, which concluded with the Scherzo, Notturmo, and March from the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' music. The remaining orchestral number was an Arioso by Handel, arranged by Hellmesberger for violin, harp, organ, violoncello, and double basses. The arranger has doubtless tried to repeat the success he obtained with a similar transcription of a Largo, now well known from frequent performance. We doubt whether the arioso, which is adapted from the opera of 'Alcina,' will be as popular as its predecessor; it is more sombre in style, and (to use a colloquial expression) not so "taking" in character. Mr. Sutton, a pupil of M. Sainton, whose début at the Gloucester Festival we chronicled a few weeks ago, gave a very good performance of the first movement of Viëuxtemps's Concerto in A. The piece is very long and very dull; but Mr. Sutton did all that could be done with it, though he would doubtless have been heard to greater advantage in more effective music. Mr. Santley was the vocalist of the after-good technique by the composer; a song, "O let the solid ground," by Miss Ida Walter, sung by Miss Marian McKenna, a highly promising contralto; and a quartet, "The eyes of all," by Miss Elizabeth Fokett.

SCHUMANN's only opera, 'Genovava,' which on its first production was comparatively unsuccessful, seems to be at length taking the place it deserves in Germany. It has just been performed for the first time at Frankfurt-on-the-Main and enthusiastically received by the public. Being one of its composer's finest and most characteristic works, it would, we should think, have a good chance of success if produced in London.

At Mr. George Riseley's third Monday Popular Concert, given at the Colston Hall, Bristol, on the 18th inst., Schubert's unfinished Symphony in B minor, Rombert's 'Toy Symphony,' and the overtures to the 'Ruler of the Spirits' and 'La Gatta Ladra' were the most important works produced. The vocalists were Miss Helen Lamb and Miss Hilda Wilson.

MR. WILLIAM CARTER announces a series of six grand opera recitals, to be given at St. George's Hall on successive Saturday evenings. At the first, which takes place to-night, 'Il Trovatore' is to be performed.

LAST Sunday week, the 17th inst., the first of a series of popular concerts was given at the Théâtre Valette, Marseilles, with a programme which is worth quoting in its entirety, as showing the class of music which it is intended to perform. It was as follows:—Symphony in D (Beethoven), scene from 'Orpheus' (Gluck), 'Danse Macabre' (Saint-Saëns), Overture, 'Oberon' (Weber), Austrian Hymn (Haydn), played by all the strings of the orchestra; introduction to third act of 'Lohengrin' (Wagner), and 'Benediction of the Banners' from the 'Siege of Corinth' (Rossini). The performance, directed by M. Reynaud, is spoken of as a complete success.

A LETTER from Venice in the Bund of Berne states that Richard Wagner has been staying for a month in a Venetian palazzo. He spent the last winter and summer in Naples, and has chosen Venice as a halting station before going back to Bayreuth. The news that "the master" was there brought a whole flock of his admirers to the city. His 'Rienzi' has been received with the greatest enthusiasm in Rome.

MISS HELEN HOPKINS, a pianist who will be remembered as having made a most successful appearance at the Crystal Palace Concerts last year, gave a pianoforte recital at the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, on Saturday last, assisted by Signor Alberto Bach and Mr. Carl Hamilton. The local papers speak very highly of her performance.

MR. J. F. BOWSBOTHAM, formerly scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, is engaged upon a 'General History of Music.'

HERR THEODOR HARTSCHL's new opera, 'Lancelot,' was produced at the Leipzig Stadttheater on the 16th inst. The work, which is favourably spoken of, is said to show distinctly the influence of Wagner, both in the poem and music.

It is announced by Richard Wagner's organ, the Bayreuther Blätter, that the production of 'Parsifal' is now definitely fixed for the year 1881.

M. EDOUARD WOLFF, a pianist and composer of considerable talent, has just died at Paris at the age of sixty-seven. He was a native of Warsaw, and had lived in Paris since 1836. He was the uncle of the well-known artists Henri and Joseph Wianiewski.

THE eighth annual Bombay Choral Festival took place at St. Thomas's Cathedral, Bombay, on the 29th of last month, under the direction of Mr. M. R. Wyer, the choristers numbering 126. The festival began with the processional hymn, "Forward be our watchword." The anthems were "Judge me, O God," and "plead my cause before an ungodly nation," and the "Hallelujah Chorus" from the 'Messiah,' both of which were well rendered. The service concluded with the recessional hymn, "Now thank we all our God."

A comic opera, 'Deseret,' by Mr. Dudley Buck, an American composer of much talent, has lately been produced in New York. Opinions as to its merits seem greatly divided—one notice which we have seen speaking highly of the new work, while another describes it as altogether unworthy of its composer's reputation.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEES AND MANAGERS, MR. HENRY IRVING.
"THE COMICIAN BROTHERS" Every Night at 8.30. LOUIS and FABIEN DES FRANCHES! MR. IRVING AT 7.30. "BYRONES" Doors open at 7. MORNING PERFORMANCES OF "THE COMICIAN BROTHERS" SATURDAY (October 24th) November 6th and 13th, also on WEDNESDAY November 2nd and 10th at 1.30. Box Office (Mr. Mann) open 10 to 6. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE WEEK.

ADRIEN.—'The O'Dowd,' a Drama in Four Acts. By Dion Boucicault.
GAIETY.—'The Comician Brothers & Co., Limited,' a Farce in Two Scenes. By F. C. Burnand and H. P. Stephens.

MR. BOUCICAULT's new drama, 'The O'Dowd,' proves to be an adaptation of 'Les Crochets du Père Martin' of MM. Cormon and Grangé, a play first given at the Gaité in 1858, and produced at the Olympic the same year in a version by John Oxenford, entitled 'The Porter's Knot.' A very free rendering so far as regards dialogue and characters, 'The O'Dowd' adheres to the original in respect of its incidents with a closeness that speaks loudly for Mr. Boucicault's appreciation of the work of his predecessors. All that has been added to the story consists of episode which aims at supplying local colour. In the class of work he has once more attempted Mr. Boucicault has no superior. His plays are constructed with remarkable skill, and serve the purpose he has in view of concentrating public attention upon a given figure. That the figure on which is thrown the whole light of the drama is that of Mr. Boucicault, and that those who remain without the luminous circle are, with one or two exceptions, actors of little mark, are matters on which the public may, perhaps, be congratulated. If Mr. Boucicault challenges for himself the attention of the audience, he at least shows it something worth seeing.

Dealing first with the piece, there may be urged against it that the contrasts are too violent, and that the effects generally are too broad. To take the first alone of the four acts over which the action extends; in this, which is in all respects the most probable, we find a young man, whose entire income is four hundred pounds a year, losing a couple of thousand pounds at a sitting, and complacently writing a cheque for the amount, though a few minutes afterwards his furniture is seized under an execution. We watch him, moreover, with candles burning, engaged in play until an hour so late in a summer morning that the ordinary business of life has commenced, and a visit from ladies is expected; and we see his father enter while the signs of revelry are still unremoved, and the candles still alight, and regard apparently this state of things as the most natural in the world. Mr. Boucicault, however, knows

Musical Society.

THE first students' chamber concert of the Royal Academy of Music was given on Saturday evening at the hall in Tenterden Street. This was the first occasion on which Mr. William Shakespeare officiated as conductor, and he created a marked impression in his favour. The compositions by students included in the programme were a Pianoforte Sonata, or rather Sonatina, in F, by Miss Annie Tait, played with the public, and his confidence in it is justified. If any misgiving is aroused, it is forgotten in the interest inspired by the acting. As it is with the early scenes it is with all. The same extravagances are everywhere apparent, and the act of indemnity which is passed extends to them all.

There is, however, a single exception: Mr. Boucicault's political explanations fail to commend themselves to the public. The scenes in which he expounds his views about Irish discontent and shows the Hibernian method of dealing with outsiders and aliens please nobody. That this should be the case scarcely affords cause for astonishment. According to the lesson of the play, an Englishman is not justified in seeking to get back money from Ireland, even though it has been first drawn from his pockets by a process of swindling. Supposing this state of affairs to exist in Ireland, it is still conceivable that Irishmen will scarcely be thankful to one who puts it forward with all the vivacity and force of dramatic exposition. The neutral portion of the audience meanwhile find these things simple weariness. They have too much respect for Mr. Boucicault's capacities to yield to the opportunity for derision afforded them, and can only wish that authors would learn the lesson that a work of fiction with a purpose is a thing not to be tolerated by "gods, men, or columns."

When Mr. Boucicault has excised his political scenes and allusions, and has converted his play into a simple drama of Irish life, it is probable that his own marvellously fine impersonation of the O'Dowd will win full recognition, and gain for the piece a foremost position among modern entertainments. Very seldom has a performance more artistic or more touching than that he supplies been set before the public. The O'Dowd is an old Irishman who, having by hard work and heroism scraped together a fortune, the whole of which he destines to his only son, finds that in educating that son above his station he has ruined him. To screen the youth from the dishonour and infamy which are at hand, he yields up his entire savings and recommences the life of arduous labour he had known in early years. For the porter's knot, which Robson drew forth under similar circumstances, is now substituted a fish-barrow, which the O'Dowd recommences to wheel. Three or four scenes present themselves in the course of this plot in which Mr. Boucicault is excellent. His manner of encountering the derision of the aristocratic friends of his son, into whose company he intrudes; his horror at finding a charge of villainy brought against his boy, who dares not rebut it; his swoon upon signing the deed which makes him once more a pauper, and his feeble perturbation when the criminal returns from over-sea and endeavours to force from him a recognition of which his scattered wits are for the time incapable, are superb, and the whole constitutes a remarkable display of pathos. That intensity, almost tragic, which was the secret of Robson's success, Mr. Boucicault does not possess, nor are his transitions from comedy to pathos so rapid or so startling as those of his great predecessor. There is, however, even more finish, more perfection of detail, and the effect produced is, if not so great as that made by Robson, at least the most remarkable that has since been seen. Neither Mr. Neville nor Miss Lydia Foote was seen to advantage, and the performance possessed little merit beyond the acting of Mr. Boucicault.

The new burlesque of 'The Corsican Brothers' which has been produced at the Gaiety aims rather at parodying the performance at the Lyceum than the piece extracted from the romance of Alexandre Dumas. It is above the average of works in its class, and has some comic scenes and fairly amusing dialogue. Mr. Royce's imitation of Mr. Irving is highly successful.

Dramatic Society.

MR. FLORENCE is likely to be seen before long in a sketch from Dickens, entitled 'Captain Cuttle.' In the course of next spring he proposes to play in a drama of serious interest.

THE first novelty to be produced by Miss Litton during her management of the Glasgow Theatre will consist of an adaptation, by Mr. Palgrave Simpson, of Scott's novel of 'Woodstock.' In this Miss Litton will play the fugitive king, Charles II.

'THE LADY OF LYONS' was revived on Wednesday at Sadler's Wells, with Miss Isabel Bateman as Pauline, Mr. Charles Warner as Claude Melnotte, and Mr. E. H. Brooke as Beauchamp. Mr. Warner's performance is far from satisfactory.

In consequence of the temporary indisposition of Mr. J. S. Clarke, 'London Assurance' was hurriedly revived at the Haymarket on Thursday last.

THE feature of most general interest in next year's season of French plays at the Gaiety will consist of the appearance of Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt in 'Le Sphinx.' In addition to this piece Mlle. Bernhardt will play in 'Frou-Frou' and 'Adrienne Lecouvreur.' Among the pieces to be given by the company of the Gymnase Dramatique, which is announced to appear on June 8th, are 'Le Papillon' of M. Sardou, in the altered version which has just obtained at the Gymnase the triumph the original play failed to achieve at the Comédie Française, 'Le Fils de Coralie,' 'Héloïse Paranguet,' 'Nos Braves Gens,' and 'Les Danicheff.' With the play last named the performances are to commence.

At the "classic matinées" now given on Sundays at the Odéon, M. Mounet-Sully cadet, a brother of the well-known cadet of the Comédie Française, has made his début as Horace in the well-known tragedy of Corneille. He appears to have a certain measure of the amplitude of gesture and sonorousness of voice characteristic of his brother. M. Dumaine, as le vieil Horace, and Mlle. Agar also took part in the representation.

M. BERNARD ROSIER, whose death in his seventy-seventh year is announced from Mar-seilles, was a fairly prolific dramatist, author of 'La Mort de Figaro' and other pieces. His best known work was, however, the libretto of the 'Songe d'une Nuit d'été,' which he wrote for Ambroise Thomas.

A REPRESENTATION of Shakspeare's 'Comedy of Errors' in Marathi was lately given at Guncash Kind, in Bombay, by the Ichalkaranjiker Hindu Dramatic Corps, in the presence of the Governor of Bombay and his suite, twenty European gentlemen, and about two hundred and fifty influential native gentlemen. The performance is said to have been a great success.

ALL CORRESPONDENTS.—W. H. L.—J. C. A.—J. C. S.—T. W. B.—H. v. L.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

A FIRST LIST OF SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON'S NEW AND FORTHCOMING WORKS.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, with Maps, Coloured Plates, and numerous very fine Woodcut Illustrations, price 42s.

NEW GUINEA: What I Did and What I Saw. By L. M. ALBERTA, Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Honorary Member and Gold Medalist of the I.R.G.S. C.M.S., &c.

"Long looked for come at last."—Full Mail Gazette.
"A book that has long been looked forward to.... If such unalloyed, the ardent spirit of inquiry, resolution, love of nature so intense as to jar with the sportsman's instinct of destruction, courage to wren with bodily infirmity, keen observation of the minutest facts, a practical habit of scientific exactness and those qualities of the imagination which guide and support the intellect in pursuing actual scientific knowledge, make a perfect traveller, here, surely, is the veritable type."
Daily Telegraph.

PEASANT LIFE in the WEST of ENGLAND. By FRANCIS GEORGE KEATH, Author of 'The English Peasantry,' 'The Pure Paradise,' 'Bygone Spring,' 'The Pure World,' 'Our Woodland Trees,' 'Barnham Swiches,' 'Trees and Fens,' &c. Crown 8vo. about 350 pages, 10s. 6d. (Ready.)

Specially Suitable for Presentation.
An entirely NEW EDITION of LUKE for Christmas, &c., of WASHINGTON IRVING'S LITTLE BRITAIN, together with the SPECTACULAR BRIDGROOM and a LEGEND OF SLEEPY HOLLOW. Illustrated by 120 very fine Engravings on Wood by Mr. J. D. Cooper, designed by Mr. Charles G. Murray. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 12s. 6d.

CHEAP SERIES OF
ENGLISH PHILOSOPHERS.
Edited by IWAN MÜLLER, M.A., New College, Oxford.
Price and Size 180 to 200 pages. Size, crown 8vo. Price, 3s. 6d.
ADAM SMITH, J. FARRER, M.A., Author of 'Primitive Manners and Customs.' (Just ready.)

ÉDITION DE LUXE.
The EVE of ST. AGNES. By John KEATH. Illustrated by 19 Etchings by Charles O. Murray. Folio, cloth extra, 75s. (Ready.)

The GREAT MUSICIANS. A
Series of Monographs of the Great Musicians. Edited by F. H. CROFT.
1. WAGNER. By the EDITOR. (Nearly ready.)

The STORY of the ZULU CAMPAIGN. By Major ARMS (late King's Dragoon Guards). Author of 'The History of the Institutions of France,' &c. and Captain the Hon. R. V. WYATT EDGELL (late Lancashire Militia at Ulundi). Dedicated by special permission to Her Imperial Highness the Empress Eugénie. (Just ready.)

The NAVAL BRIGADE in SOUTH AFRICA. By HENRY F. NORMAN, C.M.S. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, price 10s. 6d.

The PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY
of the BRITISH LAND QUESTION from 1620 to 1820, and the Origin and Results of the Under Cultivation. By R. HARRY O. BAKER, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Author of 'The Irish Land Question and English Public Opinion.' 6s. (Just ready.)

ÉDITION DE LUXE.
SIR EDWIN LANDSEER, By
FREDERICK O. STEINER. Large-Paper Edition, crown 8vo. with numerous Reproductions of Historic Engravings after Sir Edwin's most famous Paintings, and Preceded by many of his Etchings. Handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards and gilt edges, price 21s. (Just ready.)

Imperial 4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 30s.
The VOLUME of the GREAT HISTORIC GALLERY of ENGLAND. Edited by Lord RONALD GOWER, F.R.S., Treasurer of the National Portrait Gallery. (Ready.)

MEN of MARK. Volume V. Containing 24 very fine Permanent Cabinet-size Photographs of Men of the Day taken specially from Life by Lock & Whistler, with brief Biographical Notices by THOMAS COOPER, F.R.S. Square 4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 35s. (Ready.)
"The photographs are very fine specimens of their art."—Times.

NEW NOVELS.
SARAH de BERANGER. New Novel. By Jean INGLOW. 3 vols. (Ready.)

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART. By W. Clark RUSSELL. Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,' 'John Kibworth,' &c. 3 vols. (Ready.)

A PLOT of the PRESENT DAY. By Kate Hays. 3 vols. (Ready.)

BLACK ABBEY. By E. Crommelin, Author of 'Queenie,' &c. 3 vols. (Ready.)

The GRANDIDURS: a Tale of Berlin. Translated from the German by Captain WM. SAVILE. 3 vols. (Ready.)

The STILLWATER TRAGEDY. By J. R. Aldrich. 3 vols. (Ready.)

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

BENTLEY'S
FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Each Work can be had separately, price 6s., of all Booksellers in Town or Country.

NOTICE.—DOROTHY FOX,
by Mrs. PARR, Author of 'Adam and Eve,' will be added to this Series on November 6th.

By Mrs. Henry Wood.

East Lynne. (25th Thousand).
The Channings. (35th Thousand).
Mrs. Halliburton's Troubles.
The Master of Greylands.
Verner's Pride.
Within the Maze.
Lady Adelaide.
Becky Kane.
Roland Yorke.
Lord Oakburn's Daughters.
Shadow of Ashlydyat.
Oswald Cray.
Dene Hollow.
George Canterbury's Will.
Trevlyn Hold.
Mildred Arkell.
Mr. Martin's Eve.
Elster's Folly.
Anne Hereford.
A Life's Secret.
Red Court Farm.
Orville College.
Parkwater.
Edinborough Abbey.
Johnny Ludlow. (First Series.)

By Miss Austen.

(The only Complete Edition.)

Sense and Sensibility.
Emma.
Pride and Prejudice.
Mansfield Park.
Northanger Abbey and Persuasion.
Lady Susan and the Watsons.

By Anthony Trollope.

The Three Clerks.

By Jessie Fothergill.

The First Violin.
Probation.

By Rhoda Broughton.

Joan.
Nancy.
Good-bye, Sweetheart.
Red as a Rose is She.
Cometh Up as a Flower.
Not Wisely but Too Well.
By Mrs. Alexander.
The Heritage of Langdale.
Her Dearest Foe.
The Wooing O't.
Which Shall It Be?

By Mrs. Annie Edwardes.

Leah: a Woman of Fashion.
Ought We to Visit Her?
Susan Fielding.
Steven Lawrence: Yeoman.

By Hawley Smart.

Breezie Langton.

By Helen Mathers.

Comin' Thro' the Rye.
Cherry Ripe!

By Mrs. Hetley.

Olive Varcoe.

By Marcus Clarke.

For the Term of his Natural Life.

By Miss Cary.

Nellie's Memories.

By Harriette Trenchard.

The Initials.
Quits.
Cyrilla.

By Lady G. Fullerton.

Constance Sherwood.
Too Strange Not to be True.
Labybird.

BENTLEY'S
FOREIGN FAVOURITE NOVELS.

By Mrs. Augustus Graves.

A Sister's Story.

By E. Werner.

Success: and How he Won It.
Under a Charm.

Some Standard Works.

THE HISTORY OF ANTIQUITY. Translated from the German of Professor MAX MÜLLER by EVELYN ARBOTH, D.C.L., M.A., of Balliol College, Oxford. 3 vols. demy 8vo. 12s. each. (Fourth Volume immediately.)

Professor MOMMSEN'S HISTORY OF ROME, from the Earliest Time to the Period of its Decline. Translated (with the Author's sanction, and Additions) by the Rev. W. F. DICKSON. With an Introduction by Dr. SCHMIDT. 4 vols. crown 8vo. 12s. 6d. or separately, Vols. I. and II. 12s.; Vol. III. 10s. 6d.; Vol. IV. with Index 12s. Also, a LIBRARY EDITION, in 4 vols. demy 8vo. 12s. These Volumes are not sold separately. The Indian to the Two Editions separately, each 6d.

Professor CURTIUS'S HISTORY OF GREECE.

Translated by A. W. WARD, M.A. Vols. I. and II. each 12s.; Vols. III., IV., and V. with Index, each 12s. "A history known to scholars as one of the profoundest, most original, and instructive of modern times."—Globe.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S RISE AND PROGRESS OF THE ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. Part 8vo. 1s. 6d.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES OF THE WORLD from Marathon to Waterloo. Crown 8vo. with Plans, &c. Also, a LIBRARY EDITION, 8vo. with Plans, 12s. 6d.

Sir EDWARD CREASY'S HISTORY OF THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE from the Beginning of their Empire to the Close of 1878. Crown 8vo. 6s. "It should be added to every library."—Family Fair.

THE LIVES OF THE ARCHBISHOPS OF CANTERBURY from St. Augustine to Jaxon. By the late Very Rev. WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D. Dean of Winchester. 11 vols. demy 8vo. 4s. 6d. Or sold separately, as follows: Vol. I. 12s.; Vol. II. 12s.; Vol. III. and IV. 20s.; Vol. V. 12s.; Vol. VI. and VII. 20s.; Vol. VIII. 12s.; Vol. IX. 12s.; Vol. X. 12s.; Vol. XI. 12s. The Second Series commenced with Vol. VI.

THE CHURCH and its ORDINANCES: Sermons by the late WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D., Dean of Winchester. Edited by the Rev. WALTER HOOK, Rector of Farnham. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

PARISH SERMONS. By the late WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D. Dean of Winchester. Edited by the Rev. WALTER HOOK, Rector of Farnham. Crown 8vo. 4s.

ESSAYS: CLASSICAL AND THEOLOGICAL. By the late CONNOP THIRLWALL, D.D. Bishop of St. David's. Edited by the Rev. CANON FLEMING. Demy 8vo. 20s.

THE HEAVENS: an Illustrated Handbook of Popular Astronomy. By ANDRÉ GUILLÉMIN. Edited by J. NORMAN LOCKYER, F.R.S., F.R.A.S. New and Revised Edition, embodying the latest Discoveries in Astronomical Science. Demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, price 12s.

MARVELS OF THE HEAVENS. From the French of FLAMMARION. By Mrs. LOCKYER, Translator of 'The Heavens.' Crown 8vo. with 48 Illustrations, 4s.

THE LIFE OF LORD PALMERSTON. With Selections from his Diaries and Correspondence. By the Hon. EVELYN ANSLIE M.P. The New Edition, 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each Volume, 12s.

THE INGOLDSBY LEGENDS; or, Mirth and Romance.

THE ANNOTATED EDITION. A Library Edition, with a History of each Legend and other Notes. The Illustrations by Craikbank and Leach. 3 vols. 8vo. 12s.

THE ILLUSTRATED EDITION. In crown 4to. with 48 Illustrations by Craikbank, Leach, and Tenniel. 12s.

THE CARMINE EDITION. In crown 8vo. with Carmine Border and 17 Illustrations by Craikbank and Leach. Gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

THE EDINBURGH EDITION. In large type, crown 8vo. With 24 Illustrations by Craikbank, Leach, Tenniel, and Dr. Maclure. Specially re-engraved for this Edition by George Peckham. 6s.

THE POPULAR EDITION. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE VICTORIA (Pocket) EDITION. Fcap. 8vo. 2s.

FRANK BUCKLAND'S CURIOSITIES OF NATURAL HISTORY

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION. 4 vols. Illustrated, 12s. Or separately:—

FIRST SERIES, containing Rats, Serpents, Fishes, Monkeys, &c. 2s. 6d.

SECOND SERIES, containing Wild Cats, Eagles, Worms, Dogs, &c. 2s. 6d.

THIRD SERIES, containing Lions, Tigers, Foxes, Porpoises, &c. 2s. 6d.

FOURTH SERIES, containing Giants, Mermaids, Salmon, &c. 2s. 6d.

POPULAR NOVELS,
AT ALL LIBRARIES.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DOROTHY FOX. ADAM AND EVE. By Mrs. Parr, Author of 'Dorothy Fox.' In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

MR. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL. The RED BAG. By R. Mountaney JEPHSON, Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

MRS. HENRY WOOD'S NEW WORK. JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, Author of 'East Lynne,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"These most exquisite studies have by common consent won such praise as would have made a reputation for a new writer. This second series is in every respect equal to the first. For one thing there is more variety in the stories. They touch a wider more varied range of life and character."—Nonconformist and Independent

BENTLEY'S EMPIRE LIBRARY.

These volumes are produced on good paper, and are well printed and neatly bound, so that when any work has been read it can find a permanent place in the library. Each Volume price Half-a-Crown.

By CHARLES DICKENS.

THE MUDFOG PAPERS.

By Miss MATHERS.

THE LAND OF THE LEAL.

By Miss FLORENCE MONTGOMERY.

A VERY SIMPLE STORY and WILD MIKE.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.

RALPH WILTON'S WEIRD.

By Mrs. ANNIE EDWARDES.

A BLUE STOCKING.

By Miss MATHERS.

AS HE COMES UP THE STAIR.

ANONYMOUS.

FIVE YEARS' PENAL SERVITUDE.

By WILKIE COLLINS.

A ROGUE'S LIFE.

By A GERMAN PRIEST.

A VICTIM OF THE FALK LAWS.

By Mrs. ANNIE EDWARDES.

A VAGABOND HEROINE.

By Mrs. G. W. GODFREY.

MY QUEEN.

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

ARCHIBALD MALMAISON.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

TWILIGHT STORIES.

Also, immediately, a New Volume by FLORENCE MONTGOMERY, Author of 'Misunderstood,' &c., entitled

HERBERT MANNERS
AND OTHER STORIES.

MESSRS. SEELEY & CO.

ARE NOW PUBLISHING:—

Crown 8vo. price 4s. 6d. cloth,
CLERICAL REMINISCENCES.
 By BENEX.

With Coloured Illustrations, crown 8vo. price 5s. cloth, STORIES OF THE EAST, FROM HERODOTUS.

By the Rev. A. J. CHURCH, M.A.,
 Author of 'Stories from Homer,' &c.

With Coloured Illustrations, crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. cloth,
THE STORY OF THE LAST DAYS OF JERUSALEM.

By the Rev. A. J. CHURCH, M.A.,
 Author of 'Stories from Homer,' &c. [In November.]

Imperial 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 12. 11s. 6d.
SCHOOLS OF MODERN ART IN GERMANY.

By J. BEAUVINGTON ATKINSON.
 With 16 Engravings and numerous Woodcuts.
 Also a Large-Paper Edition, with Plates on India paper, price 3l. 2s.

Imperial 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 1l. 1s.
CAMBRIDGE: HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE NOTES.

By J. W. CLARK, M.A.
 With 12 Etchings and numerous Woodcuts by A. Brunet
 Delaune and H. Trossel.
 Also a Large-Paper Edition, with Proofs of the Etchings, price 3l. 2s. [In November.]

Imperial 4to. cloth, gilt edges,
THE ITCHEN VALLEY: FROM TICHBORNE TO SOUTHAMPTON.

22 Etchings by HENWOOD SUMNER.
 Also a Large-Paper Edition, with Proofs of the Plates. [In November.]

8vo. cloth, gilt edges, price 18s.
SUCCESS WITH SMALL FRUITS.

By E. P. BOZ.
 With numerous fine Woodcuts.

New Edition, 8vo. cloth,
LIFE OF ALBERT DÜRER.

By Mrs. CHARLES HEATON.
 With 17 Illustrations. [Shortly.]

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.
MEMORIES OF TROUBLOUS TIMES.

By Mrs. MARSHALL.
 "Mrs. Marshall has written many pleasing stories, but none of them are better than her 'Memories of Troublous Times.'"—Guardian.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
A NEST OF SPARROWS: A TALE.
 By M. E. WINCHESTER. [Shortly.]

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.
DUTIES AND DUTIES: A TALE.
 By AGNES GIBERNE. [In November.]

16mo. cloth, gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.
MY FATHER'S HOUSE; OR, THOUGHTS ABOUT HEAVEN.

By AGNES GIBERNE.

A New and very Cheap Edition of
AGATHOS, AND OTHER SUNDAY STORIES.

By the late BISHOP WILBERFORCE.
 With 8 Illustrations, price 1s. cloth.

SEELEY & Co. 54, Fleet-street, London.

THE
LIFE OF SIR ANTHONY PANIZZI, K.C.B.,

LATE PRINCIPAL LIBRARIAN OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM, SENATOR OF ITALY, &c.

By LOUIS FAGAN.

Two vols. demy 8vo. handsomely bound, with Frontispiece and numerous Illustrations, 25s.

* The FIRST EDITION having Sold Out in the First Week of Publication, a SECOND EDITION is now IN THE PRESS, and will be READY EARLY in the ENSUING WEEK.

"A Panizzi biography, should Mr. Fagan accomplish his task, would have an importance hardly inferior to any of the works added during this last half-century to the heavily-burdened shelves of our great book repository."—Times, Sept. 11.
 "Mr. Fagan has made good use of the materials bequeathed to him, and has produced a work of great and probably lasting interest."—Athenæum.

REMINGTON & Co. 133, New Bond-street, W.

HENRY SOTHERAN & CO.'S
 NEW FINE-ART PUBLICATIONS.

New Edition, in 1 handsome vol. Imperial 8vo. NEARLY READY,

THE KERAMIC ART OF JAPAN.

By G. A. AUDSLEY, Architect, and J. L. BOWES, President of the Liverpool Fine-Art Club.

The success of the Large Edition, in 2 vols. folio, of this charming Work (the whole Edition of 1,000 Copies being now all but exhausted) has induced the Authors to bring out a New Edition, in a condensed and more compact form, the Plates, though necessarily reduced in size, being executed with the same beauty and high finish as in the previous one. The TEXT also, though less diffuse, is sufficiently copious, and fully describes all the Plates which illustrate the Work; but it contains ADDITIONS, bringing the Information up to Date.

The New Edition will comprise upwards of 80 Chromo-lithographs, Autotypes, and Photo-lithographs, and a greater number than before of MARKS and MONOGRAMS will be included in the Text.

AN ENTIRELY NEW WORK.—NOW READY.

OF GREAT USE TO EMBROIDERERS, ARTISTS, MANUFACTURERS, &c.
 DRAWINGS OF ANCIENT EMBROIDERY.

80 Specimens by Mrs. MARY BARBER, on 80 Large Plates, executed in the First Style of Chromo-lithography.

Nett cash price, 2l. 2s. Imperial 8vo. elegantly bound.

This is altogether a novel work, and exhibits numerous specimens of great beauty and interest.

* As the number printed is very limited, early application is desirable.

ONLY A FEW COPIES LEFT OF THE 200 PRIVATELY PRINTED.

BIBLIOTHECA NICOTIANA:

A CATALOGUE OF BOOKS ABOUT TOBACCO, ANCIENT AND MODERN,
 IN VARIOUS LANGUAGES.

TOGETHER WITH A CATALOGUE OF OBJECTS CONNECTED WITH THE USE OF TOBACCO IN ALL ITS FORMS; PIPES, &c.

Collected by WILLIAM BRAGGE, F.S.A., Birmingham.

A handsome vol. on toned paper, Imperial 8vo. 12. 1s. nett.

Of this curious work—the most comprehensive on the subjects of which it treats—only 200 copies have been privately printed.

In order that those who are interested in these matters should be able to obtain the work, the Author has placed the few unallotted copies in the hands of the Advertisers, to be sold at the net price of One Guinea.

Third Edition, with considerable Additions, price 1s. 6d. cloth.

FREE LIBRARIES AND NEWSROOMS, THEIR FORMATION AND MANAGEMENT.

By J. D. MULLINS, Chief Librarian, Birmingham Free Libraries.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

* Officials and other Gentlemen desirous of instituting Free Libraries and Newsrooms will find the above Pamphlet of great utility in disseminating useful information on the subject, and, in order to assist this object,

A CHEAP EDITION FOR GRATUITOUS CIRCULATION will be supplied (without the Appendices, but including the List of Suitable Books) at less than cost price, namely, 5s. per 100.

HENRY SOTHERAN & CO. 36, Piccadilly; 136, Strand; 77 and 78, Queen-street, City, London.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

By the Bishop of RANGOON.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS of BRITISH BURMA. By the Right Rev. J. H. TITCOMB D.D. 8vo. paper boards, cloth back, 2s. 6d.

By the Bishop of EASTON, U.S.A.

STUDIES in the CHURCH; being Letters to an Old-Fashioned Layman. By the Right Rev. M. C. LAY, D.D. 18mo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

By Canon DANIEL.

THE PRAYER-BOOK: its History, Language, and Contents. By the Rev. EVAN DANIEL, M.A. Principal of the National Society's Training College, Battersea. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s. [Sixth Edition.]"This very excellent manual will be of the utmost value to those engaged in the instruction of adult classes, whether in Sunday school, training college, or clerical seminary. This book is one of the most complete and satisfactory that we have."—Guardian.

By the Rev. THOMAS FARRAR.

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY: a Manual of Church Doctrine. By the Rev. THOMAS FARRAR, Rector of St. Paul's, Graham, and Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Barbadoes and Windward Islands, Author of 'Standing in the Faith,' &c. Third and Enlarged Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

By the Bishop of CALIFORNIA.

THE DOUBLE WITNESS of the CHURCH. By the Right Rev. William INGRAMHAM KIP, D.D. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s. Revised by the Author."Bishop Kip is an old-fashioned High Churchman. A course of parish sermons based on Bishop Kip's lectures would be most useful. Master Gardiner's name has been printed from the twenty-second edition. The book has not an acknowledged want, and has been of good service."—Church Times.

With INTRODUCTION by the Bishop of CARLISLE.

HOLINESS to the LORD: the Character of the Christian Priest. Adapted from the French of the Abbé DUBOIS, for the Use of the English Clergy. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 7s. 6d.

By the Right Rev. W. WALSHAM HOW, D.D., Bishop of Bedford and Suffragan of London.

DAILY FAMILY PRAYER. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d. Ninth Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

[A Sixpenny Edition, in large type, cloth boards, is now ready. This Volume will be found most suitable for parochial distribution, and is the Cheapest Book of Family Prayers yet published.]

By the Rev. D. W. BARRETT, M.A.

LIFE and WORK among the NAVVIES. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d. [Second Edition.]

By the Rev. J. G. NORTON, M.A.

HEARTY SERVICES; or, Revived Church Worship. Revised, with Additions. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. [Second Edition.]

By the Rev. G. ROBERT WYNNE, A.M.

SPIRITUAL LIFE in its EARLIER STAGES. Five Lectures delivered in the Parish Church, Hollywood, Lond. 1880. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

By the Rev. R. G. BOODLE, M.A.

THE LIFE and LABOURS of WILLIAM TYRRELL, D.D., First Bishop of Newcastle, N. & W. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, with Illustrations and Maps. [Fourth Edition.]

By the Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS.

LECTURES on PREACHING. Fifth Thousand. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s. 6d.

By Prebendary AINSLIE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS on the ACTS of the APOSTLES. By the Rev. A. C. AINSLIE, M.A. Vicar of Hounslow. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. [Fourth Edition.]

By the Rev. E. N. DUNBLETON, M.A.

PRAYERS and MEDITATIONS, for the Morning and Evening of Each Day of the Week. Chiefly in the Words of Holy Scripture. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE CHANGED CROSS SERIES.

THE LAND of LIGHT. A new Transcript from the Rhythm of Bernard de MORLAIX. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, 1s. 6d. [2nd ed.]THE CLOUD and the STAR. By the Hon. Mrs. C. Hobart, Author of the 'Changed Cross.' With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.LITTLE LAYS for LITTLE LIPS. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. [Fifth Edition.]DEARE CHILDE. A Village Idyll. By the Rev. S. J. Stone, M.A., Vicar of St. Paul's, Dalston. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, 1s. 6d.THE CHANGED CROSS. By the Hon. Mrs. C. Hobart, née "N. P. W." With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. [Eighth Edition.]"The poem needs no praise, and the illustrations are a poem in themselves."—S. S. Magazine.THE KING in his BEAUTY. By Florence C. Armstrong. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

NEW BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

GREAT BRITAIN for LITTLE BRITONS. By Mrs. Bulley. With upwards of 50 Original Illustrations and Maps. This Volume is Anecdotal and Geographical, and written specially for very Young Children. Crown 8vo. extra cloth boards 2s. 6d. [Fourth Edition.]UPS and DOWNS, ALL SMILES NO FROWNS. By F. J. Tisley. A Volume of Quaint Verses. With Numerous Coloured Illustrations on each page, 4s. price 5s.PICTURES and PRATTLE for the NURSERY. Upwards of 280 Full-Page Illustrations, and Short Descriptive Letter-press. Coloured Frontispiece, extra cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 6s., paper boards, 3s. 6d.CHATTERBOX ALBUM of ANIMALS. Upwards of 280 Full-Page Illustrations by Harrison Weir, W. H. Bond, Percy Macquell, and F. W. Keyl. 4to. cloth extra, bevelled boards, 6s., paper boards, 3s. 6d.ROBIN and LINNET. By the Authors of 'Honor Bright,' &c. With Coloured Illustrations by T. Pym. Square 18mo. extra cloth boards, 1s. 6d."Full of fresh and childlike incidents."—Church Times.WE are SEVEN: a Tale for Children. By Caroline Birley. With Coloured Illustrations by T. Pym. Square 18mo. extra cloth boards, 1s. 6d."Delightfully quaint and true to life."—Guardian.DOGGED JACK. By Frances Palmer, Author of 'True under Trial.' With Full-Page Coloured Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

London: WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO. 2, Paternoster-buildings.

NOTICE.—New ready, crown 8vo. 210 pages, cloth, price 1s.

POLITICAL ECONOMY for BUSINESS PEOPLE.

By ROBERT JAMIESON.

In this work the writer aims at a simple mode of treating the subject, and establishing an important change in the accepted theory of the relationship between money and prices.

London: Hingham Wilson, Royal Exchange.

Just published, in fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 1s. 6d. post free.

STUDIES in GENESIS. By the Rev. STANLEY LEATHES, D.D., Prebendary of St. Paul's and Professor of Hebrew in King's College, London.

This work will be found useful as meeting materialist objections to Divine revelations, while fairly acknowledging the difficulties raised by science.

London: Elliot Stock, 22, Paternoster-row.

TWO NEW MUSICAL BOOKS.

With Portrait, thick crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

HENRY SMART: his Life and Works. By Dr. SPARK (of Leeds).

SECOND SERIES, very thick crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

SCHUBANN'S MUSIC and MUSICIANS, ESSAYS and CRITICISMS. Edited by F. R. SITTER.

Also Vol. I. Second Edition, 6s. 6d.

W. Reeves, Musical Publisher, Fleet-street.

C. KEGAN PAUL & CO.'S
NEW LIST.

With 136 Illustrations, medium 8vo.

HISTORY of PAINTING. From the German of the late Dr. ALFRED WOLFFMANN, Professor at the Imperial University of Strasbourg; and Dr. KARL WOERMANN, Professor at the Royal Academy of Arts, Düsseldorf. Edited by SYDNEY COLVIN, M.A., Blade Professor of Fine Arts in the University of Cambridge.

VOL. I.—PAINTING in ANTIQUITY and the MIDDLE AGES. Cloth, price 28s.; cloth extra, bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 30s.

With Portrait, demy 8vo. cloth, price 16s.

SPINOZA: his Life and Philosophy. By FREDERICK POLLOCK.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 15s.

A COMMENTARY on the BOOK of JOB. With a Translation. By SAMUEL COX, Author of 'Salvator Mundi,' 'The Genesis of Evil,' &c.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

The HUMAN RACE, and other Sermons. Preached at Cheltenham, Oxford, and Brighton, by the Rev. FREDERICK W. ROBERTSON, Incumbent of Trinity Chapel, Brighton.

[Immediately.]

HILARY HUNT

SISTER DORA: a Biography. By MARGARET LONSDALE. With Portrait, engraved on Steel by C. E. Jones, and 1 Illustration. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

SISTER AUGUSTINE, Superior of the Sisters of Charity at the St. Johanne Hospital at Bonn. Authorised Translation. [Immediately.]

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

PICTURES from IRELAND in 1880. By TERENCE McGRATH.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

COLLECTED SONNETS, OLD and NEW. By CHARLES TENNYSON TURNER. With Prefatory Poem by ALFRED TENNYSON. Also some Marginal Notes by S. T. COLECLIDGE, and a Critical Essay by JAMES SPEDDING.

NEW EDITION, demy 8vo. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

A SHEAF GLEANED in FRENCH FIELDS. By TONY DUTY. With Photographic Portrait.

C. KEGAN PAUL & CO. 1, Paternoster-square.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore,
NOTES AND QUERIES."

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."

Quarterly Review.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d. of all

Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary
Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTLER.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES
ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,

Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,

Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,

More especially of English Authors, with
Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous
Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK- LORE,

Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old
Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,

Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes
on our old Poets.

GENEALOGY and HERALDEY,

Including Histories of Old Families, completion
of Pedigrees, &c.

Published by JOHN FRANCIS, 30, Wellington-street,
Strand, W.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and
News-vendors.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY,

79, FLEET STREET.
For LIVES ONLY ESTABLISHED 1807
Accumulated Funds £2,048,402
Also a Subscribed Capital of more than .. £1,000,000
Reports, Prospectuses and Forms may be had at the Office, or from any of the Company's Agents, post free
GEORGE HUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

OFFICES—
70, Lombard-street, E.C. (Head Office); and 27, Charing Cross, S.W.
Established in the year 1797.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The next Bonus will be declared out of the Profits accrued up to the December next. All Policies effected on or before that date on the "With Profit System" will share in such Bonus.
Forms of Proposal and Prospectuses will be sent at once to intending Assurers, on application to ROBERT C. TUCKER, Actuary and Secretary.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW,

For NOVEMBER.

POLITICAL INSTITUTIONS. By Herbert Spencer.
GREECE and the GREEKS. By W. J. Stillman.
A LETTER from NEWPORT. By Frederic W. H. Myers.
EXPERIMENTS in PEASANT PROPRIETORSHIP. By M. O'Brien.
THE FUTURE of SWITZERLAND. By Fritz Ounhiffe-Owen.
AUTHORITY in the CHURCH of ENGLAND. By Orby Shipley, M.A.
A STORY of ANNEXATION in SOUTH AFRICA. By F. R. Statham.
JOMINI, MOREAU, and VANDAMME. By C. F. Cromele.
THE TRAGIC COMEDIANS. Chaps. 5-7. By George Meredith.
HOME and FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

SOUTH AMERICA. By Antonio Gallenga. 1 vol. demy 8vo.
with a Map. [This day.]

NEW NOVEL BY HAWLEY SMART.

SOCIAL SINNERS. By Hawley Smart. 3 vols. crown 8vo.
[Next day.]

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ABEL DRAKE'S WIFE.'

The TWO DREAMERS. By JOHN SAUNDERS. 3 vols. [This day.]

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE PARSON O' DUMFORD.'

The CLERK of PORTWICK. By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN.
3 vols. [This day.]

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, 193, Piccadilly.

NEW WORK BY MISS BIRD.

THIRD THOUSAND.—With Map and Illustrations, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

I.

UNBEATEN TRACKS IN JAPAN:

TRAVELS OF A LADY IN THE INTERIOR OF JAPAN,

INCLUDING VISITS TO THE ABORIGINES OF YEZO AND THE SHRINES OF NIKKO AND ISE.

By ISABELLA BIRD.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

II.

THIRD EDITION.—A LADY'S LIFE in the ROCKY MOUNTAINS. With Illustrations, post 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Also—III.

THIRD EDITION.—SIX MONTHS among the PALM
GROVES, CORAL REEFS, and VOLCANOES of the SANDWICH ISLANDS. With Illustrations, post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"Of Miss Bird's fascinating and instructive volumes it is impossible to speak in terms of too high praise. They fully maintain the well-earned reputation of the author of 'Six Months in the Sandwich Isles' and 'A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains' as a traveller of the first order, and a graphic and picturesque writer. The title she has chosen for her new book is no misnomer. Few foreigners, even of the stronger sex, would have had the courage and perseverance to face and surmount the obstacles which a frail woman in ill health, accompanied only by a single native servant, encountered in her cross-country wanderings. But Miss Bird is a born traveller, fearless, enthusiastic, patient, instructed, knowing as well what as how to describe. No peril daunts her, no prospect of fatigue or discomfort disheartens or repels her."

Quarterly Review, October, 1880.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

NEW AND CHOICE BOOKS.

FRESH COPIES are added daily of McCarthy's History of Our Own Times—Trevelyan's Life of C. J. Fox—Miss Bird's Travels in Japan—New Guinea, by L. M. D'Albertis—and every other leading Book of the New Season.

See MUDIE'S LIBRARY CIRCULAR, for NOVEMBER.

Postage free on application.

CHEAP AND SCARCE BOOKS.

CLEAN and SECOND-HAND COPIES are now on Sale of the Life of the Prince Consort, by Sir Theodore Martin—Canon Farrar's St. Paul—The Letters of Charles Dickens—Memoirs of Mrs. Tait, Bishop Selwyn, Sister Dora, Dean Hook, &c., and more than a Thousand other Works of General Interest.

See MUDIE'S CLEARANCE CATALOGUE, for NOVEMBER.

Postage free on application.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW OXFORD-STREET.
CITY OFFICE—2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

THE UNITED LIBRARIES, 307, REGENT-STREET, NEAR LANGHAM-PLACE.

All the BEST BOOKS of the NEW SEASON are in CIRCULATION at the UNITED LIBRARIES, and FRESH COPIES are ADDED DAILY.

REVISED TERMS FOR TOWN SUBSCRIBERS.—Four Volumes at one time, Two Guineas per annum, and Two Volumes for every additional Guinea.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS.—Nine Volumes for Three Guineas per annum, and Three Volumes for every additional Guinea.

CATALOGUES of RECENT BOOKS postage free on application.

THE UNITED LIBRARIES, THOMAS RUSSELL, Manager, 307, Regent-street, W.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, royal 8vo. price 36s.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Now ready, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The POETRY of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor, Author of 'The Borderland of Science,' 'Science Byways,' &c.

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL THE LIBRARIES, in 2 vols. post 8vo.

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD.'

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES,

THE TRUMPET MAJOR.

By THOMAS HARDY, Author of 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' &c.

3 vols. post 8vo.

London: SMITH, ELDER & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

INDIA PAPER PROOF EDITION.

DALZIEL'S BIBLE GALLERY:

SIXTY-NINE ILLUSTRATIONS FROM

THE OLD TESTAMENT.

FROM ORIGINAL DRAWINGS BY

SIR FREDERICK LEIGHTON, P.R.A.

E. J. POYNTER, R.A.	G. F. WATTS, R.A.	Fa. WALKER, R.H.A.
H. H. ARMSTEAD, R.A.	A. B. HOUGHTON.	T. DALZIEL.
F. MADOX BROWN.	E. ARMYTAGE, R.A.	HOLMAN HUNT.
F. SANDYS.	F. B. PICKERSGILL, R.A.	AND
E. G. DALZIEL.	E. BURNE JONES.	OTHERS.

Engraved by the BROTHERS DALZIEL, and Printed at their CAMDEN PRESS.

1,000 Copies, handsomely bound in vellum and leatherette ..	£5 5 0 per Copy.
100 " mounted on Hand-made Paper, in Portfolio ..	10 10 0 "

PROSPECTUS.

This India Paper Proof Edition, a large portion of which has already been sold for America, is limited to the above numbers. As soon as a certain number of Copies have been sold in England, the price will be advanced.

Messrs. DALZIEL have been engaged on this Series of Bible Illustrations for many years; all the Drawings were made expressly for them, and have never before been published.

The Work is now ready for delivery.

LONDON: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS.

PHENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET and CHANCING CROSS, LONDON.—Established 1722.
Fire and Marine Insurance.
Insurance effected in all parts of the World
JOHN J. BROOMFIELD, Secretary.

LOSS OF TIME IS LOSS OF MONEY.

ACCIDENTS CAUSE LOSS OF TIME,
And may be provided against by a Policy of the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY.
The Largest and Most Accidental Insurance Company.
Eighteen Years' Experience.
Subscribed Capital, 1,000,000. Moderate Premiums.
Benevolence allowed to Insurers of Five Years' standing.
A Good sum in case of Death by Accident, and a Weekly Allowance
in the event of Injury.
ONE MILLION and a HALF has been paid as COMPENSATION.
Apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, the Local Agents, or at Carnhill, London. WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN BANKING COM- PANY (Limited).

CAPITAL PAID UP, 1,000,000; RESERVE FUND, 100,000.
HEAD OFFICE: 27, CLEMENT'S-LANE, LONDON, E.C.
Branches: Alexandria, Cairo, and Larissa (Cyprus).
This Bank transacts every description of Banking Business in Egypt, grants Letters of Credit and affords other facilities to Travellers preceding to Egypt and the Nile. O. F. A., Secretary.
27, Clement's-lane, E.C.

THE LONDON DECORATING COMPANY, LIMITED.

Capital, 100,000, divided into 20,000 Shares of 5s. each, of which 10,000 Shares are offered at par—payable, 1s. on application, and 1s. 10s. on allotment.

DIRECTORS.

The Right Honourable Lord WALLSFOOT, J.P. D.L., &c., Army, Groomers, and Travellers' Club, London.
A. N. SHERKIN, Esq., D.L., late Chief Superintendent, British Division, International Exhibition, 1883, Army and Navy Club, London.
J. N. FARRERLEY, Esq., J.P., Fowls Lodge, Folkestone, and Travellers' Club, London.

MANAGING DIRECTOR.

C. LANGDON DAVIES, Esq. (successor to Hervey), 26, Martin's-lane, Canons-street, London, and Kensington Sevenoaks.
(The Shareholders have power to add Four Directors.)

SCIENTIFIC ADVISER.

WILLIAM CROOKER, Esq., F.R.S., 7, Kensington Park-gardens, London, W.

ART SUPERINTENDENT.

WALTER CHANE, Esq., Beaumont Lodge, Shepherd's Bush, London, W.
BANKERS:
London: City, The IMPERIAL BANK, Lombury, West End Messrs.
HENRIE, PARQUHAR & CO. 16, St. James's-street, Piccadilly, W.
Manchester: The MANCHESTER and BALFORD BANK.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. LEWIN & CO., 22, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. FREDERICK A. SMART & CO. Chartered Accountants, 68, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

SECRETARY.

Mr. THOMAS GRANVILLE JAGGS.

OFFICES.

26, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

FACTORIES.

PANONIA CHEMICAL WORKS, Hermsdorey, London; and FLAT-
FORD STEAM MILL, Suffolk.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is established to combine the Business of Contractors for all kinds of Decorating and Painting with the Business of the Materials employed, and to add such efficient Scientific and Artistic superintendence as shall secure compliance with the principles of SCIENCE, ART, and HEALTH.

Its work, designed by its own Artists, and executed by its own Workmen, with materials made in its own Factories, will comprise the Artistic Decoration of Interiors with uninjurious materials calculated to promote health and facilitate cleanliness; the Waterproofing and Preservation of Masonry, and the Exterior Decoration, the truest of Ironwork of all descriptions; and Ecclesiastical Decoration of every kind.

The Company purchases as a going concern the old-established Paint Manufacture of Aspinwall & Co. paying round sum of £3000 for the Factories, Machinery, Stock-in-Trade, &c. standing at £7000 (the stock leaving a further margin of 80 per cent.). The exclusive rights to the manufacture will be paid for by a Conditional Royalty only. This being a going concern, immediate profits will accrue, and the Company's commence. Subject of the present address the moment the shares are allotted. The additional premises necessary for new departments will be immediately secured, and Provincial Branches opened when desirable.

These manufactures show an average profit exceeding 40 per cent.;
the work done by the Company will yield further large profits, and it would be easy to turn over the capital many times in a year.

The full payment of the Royalties on a property which has cost many thousands of pounds, and of the remuneration to Directors and Managers of Offices, are contingent on a minimum of 10 per cent. on the Capital. The Directors, however, look for much larger Dividends, and do not intend to issue more than 10,000 shares at par, reserving the remainder for future issues at a Premium.
No Promotion Fees will be paid.

THE LONDON DECORATING COMPANY,
LIMITED. will supply, in a really comprehensive and practical manner the great public need for Artistic Decoration, scientifically carried out at moderate cost.

THE LONDON DECORATING COMPANY,
LIMITED. The Manufactures of the Company are Used by the Governments of England, India, Queensland, Spain, Japan, &c.

THE LONDON DECORATING COMPANY,
LIMITED.—The Manufactures of the Company are Used by the principal Railways in California, South America, Russia, India, England, Ireland, Japan, &c. See details accompanying Prospectus.

THE LONDON DECORATING COMPANY,
LIMITED.—The Manufactures of the Company are Used by the European Commission of the Danube, the Borneo Company, the Sulu Steam Navigation Company, numerous Corporations, Gas, Water Steamship, and other Companies, and public bodies throughout the world. Further details of which accompany the PROSPECTUS, which may be had free from the Office, 26, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT on
MOEDER'S HIRE SYSTEM.
The Original, Best, and most Liberal.
Cash Prices.

No extra charge for time given.

Illustrated Price Catalogue, with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MOEDER, 340, 342, 350, Tottenham Court-road; and 19, 20, and 21,
Moorwall-street, W.C. Established 1858.

F. MOEDER begs to announce that the whole of the above Premises have recently been rebuilt, specially adapted for the Furniture Trade, and now form one of the most commodious Warehouses in the metropolis.

Bed-room Suites, from 61. 6s. to 90 Guineas.
Drawing-room Suites, from 11. 10s. to 45 Guineas.
Dining-room Suites, from 11. 10s. to 40 Guineas.

And all other Goods in great variety.

F. MOEDER, 340, 342, 350, Tottenham Court-road; and 19, 20, and 21,
Moorwall-street, W.C. Established 1858.

HEAL & SON.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.

DINING-ROOM FURNITURE.

DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE.

HEAL & SON.

193 to 195, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, W.

WILLIAM S. BURTON, General Furnishing
Ironmonger, by appointment, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
SENDS A CATALOGUE GRATIS and POST PAID.

It contains upwards of 550 Illustrations of his unrivalled Stock, with List of Prices, and plans of the 30 large Show-rooms,
At 20, Oxford-street, 1, 1a, 2, 3, and 4, Newmarket-street, London, W.

FENDERS, FIRE-IRONS, STOVES, RANGES, &c.

REGISTERED STOVES	from 5 0 0	to 25 0 0
CHINA-TILED ditto	5 0 0	25 0 0
DOG-STOVES	5 0 0	25 0 0
FENDERS, Brass and Black	5 0 0	25 0 0
Ditto STEEL and ORNAMENTAL	5 0 0	25 0 0
FENDER FRAMES for TILE HEARTHES	5 0 0	25 0 0
MARBLE ditto ditto	5 0 0	25 0 0
PIERCED BRASS FENDERS	5 0 0	25 0 0
FIRE-IRONS, Set of Three	5 0 0	25 0 0
Ditto BRASS for TILE HEARTHES, per Pair	5 0 0	25 0 0

GAS and HOT-WATER WORK—ESTIMATES FREE.

BEDSTEADS, BEDDING, and FURNITURE.

BEDSTEADS of Best Make only, from 10s. 6d.

BEDDING of every description made on the Premises, and guaranteed of pure materials and good workmanship.

AMERICAN WALNUT machine-made CABINET FURNITURE.

A large Stock of CHEAP, USEFUL, and SOUND FURNITURE of the above make on view at prices usually charged for ordinary deal.

FURNITURE for BED, DINING, and DRAWING ROOMS, and every article necessary for HOUSE FURNISHING.
EASY TERMS of PURCHASE.—Special Arrangements made by WILLIAM S. BURTON with reference to CREDIT, without in any way altering the system of CASH PRICES, and FIXED PRICES, thus relieving the PURCHASER of all the disadvantages of prices arranged for NETT CASH.

COLZA OIL, highest quality 2s. 10d. per gallon.
KEROSENE, ditto 1s. 6d. per gallon.
Five Gallons and upwards 14s. 6d.

WILLIAM S. BURTON.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S REGISTERED ALBERT DESPATCH BOX.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE of 500 Articles Continental Travelling, post free. 57, West Strand, London.

A POLLINARIS WATER.

"Largest demand Apollinaris."—Harcourt, Book IV, Ode 2.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1875.

ANNUAL SALE, 5,000,000.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY, Limited, 19, Regent-street, London, E.W.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—Nothing is so highly appreciated as a Glass of GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY, which can be ordered of any Wine Merchant, or direct of T. GRANT, Distillery, Malton, N. Yorks. A quality, as supplied to Her Majesty, 42s. per dozen nett; Sportsman's special quality, 50s. per dozen. Prepayment required. Carriage free in England.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have reported of this Pure Solution as the best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEAD-
ACHE, COLIC, and INDIGESTION, and as the safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

REMARKABLE CURE (THIS WEEK) of

CLERGYMAN'S SORE THROAT by Dr. LOCKE'S PULMONIC
WAFERS. Mr. Johnson, M.P. 191, Menwood-road Leeds, writes—
"I had made up several prescriptions for a Clergyman's Sore Throat, but nothing seemed to touch it until I advised him to try Dr. LOCKE'S WAFERS, and less than one box cured him.
They taste pleasantly. Price 1s. 1jd."

THROAT IRRITATION. —Soreness and dryness,
tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice.
For these symptoms use

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 1jd and 1s. 1jd. labelled "James Epps & Co. Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

A letter received.—"Gentlemen.—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that after an extended trial I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit; with or without medical treatment, in almost all forms of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm. Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

NEXT WEEK WILL BE PUBLISHED,

ECHOES FROM THE COUNTIES.

In large crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s.

BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO. 8, 9, 10, Boulevard-street, E.C.

THE NEW NOVEL BY MISS RUSSELL.

Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.

QUITE TRUE. By Dora Russell, Author of 'Foot- prints in the Snow,' &c.

SECOND EDITION.—Now ready, price 2s. boards, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. (postage, 4d.).

The VICAR'S GOVERNESS. By Dora Russell,

Author of 'Footprints in the Snow,' &c.

"Undoubtedly a clever and well-written story. Miss Russell may fairly be congratulated on having written a book which contains a good deal that is interesting, and indicates a reserve of something still better."—Times.

London: J. & R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

Now ready, super-royal 8vo. cloth elegant, sunk centre, 12s.

ENGLISH LAKE SCENERY:

A SERIES OF TWENTY-FOUR PLATES

IN THE HIGHEST STYLE OF COLOUR PRINTING, FROM DRAWINGS BY A. F. LYDON.

WITH DESCRIPTIVE LETTER-PRESS.

London: JOHN WALKER & Co. 96, Farringdon-street, E.C.

On LORD MAYOR'S DAY (November 9), price One Shilling, GRAND CHRISTMAS NUMBER

OF

LONDON SOCIETY,

CONTAINING

THE PIRATE'S DIAMONDS:

A TRUE STORY OF WONDERFUL LUCK;

AND SNOWED UP.

SANDY THE TINKER.

OUR HERO IN BLACK.

SEEN IN THE MIRROR.

HOW WE GOT MARRIED.

RALPH DE BRUTON'S SWORD-HILT.

THAT TERRIBLE DENTIST.

MR. BLOSSOM'S CHRISTMAS PARTY.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY

Percy Macquoid, M. E. Edwards, A. W. Cooper, Adelaide Claxton, D. H. Friston, Miriam Kerna, &c.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SHARPLE & RIVINGTON, 188, Fleet-street.

NEXT WEEK will be published, SWITZERLAND:

its Scenery and its People, Pictorially Represented by eminent Swiss and German Artists. With Historical and Descriptive Text, based on the German of Dr. Gsell-Fels. Illustrated by above 300 Engravings, printed in the text, and 60 Full-Page Pictures, 16 of which will be in Tints. In 1 vol. large 4to.
handsomely bound in cloth, gilt edges, price Two Guineas.

London: BLACKIE & SON, 49 and 50, Old Bailey.

EPPS'S

CHOCOLATE

ESSENCE.

Product of a special refining process. It is Chocolate devoided of its over-richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of Coffee. An Afternoon Chocolate. Each packet is labelled

JAMES EPPS & CO.
Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO.'S
LAND, HOUSE, AND APARTMENT "REGISTRATION OFFICE,"
NO. 1, GRAND HOTEL BUILDING
(FRONTING CHARING CROSS AND TRAFALGAR-SQUARE), LONDON.

NOTICE.

IMPORTANT to those having PROPERTY "FOR SALE," or HOUSES, &c., "TO LET."

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. would announce to ESTATE AGENTS, AUCTIONEERS, SOLICITORS, and others having Property FOR SALE, or Houses and Apartments TO BE LET, that the First Number of their

"LAND, HOUSE, and APARTMENT INDEX"

will be issued in NOVEMBER (other Editions each month hereafter), and PARTICULARS of PROPERTY REGISTERED upon their Books will be inserted, under appropriate headings, FREE OF CHARGE, when said particulars do not exceed forty words. Additional words will be charged ONE HALFPENNY each for every monthly insertion.

"THE INDEX" will be DISTRIBUTED GRATUITOUSLY by Local Agents and the "Corps of Commissionaires" at all of the PRINCIPAL HOTELS of the Metropolis, and throughout London and the Provinces.

CHARGE FOR REGISTRATION.

LAND, HOUSES, or APARTMENTS "FOR SALE" or "TO LET," with all the privileges of Office (as enumerated in PROSPECTUS), including an ADVERTISEMENT in "THE INDEX."

	£.	s.	d.
ONE MONTH	0	2	0
THREE MONTHS	0	5	0

The above rates are inclusive, no Commission being charged for services or assistance in the negotiation of Property registered.

For the sum of TEN SHILLINGS we Register HOUSES or ESTATES UNTIL SOLD or LET (no Commission being charged), but, nevertheless, under the express condition that the Owner thereof, or his Agent, shall during the first week of every month communicate with us by letter (to avoid mistakes) so long as the said Property remains unsold or unlet; failure so to do will be considered as an intimation that the Property registered has been disposed of, and it will therefore be erased from our Books, in order that applicants may not be misled, and thereby put to trouble and expense in regard thereto.

This Special Registration Fee of 10s. includes the insertion of an Eighty-Word Advertisement in "THE INDEX" for three months without extra charge.

Registration also entitles Patrons to have PHOTOGRAPHS at our Office for EXHIBITION in PORTFOLIOS, we giving the Public, who may call upon us, full and gratuitous information in regard thereto, and any Advertisement inserted in Newspapers regarding the Property Registered may direct applicants to our Establishment for information. Patrons who do not wish their Name and Address given to the Public, can send or receive communications through us incognito, and, when desired, may meet their Correspondents at our Office for consultation, or may have their Correspondence directed to our care, and we will forward same, under seal, if requested, charging simply the cost of Postage and Envelopes used therefor.

We desire to call the attention of Owners of Property to the importance of our POSITION as a means of communication with the best portion of the British and Foreign Public.

It has been computed, by actual reckoning, that over ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND persons pass our door each day (we shall be glad to demonstrate this fact, at any time, to the incredulous). It is admitted that these persons comprise the best portion of the British Public as well as Foreigners from all portions of the world, owing, in part, to the Grand Hotel Building being in close proximity to the Charing Cross and Metropolitan Railway Stations, the National Gallery, principal Hotels, leading Club-Houses, Theatres, and Her Majesty's Opera-House; hence an Advertisement in our INDEX or the Newspapers calling attention to any particular Property registered upon our Books is likely to attract the attention of those who would be interested, and naturally induce them (from the fact of our central position) to call on us for information. The benefit arising therefrom will suggest itself.

Property other than Houses and Estates will be registered as for Sale or Exchange, if, on personal examination, we find the articles first class and offered bond fide, at fair rates, and space will be allotted for the exhibition of same, if desirable. Particulars on application.

N.B.—Agents Wanted (Local) throughout London Suburban Districts and the Provinces. For particulars address

BUTTON, STANLEY & CO. No. 1, Grand Hotel Building, London.

MR. D. CHRISTIE MURRAY'S NOVEL.

WILL BE AT THE LIBRARIES ON WEDNESDAY NEXT.

A LIFE'S ATONEMENT.

Three volumes, 31s. 6d.

The appearance of this powerfully-written novel in serial form in the pages of Chambers's Journal has already made a marked and favourable impression.

'A Life's Atonement' is Mr. Murray's first three-volume novel, and in it he has attempted to blend romance with realism, as, according to his belief they blend in life. He has striven to avoid what is vulgarly called "sensationalism," but he has chosen a stirring theme, and has told a story in which there are large elements of terror and pathos.

MR. D. CHRISTIE MURRAY'S NOVEL.

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

By JAMES F. COBB.

WORKMAN and SOLDIER: a Tale of Paris Life during the Siege and the Rule of the Commune. By JAMES F. COBB, Author of 'Watchers on the Longships,' &c. Fully illustrated, cloth, 8s., or bevelled boards, gilt edges, 8s.

"The book is very usefully illustrated."—Standard.
"It is well written and well put together."—Times.
"The whole tale is full of vivid interest."—Art Journal.
"The story is told with spirit."—Truth.

By G. A. HENTY.

The YOUNG BUGLERS: a Tale of the Peninsular War. By G. A. HENTY. With 8 Full-page Pictures by J. Proctor, and numerous Plates of Battles. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

"An extremely valuable and accurate history of the great Duke's Spanish campaign, and is told by Mr. Henty with a lucidity and simplicity which are beyond praise."—World.
"His military facts, dates, and places are all strictly accurate."—Times.
"One of the best boy's books of the year."—Graphic.
"Both entertaining and instructive."—Scotsman.

By THE LATE W. H. G. KINGSTON

Cloth elegant, 8s.; or gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

OUR SOLDIERS; or, Anecdotes of the Cam- paigns and Gallant Deeds of the British Army during the Reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. With Frontispiece.

"Full of life and exciting descriptions of gallant deeds."—School Guardian.

Cloth elegant, 8s.; or bevelled boards, gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

The THREE MIDSHIPMEN. New Edition, with 24 Page Illustrations by various Artists.

"A rattling sea story."—Daily Telegraph.

The THREE LIEUTENANTS; or, Naval Adventures of the Nineteenth Century.

"Well calculated to interest boys."—Athenæum.

The THREE COMMANDERS; or, Active Service Afloat in Modern Days.

"Will be a favourite with boys."—Art Journal.

The THREE ADMIRALS, and the Adven- tures of their Young Followers.

"A capital story of adventure."—Times.

WILL WEATHERHELM; or, the Yarn of an Old Sailor about his Early Life and Adventures.

"There is not a dry page in the volume."—Times.

TRUE BLUE; or, the Life and Adventures of a Fighting Seaman of the Old School.

"As full of adventure as an egg is full of meat."—Family Pair.

The MISSING SHIP; or, Notes from the Log of the Quail Galley.

"A moving tale of adventure by sea and land."—Saturday Review.

HURRICANE HURRY; or, the Adventures of a Naval Officer Afloat and on Shore during the American War of Independence.

"The story never stops for want of incident."—Times.

BOOKS FOR GIRLS.

A CHARMING PRESENT FOR A YOUNG LADY.

SIX LIFE STUDIES OF FAMOUS WOMEN.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS.

Author of 'Kitty,' 'Dr. Jacob,' 'A Year in Western France,' &c.

With 6 Portraits engraved on Steel, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Illustrated.

Forman Catherino (Spanish Novelist)—Alexandrine Tineo (African Explorer)—Caroline Herschel (Astronomer and Mathematician)—Marie Papo—Carpentier (Educational Reformer)—Elizabeth Carter (Scholar)—Matilda Betham (Literateur and Artist).

"Quite worthy of her reputation... The book is full of information, and is to be thoroughly recommended."—Graphic.

"A readable and instructive collection of studies... The studies are marked by care and accuracy."—Notes.
"The book is, to our thinking, a model of what biography should be. Miss Edwards has depicted with her wonted quiet grace and dash of literary style, the characters, the surroundings, and the achievements of her subjects, without wasting space on matters which can have interest for only a few readers."—Scotsman.

"Of the manner in which Miss Betham-Edwards has dealt with the half-dozen 'Life Studies' she here puts forward, we must speak in terms of unqualified praise. The writer gives an skilful and conscientious workmanship... Her style is excellent, her language that of pure and vigorous English."—Literary World.

"These figures make a delightful and noteworthy group, and the sketch of their lives abounds with interest."—Daily Chronicle.

"All who love books as Matilda Betham loved them, should certainly read this book by her niece and godchild."—Notes and Queries.

KIND HEARTS.

By Mrs. J. F. B. FIEBH.

Author of 'Sybil's New Home,' &c.

With Frontispiece, cloth, 8s.

"New Volume in the 'Stories for Daughters at Home' Series."

"The Bowmans are very natural."—Athenæum.

"A simple and wholesome story of English life... Very pleasant reading."—Scotsman.

"The story is well worked out, and is full of incident... Perfectly healthy in tone."—Church Times.

"A pleasant story."—Nottingham Daily Guardian.

"A well written book and although the plot is a familiar one, it is very well told by Mrs. Fiebh."—Scotsman.

"The story is well told throughout."—Pictorial World.

"The charm in 'Kind Hearts' lies in the unaffected, straightforward way in which the story is developed. There are not many love stories more sweetly told."—Leeds Mercury.

"Written with ease and grace, the characters are interesting, and a wholesome lesson may be learned from the story of their lives."—Daily Chronicle.

VERY GENTLE.

By the AUTHOR of 'Mrs. JEENINGHAM'S JOURNAL.'

Cloth, 8s.

"New Volume in the 'Stories for Daughters at Home' Series."

"A bright and unconventional style, a keen sense of fun, genuine feeling, delight in young life."—St. James's Gazette.

"An entertaining and instructive book."—Graphic.

"It eminently deserves to be reckoned among 'Stories for Daughters at Home.'—Saturday Review.

"A very interesting Irish domestic story... Will make a capital present."—School Board Chronicle.

"Will be sure to afford amusement."—Daily Chronicle.

"There is no doubt about this being a lively and pleasant story."—Spectator.

FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

BELLE'S PINK BOOTS. By Joanna H.

MATTHEWS, Author of the 'Bowie Boots.' With 16 Coloured Illustrations by Ida Wang. Cloth elegant, 8s.

The GUESTS OF FLOWERS: a Botanical

Sketch. By Mrs. MISTKERS. With Preliminary Letter by Dr. THEODORE KERNER. Cloth, small 4to, 2s. 6d.

The LETTER H, PAST, PRESENT, and FUTURE. Rules for the Silent H, based on Contemporary Usage, and an Appeal in behalf of WH. By ALF. LEACH. Cloth limp, fcp. 8vo, 1s.

A WOODLAND IDYLL. By Miss Phoebe

ALLEN. It is dedicated to Principia Shallop, and is an attempt to represent allegorically the relative positions of Nature, Art, and Science in our World. Cloth. [In the press.]

RECENTLY PUBLISHED BOOKS.

NEW AND UNUSUAL EDITION BY

The BIRD and INSECTS' POST-OFFICE.

By ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, Author of 'Rural Tales,' &c. Illustrated with 32 WHOLE Engravings. Crown 4to, paper boards, with Chromo Slide, 3s. 6d. The 8s. Edition may still be had.

"The letters are entertaining... A splendid gift-book."—Athenæum.
"One of the prettiest books we have seen for a long time."—Church Times.

LITTLE MARGARET'S RIDE to the ISLE of WIGHT, or, the Wonderful Rooking-Horse. By Mrs. FREDERICK BROWN. With 8 Illustrations in Chromo-lithography by Helen S. Tatham. Crown 4to, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A charming book for little children."—Church Times.

NIMPH'S TROUBLES. By Olive Thorne

MILLER, Author of 'Little Folks in Feather and Fur.' Illustrated by Mary Haddock and Sol Rytting. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A pleasant little story... Interesting to young readers."—Scotsman.

MUDGE and HER CHICKS: a Story of Children's House Dots. By a BROTHER and SISTER. Cloth elegant, with 16 Illustrations, 8s. 6d.

TWO ROSE TREES: the Adventures of

Two Sisters. By Mrs. MINNIE DOUGLAS. With 16 Illustrations, cloth elegant, 8s. 6d.

"The book is sure to be a popular one, as it deserves to be."—Whitcomb Review.

HILDA and HER DOLL. By E. C. Phillips,

Author of 'The Orphan,' 'Sunchy,' &c. With 16 Illustrations, cloth elegant 8s. 6d. [In the press.]

The HOUSE on the BRIDGE, and other

TALES. By C. E. BOWEN, Author of 'Among the Brigands,' &c. Crown 8vo, with 13 Illustrations by A. H. Collins, cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A more admirable gift-book could hardly be found."—Liverpool Advertiser.

GRIFFITH & FARRAN, WEST CORNER ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

Material Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, 36, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.
Printed by E. J. FARRAN, Stationers Press, York-house, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JAMES FARRAN, at No. 36, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.
Agents: For Scotland, Messrs. Roll & Bradburn, and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh;—For Ireland, Mr. John Robertson, Dublin.—Saturday, October 30, 1880.

On view the Friday and Saturday preceding. Catalogues on receipt of 50c stamp.

All information promptly supplied on application to Mr. CHARLES ALLEN, GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY (LONDON), NEW BOND-STREET, W.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

By the Bishop of RANGOON.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS of BRITISH BURMA. By the Right Rev. J. H. TITCOMB, D.D. 8vo. paper boards, cloth back, 2s. 6d.

By the Bishop of EASTON, U.S.A.

STUDIES in the CHURCH; being Letters to an Old-Fashioned Layman. By the Right Rev. H. C. LAY, D.D. 18mo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

By Canon DANIEL.

THE PRAYER-BOOK: its History, Language, and Contents. By the Rev. EVAN DANIEL, M.A. Principal of the National Society's Training College, Battersea. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s. [Third Edition.]"This very excellent manual will be of the utmost value to those engaged in the instruction of adult classes, whether in Sunday school, training college, or clerical seminar. This book is one of the most complete and satisfactory that we have."—Guardian.

By the Rev. THOMAS FARRAR.

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY: a Manual of Church Doctrine. By the Rev. THOMAS FARRAR, Rector of St. Paul's, Oxford, and Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Exeter and Windsor, and Author of "Standards in the Faith," &c. Third and enlarged Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

By the Bishop of CALIFORNIA.

THE DOUBLE WITNESS of the CHURCH. By the Right Rev. William INGRAM KIP, D.D. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. Revised by the Author.

"Bishop Kip is an old-fashioned High Churchman. A course of parish sermons based on Bishop Kip's lectures would be most useful. Mr. Gardner's issue has been printed from the twenty-second edition. The book has met an acknowledged want, and has done good service." [Oxford Times.]

With INTRODUCTION by the Bishop of CARLISLE.

HOLINESS to the LORD: the Character of the Christian Priest. Adapted from the French of the Abbé DUBOIS, for the Use of the English Clergy. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

By the Right Rev. W. WALSHAM HOW, D.D., Bishop of Bedford and Suffragan of London.

DAILY FAMILY PRAYER. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d. Ninth Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

[A Glasgow Edition, in large type, cloth boards, is now ready. This Volume will be found most suitable for parochial distribution, and is the cheapest book of Family Prayer yet published.]

By the Rev. D. W. BARRETT, M.A.

LIFE and WORK among the NAVVIES. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d. [Second Edition.]

By the Rev. J. G. NORTON, M.A.

HEARTY SERVICES; or, Revived Church Worship. Revised, with Additions. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d. [Second Edition.]

By the Rev. G. ROBERT WYNNE, A.M.

SPIRITUAL LIFE in its EARLIER STAGES. Five Lectures delivered in the Parish Church, Holywood, Lent, 1880. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

By the Rev. R. G. BOODLE, M.A.

THE LIFE and LABOURS of WILLIAM TYRELL, D.D., First Bishop of Newcastle, N.E.W. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, with Illustrations and Maps. [Fourth Edition.]

By the Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS.

LECTURES on PREACHING. Fifth Thousand. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s. 6d.

By Prebendary AINSLIE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS on the ACTS of the APOSTLES. By the Rev. A. C. AINSLIE, M.A. Vicar of Buntingford. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. [Fourth Edition.]

By the Rev. E. N. DUMBLETON, M.A.

PRAYERS and MEDITATIONS, for the Morning and Evening of Each Day of the Week. Chiefly in the Words of Holy Scripture. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE CHANGED CROSS SERIES.

The LAND of LIGHT. A new Transcript from the Rhythm of Bernard de MORLAIX. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, 1s. 6d. [First out.]The CLOUD and the STAR. By the Hon. Mrs. C. Hobart, Author of the 'Changed Cross.' With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.LITTLE LAYS for LITTLE LIPS. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. [Fifth Edition.]DEARE CHILDE, A Village Idyll. By the Rev. S. J. Stone, M.A., Vicar of St. Paul's, Dublin. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, 1s. 6d.The CHANGED CROSS. By the Hon. Mrs. C. Hobart, née "N. P. W." With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d. [Eighth Edition.]The KING in his BEAUTY. By Florence C. Armstrong. With Outline Illustrations by H. J. A. Miles. Square 18mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

NEW BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

GREAT BRITAIN for LITTLE BRITONS. By Mrs. Bulley. With upwards of 50 Original Illustrations and Maps. This Volume is Anecdotal and Geographical, and written specially for very Young Children. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d. [Fourth Edition.]UPS and DOWNS, ALL SMILES NO FROWNS. By F. J. Tinsley. A Volume of Quaint Verses. With Numerous Coloured Illustrations on each page, &c. price 6s.PICTURES and PRATTLE for the NURSERY. Upwards of 280 Full-Page Illustrations, and Short Descriptive Letter-press. Coloured Frontispiece, extra cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, &c. paper boards, 2s. 6d.CHATTERBOX ALBUM of ANIMALS. Upwards of 280 Full-Page Illustrations by Harrison Weir, W. H. Beut Percy Macquod, and F. W. Kayl. &c. cloth extra, bevelled boards, &c., paper boards, 2s. 6d.ROBIN and LINNET. By the Authors of 'Honor Bright,' &c. With Coloured Illustrations by T. Fynn. Square 18mo. extra cloth boards, 1s. 6d."Full of fresh and childlike incidents."—Church Times.WE are SEVEN: a Tale for Children. By Caroline Birley. With Coloured Illustrations by T. Fynn. Square 18mo. extra cloth boards, 1s. 6d."Delightfully quaint and true to life."—Guardian.DOGGED JACK. By Frances Palmer, Author of 'True under Trial.' With Full-Page Coloured Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

London: WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & CO. 2 Paternoster-buildings.

"The only newspaper of the Art-world published, and a very good one too."—Journals and Journeaux.

Price 6d.; by post, 6d.

THE NUMBER FOR NOVEMBER OF

THE ARTIST.

125, FLEET-STREET, LONDON.

No. I. ready November 11, price 6d.

THE SCIENTIFIC BOLL.

Contents.

1. INTERFERENCES.
 2. HENRY I. On the JOURNAL OF PHYSICS.
 3. GENERAL PHOTOGRAPHY in the LITHOGRAPHY.
- Subscription price for Vol. I. 7s. 6d., payable in advance to A. HENNING, 4, Kent Gardens, Basing.
- London. Basing, Agnew & Co. Boulevard-Capitol.

KENSINGTON: a Monthly Magazine. price

Shilling. Edited by Mrs. LETHY ADAMS. The NOVEMBER Number contains—1. Aunt Mary's Foundling. Book III. Chapters 3 and 4. By the Editor—2. A Dead Faith (Poem). By "M. L. S."—3. The Argan Seed Land. Part II. (continued). By "K. Sullivan."—4. President of Queen's College, Cork.—5. Poem in November 1879. By C. A. Gordon.—6. A Memory of the Commons. By F. W. Leith-Adams.—7. To the Ideal (Poem). By "P. W. L. A."—J. Chit-Chat: Literary, Artistic, and Theatrical.

London. Cecil Brooks & Co. 12, Catherine-street, Strand, Manchester: John Heywood, Rochdale Works. Edinburgh: John Menzies & Co., 15, Nicolson-street. Aberdeen: John & Co., 25, Market-street. And all Bookshops and Railway Stalls.

COLOGNE and its INFLUENCE.—See the ENTIRE (4d., by post 6d.); also the View of the Monument in Freiburg, Prussia Mechanics Institute (with Plan), Residence near Liverpool—Decorative Residences—Practical Architecture and the Institute—the Institute of Architecture—Influence with Art—The Thames House—French Art and English Example, &c.—at Catherine-street; and all November.

THE MUSICAL TIMES, for NOVEMBER, contains—Home Music-Worship—The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers—Opera—Marches & Operas—Don Giovanni d'Amore—Local and Student Festivals—Jazz—The Crystal Palace Concerts—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 6d.; post free, 6d. Annual Subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES, for NOVEMBER, contains: "That speaketh the Lord of Hosts," Anthem for Christmas, by Dr. Stainer. Terms, separately, 1/4d.

London: Novello, Ewer & Co. 1, Brunel-street, W. and 20 and 21, Queen-street, E.C.

A NEW NOVEL, entitled BOUND by the LAW, by the Author of 'Loyal and True' and 'May Parlay,' &c., will shortly be published by Messrs. Hiltman & Co. of 15, Type-street, Finsbury.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'JAMES GORDON'SWIFE'*MARJORY: a Study. By the Author of 'JamesWife'

Wyman & Co., 74 and 75, Great Queen-street, London, W.C.

LAYS and LEGENDS of ANCIENT GREECE.

By JOHN STUART BLACKIE.

Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh.

Second Edition, fcap. 8vo. 1s.

William Mackintosh & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Price 1s.; by post 1s. 6d.

LONDON SMOKE and FOG. With some Observations on the Country Parson's Grate, and other Modern Fireplaces.

By FREDERICK EDWARDS, Junr.

Author of 'Our Domestic Fireplaces,' 'A Treatise on Chimneys,' &c.

London: Longmans, Green & Co.

Just published, demy 8vo. price 12s. 6d.

ROUND the WORLD in 124 DAYS.

By R. W. LEYLAND, F.R.G.S.

With Map and Illustrations.

London: Hamilton, Adams & Co. Paternoster-row.

Price to Subscribers, 2s. 6d.; Non-Subscribers, 4s. 6d.

EXTRAORDINARY ADVENTURES of aREPORTER. Giving Twenty Years' experience on the Press, showing the Hardest and Sweetest Method of becoming an Efficient and Rapid Photographic Reporter and Writer, and containing valuable Hints on all Branches of Reporting. Amusing and interesting to Members of the Press, and invaluable to Young Photographers and Typists. The Art of Reporting. Written and published by FRANCIS J. LOCK,

Author of 'The Efficient's Companion,' 'How to become an Expert

Shut,' 'Mistaken a Soldier' (30,000), &c.

25, Mark-street, Leicester.

GALL & INGLIS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

New Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

GEMS of GREAT AUTHORS; or, the Philosophy of Reading and Thinking. Selected by JOHN TILLOTSON. With Red Line Border.

NEW BOOK by W. H. G. KINGSTON—Ex. fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s.NORMAN VALLERY; or, How to Overcome Evil with Good. With 40 Illustrations.

NEW WORK by A. L. O. R.—Fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, 1s. 6d.LITTLE BULLETS from BATALA. With 4 Illustrations.

NEW SERIES ILLUSTRATING NATURAL PHENOMENA.

Small fcap. 8vo. 128 pp. cloth, each 1s.

WONDERS of the OCEAN. With 17 Illustrations.

By W. H. G. KINGSTON.

WONDERS of the MINES. With 18 Woodcuts.

By W. H. G. KINGSTON.

WONDERS of the VOLCANO. With 13 Illustrations.

By ARSCOTT R. ROSE.

Gold & Ingle, Edinburgh; and 25, Paternoster-square, London.

THE JOURNAL of the ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND. Vol. X. No. 1.

- New ready, price 3s.*
1. On the Central South African Tribes from the South Coast to the Zambesi. By Dr. Emil Holub.
 2. Notes on the Western Regions. Translated from the Tibetan Man Shoo. Book 10. Part I. By A. Wylie, Esq.
 3. The Origin of the Plough and Wheel Carriage. By R. R. Tyler, Esq. F.R.S., President.
 4. Visualized Numeral. By Francis Galton, Esq. F.R.S.
 5. On Nicotianae Ideographs. By V. Ball, Esq., M.A. F.R.S.
 6. Notes on the Polyglot Race. By C. Standland Wells, Esq., M.A. Anthropological Association.

London: Trübner & Co. 57 and 58, Ludgate-hill.

THE COLLAPSE of SCIENTIFIC ATHEISM.

By J. M. WINN, M.D. M.R.C.P. An. Author of 'Materialism,' 'The Nature and Treatment of Hereditary Disease,' &c.
"The conclusions... are such as to justify the saying language which has often been employed."—Public Opinion.
London: David Bogue, 3, St. Martin's-place, W.C.

TWO NEW MUSICAL BOOKS.

With Portraits, thick crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

HENRY SMART: his Life and Works.

By Dr. SPARR (of Leeds).

SECOND SERIES, very thick crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

SCHUBERT'S MUSIC and MUSICIANS, ESSAYS and CRITICISMS. Edited by F. R. HITTIER.

Also Vol. I. Second Edition, 10s. 6d.

W. Reeves, Musical Publisher, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s. 6d. 8vo. cloth.

STUDENT'S HEBREW GRAMMAR.

GESENIUS'S HEBREW GRAMMAR. Translated from Rodiger's Edition by BENJAMIN DAVIES, LL.D. Thoroughly Revised and Enlarged, with the help of Prof. E. Kautsch's German Edition and other Recent Authorities, by EDWARD C. MITCHELL, D.D. With full Subject, Scripture, and Hebrew Indexes. Fourth Copyright Edition.

Just published, price 12s. 8vo. cloth.

STUDENT'S HEBREW LEXICON.

A COMPENDIOUS and COMPLETE HEBREW and CHALDEE LEXICON to the OLD TESTAMENT With an English-Hebrew Index chiefly founded on the Works of Gesenius and Fürst, with Improvements from Dietrich and other Sources. Edited by BENJAMIN DAVIES, Ph.D. LL.D., Translator of Rodiger's 'Gesenius, or Student's Hebrew Grammar.' Third Edition, carefully Revised, with a Concise Statement of the Principles of Hebrew Grammar, by EDWARD C. MITCHELL, D.D.

London: Asher & Co. 12, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

BUXTORFF (JOHANNIS) LEXICON CHALDAICUM TALMUDICUM et BABYLONICUM dante editio et annotatione auctoris B. FLUCHER. 4to. cloth, 8s.

"To the Talmudist it is absolutely necessary, to the Semitic scholar it is of great value. Both will find the new edition not merely a more handy book of reference than its predecessor, but one enriched with considerable additions."—London Review.

London: Asher & Co. 12, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

New ready, demy 8vo. cloth, price 18s.

A GUIDE TO THE STUDY OF BOOK-PLATES

(EX-LIBRIS).

With 16 Plates in Fac-simile.

By the Hon. J. LEICESTER WARREN, M.A.

"Mr. Warren has contrived to satisfy several kinds of requirements in the book before us, having combined the dry with the entertaining in very just proportions. His work is really what it professes to be—a guide. But it is something more; for it is amusing reading."

Saturday Review.

"Bibliophiles of a 'judicious palate' will find this book quite to their taste."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Warren's charming Guide is full of varied interest." Graphic.

"It remained to introduce the study (of book-plates) into England, a task which Mr. Warren has executed with ability and ample knowledge."—Bookseller.

"Enough has been said to show the value of this treatise; it remains only to say that the beauty of its production is fully worthy of its contents."—Morning Post.

"Mr. Warren's Guide has many claims to the attention of all lovers of books and book-plates. It has obviously been carefully prepared, and is handsomely got up and very fully illustrated, and will no doubt stimulate the growing taste among us for collecting book-plates."—Notes and Queries.

JOHN PEARSON, 46, Pall Mall, London.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVELS NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

By GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel,' 'Mirage,' &c.

THE HEAD of MEDUSA. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"The Head of Medusa is far better than the common run of novels. To the utmost of the writer's power she has striven to produce a work of art; she has written her best; she has conceived her leading characters well.....The book is full of talent."—Saturday Review.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

WHITE WINGS: a Yachting Romance. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"Mr. Black can translate his vocabulary into an infinity of time and tones. Nor do we know any living novelist who has more completely the gift of awakening the bodily senses through the medium of printer's ink."—Times.

By MRS. OLIPHANT.

HE THAT WILL NOT WHEN HE MAY. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"There is a great amount of beautiful work in this book."—Athenæum.

"This is a novel which no one can read without pleasure. She writes from the fulness of experience, with the mastery of methods. We do not know where to look among her sister novelists for any one who could—considering all things—have told the story so well."—Spectator.

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

LOVE and LIFE: an Old Story in Eighteenth-Century Costume. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

"Miss Yonge has cleverly converted the most delicate fancies of the old allegory into eighteenth-century realities."—Graphic.

"Miss Yonge has the undoubted gift of making her readers realize every detail of her story, every attribute, moral and physical, of the persons whom she is describing."—Saturday Review.

The CHURCH of the FUTURE. Its Catholicity—Its Conflict with the Atheist—Its Conflict with the Deist—Its Conflict with the Rationalist—Its Dogmatic Teaching—Practical Counsels for its Work—Its Cathedrals. By ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Archbishop of Canterbury. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Ready on the 9th instant.

The PARABLES of OUR LORD INTERPRETED in VIEW of their RELATION to EACH OTHER. By HENRY CALDERWOOD, LL.D., Professor of Moral Philosophy, Univ. of Edin. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

"They are written in a simple, intelligible manner, and may be read with satisfaction by all."

Westminster Review.

ISLAND LIFE; or, the Phenomena and Causes of Insular Faunas and Floras, including a Revision and attempted Solution of the Problem of Geological Climates. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Author of 'The Malay Archipelago,' 'The Geographical Distribution of Animals,' &c. With Illustrations and Maps, demy 8vo. 18s.

ETIENNE DOLET: the Martyr of the Renaissance. A Biography, with a Bibliographical Appendix. By RICHARD COPLEY CHRISTIE, M.A., Lincoln College, Oxford, Chancellor of the Diocese of Manchester. With Illustrations, 8vo. 15s.

"So conscientious and so successful have been the labours of Mr. Christie, his work stands in the most important respects outside criticism. His book may be cited as, in many respects, a model biography."—Athenæum.

"He draws portraits of persecutors from the life, worthy of the art of Rubens and Bunyan."—St. James's Gazette.

A VISIT to WAZAN, the Sacred City of Morocco. By Robert Spence Watson. With Map and Illustrations, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Is decidedly interesting and pleasantly told.....As the record of an independent and unprejudiced observer, his little book is of value."—Times.

HOUSE ARCHITECTURE. By J. J. Stevenson, F.R.I.B.A. With numerous Illustrations, 2 vols. royal 8vo. 18s. each. Vol. I. ARCHITECTURE. Vol. II. HOUSE PLANNING.

"The general reader will find these volumes interesting, not only on account of the animated and picturesque way in which the subject has been treated, but also because of the independence of the author's views, and his earnestness and fine taste."—Athenæum.

ENGLISH MEN of LETTERS. Edited by John Morley. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LOCKE. By Professor Fowler.

[New Volume.]

WITH TWENTY-FIVE ILLUSTRATIONS BY WALTER CRANE.

The NECKLACE of PRINCESS FIORIMONDE, and other Stories. By MARY DE MORGAN. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

Also an Edition on hand-made paper, the Illustrations on India paper, limited to ONE HUNDRED COPIES. Fcap. 6s.

A CHRISTMAS CHILD: a Sketch of a Boy-life. By Mrs. Molesworth, Author of 'Carrots,' 'The Cuckoo Clock,' &c. Illustrated by Walter Crane. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PANSIE'S FLOUR-BIN. By the Author of 'St. Olave's,' &c. Illustrated by Adrian Stokes. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

GUIDE to the STUDY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. By Dr. Luigi Cosca, Professor in the University of Pavia. Translated from the Second Italian Edition. With a Preface by W. STANLEY JEVONS, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

STUDIES in DEDUCTIVE LOGIC: a Manual for Students. By W. Stanley JEVONS, LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Political Economy in University College, London. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIFE and LETTERS of M. T. CICERO. Being a Translation of the Letters in Mr. WATSON'S Selection. With Historical and Critical Notes by the Rev. G. E. JEANS, M.A. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Mr. Jeans's translation deserves to take its place side by side with Davies and Vaughan's 'Repablo' and Church and Brodribb's 'Tacitus.'"—St. James's Gazette.

"The translation gives evidence of a great deal of labour and careful scholarship.....The style is lifelike, and shows literary power; nor is it superfluous to add that it is for the most part really English and idiomatic." Academy.

A COURSE of ELEMENTARY PRACTICAL PHYSIOLOGY. By Michael POSTER, M.D., assisted by J. H. LANGLEY, M.A. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 4s.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

NEW AND CHOICE BOOKS.

Fresh Copies are added daily of McCarthy's History of our Own Times; Japan, by Miss Bird, and by Sir E. J. Reed; New Guinea, by L. M. D'Albertis; Trevelyan's Life of C. J. Fox; Memoirs of Frances R. Havergal; Guizot in Private Life; Thoughts in My Garden, by Mortimer Collins; Kinglake's War in the Crimea, Vol. VI.; Christie's Memoir of Etienne Dolet; Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi; Life and Letters of Cicero, by G. E. Jeans; Lady Eastlake's Sketch of Mrs. Grote; Faiths and Fashions, by Lady Violet Greville; A Tramp Abroad, new edition; Ephphatha, by Canon Farrar; The Manifold Witness for Christ, by Canon Barry; Sunshine and Storm in the East, by Mrs. Brassey; and every other Recent Work of General Interest.

SEE MUDIE'S LIBRARY CIRCULAR FOR NOVEMBER.

NEW EDITION NOW READY, POSTAGE FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION TO MUDIE'S LIBRARY,

ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM AND UPWARDS,

Are the lowest on which it is possible to furnish

A CONSTANT SUCCESSION OF THE BEST NEW BOOKS.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS AND UPWARDS,

For the Free Delivery of Books in every part of London.

BOXES AND PARCELS OF THE NEWEST BOOKS

Are forwarded daily to Families and Book Societies in every part of the Country on the following liberal terms:—

FIFTEEN VOLUMES OF THE NEWEST BOOKS, FIVE GUINEAS PER ANNUM,

And Three Volumes for every additional Guinea.

THIRTY VOLUMES OF OLDER BOOKS, SIX GUINEAS PER ANNUM,

And Five Volumes for every additional Guinea.

CHEAP AND SCARCE BOOKS.

Clean Second-hand Copies are now on Sale of the Life of the Prince Consort, by Sir Theodore Martin; Canon Farrar's St. Paul; The Letters of Charles Dickens; Memoirs of Dean Hook, Bishop Selwyn, and Mrs. Tait; and more than a Thousand other Works of General Interest.

SEE MUDIE'S CLEARANCE CATALOGUE FOR NOVEMBER.

NEW EDITION NOW READY, POSTAGE FREE ON APPLICATION.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (LIMITED), New Oxford-street.

CITY OFFICE: 2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

ON NOVEMBER 15TH

Will be published, in super-royal quarto, price 3ls. 6d.

*Nearly 400 PICTURES, luxuriously printed on fine paper, in Red and Black,"OUR PEOPLE,"

SKETCHED BY CHARLES KEENE.

FROM THE COLLECTION OF

"MR. PUNCH."

Is there anywhere a people so transparent as we are—or any race of men to whom the truth about themselves is so much desired? Do we keep any skeletons in our national cupboards? Do not we all tell tales of each other out of school? Is it not our manner to cleanse our soiled habits in the face of all the world? Are we not always praying for the gift to see ourselves as others see us? Is not the critical profession the most successful nowadays? Do we not delight to honour and put in our high places those who are our severest censors? And is not that critic the most admired amongst us who is the least merciful,—who says the hardest things of us,—and who probes us even to our very marrow?

Is not "MR. PUNCH" our kindest and wisest critic, and are not all "OUR PEOPLE" his disciples? Do we not sit humbly at his feet listening to his words of wisdom, and when we have been naughty,—as even those of us who are the most virtuous will be sometimes,—are we not ashamed at his reproof? And do we not devour with eagerness the pictures of ourselves that he makes,—revealing all our absurdities, our weaknesses and vanities,—and do we not hold them in our lasting remembrance?

How many such pictures has our perennial friend made of us and for us altogether? When our good Queen was young, and when as yet the plague of Exhibitions had not fallen upon the land, withering up the dearest of our insular prejudices—did not Mr. RICHARD DOYLE, aided by the ingenious "Mr. Pips," exhibit to all the world the doings of Society in those days, in a procession of pictures, marked all over with the chaste feeling and fine fancy which were that artist's especial gifts? And did we not, in the persons of our well-known countrymen, Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson, display our native graces and our school-taught parlance to the eyes of a wondering continent, who could not understand and would not appreciate them? And did not, at a later day, that most genial critic and observant artist, Mr. JOHN LEECH, give us a whole gallery of pictures, revealing us to ourselves with such wonderful intelligence as to make us better acquainted with each other than ever we were before, and for which we now hold him in our most affectionate memory? And did not Mr. GEORGE DU MAURIER give us his collection of pictures last year, letting us into the secrets of the very highest "SOCIETY," and making us acquainted even with Duchesses? What luxurious houses that artist did introduce us to, to be sure, and what intensely respectable company he made us keep!

And now comes Mr. CHARLES KEENE with his collection of pictures, and shall we not give him also a hearty welcome? His folk are people whom we meet every day and know a good deal about already, but Mr. KEENE knows them much better than we do. And what is very nice, he knows all their humorous points, and he does not scruple to make us the sharers in all his knowledge. Let us enjoy the good things he provides, and as we turn over the pages of his pictures, let us laugh and never be weary.

CONTENTS.

OUR PEOPLE.—AT HOME.

OUR PEOPLE.—STREET-LIFE.

OUR PEOPLE.—IN THE COUNTRY.

OUR PEOPLE.—TRAVELLING.

OUR PEOPLE.—PROFESSIONAL.

OUR PEOPLE.—OFFICIAL.

OUR PEOPLE.—IN THE ARMY.

OUR PEOPLE.—ART AND ARTISTS.

OUR PEOPLE.—VOLUNTEERS.

OUR PEOPLE.—AT BUSINESS.

OUR PEOPLE.—DOMESTICS.

OUR PEOPLE.—WORKING FOLK.

OUR PEOPLE.—IN IRELAND.

OUR PEOPLE.—IN SCOTLAND.

&c. &c.

GEORGE BELL & SONS' STANDARD PUBLICATIONS.

Enlarged Edition, 5 vols. 2l. 12s. 6d.

History of Modern Europe, from the Taking of Constantinople to the Establishment of the German Empire, A.D. 1453-1871. By Dr. T. H. DYER.

Second Edition, much Enlarged,

History of England during the Early and MIDDLE AGES. By C. H. PEARSON, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. In 2 vols. Vol. I. 8vo. 16s. Vol. II. to the Death of Edward I. 8vo. 14s.

Imperial folio, Second Edition, 1l. 11s. 6d.

Historical Maps of England during the First THIRTEEN CENTURIES. With Explanatory Essays and Indices. By C. H. PEARSON, M.A.

LIBRARY EDITION, with Portraits, Autographs, and Vignettes, 5 vols. large post 8vo. 7s. 6d. each.

Lives of the Queens of England. From the Norman Conquest to the Reign of Queen Anna. By AGNES STRICKLAND. Also a Cheaper Edition, in 6 vols. 5s. each.

AN ABRIDGED EDITION. With Portrait of Matilda of Flanders. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Illustrated with Plans and Wood Engravings taken from Photographs.

Ancient Athens: its History, Topography, and Remains. By Dr. T. H. DYER. Super-royal 8vo. cloth, 1l. 5s.

With nearly 300 Wood Engravings, a Large Map, and a Plan of the Forum.

Pompeii: its Buildings and Antiquities. Account of the City, with full Description of the Remains and Recent Excavations; and also an Itinerary for Visitors. By T. H. DYER, LL.D. Fourth and Cheaper Edition. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

With numerous Engravings, Maps, and Plans.

Rome and the Campagna: an Historical and Topographical Description of the Site, Buildings, and Neighbourhood of Ancient Rome. By R. BURN, M.A. Handsomely bound in cloth, 4to. 3l. 2s.

With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Old Rome: a Handbook of the Ruins of the Ancient City and the Campagna, for the Use of Travellers. By R. BURN, M.A.

With 406 Illustrations, including 44 Full-Page Inserted Plates, handsomely bound, cloth, gilt edges, imperial 4to. 2l. 12s. 6d.

Venice: its History, Art, Industries, and Modern Life. By CHARLES YRIARTE. Translated by F. STYVELL.

BY THE LATE GEORGE LONG, M.A.

The Decline of the Roman Republic. 8vo. in 6 vols. 14s. each.

Epictetus, the Discourses of. With the Encheiridion and Fragments. Translated, with Notes, a Life of Epictetus, a View of his Philosophy, and Index. 5s.

Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, the Thoughts of. Translated literally, with Notes, Biographical Sketch, Introductory Essay on the Philosophy, and Index. Revised Edition, 2s. 6d.

History of English Dramatic Poetry to the Time of SHAKESPEARE, and ANNALS of the STAGE to the RESTORATION. By J. PAYNE COLLIER, Esq., F.S.A. New Edition, Revised. Uniform with Mr. Collier's Reprints, 3 vols. fcap. 4to. Roxburghe binding.

*. The price of the Remaining Copies of this Work is now raised to 2l. 10s. nett.

Addison's Works. With the Notes of Bishop Hurd. A short Memoir, and a Portrait. 6 vols. at 2s. 6d., sold separately.

Vol. 1. POEMS—POEMATA—DIALOGUES on MEDALS—REMARKS on ITALY.

2. TATLER and SPECTATOR.

3. SPECTATOR.

4. SPECTATOR—GUARDIAN—LOVER—STATE of the WAR—TRIAL of COUNT TARIFF—WHIG EXAMINER—FREEHOLDER.

5. FREEHOLDER—CHRISTIAN RELIGION—DRUMMER, or HAUNTED HOUSE—VARIOUS SHORT PIECES hitherto unpublished—LETTERS.

6. LETTERS—POEMS—TRANSLATIONS—OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS—ADDITIONALS.

Imperial 4to. 3 vols. 4l. 4s. each.

Notes on Irish Architecture. By the late Earl of DUNRAVEN. Edited by MARGARET McNAIR STOKES, Lady-Associate of the Scottish Society of Antiquaries. With very numerous fine Photographic Illustrations and Wood Engravings.

With numerous Illustrations, Imperial 8vo. 1l. 1s.

Early Christian Architecture in Ireland. By MARGARET McNAIR STOKES, M.B.A.

A Handbook to the Coinage of Scotland. Giving a Description of every variety issued by the Scottish Mint in Gold, Silver, Billon, and Copper, from Alexander I. to the cessation of the Mint under Anne. With an Introductory Chapter on the Implements and Processes employed. By J. D. ROBERTSON, Member of the Numismatic Society of London. 4to. Roxburghe binding, 2s.

Sir Arthur Helps's Works, including:—

The LIFE of MR. BRASSEY. With Illustrations. Fifth Thousand. 10s. 6d.

The LIFE of HERNANDO CORTES and the CONQUEST of MEXICO. 3 vols. 15s.

The LIFE of COLUMBUS. Fourth Edition. 6s.

The LIFE of PIZARRO. With some Account of his Associates in the Conquest of Peru. Second Edition. 6s.

The LIFE of LAS CASAS, the Apostle of the Indies. Third Edition. 6s.

Boswell's Life of Johnson and Johnsoniana, including his Tour to the Hebrides, Tour in Wales, Correspondence with Mrs. Thrale. Edited, with numerous Additions, by J. W. CROKER; Revised and Enlarged under the direction of J. WRIGHT. With Index, Autographs, Fac-similes, numerous Views of Places, and Portraits of Persons mentioned in the Work. 8 vols. cloth, 30s.

Fly Leaves. A Volume of Humorous Verse. By C. S. CALVERLEY. Sixth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Verses and Translations. A Volume of Humorous Verse. By C. S. CALVERLEY. Fifth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s.

Uniform with the Aldine Edition of the British Poets.

Shakespeare's Dramatic Works. Edited by S. W.

SINGER. With a Life of the Poet by W. WATKISS LLOYD. Fcap. 8vo. 10 vols. 2s. 6d. each, or in half-morocco, 5s.

Aldine Edition of the British Poets.—The Editors of the various Authors in this Series have in all cases endeavoured to make the Collections of Poems as complete as possible, and in many instances Copyright Poems are to be found in these Editions which are not in any other. Each volume is carefully edited, with Notes and a Memoir. A Portrait also is added in all cases where an authentic one is accessible. The Volumes are printed on toned paper, in fcap. 8vo. size, and neatly bound in cloth, price 5s. each (except Collins, 3s. 6d.).

A CHEAP REPRINT of these in neat cloth, 1s. 6d. per volume, or the 53 vols. bound in half-morocco, 9l. 9s.

The following Poets are included in the Series:—Akenhead, Beattie, Burns, Butler, Chaucer, Churchill, Collins, Cowper, Dryden, Falconer, Goldsmith, Gray, Kirke, White, Milton, Parnell, Pope, Prior, Shakespeare, Spenser, Surrey, Swift, Thomas, Wyatt, Young.

NEW SERIES of the ALDINE POETS. The following volumes have lately been issued, price 5s. each:—

BLAKE—ROGERS—CHATTERTON, 3 vols.—CAMPBELL—KEATS—HERBERT—RALEIGH, and WOTTON.

Coventry Patmore's Poetical Works.

AMELIA, TAMERTON CHURCH TOWER, &c. With Essay on English Metrical Law. Post 8vo. cloth, 6s.; Roxburghe, 7s.

The ANGEL in the HOUSE. Fifth Edition, post 8vo. cloth, 6s.; Roxburghe, 7s.

The VICTORIES of LOVE. Fourth Edition. Post 8vo. cloth, 6s.; Roxburghe, 7s.

The UNKNOWN EROS, I.—XLVI. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.; Roxburghe binding, 8s. 6d.

UNIFORM EDITION, complete in 4 vols. post 8vo. Roxburghe, 30s.

Florilegium Amantis: a Selection from Coventry

Patmore's Poems. Edited by E. GARNETT. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.; Roxburghe, 6s.

A Dictionary of Artists of the English School:

Painters, Sculptors, Architects, Engravers, and Ornamentists. With Notices of their Lives and Works. By SAMUEL REDGRAVE, Joint Author of 'A Century of Painters of the English School.' Revised Edition, demy 8vo. 16s.

The Art of Sketching from Nature. By P. H.

DELAMOTTE, Professor of Drawing at King's College, London. With 24 Woodcuts and 25 Coloured Plates, arranged progressively, from Water-Colour Drawings by Frost, E. W. Cooke, R.A., Girtin, Varley, De Wint, Birket Foster, G. Thomas, and the Author. Imperial 4to. 3l. 3s.

Delamotte's Drawing Copies. Oblong imperial

8vo. 12s.; sold also in Parts at 1s. each.

This Volume contains 48 Outline and 48 Shaded Plates of Architecture, Trees, Figures, Fragments, Landscapes, Boats, and Sea-scenes. Drawn on Stone by Professor DELAMOTTE.

Third Edition, entirely Revised, with Descriptions of all the Species by the Editor.

Sowerby's English Botany. Containing a Description and Life-size Drawing of every British Plant. Edited, and brought up to the present standard of scientific knowledge, by T. BOSWELL, LL.D., F.L.S., &c. With Popular Descriptions by Mrs. LANKESTER. In 11 vols. 22l. 8s. cloth.

*. Volumes sold separately; or, in 53 Parts, 5s. each.

MARCUS WARD & CO., PUBLISHERS.

THREE POPULAR NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Opinions of the Press on 'GRISSEL ROMNEY.'

The Illustrated London News says:—"A picture of real life, as led among the comfortable classes."

The Standard says:—"A very interesting novel."

The Daily News says:—"The story is pretty, and Grisel herself a bright and charming little girl. The description of her first ball is excellent. The whole of the Romney interior is good."

The Scotsman calls it "a study of English upper-class social life.... fresh and pleasant.... marked by genuine refinement of treatment and style."

The St. James's Gazette says:—"Plot full of interest.... narrative brisk and animated; story told with purity and simplicity.... bright, pleasant, and very readable."

The Academy says:—"Gracefully told.... the social sketches are clever, and the two girl figures both well drawn."

The Morning Advertiser says:—"Told in very pure English, and with infinite tenderness.... many of the descriptions are exceedingly skilfully wrought."

In Two Volumes,

GRISSEL ROMNEY.

BY

M. E. FRASER-TYTLER.

In Two Volumes,

GRISSEL ROMNEY.

BY

M. E. FRASER-TYTLER.

Opinions of the Press on 'CROSS PURPOSES.'

The Graphic says:—"A peculiarly charming work, written with grace and freshness.... full of interest.... and though she has introduced many characters, she has drawn them all to nature, and made them all gentle men and women in the highest sense of the word."

The Edinburgh says:—"The style is agreeable, and some of the descriptions of the scenery of Ayrshire are graphic and interesting."

The Reverberator says:—"There is genuine power and originality both of invention and description manifested and the working of the 'Cross Purposes' is well led up to.... Elsie will win other hearts than Frank's, and those with whom her lot is cast are worthy the companionship, while their story takes us into pleasant places graphically sketched."

The Scotsman says:—"The interest of the story is undiminishedly sustained to the close. There is artistic realism, as well as vigour and clearness of outline. In all the personages of the story, and a more truthful and lovable portraiture of an English young lady of the present time than is presented in her heroine, Elsie Herriam need not be wished."

The Glasgow Herald says:—"First to last the story shows signs of a healthy, frank view of life.... A pleasant picture of English home-life, well grouped amidst the sunlight and the colour of a skilfully painted landscape."

The Whitehall Review says:—"A love-story and every one will hope that Frank and Elsie were happy. Alice is really a well-drawn study of a noble and generous woman."

The World says:—"Bright and wholesome."

The Speaker says:—"It is interesting, and the people talk in a lively and natural fashion."

In One Volume,

CROSS PURPOSES.

BY

CECILIA FINDLAY.

In One Volume,

CROSS PURPOSES.

BY

CECILIA FINDLAY.

In Two Volumes,

MATE

OF

THE JESSICA.

BY

F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

In Two Volumes,

MATE

OF

THE JESSICA.

BY

F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

JUST PUBLISHED.—Now ready at all Libraries, &c. gilt edges, handsomely bound in cloth, price 21s.

TASMANIAN FRIENDS AND FOES,
FEATHERED, FURRED, AND FINNED.

By Mrs. LOUISA A. MEREDITH, Author of 'My Home in Tasmania,' 'Some of my Bush Friends in Tasmania,' 'Our Island Home,' &c.

Illustrated by 8 Coloured Plates from Drawings by the Author, and numerous Woodcuts.

In this book the Author has gathered and woven into connected sequence some of the most interesting incidents and observations which a residence of thirty-nine years in Tasmania has served to collect. Every adventure narrated is strictly true, and the anecdotes of birds and animals are facts, set down simply from the experience of the Author and her family.

The Author confirms the statement generally accepted by Naturalists, that the Marsupials, in accordance with their low development of brain, show a low degree of intelligence. In the Preface she states:—

"I am fain to rejoice over those pages of my unpretending book, which I think will supply evidence that the engaging and affectionate animals whose brief memoirs they contain were far from deficient in intelligence. The gentle usage and freedom they enjoyed with us would very probably be more favourable to the manifestation of sense and attachment than the dreary lives they would pass in large zoological collections, where the bestowal of a daily dole of food might be all the kindly notice they would receive. The young brush kangaroo, of which the longest account is given, showed most decided knowledge of, and preference for, certain individuals. In a morning, before his breakfast of bread and milk was given to him, he would follow me or the parlour-maid from place to place until we fed him; but he only so followed as because no one else was in the habit of feeding him at that hour. In the garden he hopped round and round in merry races with our sons (then children), seeming as fond of the fun as they were, or with his little fore-paws took hold of one of my husband's hands or mine, licking them fondly, and evidently liking to pace the walks with us in our sedate manner; but at the sound of an opening gate he would quickly and warily rear himself erect, and glance round, with his ever alert and mobile ears intently listening, and should an unfamiliar step approach, he invariably took flight, leaping away at racing speed to hide himself amongst the shrubs. Here, surely, was evidence of clear discrimination.

"My tame handloots, which used to run up, like great mice, into the folds of my dress, or creep into my sleeves, never attempted such familiarities with any other person; and the one which died would cry uneasily if any hands but my own touched it after it became sick.

"A great forest kangaroo, which long ago belonged to the wife of one of Mr. Meredith's servants, always accompanied her everywhere, as a faithful dog would do, but never followed any one else; and the wombat attached itself to particular persons with touching fidelity.

"My simple, truthful records relating to individuals of the marsupial tribes cannot prove slight as to their conformation of brain, but may, I venture to believe, in some degree vindicate them from the suspicion of stupidity or ingratitude."

* * No more appropriate book as a present for young people could be desired.

JUST PUBLISHED.—Now ready at all Libraries, price 5s.

HOW THEY WERE CAUGHT IN A TRAP:
A TALE OF FRANCE IN 1802.

By ESME STUART, Author of 'Mimi,' 'The Good Old Days,' 'Master Trim's Charge,' &c.

With a Frontispiece introducing Napoleon I. and another character in the Story. Price 5s.

The Pictorial World says:—"The story is thoroughly interesting, and though presumably written for young people, we doubt not that very few older readers, having once taken up the book, will be inclined to part with it until they have finished reading the record of Joyce and Patience Dacre's adventures during the troublesome times dealt with."

The Sunday Times says:—"A charmingly written tale."

The Graphic says:—"Simply and unaffectedly written, the story is sure to please."

MARCUS WARD & CO.'S DESCRIPTIVE LIST OF NEW PUBLICATIONS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

67 and 68, CHANDOS-STREET, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.; and ROYAL ULSTER WORKS, BELFAST.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1880.

CONTENTS
NEW POEMS BY HOLMES AND LONGFELLOW	399
GOSNELL ON FOLK-MOSES	400
MODERN GREECE	401
DAVID'S WALKS IN YORK	402
NOVELS OF THE WEEK	403
LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	404-405
NOTES FROM OXFORD: NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE; THE DIARY OF THOMAS CARSWORTHY, BISHOP OF CHESTER; THE BIOGRAPHY OF LOCKE	406
LITERARY Gossip	408
SCIENCE—WALLACE'S ISLAND LIFE; GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES, ASTROLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEMORIALS; Gossip	409-411
FINE ARTS—JANEBUCH DER KÖNIGLICHEN FARBEN-DRUCKER KUNSTANSTALTEN; FRENCH GALLERY; FINE-ART SOCIETY; NOTES FROM NAPLES; COLOMBI CATHEDRAL; 'JACOB'S DREAM'; Gossip	412-415
MUSIC—THE WEEK; Gossip	416-418
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip	417

LITERATURE

The Iron Gate, and other Poems. By Oliver Wendell Holmes. (Boston, U.S., Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; London, Trübner & Co.)
Ultima Thule. By Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. (Routledge & Sons.)

Or the full choir which was supposed a generation ago to make Boston almost as musical as was Paris in the time of the Pléiade two voices are yet heard. A thin pamphlet from Mr. Longfellow, and a not much thicker volume from Mr. Holmes, come to prove that the song is not quite hushed. When men have passed the limits assigned by the Psalmist to human life, and have seen most of their friends and contemporaries fall off from them, it is natural that their utterances should deal with regret and loss. In one case, however, at least, the voice of triumph prevails over that of wailing. Following the example of Erasmus, who called his masterpiece 'Moris Encomium,' Mr. Holmes might style his latest work 'Encomium Senectutis.' Never before, in fact, have the compensations, if any, of age been set before the world in so comforting a light. Not a few of the poems now collected have been written for anniversary commemorations, and most of them, if we may trust our recollections, have been given to the world in the Atlantic Monthly. The names assigned the poems are not seldom indicative of their origin. Such titles as 'For the Moore Centennial Celebration,' 'Welcome to the Chicago Commercial Club,' 'American Academy Centennial Celebration,' and 'For Whittier's Seventieth Birthday' are frequent, and seem to hint that poetry flows less freely and exacts a little tilting of the barrel. Quite clear and sparkling is, however, the stream, and the draught, if it is not copious, is at least refreshing.

A strict application of canons would result in placing Mr. Holmes's poems in the category of vers de société. So much the better for vers de société if this is done, since that pleasant and popular form of literature can boast nothing quite equal to the best of these pieces. 'My Aviary' is our favourite. From his north window, overlooking the river, the poet contemplates the birds:—

I see the solemn gulls in council sitting
 On some broad ice-floe, pondering long and late,
 While overhead the home-bound ducks are sitting,
 And leave the tardy conclave in debate,

These weighty questions in their breasts revolving
 Whose deeper meaning science never learns,
 Till at some reverend elder's look dissolving,
 The speechless senate silently adjourns.

Singularly graceful and charming is this, and the last line is quite admirable. With humour of a more marked type the poet, after describing the proceedings of the gulls, continues:—

Such is our gull; a gentleman of leisure,
 Less fleshed than feathered; begged you'll find
 His virtue silence; his employment pleasure;
 Not bad to look at, and not good for much.

With a feeling akin to that of Burns he describes the proceedings of the "cockney" sportsmen, for America, it is sad to hear, has such. This leads up to the termination of the poem, which is in Mr. Holmes's happiest vein:—

Shrewd is our bird; not easy to outwit him!
 Sharp is the outlook of those pin-head eyes;
 Still, he is mortal and a shot may hit him,
 One cannot always miss him if he tries.

Look! there's a young one, dreaming not of danger;

Behold a fat log come floating down the stream;
 Stares undismayed upon the harmless stranger;
 Ah! were all strangers harmless as they seem!

Mabel / a maiden shower his breast has shattered;
 Vainly he flutters, not again to rise;
 His soft white plumes along the waves are scattered;
 Helpless the wing that braved the tempest lies.

He sees his comrades high above him flying
 To seek their nests among the island reeds;
 Strong is their flight; all lonely he is lying Washed by the crimsoned water as he bleeds.

O Thou who carest for the falling sparrow,
 Hast Thou the sunless sufferer's pang forgot?
 Or is Thy dread account-book's page so narrow
 Its one long column scores Thy creatures' debt?

Poor gentle guest, by nature kindly cherished,
 A world grows dark with thee in blinding death;
 One little gasp—thy universe has perished,
 Wrecked by the idle thief who stole thy breath!

Is this the whole sad story of creation,
 Lived by its breathing myriads o'er and o'er,—
 One glimpse of day, then black annihilation,—
 A sunlit passage to a sunless shore?

Give back our faith, ye mystery-solving lynxes!
 Robe us once more in heaven-aspiring creeds!
 Happier was dreaming Egypt with her sphinxes,
 The stony convent with its crosses and beads!

How often gazing where a bird reposes,
 Rocked on the wavelets, drifting with the tide,
 I lose myself in strange metempsychosis
 And float a sea-fowl at a sea-fowl's side,

From rain, hail, snow in feathery mantle muffled, Clear-eyed, strong-limbed, with keener senses to My mate soft marmoring, who, with plumes unruffled,

Where'er I wander still is nestling near;
 The great blue hollow like a garment o'er me;
 Space all unmeasured, unrecorded time;
 While seen with inward eye moves on before me
 Thought's pictured train in wordless pantomime.

—A voice recalls me.—From my window turning
 I find myself a plumeless bled still;
 No beak, no claws, no sign of wings discerning,—
 In fact with nothing bird-like but my quill.

So characteristic and so admirable is this the length of the quotation will be excused. This may not be very high work; it is, however, of a kind that appeals most strongly to the most cultivated minds, and has met with a success that a more serious statement of the same truth might fail to obtain. It is, of course, easy to find in Wordsworth's fine sonnet commencing, "The world is too much with us," a suggestion for one verse at least in the poem.

Like other poems the names of which we have mentioned, 'The Iron Gate' is memorial. It was read on the occasion of a breakfast given in the author's honour. In this we find most distinctly advanced his cheerful theories concerning age. Has not, he inquires, Æsop shown him old age asking the aid of Death, while "sad Ecclesiastes"

Sighs o'er the loosened card, the broken bowl?
 To this query he responds:—

Yes, long, indeed, I've known him at a distance,
 And now my lifted door-latch shows him here;
 I take his shrivelled hand without resistance,
 And find him smiling as his step draws near.

What though of gilded bangles he bereaves us,
 Dear to the heart of youth, to manhood's prime;
 Think of the calm he brings, the wealth he leaves us,
 The boarded spoils, the legacies of time!

Altars once flaming, still with incense fragrant,
 Passion's uneasy narailings rocked asleep,
 Hope's anchor faster, wild desire less vagrant,
 Life's flow less noisy, but the stream how deep!

Still as the silver cord gets worn and slender,
 Its lightened task-work tugs with lessening strain,
 Hands get more helpful, voices, grown more tender,
 Soothe with their softened tones the slumberous brain.

Youth longs and manhood strives, but age remembers,
 Sits by the raked-up ashes of the past,
 Spreads its thin hands above the whitening embers
 That warm its creeping life-blood till the last.

But, O my gentle sisters, O my brothers,
 These thick-sown snow-flakes hint of toil's release
 These feeble pulses bid me leave to others
 The tasks once welcome; evening asks for peace.

Time claims his tribute; silence now is golden;
 Let me not vex the too long suffering lyre;
 Though to your love untiring still beholden,
 The curfew tells me—cover up the fire.

Few readers of the volume will quarrel with Mr. Holmes for having forgotten his own counsel and left his fire for a short time uncovered. Another poem which puts the same views in a light not less cheerful is entitled 'The Archbishop and Gil Blas: a Modernized Version.' In the verses which deal with academy centennials and the like some of the references are of course incomprehensible to Englishmen. From these, however, passages of signal interest may be detached. How pensive and how humorous are the two verses which follow!—

Child of our children's children yet unborn,
 When on this yellow page you turn your eyes,
 Where the brief record of this May-day morn
 In phrase antique and faded letters lies,
 How vague, how pale our fitting ghosts will rise

Yet in our veins the blood ran warm and red,
 For as the fields were green, the skies were blue,
 Though from our dust the spirit long has fled,
 We lived, we loved, we toiled, we dreamed like you,
 Smiled at our sires and thought how much we knew.

If it cannot add to its author's reputation, this volume will at least consolidate and confirm it.

'Ultima Thule' will scarcely do the same for Mr. Longfellow. The subjects of the verses are occasionally similar to those in 'The Iron Gate,' acknowledgment of congratulations or gifts, a tribute to friends who have died, and so forth. So inferior is, however, the workmanship to that of Mr. Longfellow's best days, that few, we imagine, would on internal evidence ascribe the work to him. Except the dedication and the address to the late Bayard Taylor, there is nothing in the volume that calls for notice.

In later poems Mr. Longfellow sinks to the level of those minor minstrels who confuse piety with poetry, and think rhyme is a means of enforcing reason. It is difficult to understand how the man who gave us 'The Golden Legend' could subside into writing 'The Sifting of Peter.' Of this extraordinary poem the three opening stanzas may be quoted:—

In St. Luke's Gospel we are told
How Peter in the days of old
Was sifted;

And now, though ages intervene,
Sin is the same, while time and scene
Are shifted.

Satan desires us, great and small,
As wheat to sift us, and we all
Are tempted;

Not one, however rich or great,
Is by his station or estate
Exempted.

No house so safely guarded is
But he, by some device of his,
Can enter;

No heart hath armour so complete
But he can pierce with arrows fleet
Its centre.

Three sonnets which are included in the volume are not happier in workmanship than the remaining contents.

Primitive Folk-Moots; or, Open-Air Assemblies in Britain. By George Laurence Gomme, F.S.A. (Sampson Low & Co.)

FANCIFUL speculations have been indulged in by many persons who might have been better employed as to what would have been the course of history had gunpowder and the printing press been discovered a thousand years before their time came. We cannot tell, and it is a most useless expenditure of thought to make fancy pictures. Mr. Gomme's book will, however, if we are not much mistaken, lead some persons to waste their energies in a very similar manner. What would have been the effect on society if the discoveries and speculations of Sir Henry Maine, M. Émile de Laveleye, and Mr. Gomme had been before the world when Rousseau took the figment of the "social contract" from the hands of the lawyers and made of it a mighty political force? To such a question there can, of course, be no answer given, but there is little reason to doubt that the stream of progress would have hollowed for itself very different channels. Dr. Whewell has said somewhere that the "social contract" was perhaps a "convenient form for the expression of moral truths." We are by no means sure that he was correct, but, even admitting that the phrase and the idea it contained were well adapted for use in the conflicts of the moment, when men were for the most part so densely ignorant of remote political facts that any light in the great darkness—a Jack-o'-lantern even—was better than none, it is difficult not to believe that the true origins of our social systems, had they been known, might have softened intellectual acrimony, and that, if the path of reform or revolution had not been smoothed in the moment of conflict, the work of reconstruction would have been rendered easier, and, in some countries at least, men would have built on a much more stable foundation. It is necessary to affirm this with earnestness because there is a widespread opinion abroad that investigations such as those recorded by Mr. Gomme are matters of antiquarian interest only, of which it is of little consequence if the governors and the governed are alike ignorant.

That the village community is the earliest form of political life to which it is possible to trace back any of the races which now inhabit Europe is admitted by all persons who are capable of using their reason on this subject; that it presupposes an earlier stage or stages may be regarded as certain, but there is no direct evidence for them, and it is extremely improbable that, either here or among savage races, facts should be discovered which will tend to throw anything beyond the faintest glimmer of light on the state of our forefathers before family relationships were regarded, or before the diverse households springing from a common ancestor united themselves into a rude political unity.

That village community life existed at some time or other among all the various offshoots of the Aryan stock may be received as certain; whether it was ever planted in England, and if it was, to what extent and by what races, is a point calling for investigations of extreme delicacy and difficulty. Mr. Gomme has undertaken to demonstrate that it was planted and did flourish here, and after weighing the large amount of evidence which he has gathered from all kinds of sources and all manner of places, we are bound to say that we believe that he has proved his case. Exceptions may be taken to this or that point of detail, but there are far too many lines converging on one point for the argument to be appreciably weakened if a few of the strands be broken.

At first sight it seems extremely unlikely that the village community should have existed here, at least since the Roman occupation, and one would have thought that those hard masters would have stamped out every sign of such a simple organization long before their four hundred years of rule were over. The next objection is also serious. We know, or are almost certain, that the village community existed in the lands from which the people we have been accustomed to call Saxons came, yet it has been confidently assumed—and the chronicles and contents of Teutonic barrows seem to give some countenance to the conclusion—that they came here rather as bands of freebooters than as colonizing families. If so, if there were no women and children among them, or if these impedimenta accompanied them but in small numbers, it is improbable that they should have been in a position to establish the institutions of home on a foreign soil. To these objections must be added another of no little weight. It is this: although the Roman armies and officials, and, as we suppose, also the greater part of the colonists, had withdrawn from the island, Roman influence, imperial and ecclesiastical, had not become obsolete. Rome, though the limits of her acknowledged dominion were curtailed, was still the civil and spiritual mistress of the Western world—the point to which men looked for guidance, to heaven if they were within the Christian fold, in secular matters only if they were still worshippers of the old gods, or had shaken themselves free from their ancestral mythology without embracing the religion which Rome was teaching. The Papacy has been called "the ghost of the deceased Roman Empire sitting crowned upon the grave thereof." It would be more accurate if the meaning of the phrase were widened, so as to include Roman influence as a whole, civil and ecclesiastical alike. This extended for ages over Britain and the other lands which soonest fell from her grasp, and even far away into Scandinavia and Germany, where the legions had never planted their eagles. It is but just that the more weighty arguments against Mr. Gomme's conclusions should be indicated, for although he meets some of them, it is a defect in this book that they are not dealt with in detail.

The evidence on which Mr. Gomme relies to prove his case is necessarily cumulative, each little fact not being of much value in itself till put in its right place among others. Britain is a country which has undergone many political and social changes, and it was not to be expected that we should find any direct living survival of the primitive village life. Had interest been awakened in these matters before the days of the great enclosures, it is probable that English specimens might have been adduced which would have compared in perfectness with those of Russia and India. Even now, if our manor court rolls and their customs were printed, or even placed in some central office where they might be consulted by scholars, it is likely that very much new knowledge in confirmation of Mr. Gomme's deductions would be forthcoming. He has come upon one instance, that of the manor of Pamber in Hampshire, where it would seem the tenants have progressed or retrogressed—we know not which word to use—very little beyond the ancient limits. There, instead of the head man of the village having made his position hereditary, engrossing unto himself the people's land under the name of "the lord's waste," and turning the same into a real estate, the commonalty of the village have succeeded in keeping him in his ancient, or very nearly his ancient, position. Their court leet is held in the open air, on a plot of ground called Lady Mead, and there the lord of the manor for the year is elected; during his term of office he has, like other lords of manors, rights of sporting, and the unclaimed stray cattle which are found within the limits of the franchise belong to him. The elective character of the lord is, of course, the most interesting point here; but the meeting of the court in the open air is very noteworthy. On this latter subject Mr. Gomme has been marvellously successful in gathering information. Few people have hitherto seen the importance of these old open-air meetings, and those who have known better, possessing no collection of examples to which to refer, have been too apt to think of them as of the rarest possible occurrence—so rare, indeed, that it was safer to put them down as local accidents rather than as true cases of survival from a time when the village, the hundred, the wapentake, the riding, and the county were self-governing communities, the men of which were in the habit of discussing their business, trying their criminals, and making their laws sub die. It is obvious that the larger assemblies could not have found room within any building existing in the early time, but need of space will not account for more than a small fraction of the British examples which are here brought together, nor for the many others which may be found by those who will have the patience to look for them in the chronicles and records of our continental kinamen. There was, we may be sure, some reason, grounded on the religion or superstition of the people, which taught them that important public business was transacted more sacredly under the vault of heaven and in the eye of day than when they were cabined within a building made with hands. The dread of spells may have been, and in some instances undoubtedly was, another reason for deliberating in the open air. The well-known account which Bede gives of the reception of St. Augustine by King Ethelbert distinctly tells us that the king received the missionaries out in the open, not in a house, for fear lest if they practised magic they might get the better of him. It is but reasonable to accept this as an explanation of many occurrences of a like nature. Why magic was held to be more potent under the cover of a roof than out in the open is not, so far as we are aware, capable of being explained beyond reach of cavil. We think that the belief, or rather group of beliefs, known as Animism explains it. A part of the spirit of the man enters into the building where he dwelt and the things he has handled. Hence a house or other building would be possessed by the spirits of all who had dwelt there. If these spirits were malignant they would, it was to be dreaded, cast spells on the assembly; even if not, the haunted place, from the fact of its already being in the possession of spirits, might more readily become the abode of the malign dead or of evil beings which had never been human. This explanation may not be satisfactory, inasmuch as we have no direct statement of it from the lips of a believer, but it is in harmony with the animistic way of viewing nature.

Among the numerous examples of open-air meetings, many are extracted from early charters. If the genuineness of some few of these records may be justly called in question, it in no way lessens their value as evidence for this purpose, for the forgers would not have inserted the passages quoted had they not thought that they would seem to be a note of genuineness. A charter which we have good reason for believing authentic, granted by Edgar to the monks of Ely, shows that the fact of its being given in the open was considered worthy of emphatic notice. "Non clam in angulo, sed sub divo palam evidentiissime," are the words used. An Abingdon charter of A.D. 801, which we have not observed in Mr. Gomme's collection, contains the words, "Hæc autem donatio in villa publica firmata est et peracta." We cannot doubt that this means something more than the execution or solemn reading of the charter in the "town street." Some form of giving seisin was no doubt gone through in the presence of the assembled villagers. Secular meetings in churches are but slightly noticed; they certainly were not outdoor assemblies, but they have an intimate connexion with the subject, for the reason that the church was in many instances built on or hard by the spot where the parish moot was held, and it is evident that as time went on the outdoor assembly moved into the sacred building. This was an intrusion which the ecclesiastical authorities resented. In Myrc's

'Instructions for Parish Priests' we find the following directions:—

Ral and bares and suchs play
Out of chyrcheorde put a-way;
Courte holdynge and suchs maner chost
Out of seyntwary put thow most.

It is not certain whether "seyntwary" here signifies church or churchyard. If, as we suspect it does, it means the latter, it would appear that open-air meetings in churchyards were in the fifteenth century sufficiently common for the clergy to be warned against them.

We are somewhat surprised that nothing is said about the old courts of Pie Powder, whose function it was to give quick justice at fairs. We believe that they were commonly held in the open market.

Mr. Gomme is usually to be depended upon when he ventures on an opinion of his own, but those which he quotes from others are sometimes wide of the mark. It is to be regretted that he did not sometimes add a word or two of caution when it was necessary to reproduce doubtful things. The passage in which many of the place-names of England that begin with "Raven" are given is hopelessly wrong. It is a matter nearly capable of proof that by far the greater part of these places take their name either from the bird or from some personal cognomen. The Anglo-Saxon reod and Celtic ribenn are in most of the instances given quite out of the question. He is wrong in a great degree, but not wholly, in another matter. The name "Lady," in conjunction with another word, as Lady Field, Lady Hill, Lady Mead, is of common occurrence in all parts of England. Mr. Gomme would interpret this to mean Law-Day, and holds that these places have been places where folk-moots have been held. This is in some instances the true state of the case, but in the greater number we believe that the places in question have taken their name from the Blessed Virgin. In almost all our churches she had before the Reformation a special altar, and many of these altars were endowed with small portions of land for supplying them with lights. If Mr. Gomme pursues his studies in the present direction, he will find several other saints, Katherine, Ninian, and Helen, for example, have had their names given to natural objects.

MODERN GREECE

Greece. By Lewis Sergeant. With Illustrations. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Collection de Romans Grecs, en Langue Vulgaire et en Vers. By Spyridon P. Lambros. (Paris, Maisonneuve & Co.)

MR. SERGEANT is a Philhellene, and takes no trouble to disguise the fact. But if the reader conclude from this admission that his contribution to the series of works on foreign countries edited by Mr. F. S. Pulling is a mere panegyric upon Greece he will do the author an injustice. Mr. Sergeant has striven, and striven successfully, to present us with a true picture of modern Greece, its people, political institutions, and social condition. Whilst pointing with justifiable satisfaction to the great advance in material wealth which has taken place since the emancipation from the Turkish yoke, and dwelling with evident pleasure upon the numerous educational institutions, he by no means hides from his readers the shadows which rest upon his picture. "Patriotism in Greece," he says, "implies an ambition for extended frontiers"; and we can glean from his pages how this "ambition," not altogether unjustifiable, seeing that a majority of the Greeks still dwell outside the pale of the existing kingdom, calls for the maintenance of an army stronger than the people can afford, embarrasses the finances, and prevents the development of the resources which the country already possesses. Nor is the author blind to the evils engendered by inordinate political ambition, and to the corruption prevalent amongst politicians. Much may be learned from Mr. Sergeant's book, and even those who feel no sympathy with Hellenic aspirations may read it with advantage.

Prof. Lambros, of Athens, deserves the thanks of his countrymen, and of Hellenic students in general, for his careful editing of mediæval Greek works, and none of his publications is likely to be more widely interesting than this collection of four metrical romances in the vulgar tongue. The poems in question are 'The Love Story of Kallimachos and Chrysorrhoe,' 'The most Beautiful Tale of Brave Digenè,' 'The Choice Foreign Love Story of the Wondrous Emperors and the Damsel Margarona' (i.e. Pierre and Maguelonne), and 'The Consolatory Discourse of Dytichis and Eutychie.' The history of the manuscripts on which Prof. Lambros has based his text is noteworthy. All four of the romances are published now for the first time; and as for 'Kallimachos and Chrysorrhoe,' there is no evidence that the unique codex in the Library of Leyden had ever come into the hands of a scholar between 1614 and 1876, when Prof. Lambros seems to have set about the restoration of the text. It is mentioned by the glossarist Meursius in the second edition of his 'Glossarium Græco-Barbarum,' at the former date; and succeeding references to the poem are manifestly based on Meursius. The late Dr. Wagner, in his 'Mediæval Greek Texts' (1870), expressed a doubt whether the work were still in existence. But by good hap the present editor in 1876 came across the title in the rare catalogue of the Leyden Library which is preserved in the Library of Vienna; and at Leyden, accordingly, he was fortunate enough to find a manuscript in the Scaliger collection, containing, in addition to the romance now reproduced, that of 'Lybistros and Rhodamné.' It is assigned by Prof. Lambros to the sixteenth century, and its caligraphy, with other internal evidence, points to the island of Cyprus as its source.

The arguments of these romances, it need scarcely be said, are not altogether new. The third, as its title implies, is only a Byzantine rendering of the French poem of 'Pierre de Provence et la Belle Maguelonne.' The story of Digenè is almost purely Greek, but it has come down to us in various forms, and it has more claim than any other to be considered the characteristic epic of mediæval Greece. The exploits of Basil Digenè Akritas, a latter-day Achilles and Hercules, have furnished the subjects for a whole cycle of myths, and survive in many popular songs. The extremes of Greek history touch one another in this epopee, wherein we have a hero struggling with death and a heroine ravished by a Turkish emir, whilst a hundred ancient traditions and a hundred modern incidents are grafted upon the principal stock. The poem here printed is taken from a manuscript in the library of Lincoln College, Oxford, and its author was a monk of Chios, Petritsis by name, who flourished in the latter half of the seventeenth century. In 'Kallimachos and Chrysorrhoe' more than one Aryan myth may be recognized; and though it is true that this poem as a whole is now for the first time made known to the world, yet the thread of the story and many of its incidents have long been familiar. A king's son goes out in quest of honourable adventures which shall prove him worthy of his father's throne; and after many wanderings he comes to the castle of a dragon, where the lovely Chrysorrhoe is kept prisoner. He slays the dragon, and lives for a time in great happiness with the young princess. Another prince sees Chrysorrhoe, and is enamoured of her. By the aid of a witch, who sends Kallimachos into a trance with an enchanted apple, he gets possession of Chrysorrhoe; but she remains faithful to her first love. The brothers of Kallimachos restore him to life by means of the same apple which had robbed him of his senses, and the lover at once sets out in search of Chrysorrhoe. He finds her in the royal palace, which is to her a prison. She is sad and inconsolable; but when Kallimachos has by a stratagem contrived to be near her person, and has made himself known to her, she recovers her health and spirits. At length their relations are detected, and the other prince, now a king, summons his advisers and calls the two lovers before him. Chrysorrhoe puts their case to him in a parable, and the king, overcome by reason and generosity, spares their lives and sends them back to their own castle. Such is the thread of the story. It is of greater interest to inquire, both here and in respect of every other resuscitated document of mediæval Greek literature, what are the character and flavour of the ideas, of the language, and of the versification. Here is a speech of Chrysorrhoe to Kallimachos, after the death of the dragon, which is worth quotation not merely as a fair specimen of the quindecasyllabic verse in which many of the popular Byzantine songs are composed—not merely as illustrating (as Prof. Lambros points out) the efforts of a man of the people to raise the vulgar tongue to the level of the false Atticism of Byzantium—but also for a certain subtle periphrasis which is of the essence of the poetry of the land in which it had birth:—

Καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦτου γνώριμα τὴν δυστυχῆς μου μοῖραν
ὅπως οὐδὲν ἔρριψατο τὸ δυστυχὲς καὶ θάλον, ἀλλὰ καὶ σὲ μετέπλεσεν πρὸς αἰδηρῆν καρδίαν, πρὸς ἀδαμάντινον ψυχὴν καὶ πρὸς πετρίτην
γνώμην
καὶ βλέπεις τόσους μου πληγὰς τῶν δυστυχῶν μελῶν μου,
καὶ μᾶλλον πρὸς σκληρότητα ἐτάγεις τὴν
ψυχὴν μου.
Ὅμως ἐγὼ τὴν τύχην μου καὶ τὴν τῆς τύχης μάχην

καὶ τὸν τῆς τύχης πόλεμον καὶ τὴν κακίαν
γνώμην
ἀπὸ πολλῶν ἰγνώρισα, καὶ σὲ μὴ κατακρίνω ὡς μεταστάντι καὶ τὴν σὴν βασιλικὴν καρδίαν
εἰς πλάσιν ἄλλην αἰδηρῆν, εἰς ἀσπλαγχνόδον φύσιν.

If there is still a critic here and there who denies to the Greeks of to-day all claim to a direct descent from the Greeks of the classical age, perhaps a greater familiarity with verses such as these will assist him in modifying his opinion.

The work of Prof. Lambros is not that of a collector of romances for the sake of the myths which they preserve; nor, on the other hand, does he exaggerate the value of the particular manuscripts with which he happens to deal; nor does he attempt to create a system out of the materials at his command, or profess to have said the last word about the texts which he has restored. He sees that there can, up to this point, be no finality in treating neo-Hellenic literature. The business of the present generation, and perhaps of several generations to come, is one of search and research. There are many documents yet to be discovered, many questions to be answered, many doubts to be removed, before the most learned savant can sit down to the history of modern Greek poetry or prose. Our labours for a time must be labours of collection, correction, comparison, and elucidation. There is a remnant from Turkish barbarism of the intellectual treasures which that barbarism has failed utterly to destroy, and doubtless many a treasure-trove will reward the toil of persevering collectors. In the mean time, whilst we await the day when it shall be possible to review the entire field of Byzantine and later Greek literature, and to draw a satisfactory deduction from our survey, there is already ample material for the exercise of a sound criticism in the texts—whether autographs or copies—which are within our reach. This criticism, we may rejoice to think, is now actively at work; and it is to such an industry that Prof. Lambros is successfully devoting himself.

We have said that the editor of the 'Romans Grecs' does not profess to have said the last word about his texts. That would be impossible so long as the precise date and locality of the manuscript are open to discussion, and when, even if these were known, the standard of language to which reference should be made is incapable of being absolutely determined. Prof. Lambros has made some thousands of emendations, and, after a somewhat cursory examination of them, there are few with which we should be disposed to quarrel. We may note one place in which his judgment appears to have been less happy than usual. Chrysorrhoe has propounded to the king the parable which moves him to an impulse of justice and generosity. A man plants a vine, tends and guards it, devotes himself to it, and hopes to enjoy its fruit. Another comes and overpowers him at the time of vintage, and prepares to enjoy the fruit for which he has not laboured. Now she says—

Κρίνεις [ἐ]τοῦτο δίκαιον, ὃ τὸν δραπετὴν κρίνεις
νὰ φάγω το κοτίξω του, νὰ φῶ τὴν ἑξοδὸν του;

The letter in square brackets is supplied by Prof. Lambros, who has also altered κρίνεις into κρίνεις. It is questionable whether we should not rather read ἢ τοῦτον—not to say also κρίνεις ἢ τοῦτον . . . ἢ . . . κρίνεις.

On the whole, however, with very few exceptions, Prof. Lambros is clearly and transparently right in his emendations. This edition of the 'Romans Grecs' is the most satisfactory presentation of a modern Greek text which has come before us, and it will certainly do much to encourage the hopes of those who are looking forward to a sort of fresh renaissance of Greek letters and ideas.

Walks through the City of York. By Robert Davies, F.S.A. Edited by his Widow. (Chapman & Hall.)

THE late Mr. Davies was a noble specimen of the school of north of England antiquaries, a body which is made illustrious by the names of Sturtess, Raine, and Hodgson. Mr. Davies, during almost the whole of his life, was engaged in trying to remove the darkness which shrouds the history of old Yorkshire, a darkness which he was wont to say was much more due to the idleness of the present than the carelessness of the past. Several of Mr. Davies's books are well known to local students, but his labours were often of a non-literary kind, and therefore his great knowledge of the mediæval and more modern state of things in the north is liable to miss the appreciation which it deserves.

The contents of the book before us were delivered in a series of lectures, and as they were never prepared by him for the press, they no doubt contain much less information than they would have done had he been spared to publish them. They contain not a little that will interest the general reader, but the chatty gossip of which they are full must naturally appeal most strongly to a native of the city of York. Probably Mr. Davies knew more minute details about the mercantile families of York than any other person who ever lived, and he was surpassed only by the late Mr. John Richard Walbran, the historian of Fountains Abbey, in general knowledge of northern genealogy. The pedigree lore is here, however, kept in a subordinate place. There are many elaborate notes, but the text is not crowded with mere entries of birth, marriage, and death. The plan of the book is that of a series of imaginary walks taken with the author as a guide, who discourses always pleasantly of the buildings, old and new, that are passed, and of the persons, noteworthy and obscure, who have lived in them. York has been the centre of so many of the most stirring events in our history that he might have expanded his lectures to any length. We are sorry, indeed, sometimes that they have been kept within such narrow limits. We have here an identification of the spot on which Archbishop Richard Scrope was executed, or, as one perhaps ought to say, murdered, during the Wars of the Roses. Much has been recovered about this prelate which it would be interesting to have put in a popular form. He was a member of a family which was as influential as any of the great houses of the north, and whose doings through centures read like a romance. After his death he was worshipped as a saint, and before the Reformation swept away the treasures from our churches many beautiful and costly objects were suspended around his tomb in the minster. The spot where the archbishop was beheaded was outside the walls, at a place now called Scarcroft, but the old name for which was Carr Croft—Car is the north-country name for unenclosed land subject to be flooded by water. A chapel was built at the place where he was beheaded, but this has long been swept away. Although he was an object of much popular devotion, Richard Scrope never received Papal canonization. It would be interesting to know whether the Vatican archives contain any memorial of application having been made to the Pope that he should be added to the list of saints.

Mr. Davies has given some curious notes on the executions for high treason which took place at York after the rebellion of 1745. He has suppressed most of the more horrible details, but he gives enough for those who know about what the high treason punishment was to fill up the picture. Two of the traitors' heads were fixed upon spikes on the top of Micklegate Bar. There they remained until January, 1754, when William Arundel, a York tailor, took them away. It is not easy to comprehend what legal offence he committed by doing so. It could hardly be theft, and certainly was not high treason. It appears, however, that it was considered a most horrible crime. The Duke of Newcastle wrote a solemnly pompous letter to the Lord Mayor on the occasion, in which he speaks of this act as a "wicked, traitorous, and outrageous proceeding." Arundel was discovered, tried at the assizes, and sentenced to be imprisoned for two years. A report of the case, if one exists, would be an historical and legal curiosity.

We cannot give even the most cursory glance at these pages without sharing Mr. Davies's conclusion that much wanton mischief has been done to the old domestic architecture of York without any adequate plea. Fine old timber houses have been swept away within our memory which were as strong as on the day they were built. Ecclesiastical objects have fared little better; not to mention church restorations, the land on which the Augustinian Priory stood has been purchased as a building speculation, and the result has been that every vestige of it is now swept away. On Hob Moor is a sepulchral statue which, from the arms thereon, must have been intended to represent one of the family of Roos. It has been on the present spot from the year 1717, but has certainly been taken out of some church, probably that of one of the monastic foundations for which York was famous. It is now called Long Hob, and Drake, the historian of the city, is quoted in proof that it was placed where it now is by the "pasture-masters" who had the care of the moor.

We get occasional glances of the old civic splendour which are not a little amusing. Sir Arthur Ingram, of Temple Newsam and of Hatfield near Doncaster, was one of the richest men in the north in the early part of the seventeenth century. A contemporary account of a visit to his house is given, from which it would seem that he lived in almost royal splendour. His house and almost all its contents have passed away for ever. The "lively pictures" which his guest saw are some of them probably at the present time ornaments of the gallery at Temple Newsam.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

Sarah de Berenger. By Jean Ingelow. 3 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Belles and Ringers. By Hawley Smart. (Chapman & Hall.)

Adam and Eve. By Mrs. Parr. 3 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

A Peal of Merry Bells. By Leopold Lewis. 3 vols. (Tinsley Brothers.)

Life's Seven Ages. By Mrs. Hibbert-Ware. 3 vols. (Skeet.)

Mohaleh. 2 vols. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

The Red Rag. By R. M. Jephson. 2 vols. (Bentley & Son.)

Der Heilige. By Conrad Ferdinand Meyer. (Leipzig, Haessel.)

Miss INGLOW is a good story-teller, but an indifferent novelist—that is to say, her characters are possible and pleasing, her incidents interesting, her conversations not too unlike those which we hear from the less commonplace of the people with whom we come in contact; in short, her books are not unpleasant reading. But she has not learned—probably never will learn—how to combine her materials so that every page may have some bearing on the progress of the story. She puts in threads which do not go in any way towards the formation of the fabric, pretty as they may be in themselves. The general idea of her present story is strange and pathetic, and, so far as we know, original. For the advantage of her daughters, a mother belonging to the working class deliberately renounces her parentage, and brings her children up under the belief that she is their nurse. Chance puts her, not with her own will, in a position where she can have them brought up as young ladies of good family, the family insisting, in spite of the mother's somewhat ambiguous disclaimers, on the relationship of the children to them. Miss Sarah de Berenger, who, oddly enough, gives the book its title, is only important in so far as it is chiefly owing to her obstinate persuasion of their genuineness that the little cuckoos are imported into the nest of the De Berengers (a purely English family, by the way), whose name their mother has by the merest accident chosen for them. There is a good deal too much "temperance" business, and the last chapters are made unnecessarily painful. Moreover, it is always an objection to a novel when, supposing all the events narrated in it to be true, there are some which could by no possibility have been known to any one. This can only occur when the person who holds the secret dies without divulging it in the course of the story; but when it does occur, as in the present case, it forms a disagreeable reminder to the reader that he is reading fiction. Now this to your true novel-reader means the loss of nearly all his pleasure. We have one further remark to make. This novel was, if we mistake not, published in the United States several months ago, but its publication in this country has been delayed, apparently for no other cause than to suit the convenience of the proprietors of a popular magazine. Such a proceeding shows little regard for the reading public, and surely Miss Ingelow should not have sanctioned it.

Mr. Smart's novelette is a lively story of two pairs of lovers and the anxieties of a match-making mamma. It is the slightest and frothiest of social sketches, tinged a little with the "horsey" tone which one remembers in the author's earlier books, and locally coloured in the manner current in such haunts as Hurlingham and the Row, Kensington mansions, and wealthy country houses. A little of so limited a topic goes a long way, but Mr. Smart knows when to stop, and if there is nothing very edifying in his theme, it is at any rate skilfully handled, and the result is neither a libel nor a burlesque. When an author knows his ground, and refrains from cynicism or exaggeration, it is not unwholesome that the better side of conventional life should sometimes be presented. The dramatis personæ, though occasionally frivolous, are straightforward, honest specimens of English men and women of their class; and even Lady Mary and the intriguing old bachelor Pansey have kind hearts beneath their worldly crust of small diplomacy. The heroines are well contrasted, and the dénouement is as happy as befits a merry tale.

The author of 'Dorothy Fox' has written an old-world story, though not so archaic as its title might be supposed to imply. Adam is the stalwart son of a Cornish smuggler, and his father's second in command, and Eve his London cousin, whose rather delicate training heightens the contrast between her and the rough country kinsfolk among whom for a time her lot is cast. It is her misfortune to inspire with love two strong but dissimilar characters,—the ardent attachment of the undisciplined seaman being rivalled by the equally warm passion of Reuben May, artisan and Methodist, the companion of her girlhood in the City. On the effect of so fierce an influence on two jealous natures the author dilates with skill. The remorse felt by both for the treacherous part to which they are impelled by passion is tragic enough, though to the smuggler the pang is heightened by the sense of being a traitor to his own family, and to the universal sentiment of those to whom he is bound by all his early training. Poor Jerrem, whose life is forfeited on the information of Reuben and Adam, is a simpler and softer character, for whom one feels the sort of sympathy that might be extended to a savage or dumb animal suffering for some cause it is unable to apprehend. But Joan's unselfish attachment—wide enough to embrace the rough old uncle, her simple-minded lover, and her rival Eve, and yet concentrated upon the rather domineering hero who has no lover's response to her affection—is the most pleasing subject treated of. The uncouth, unlettered Cornish "maiden" is the real heroine of the book. Though prolix in parts, and sombre in its conclusion, there is much food for meditation in the tale, but in sustained interest it scarcely equals some previous works by the same author. The peculiarities of western scenery and dialect seem to be truthfully preserved.

Mr. Lewis's volumes of tales have too farcical a ring about them to have much literary merit. Such burlesque as is contained in the long-winded story of 'My Aunt's Umbrella,' 'A Golden Opportunity,' or 'The Gentleman with the Lily,' requires a determined effort to assimilate, though the agonies suffered by the man who enters the family circle of the lady who has attracted him under a feigned name, and thus lays himself open to a number of embarrassing introductions, are described in an amusing manner. Certain defects and absurdities in the law as it was some years since are ably exposed in 'Squibby the Lawyer' and 'Doing a Deed,' though the style is a travesty of Dickens, and the sound of "the bells" is by no means a merry one. Some of the better imagined stories might be successful as broad farces on the stage, but upon the whole the plots are too remote from real life, and the style too broad and exaggerated, to admit of successful treatment from the novelist's point of view. Mr. Lewis had better stick to "the drama."

Mrs. Hibbert-Ware has hit upon the idea of framing her new story on the suggestions of the Melancholy Jaques. From the mewling infant to the lean and slippered pantaloon, she traces the drama of Jonathan Hartop's career; and additional interest is given to the seven acts of her fiction by starting the play in the time of the Commonwealth, and ending it well on in the Georges. A liberal measure of this historical background is appropriated by our author, who is not satisfied until she has brought into contrast the republican alderman of the seventeenth century and English admirers of the French Revolution, including both in the compass of a single life. It is not often in a novel that we are introduced to two hundred and fifty descendants of the hero; but Mrs. Hibbert-Ware, who evidently has not a proper dread of Mr. Thoms, relieves herself from the charge of extravagant invention by quoting as her source a well-known passage from Hargrove's 'History of Knareborough,' which records the death of Hartop, at Aldborough, at the patriarchal age of a hundred and thirty-eight. She does not, however, make any comment on the noteworthy statement of Hargrove, that Jonathan Hartop, dying at that age in 1791, had married as his third wife an illegitimate daughter of Oliver Cromwell, "who gave with her a portion amounting to about 500*l*." An "extraordinary man" he must clearly have been to take his third wife at the mature age of five, which he must have done in order to receive his 500*l*. from a flesh-and-blood Cromwell. But this, which might be fair criticism if we were dealing with sober history, is hyper-criticism when applied to romance or to ultra-centenarianism. After all, many readers will believe that Squire Hartop was a most venerable old man, that he had two hundred and fifty descendants through five wives, that he walked nine miles to his dinner in 1789, that he played good cribbage to the last, that his only beverage was milk, that he saw the outbreak of the French Revolution, if he did not remember the Plague. It is manifest how much interest would be crowded into the life of such a man, and how rich are the materials from which a cunning novelist may weave the texture of an engrossing story. It must be granted that Mrs. Hibbert-Ware has not done badly in this respect. 'Life's Seven Ages' is pretty and attractive. Historic truth is nowhere very seriously violated, and the historical personages whom she causes to strut upon her stage behave with much semblance of actuality. She has consulted and duly quotes authorities for her several periods, and has been far from unsuccessful in her attempts to catch the spirit of one generation after another.

The author of 'Mehalah' is better at description than at the interpretation of the thoughts of his characters by words. His dialogues, especially those between the heroine and her mother, are stiff and unnatural, which is the more to be regretted because Mehalah herself is nobly conceived, and stands out clearly in spite of the drawback. Old Mrs. Sharland, though she has her good points, and at least the elements of a distinct characterization, is but a feeble creation. Her daughter wins upon us, and maintains our interest in her fortunes, but she talks the talk of a dictionary rather than her natural mother-tongue. And yet nothing could be better than the opening of this story. Even the words of the widow and her daughter and of their brutal landlord have a genuine ring; whilst the description of the salt marshes of Essex, with the little oasis of the Ray, which was Mehalah's home, is admirable:—

"A more desolate region can scarce be conceived, and yet it is not without beauty. In summer, the thrift mantles the marshes with shot satin, passing through all gradations of tint, from maiden's blush to lily white. Thereafter a purple glow steals over the waste, as the sea lavender bursts into flower, and simultaneously every creek and pool is royally fringed with sea aster. A little later the glass-wort, that shot up green and transparent as emerald glass in the early spring, turns every tinge of carmine."

This is really good, and there are many such fragments of word-painting throughout the two volumes. The author is at home with nature—with human nature as well as with the outer world; and indeed his power of reproducing what he feels increases steadily as he adds chapter to chapter of what seems to be his first serious attempt at fiction. The character of Elijah Rebew is worked out with indisputable force; there is something grand in the fierce, outrageous man, who tortures and fascinates Mehalah, who loves and hates with indescribable fury, and whose mad soul overmasters both himself and her. The main fault of this story has been indicated above. But it remains to be said that 'Mehalah' is full of indication of more than ordinary talent, and that it is one of the most promising works of fiction that the present season has produced.

In the good old days, when officers were appointed direct to the army, without preliminary examinations or a year's residence at the Royal Military College, Mr. Jephson's novel would have attained a certain amount of popularity among subalterns. But it would be doing the youngest officer in Her Majesty's army an injustice to suppose that this very poor composition could interest him now. Yet it may be assumed that the book was written more to please soldiers than any other class of readers. The story is full of incidents connected with an officer's life. A town mayor is the bull which the "red rag" irritates into blind madness.

The tale is a contrast between soldier and civilian. It is full of improbable absurdities and stilted, ridiculous talk. Fortunately for the reader, the type is large and the margin broad; each page is quickly read. Here and there are traces of wit, humour, and study, but they are faint and not easily discernible.

C. F. Meyer, a young German novelist, has been acquiring some reputation for historical romances in his own country, where the taste for this form of writing still exists. 'Der Heilige' is a fancy account of the life of Thomas à Becket. The form of the story is clumsy, and the treatment laboured and heavy. The novel is scarcely likely to meet here with the favour it has found in the Fatherland.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. ROUTLEDGE send us The Works of Father Prout, edited by Mr. Charles Kent, who has contributed an enthusiastic introduction and a series of enthusiastic prefatory notes. As regards the "works" themselves, it is to be noted that they do not include either the 'Facts and Fancies from Italy' or the clever little 'Sermon to the Irish Peasantry,' and solely consist, in fact, of Mahony's serial contributions to Fraser—the "Reliques of Father Prout," as they are called—and of a number of stray verses and translations, reprinted from the early numbers of Bentley, Fraser, and the Cornhill. They are pleasant reading in their way, and a certain number of idle hours may not unprofitably be spent on them. They are mere literary curiosities, it is true, but their interest is not small, and, rightly regarded and used, they are of some little value. Productions of a bygone time, they carry back the mind to a period when Charles Dickens was but Box, and when Victor Hugo was not an elderly god, but only a young and brilliant poet. While he turns them over, the reader's thoughts revert to the Bohemia of a generation or two ago, the Bohemia of George Warrington—"stunning George Warrington!"—and Capt. Shandon, of Greek and gin, of chops and toasted cheese and alashing articles; to an epoch when publisher Bungay was unduly at loggerheads with publisher Bacon; when Clarence Bulbul and Bodwin Sands were possible and renowned; when Rigby was and Jellaby Postlethwaite had not begun to be; and when 'Sam Hall' and 'The Red-Cross Knight' were popular ditties. Mahony, a scholar and a wit, was a neat hand at parody, had a turn for rough and somewhat petulant satire, was master of a certain gamesome and whimsical Latinity, and wrote three or four languages rather better than he did his own; and everyone approves of his pleasant 'Bells of Shandon,' his capital paraphrase of 'Malbrouck,' and his fancy for "upsetting" the songs of Moore and Lover and Horace and Gresset and Béranger into foreign tongues. But there admiration ends; so much of the fun seems forced and flat, so much of the wit seems laboured and pedantic and stale. Where is the sport, indeed, of turning Dean Burrows's dirge, "The night before Larry was stretched," into halting French verse and a monody on the death of a kind of Socrates? of making 'Nora Creina' read like a theft from some lilted odelet in monkish Latin? of producing polyglot versions of 'The Groves of Blarney,' and solemnly putting forth sham originals of Tom Hudson's 'Judy Callaghan,' and Wolfe's fine lines on the hero of Corunna, and Lover's pleasant rhymes in praise of Molly Carew—

Hec culpa sit tua
Mi, mollis Carua,
Sic mihi illudens,
Nec pudens, and all the rest of it! Fifty years ago these elaborate waggeries were, doubtless, apt and pertinent enough. But in fifty years there is room and to spare for times to alter, and "as the times change, men change too." Bohemia is of another fashion now; so is literature, so is the idea of humour, so are the proprietors, so are a hundred matters more. And to regard the "works" of Father Prout, not as the historical documents they really are, but as a weighty and serious contribution to English letters, is to claim for them far higher honour than they deserve. Mahony himself was a great deal more interesting than his books. A just and faithful portrait of him would be a welcome addition to our gallery of literary grotesques, and a useful note to students of our literary story.

We have received from Messrs. Longmans two editions of Goethe's Faust, the one in an English, the other in a German, dress. The latter, prepared by Dr. Albert M. Selms for the use of students, is a useful work, containing besides the German text an accurate exposition of all the different points of exegesis which occur throughout the poem. The former is yet another attempt to accomplish the impossible and render Goethe's great poem into English verse. One and only one of those who have attempted the feat has in a measure succeeded, and that is Shelley in his 'Fragments.' Then a master mind strove to render a master mind; and yet even Shelley, in a note to the literal version he has appended to his fine rendering of the Prologue in Heaven, complains that "it is impossible to represent in another language the melody of the versification." "No one but Coleridge," he says elsewhere, "is capable of this work." Mr. Birds has merely presented his readers with the capital motto spoken of by Shelley. Goethe's meaning is given with tolerable accuracy, but the spirit has evaporated. Nor is the rendering always even correct. The heroic remedy of a prose version has alone enabled Mr. Hayward to escape from the dangers of looseness of interpretation and redundancy of diction which beset almost all translations in verse. Nor has Mr. Birds avoided certain misapprehensions into which all English translators have persistently fallen. Dr. Selms, in his introduction, gives a list of choice specimens, and had he seen Mr. Birds's version he could have enlarged the number. On the one hand, Goethe's essentially German turn of thought and occasional obscurity of language perplex translators, while on the other his habit of dropping into colloquialisms has led them astray. They have given pompous and far-fetched translations to homely expressions. Thus in the Prologue Mr. Birds, like all his predecessors, renders by "travail labours," conceiving the word to be the noun "Wehen," while it is in truth the dative plural of "Weh," we, and is here used to express the physical sufferings of a crowd of people struggling to get into the theatre. To translate "Werdende" by "Nature" is distinctly wrong, since Goethe uses it as an active, growing element in contradistinction to anything fixed and visible. It is evident from Mr. Birds's careful notes (which show much industry, though little originality, since they are mainly based upon German authorities) that he has a thorough appreciation of and love for Goethe's work. His own rendering, however, is scarcely likely to make the magic of the poem clear to readers not conversant with the original. In one word, his version is prosaic.

Und mit gewaltig wiederholtem Wehen

Messrs. BICKERS & SON send us a pleasant little volume by Mr. H. B. Wheatley, Samuel Pepys and the World he Lived In. It gives an interesting account of London life in Charles II.'s day, and of Pepys's share in it. It is to be hoped, however, that it may not have a result which Mr. Wheatley would be the first to deplore, that of keeping people from reading the immortal diary itself.

Good Thoughts in Bad Times, and other Papers, by Thomas Fuller, have been reprinted by Messrs.

Hodder & Stoughton. The type, the paper, and the size of the book are all equally to be well spoken of; as to the work itself, praise would be as superfluous as would be a recommendation of the contemporary 'Pilgrim's Progress.' Every one who likes to read good thoughts expressed in vigorous and plain English will welcome this reprint. We do not remember to have seen it anywhere remarked, but the style and method in which Fuller introduces his Thoughts not only remind us of the old 'Gesta Romanorum' and the 'Festival,' but make it almost certain that he was well read in those books.

Credulities Past and Present. By William Jones, F.R.S. (Chatto & Windus).—Mr. Jones has spared no pains in exploring several rich fields of superstition, and in bringing together a large mass of information for the benefit of the numerous readers to whom folk-lore is dear. The result is a book which is interesting and amusing, and which is all the more acceptable inasmuch as the writer has no particular theory to support. Mr. Jones is perfectly impartial, and chronicles with equal fairness the superstitions of all classes of mankind. No thread but that of human folly runs through and connects the fragments which he has collected from all parts of the earth in order to form a memorial to the credulity of mankind. Beginning with the sea and seamen, Mr. Jones gives a long list of such fancies as are still cherished by mariners. Then he dives into the bowels of the earth, and records the beliefs to which the imagination of miners has given rise. Thence he passes on to the subject of talismans, deals anew with the "finger-ring lore" to which he has already devoted a special volume, dwells for a time on "word and letter divination," and reveals some of the mysteries connected with numbers. One chapter is devoted to the "trials, exorcising, and blessing of animals," and another to the numerous stories and traditions associated with birds; a third deals with the subject of eggs, and a fourth with luck.

Dr. GIUSEPPE PITRÈ, of Palermo, has just published a new section, forming vols. viii.-xi., of his "Biblioteca delle Tradizioni Popolari Siciliane." The merits of the preceding sections of that collection, devoted to the popular songs and the popular tales of Sicily, are well known, those works having been universally received by scholars with an appreciation well deserved by the industry and judgment which they evince. His present instalment is devoted to the proverbs of Sicily, and bears the title of Proverbi Siciliani (Palermo, Lauriel). Some idea of the richness of the collection may be gathered from the fact that the proverbs, with their variants in the other dialects of Italy, occupy no less than 1,624 pages, classed under ninety headings. Prefixed is a long preface, in which Dr. Pitre gives an account of his labours in the field of Sicilian proverbial philosophy ever since the year 1868, when, at the age of seventeen, he was attracted by Giusti's 'Raccolta di Proverbi Toscani.' This is followed by a complete bibliography of Sicilian proverbs, a list of the principal works on the proverbs of the various dialects of Italy, and an interesting essay on proverbs in general and those of Italy in particular. The next volume of Dr. Pitre's excellent "Biblioteca" will be devoted to 'Spottacoli e Feste Popolari.'

Messrs. WARD & LOCK's Universal Instructor promises to be, like the Popular Educator, of much service to those who are forced to educate themselves. The publishers have been, generally speaking, fortunate in the contributors they have secured. For instance, M. Kunz, whose excellent grammar we noticed a few weeks back, writes the French lessons, Miss Toulmin Smith teaches English grammar, Mr. Noison discourses on astronomy, and Mr. Curwen on music. The only portion of the work that seems unsatisfactory is the German lessons, in which space is wasted in explaining terms common to all grammars, such as "declension," telling what cases the German has not, and dealing with German handwriting—surely rather superfluous matters with which it was unwise to trouble the learner. On the whole, the work is excellent, and it is to be hoped it may meet with the popularity it deserves.

We have on our table Speeches of Lord Erskine, with a Memoir of his Life, by E. Walford (Reeves & Turner).—The Laws of Health, by W. H. Corfield (Longmans).—The Atomic Theory, by A. Wurtz, translated by E. Cleminshaw (Kegan Paul).—The Deterioration of Oyster and Trout Fisheries of England, by J. P. Hoare and E. Jax (Stock).—Homes and Roads, by Free-Lance (Longmans).—History of Duelling, by Sir L. O'Trigger (Newman).—Popular Recreation: The Theatre as it is, by the Rev. C. Bullock ('Hand and Heart' Office).—The New Werther, by Loki (Kegan Paul).—The Camp of Refuge, edited by S. H. Miller (Simpkin).—A Thousand Thoughts from Various Authors, selected by A. B. Davison (Longmans).—Heroes of History and Legend, by A. W. Grubbs (Griffith & Farras).—Merrions, and other Stories, by C. Black (Satchell & Co.).—A Guiding Star, by A. Clare (S.P.C.K.).—Through the Rough Wind, by C. Temple (S.P.C.K.).—How They were Caught in a Trap, by E. Stuart (Marcus Ward).—Left to Starve, and No One wants the Blame, by Mrs. E. A. Germania (Simpkin).—Marie Antoinette (Kegan Paul).—Brooms of Song from Mount Pleasant, by G. Johnson (Poole).—Our Charity, by F. McGeorge (Dean & Son).—The New Truth and the Old Faith, by a Scientific Layman (Kegan Paul).—Haworth's New Testament Times: The Time of Jesus, Vol. II., translated by C. T. Poynting and P. Quenser (Williams & Norgate).—In Christo, by J. B. Macduff (Nisbet).—The Inspiration of the New Testament, by W. B. Browne (Kegan Paul).—Studies in Genesis, by the Rev. S. Leathes (Stock).—Ecco Veritas, by the Rev. J. H. Hitchens (Houghton & Co.).—Leo the Great, by the Rev. C. Gore (S.P.O.K.).—Geschichte des Modernen Geschmacks, by J. von Falke (Leipzig, Weigel).—Einführung in das Studium des Angelsächsischen, by K. Körner (Heilbronn, Henninger).—L'Idéalisme et la Littérature, by N. Gallo (Rome, Formani & Co.).—and Ueberwachte Politik, by Hubbe-Schleiden (Hamburg, Friederichsen & Co.). Among New Editions we have The Institutes of Law, by J. Lorimer (Blackwood).—and The Englishman's Brief on Behalf of his National Church (S.P.O.K.). Also the following Pamphlets: The Church Association: its Policy and Prospects, by J. Bateman (Ridgway).—The English Universities and John Bunyan, and the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' and the Gipsies, by J. Simpson (Bailhère).—and Suggestions for the Teaching of Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Grammar, and Geography (Lauriel).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

THEOLOGY.

Bodley's (S. W.) Short Readings for the Christian Year. Part I. Advent to Easter, or. 8vo. 4/6.
 Commentary on the Book of Proverbs attributed to Adamham the Kure, edited by R. E. Driver, or. 8vo. 2/6.
 Melancthon's (M.) A Christmas Child, 18mo. 4/6.
 Neville's (M.) The Christ, Seven Lectures, translated by Rev. T. J. Deane, or. 8vo. 4/6.
 Proctor's (Rev. T. E.) How Readest Thou? a Series of Practical Expositions, or. 8vo. 6/6.
 Revelation (The) of St. John the Divine Practically Considered, by G. B., or. 8vo. 3/6.
 Sacred Books of the East: The Qur'an, translated by R. H. Palmer, Parts I and 2, 8vo. 16/6 each.
 Sermons for Boys and Girls, or. 8vo. 3/6.

FINE ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY.

Flaxhead's (C. de) Monograms of Three or More Letters, Designed and Drawn on Stone, folio. 62/6.
 Goethe's Faust, translated by T. Martin, illustrated by Prof. A. von Krollig, folio. 3/6.
 Horton's (C. E.) Historical Studies of Church Building in the Middle Ages, 8vo. 15/6.

POETRY AND THE DRAMA.

Bell's (Rev. C. D.) Songs in the Twilight, 18mo. 2/6.
 Vaughan's (V.) The New Era, a Dramatic Poem, or. 8vo. 1/6.
 Venn's (J.) Poems Grave and Gay, or. 8vo. 2/6.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

Parry (Wm.), by F. Brown, 18mo. 2/6.

Foreign Classics for English Readers: Corvantes, by Oliphant, 12mo, 3/6 cl.
 Hannay's (J.) History of Acadia, 8vo, 12/6 cl.
 O'Brien's (E. B.) Parliamentary History of the Irish Land Question, 1880-1886, cr. 8vo, 4/ cl.
 Warren's (H.) Bayanarola, the Florentine Martyr, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
 Watson (J.), a Memoir, by W. J. Linton, cr. 8vo, 3/ cl.
 Wellington's (Duke of) Despatches, Memoranda, and other Papers relating to India, a Selection from, edited by S. J. Owen, 8vo, 24/ cl.
 Whentley's (H. E.) Samuel Pepys and the World he Lived In, cr. 8vo, 7/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.
Adventures round the World, cr. 4to, 5/ cl.

Philology.
Buddhist Birth Stories, or Jataka Tales, edited by V. Fausboll, translated by T. W. R. Davids, Vol. 1, 8vo, 18/ cl.
Hittopadesa, a New Literal Translation, from the Sanskrit text of Prof. P. Johnson, by F. Pincock, imp. 8vo, 4/ cl.
Lichtenberg's (P.) How to Teach and Learn Modern Languages Successfully, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.

Science.
Descriptive Atlas of Anatomy, roy. 4to, 25/ cl.
Health Lectures for the People, delivered in Manchester, 1878-79-80, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Meredith's (L. A.) Tasmanian Friends and Foes, Feathered, Furred, and Finned, sm. 4to, 21/ cl.
Toulson's (Dr. Giraud) Elementary Treatise on the Function of Vision, translated by L. Owen, cr. 8vo, 5/ cl.
Thompson's (H.) Clinical Lectures and Cases, with Commentaries, 8vo, 7/6 cl.
Withersall's (Prof. G. J.) Movable Atlas of the Male Organs of Generation and Reproduction, the Text translated by Dr. C. Black, folio, 7/6 bds.

General Literature.
Arnold's (C.) Index to Shakespearean Thought, 8vo, 7/6 cl.
Ballantyne's (R. M.) The Red Man's Revenge, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
Brackstone's (H. L.) Northern Fairy Tales, 4to, 4/ cl.
Butler's (Lieut.-Col. W. F.) Far Out, Movings Retold, 10/6 cl.
Child's First Story-Book, sm. 4to, 3/6 cl.
Church's (A. J.) Stories from the East, from Herodotus, 4/ cl.
Farley's (J. L.) New Bulgaria, 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Fraser's (J.) Fragments of Knowledge for Little Folks, 4to, 3/ cl.
Gibson's (A.) My Father's House, 16mo, 2/6 cl.
Gilbert's (O.) Vicar of Wakefield, illustrated, 8vo, 7/6 cl.
Greene's (F. V.) Sketches of Army Life in Russia, cr. 8vo, 9/ cl.
Jones's (Major) The Emigrant's Friend, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl., s.w.
Kingston's (W. H. G.) Roger Willoughby, or the Times of Benbow, cr. 8vo, 6/ cl.
Kingston's (W. H. G.) Voyages and Travels of Count Pononibos and Baron Sillkin, sm. 4to, 4/ cl.
Lemmer's (J. Van) The Count of Talavera, translated from the Dutch by A. Arnold, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Linton's (B. L.) The Rebel of the Family, 3 vols. 31/6 cl.
Marjory, a Study, by Author of 'James Gordon's Wife,' 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 31/6 cl.
Marshall's (E.) Heather and Harebell, cr. 8vo, 5/ cl.
Matur's (C. L.) Tim Trumble's Little Mother, fcap. 4to, 4/ cl.
Mead's (L. T.) Andrew Harvey's Wife, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Merry Nursery (The) Pictures, Poems, and Stories to Please the Little Ones, sm. 4to, 5/ cl.
Murray's (D. O.) A Life's Atonement, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 31/6 cl.
Nursery Companion, 4to, 3/ cl.
Rassell's (W. C.) John Holdsworth, Chief Mate, cheap edition, 4to, 4/ cl.
Rassell's (W. C.) The Two Dreamers, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 31/6 cl.
Smart's (H.) Social Sinners, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 31/6 cl.
Spillhaug's (F.) Quisiana, or East at Last, translated from the German, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Stanton's (E. B.) Good Little Daughters, cr. 8vo, 2/6 cl.
Troilope's (Anthony) The Duke's Children, cr. 8vo, 3/6 cl.
Walker's (B.) Future of Palestine, cr. 8vo, 5/ cl.
Watson's (J. L.) Grey Craig, or Auld Lang Syne, cr. 8vo, 5/ cl.
Young Folks' Picture-Book, folio, 2/6 cl.
Zimmer's (H. and A.) Half-Hours with Foreign Novellists, 3 vols. cr. 8vo, 28/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Asta Poetisum Romanorum Inedita, ed. J. v. Pflügel-Hartung, Vol. 1, Parts 1 and 2, 12m.

Kreyher (J.): Die Bruchstücke d. Seelensterns u. die biblischen Wunder, 8m.

Fine Art.

Fanhard (F.): Joseph de Longueil, Graveur du Roi (1720-1782), m. Vie—son Œuvre, 80fr.

History and Biography.

Fontane (M.): L'Histoire Universelle, Vol. 1, 26fr.

Montillet (A.): Wolowski, m. Vie et ses Travaux, 1fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Lesnerey (J.): Voyage aux Îles Fortunées, le Pic de Ténériffe et les Canaries, 3fr.

Philology.

Archimedes Opera Omnia, rec. J. L. Heiberg, Vol. 1, 6m.

Huchsch (E.): Die Neue Oskische Steinfel, 2m. 40.

Frym (H.) u. Eodm (A.): Der Neumarmatische Dialekt d. Tär Abdin, 16m.

Science.

Agard's (J. G.): Species, Genera, et Ordines Algaeum, Vol. 3, Part 2, 10m.

Caster (M.): Die Geschichte der Mathematik, Vol. 1, 30m.

Pflügel (C.): Hygienische Untersuchungs-methoden, 16m.

Pöckel (W. O.): Die Pflanzen-Mischlinge, 11m.

Müller (W. J. G.): Handbuch der Botanik, Vol. 3, Part 2, 26m.

Preyer (W.): Naturwissenschaftliche Tustschben u. Probleme, 9m.

Schroter (H.): Theorie der Oberflächen, 2. Ordnung u. der Raumkurven, 3. Ordnung als Erzeugnisse projektivischer Gebilde, 16m.

NOTES FROM OXFORD.

November, 1880.

The Commissioners are once more at work among us. In the course of the last week

Balliol, New College, and Exeter have all been before them, and it is believed that they mean to sit regularly for some time longer. The substitution of the Master of University for Lord Selborne will probably facilitate the complete abolition of clerical restrictions, but beyond this it is difficult to predict what the effects of the change will be. And desirable as it is that such of these restrictions as remain should disappear, no one but politicians pure and simple will deny that their removal is neither so important nor so difficult a question as many of those with which the Commissioners have to deal. The few restrictions that still linger cannot linger long, when every year makes them more absurd in theory and more inconvenient in practice. The great problem which the Commission has to solve is wholly different. It is expressly charged with the duty of determining what modifications are necessary in the relations at present existing between the University and the colleges, and it is by its legislation in this direction that it will be judged. Unfortunately, it is just here that the greatest uncertainty exists as to the Commissioners' intentions. Now, however, that so much progress has been made with the separate college schemes, we may fairly look for some light on the point, and possibly by the end of the year it will be known whether they intend seriously to establish a wide and effective system of university teaching, or to leave matters pretty much as they are. For, as I have said before, the creation of additional professorships and readerships will do little or nothing in this direction, so long as the present college educational system is left untouched. If the change is to work, professors and tutors must be brought into rational and, I may add, compulsory co-operation; otherwise the professoriate will probably be, so far as the educational activity of the place goes, simply the expensive luxury which its enemies predict that it must be. It cannot be too clearly understood that, without in the least undervaluing the good which the college system does by securing the effective personal supervision of the students, by stimulating competition, and by the discipline of collegiate life, it has already broken down so far as the interests of higher study or organized and adequate teaching are concerned. The voluntary system of co-operation at present partially in force is a confession of weakness, but little more, while anything in the shape of more advanced learning is as completely excluded from college routine as if it belonged to another world, and is thus implicitly condemned as unworthy the attention of the Oxford undergraduate.

As to the question of compulsory Greek, there is little or nothing new to report. There is no doubt a general feeling that something ought to be done, but there is also a considerable perplexity as to what precisely to do—a state of mind which appears to be almost equally prevalent at Cambridge.

The energies of those connected with Somerville Hall (ladies) are just now concentrated upon an effort to raise the money necessary for the purchase of the freehold of their present premises. The hall, like its sister institution, Lady Margaret's, gives every promise of success; but there can be no doubt that the fulfilment of this promise largely depends on its being securely established where it now is, and the Committee earnestly appeal for assistance to all who are interested in women's education. P.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

November 1, 1880.

It may interest some of your readers to know that there is no truth in the anecdotes about Nathaniel Hawthorne quoted in your "Literary Gossip" last week. An anecdote, however, though untrue in itself, may sometimes be so characteristic as to justify its invention. Had such been the case in the present instance, I should not have troubled you with this note. But these anecdotes are inconsistent with any possibility of truth. Nathaniel Hawthorne had a healthy aversion to bores; but—as those who knew him need scarcely be told—no bore was ever able to make him forget his habitual courtesy; on the contrary, he treated such persons with even more than ordinary consideration. It is true that the presence of Mr. Bronson Alcott was attended with especial drawbacks for him, and that he never sought opportunities of converse with that gentleman; but, on the frequent occasions of Mr. Alcott's visits to his own house, he invariably met him with a composure and an affability which, under the circumstances, were little less than heroic. And when, in the course of human events, it became necessary for him to accept one of Mr. Alcott's invitations, he bore himself with an outward serenity and geniality that nothing could disconcert. Of such childish and petulant behaviour as is attributed to him in the quoted anecdotes he was incapable. I have never known a man less open to the charge of neglecting the minor social amenities. The only defence which he allowed himself against the attacks of undesirable persons was to keep out of their way.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

THE DIARY OF THOMAS CARTWRIGHT, BISHOP OF CHESTER.

Stratford, Manchester, Oct. 26, 1880.

THE diary of this favourite of the proceedings of James II. was edited for the Camden Society in 1843 by the Rev. Joseph Hunter (vol. xxii.). The original was a small octavo volume in black leather, containing the book-plate of "George Watkin, B.D., of Lincoln College, Oxford"; it came into Mr. Hunter's possession through the hands of "a bookseller at Northampton"; and it is now, I suppose, in the British Museum. The volume begins abruptly on August 11th, 1686, and it ends in the same way on October 25th, 1687, in the midst of an interesting historical episode. The date of the bishop's death was April 15th, 1689. A man who kept so complete an account of his doings for fifteen months would not suddenly cease the habit. Is anything known of the missing portions? One of my friends has a copy of the Camden edition, in which a former owner has thus written: "Charles Leslie, Answer to King, p. iii, quotes a passage from Cartwright's Diary alluding to March 14th, 1689; but the Diary as here published ends October 25th, 1687."

JOHN E. RILEY.

THE BIOGRAPHERS OF LOCKE.

PROF. FOWLER's note in the last number of the Athenæum renders it necessary for me to recur to the complaint which I made a fortnight ago, especially as he asserts that the use he has made of my 'Life of Locke' is "such a use as every author has a right to make of the works of his predecessors." That is an attempt to establish a precedent for the convenience of any one who wishes to write a book with least trouble to himself, which seems to render the question between us one of some general interest, apart from its importance to myself.

Mr. Fowler appears to be of opinion that in making that assertion he has sufficiently answered my complaint that his book is almost entirely an epitome of mine; but he has ventured on a few apologetic remarks which throw considerable light on the position he has taken up.

Mr. Fowler claims that "at least three-fourths" of his "biographical matter" "would have been written had Mr. Fox Bourne's work never been published"; and he justifies this assertion by saying that three recently published volumes, besides Le Clerc's 'Eloge,' Lord King's 'Life,' and Locke's published correspondence, were "well known" to him before my book appeared. I am quite willing to believe that, had not my book been such a convenient one for him to compile from, he would have taken the trouble to use these "well-known" volumes, and, to adopt his phrase, to "reduce their material to chronological order" for himself. He found it much easier, however, to avail himself of the compilation I had already made therefrom, and from a great many other printed books, correcting their errors, supplying their deficiencies, and harmonizing their discrepancies as I went along. This already published material was comprised in very much less than "three-fourths" of my book, as I compressed it as far as I thought consistent with my plan of tracing Locke's whole career, in order to make room within the compass of two volumes for the altogether new material at my command. Mr. Fowler's assumption that I regard this already published material as my "private property" is too preposterous to need denial. It was, of course, quite as available to Mr. Fowler as to myself, and I suppose I must take it as a compliment that he preferred almost invariably to epitomize my epitome of it instead of using any notes that he had made, or should, could, or might have made, from it for himself. But he admits, by implication, that something like a remaining fourth of the "biographical matter" contained in his book would not have been written had mine never been published. If he is justified in now asserting that my book did not "bring to light any facts of capital importance either in the life or character of Locke which were not previously known," it is surely a pity that he should have culminated his book with about twenty-five per cent. of useless or unimportant matter merely because I had placed it within his reach. If, on the other hand, he considers that this new material, as well as the old material I had digested for him, was really valuable, I am unable to understand the sentence in which he says, "I am anxious.....not to disguise or disparage the debt which I really owe to his 'Life of Locke.'"

The formal courtesy of Mr. Fowler's letter appears to me only to aggravate the offences of "disguising and disparaging" with which I charge him. The "disguising" appears in the terms in which he makes such a "general acknowledgment" in his preface, and such special "acknowledgments" in the body of his book, as must lead his readers to suppose that he has put original work into a sketch of Locke's life which, except in a very few minor details, is a barefaced compilation from mine, and that it is a book which, both for cheapness and for excellence, ought to supersede mine. He is patronizing enough to say, "I was actuated.....by a desire to draw attention to a book which I thought had not obtained the circulation which was its due." But my book having, in Mr. Fowler's opinion, failed to obtain the proper amount of circulation or attention, he regards it as so much antiquarian lumber, of which it is only necessary that two or three copies should be shelved in the British Museum or the Bodleian, there to be used by any subsequent hack writers who have the effrontery to rival Mr. Fowler in his "perfectly honest" use of my researches.

The "disparagement" is illustrated in Mr. Fowler's penultimate paragraph in the Athenæum. "With respect to accuracy," he says, "I will ask any one acquainted with Oxford to compare Mr. Fox Bourne's notices of Locke's Oxford life with mine, or any one acquainted with Latin to compare our respective translations of any documents the original of which is in that language."

The second clause of that sentence contains a grave insinuation against me, which Mr. Fowler ought to substantiate if he can. In the extracts I made from Locke's Latin correspondence throughout my book I followed a rule thus expressed on p. 27 of my second volume: "I have endeavoured, while retaining the sense of the originals, to avoid as far as possible the pedantic tone inevitable in a very literal translation of letters written in Latin." I believe that is a perfectly legitimate plan to adopt, and one more just to the author translated from, and more convenient to the reader, than any rigid observance of verbal accuracy, which is more likely to veil than to exhibit the writer's thought; and, though I have not taken the trouble to go through my translations since Mr. Fowler made his charge against me, I do not think he can convict me of departing from it through ignorance or carelessness. Without taking up more space on this question, I will ask "any one acquainted with Latin" to compare Mr. Fowler's translation and mine of the first Latin passage quoted by him, which I select merely because it is the first. Writing to Lamborch in 1685, Locke said: "Si omnia que in sacris libris continentur pro theopneustis pariter habenda sine omni discretionis, magna sane prebatur philosophus de fide et sinceritate nostra dubitandi ansa. Si è contrario quædam pro scriptis purè humanis habenda, ubi constabit scripturarum divina autoritas? sine quâ correat religio christiana; quodnam erit criterium? quis modus?" This I had thus rendered: "If everything in the sacred books is to be indiscriminately adopted by us as divinely inspired, great opportunity will be given to philosophers for doubting our faith and sincerity. If, on the other hand, any part is to be regarded as of merely human composition, what becomes of the divine authority of the Scriptures, without which the Christian religion falls to the ground? What is to be the criterion? what the rule?" For which Mr. Fowler substitutes: "If all things which are contained in the sacred books are equally to be regarded as inspired, without any distinctions, then we give philosophers a great handle for doubting of our faith and sincerity. If, on the contrary, some things are to be regarded as purely human, how shall we establish the divine authority of the Scriptures, without which the Christian religion will fall to the ground? What shall be our criterion? Where shall we draw the line?" Is Mr. Fowler's rendering any better than mine?

Again, Mr. Fowler challenges my "notice of Locke's Oxford life." I have carefully compared the portions of his book touching on this subject with mine. On p. 7 he sneers at me for "attempting to supply a detailed account of the lectures which Locke attended, and the course of studies he pursued, during his undergraduate and bachelor days." That is an unfair description of my "attempt." I certainly devoted a few pages of my book to an account of the studies prescribed at the time, and of some of the teachers then in office, with a view of showing what university work Locke would have had to do if the rules had been strictly observed, and perhaps I was not sufficiently careful to warn the reader, in that connexion, that in the rough times of the Commonwealth the rules were not likely to be at all closely observed; but the tenor of my whole chapter implied as much. It would be a grievous misfortune to me to "betray" on any subject "an innocent belief" that Mr. Fowler "cannot share"; but this particular "innocent belief" is one that Mr. Fowler has invented for me; and I am glad to find that, with one exception, all my other "innocent beliefs" about Locke's life at Oxford are faithfully repeated and hardly at all added to by Mr. Fowler. The only exception I can trace is on p. 26 of his book, where he says that Locke took his M.B. degree on February 6, 1674-5. I had quoted two dates (February 6, 1673-4, and June 27, 1674) from two contradictory authorities, which were all I had access to, and between which I was not competent to decide. I have no doubt that as soon as I have an opportunity of verifying Mr. Fowler's unavowed assertion, I shall find the date given by him to be the true one, and I am grateful to him for this correction; but, standing alone as it does, it seems hardly enough to warrant his insinuation that my "notions of Locke's Oxford life" are untrustworthy.

I must, however, give Mr. Fowler credit for one other discovery. On p. 41 he prints a letter, written in 1684 by order of Charles II., to the Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, pressing for Locke's expulsion from the college; and he prefaces his quotation with the words, "As I have never seen an exact transcript of it, I here subjoin one." The "exact transcript" is from the original in Christ Church Library, and is interesting; but as my book contains an "exact transcript" from a draft in the Record Office, except that the words "in the six and thirtieth year of our Reigne," after the date, are wanting, this almost solitary instance of any attempt at original research does not, perhaps, amount to very much.

In other parts of his book Mr. Fowler's occasional affectations of original research are apt to mislead. When he says, as on p. 17, "we find," &c., and on p. 44, "we are not able to trace," &c., it must not be supposed that the discoveries or the failures to discover are the results of any labour of his own; he only speaks on behalf of those previous collectors of out-of-the-way information who, according to his startling theory, "must be content and should be glad that it should be used by subsequent writers."

Mr. Fowler insinuates in the last paragraph of his letter that I have anticipated him in borrowing from other authors. He is evidently familiar enough with my 'Life of Locke' to know that I have there followed what I with me an invariable rule, in specifying in a footnote every such debt as it occurs. Perhaps he will consider me very foolish and very extravagant in the use of note-paper and postage stamps when I tell him that I also make it a rule never to use the published material of any living author or editor, especially where there is the smallest risk of my interfering with any literary plans he may have, without first obtaining his sanction. Of course, there is no place for such rules in the new Oxford code of "honesty," but they work well among the vulgar herd of authors, and are not found, as Prof. Fowler "observes" in his last sentence, to reduce literature "within a very narrow compass indeed." H. R. FOX BOURNE.

98, Rutherford Gardens, W., Oct. 30, 1880.

I SHOULD like with your permission to say something in reference to the charges of injustice and discourtesy brought against Prof. Fowler by Mr. Fox Bourne, which will let your readers behind the scenes while Mr. Fox Bourne was rehearsing the newest parts in his 'Life of Locke' before he presented himself to the public in the character of the author.

Early in the year 1875 Mr. Fox Bourne called upon me, and at this our first interview told me that Mr. Alex. Burrell had handed over to him some valuable materials for a new life of Locke, which he had been long collecting, and that Mr. Burrell had told him I also had been collecting original materials for a similar purpose. I then told Mr. Fox Bourne that it was my ambition to write a life of Locke, but that as it was very doubtful when I should be able to complete such a task, in consequence of my official duties, he should have the benefit of all my private notes and memoranda. At the same time I told Mr. Fox Bourne that in my official capacity I had completed a catalogue of the valuable collection of "The Shaftesbury Papers," which had been presented by the present Earl to the Public Record Office, and was printed in the Deputy-Keeper's Thirty-third Report, and which had not then been consulted by any one; and I drew Mr. Fox Bourne's particular attention to some treatises and other pamphlets by Locke and in his own handwriting in Section VIII. of that collection, which until then were unknown or had never been published—a collection so rich that no new biographer of Locke need despair even now of finding fresh matter of interest.

The first public use which Mr. Fox Bourne made of these documents was to deliver a lecture at St. George's Hall for the Sunday Lecture Society, 'Locke on Religious Liberty,' in which he gave an account of "some unpublished treatises by the great philosopher which he had discovered" (see report in Daily News, March 16th, 1875). I thought at the time it would have been more correct to have said "which had been brought to light among the Shaftesbury Papers in a Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records," but I concluded that when his 'Life of Locke' was published Mr. Fox Bourne would acknowledge whence and from whom he had derived all his new materials, for he had very frequently consulted me, as Mr. Burrell had done before him, as to different episodes in Locke's life; and Mr. Fox Bourne will remember that when giving him my private notes, which I had been collecting for years, I requested, and he agreed, that he would refer only in a cursory manner to Locke's connexion with English colonization, as that was a chapter in Locke's life which I had studied, and hoped one day to lay before the public.

Those who consult Mr. Fox Bourne's preface to his 'Life of Locke' will scarcely think that author should complain of Prof. Fowler, who has most courteously acknowledged Mr. Fox Bourne's labours in the same field as his own. Why, in a 'Life of Rubens' by Mr. C. W. Kett, M.A., lately published by Sampson Low & Co., one of the series of "Illustrated Biographies of Great Artists," there is no other acknowledgment of previous authors in the same field than a simple list of the works upon which that 'Life' has been founded, which list is printed at the end of the book.

Though Mr. Fox Bourne may suffer from the publication of a cheaper and more popular edition of Locke's life than his own, I submit that his patriotic flourish at the end of his plaint against Prof. Fowler, that his "main object is devoting much time and energy, which could ill be spared from more remunerative occupations, to the study of Locke's life and writings was to stir up in the minds of nineteenth century Englishmen some interest in one of the greatest and most neglected teachers of the seventeenth century," is open to discussion; for why should not Mr. Fox Bourne, while stating the grounds of his complaint against Prof. Fowler, take so excellent an opportunity to welcome the professor's efforts to assist his own in his "main object," "to stir up in the minds of nineteenth century Englishmen some interest in one of the greatest and most neglected teachers of the seventeenth century"? (This sentence is worth repeating.)

W. NORR SAINSBURY.

Literary Gossip.

A new volume of ballads and other rhymed poems by Mr. Tennyson will be published by Messrs. C. Kegan Paul & Co. during the present month. It will, we believe, contain various "English Idylls" and poems in the northern dialect, after the manner of 'The Northern Farmer.'

In the Fortnightly Review of next month will appear an art essay by Mr. Swinburne, in which Chaucer, Spenser, and Milton are discussed.

Mr. R. B. Knowles, having concluded his final report to the Historical MSS. Commissioners on Lord Denbigh's family papers, has been actively occupied during the year with a preliminary survey of Lord Ashburnham's MSS., the results of which will, it is hoped, shortly be made public.

DR. ALEXANDER BAIN, late of Aberdeen University, is about to take up his residence in London, and will shortly be engaged in editing a series of manuals connected with mental philosophy.

THE second volume of the records of the English Catholics under the penal laws will be published with the title of 'The Letters and Memorials of Cardinal Allen' (1532-1594). It will contain all the letters of Cardinal Allen which are obtainable, as well as letters addressed to him, and other documents calculated to illustrate his life and actions. They will amount in all to about 213, of which 172 will be printed for the first time. Some of these letters and documents are in English, many in Latin, and a few in Spanish and Italian. They are principally derived from the archives of the Vatican, of the English College at Rome, of Stonyhurst College, and of Simancas, as well as from the Public Record Office. There will be an introduction by Father Knox and a complete index.

THE issues of the Early English Text Society for next year will include Mr. Herrtage's largely annotated edition of the 'Catholicon Anglicum,' an English-Latin dictionary dated 1483, well known from the extensive use made of it by the late Mr. Way in his edition of the 'Promptorium Parvulorum' for the Camden Society. Two MSS. only of the 'Catholicon' are known to exist, one belonging to Lord Monson, who has kindly lent it for the purposes of this edition, and the other (imperfect) in the Addit. MS. 15,562. Mr. Herrtage has adopted Lord Monson's MS. as the basis of his text, and has collated it throughout with the Addit. MS. In order to make the work as useful as possible, while at the same time avoiding needless repetitions of notes, Mr. Herrtage has carried out his work on the plan of a supplement to the 'Promptorium,' confining his annotations almost exclusively to words which are not found or are not annotated in the latter work. The 'Catholicon' is written in a northern dialect, and contains a large number of new and interesting words and forms. The sheets down to B have already passed the press.

MR. ALFRED J. BUTLER, Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford, will shortly publish a volume of English poems rendered from the Greek Anthology. Mr. Butler is also engaged in preparing a work upon the old Coptic churches of Cairo.

THE Chaucer Society has just sent out its books and autotypes for this year, consisting of 'Supplementary Parallel Texts of Chaucer's Minor Poems,' part ii. (which reprints part i.); 'Odd Texts of Chaucer's Minor Poems,' part ii. (those which could not be got into the 'Parallel Texts'); 'A One-Text Print of Chaucer's Minor Poems,' part ii., being a separate issue of the best text of each poem in the 'Parallel Text' edition (these complete the Society's edition of the minor poems); two autotypes of the Campeall MS. of Chaucer's 'Troilus,' the MS. belonging to Henry V. when Prince of Wales and now to Mr. Bacon Frank, of Campsall Hall, near Doncaster; one autotype of the Sion College MS. of Chaucer's 'A B C,' in the hand of his contemporary Shirley, who has written Chaucer's name in the margin.

MR. W. G. MARSHALL'S new work, 'Through America,' will, we understand, contain a full account of Mormon life as witnessed by him during his visits to Salt Lake City in 1878 and 1879. The work will be embellished by nearly one hundred woodcuts illustrative of scenes in the Utah country and in the famous Yosemite Valley, the Giant Trees, &c.

THE latest issue of the Spenser Society consists of a reprint of George Wither's 'Britain's Remembrancer,' London, 1678. This is one of the least rare of Wither's volumes, but has, of course, to be included in the collection of his works. It forms the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth issues of the Society, and occupies close upon three hundred pages.

THE Quarto fac-simile of 'Love's Labour's Lost,' 1598, with "Forewords" by Mr. Furnivall, will be ready next week. It is the fifth of the series of "Shakespeare Quarto Fac-similes" prepared by Mr. Griggs, of Peckham, under the superintendence of Mr. Furnivall. The Roberts Quarto of the 'Merchant of Venice,' 1600, and the 'Merry Wives' Quarto of 1602, are both on the stone, and the "Forewords" to them, by Mr. Furnivall and Mr. Daniel respectively, are printed. Twenty-two more quartos have been fac-similed from the originals belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, Mr. Alfred H. Huth, and the British Museum, and will be produced in due course.

MR. GARDNER's continuation of the late Mr. Brewer's Calendar of Papers relating to Henry VII.'s Reign is in the binder's hands; it includes the years 1531 and 1532.

THE fifth and concluding volume of the 'Calendar of Irish State Papers of the Reign of James I.,' edited by the late Dr. C. W. Russell and Mr. J. P. Prendergast, of Dublin, will very shortly be issued. Its appearance has been much delayed by the long and fatal illness of the lamented President of Maynooth. The volume will contain abstracts of papers in the Record Office, the Bodleian, and elsewhere, relating to public affairs in Ireland between 1615 and 1625.

THE Times of India takes occasion, on the retirement of Dr. Buhler from the Bombay Educational Department, to sketch the progress made in the advancement of the study of Sanscrit during his seventeen years' service. When Dr. Buhler arrived in India in 1863, as Professor of Oriental Languages at the Elphinstone College, the scientific study of Sanscrit was still in its infancy. He first turned his attention to supplying a want much felt at the time by the preparation of authoritative editions of standard Sanscrit works. He next rendered valuable assistance to Government in collecting and preserving the records of ancient Sanscrit literature, not only in the Bombay Presidency, but throughout the native states of Guzerat and Rajputana. In his researches in the latter states he collected, moreover, for Government some 5,000 MSS., most of them very rare, relating to the Jain and Brahmanical religions. Dr. Buhler, it is said, brings with him to Europe a large and valuable private collection of MSS.

MESSRS. WELLS GARDNER, DARTON & Co. have in the press a 'Dictionary of the English Church, Ancient and Modern'; a 'Life of Dr. Tyrrell,' thirty-one years Bishop of Newcastle, New South Wales, by Mr. R. G. Boodle, M.A.; 'Soldiers and Subjects of the Great King,' with introduction by Dr. Waleham How; and 'Great Britain for Little Britons,' by Mrs. Bulley, a book for children to read to themselves. Messrs. Sonnenschein & Allen announce a volume by Mr. J. M. Darton.

Miss E. M. HARRIS, author of 'Four Messengers' and various books for young people, has in the press a volume of verse, which will be published by Messrs. Bell. Miss Harris is also the author of a novel which was received with favour two years ago, viz., 'Estelle,' a tale of Jewish domestic life in England.

Our Naples Correspondent writes:—

"Two years ago, it may be remembered by the readers of the Athenæum, the widow of Carlo Troya presented to the National Library of Naples printed copies of the works of her deceased husband, as also other volumes in manuscript, containing studies, observations, and notes for the printed works. Included in the donation were all the letters which had been written to him by many learned and distinguished men of the time. Signora Troya has now presented to the same library the academic diplomas of Troya; a gold medal which bears his name, and which was presented to him by the King and Queen of France in 1830, in acknowledgment of the first volumes of the 'History of Italy'; and an entire copy of the Giornale Ufficiale of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies for 1800."

An influential committee has been formed in London for the purpose of promoting a memorial from non-resident members of the Senate of the University of Cambridge in favour of granting the B.A. degree to women. The memorial is addressed to a Syndicate appointed by the University to consider certain memorials relating to the encouragement to be given to the higher education of women. The committee includes the Rev. J. Llewelyn Davies, Mr. W. Forsyth, Q.C., Viscount Harberton, Mr. Francis Galton, F.R.S., Mr. J. W. Mellor, Q.C., M.P., and Mr. John Westlake, Q.C.; and among the signatures already received are those of Earl Spencer, Canon Barry, Mr. J. E. Gorst, M.P., &c. Members of the Senate who may desire to add their names are requested to communicate with the Hon. Sec., Mr. R. Swan, 7, New Square, Lincoln's Inn.

M. Tissot, French Ambassador at Constantinople, was elected last week a member of the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres.

M. GENNADIUS, late Greek Chargé d'Affaires in London, is engaged in translating into English a Greek novel, entitled 'Louki Laras; or, Reminiscences of a Sciote Merchant during the Greek War of Independence.' M. Gennadius has undertaken the translation at the request of the author, whose story has already been published in French, German, Danish, and Italian. The French translation is the work of the Marquis de Queux de Saint-Hilaire, the German that of Dr. Wagner. The Greek Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies has now republished 'Louki Laras' for the second time as a book for use in Greek schools of the higher class. M. Gennadius's introduction will include a brief account of the author and some remarks on Greek works of fiction. The tale was reviewed in the Athenæum last January.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN & HALL have in the press a new novel by Mrs. Leith Adams, entitled 'Aunt Hepsy's Foundling,' the scene of which is laid in New Brunswick.

SOME time ago we announced a change in the old-established publishing house of Wm. Oliphant & Co., of Edinburgh, occasioned by the retirement of Mr. Robertson, since which time Mr. Robert Anderson has been the sole member of the firm. He has just taken as a partner Mr. J. S. Ferrier, till lately a bookseller in Elgin. In future the firm will be known as Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier.

MESSRS. SAMPSON LOW & Co. are about to republish for this Christmas the first and most successful of the works of "E. V. B." (the Hon. Mrs. R. Boyle), entitled 'Child's Play,' in a form better adapted to the hands of children. To this will be added the series of drawings more recently published as 'A New Child's Play,' and many new designs from "E. V. B.'s" sketch-book. In all there will be fifty-six illustrations, and about two hundred of the best of the old nursery songs, in a small and handy volume at a low price.

SCIENCE

Island Life; or, the Phenomena and Causes of Insular Faunas and Floras, including a Revision and Attempted Solution of the Problem of Geological Climates. By Alfred Russel Wallace. (Macmillan & Co.)

THE new science of zoological geography almost owes its existence to Mr. Wallace, and this his latest volume is a fresh and valuable contribution to the study for which he has already effected so much. Its title, indeed, like that of its predecessor, 'Tropical Nature,' is somewhat too unambitious and unassuming in the case of a work which covers so large a field, for only a little more than one-half the volume is devoted to the restricted question of insular Faunas and Floras, while the first two hundred pages are occupied with the discussion of the great problems of zoological and botanical distribution in their more general aspects. But it is easy to pardon so pleasant and genial a writer for giving a little more than he holds forth on his title-page, and the present volume, though in some respects intended as a popularization of Mr. Wallace's previous works on the distribution of animals, yet contains an immense amount of new and important matter for the man of science, as well as much delightful reading for the less instructed public. It is, in fact, the final outcome of its author's most mature thought and research on the special subject which he has made most peculiarly his own.

Mr. Wallace begins by pointing out a few of the most striking problems of distribution, which call for a solution even on the most casual survey. Why should the Fauna of remote Japan be so strikingly like that of Britain, while the Fauna of New Zealand is so totally unlike that of neighbouring Australia? Why should two islands of the Malay Archipelago, separated by a strait only fifteen miles wide, differ more from one another in their forms of life than England and Yezo? Why should the animals of sunny Florida resemble those of frozen Canada more closely than they resemble those of neighbouring and tropical Cuba? Why should tapirs be found in Brazil and in Sumatra, while they occur in no intermediate country? To answer these questions requires a wide knowledge of physical conditions, as well as of local Faunas and Floras over the whole world, and perhaps the case of islands offers the best field for their solution and illustration within easy limits. After thus stating the scope of his inquiry, Mr. Wallace goes on to define the six great zoological regions with which his previous works have already made us familiar—the Palearctic region, including northern and eastern Asia, the whole of Europe, and northern Africa; the Ethiopian, lying in Africa south of the Sahara; the Oriental, in India and the Malay Archipelago; the Australian, whose name at once describes its limits; and the Nearctic and Neo-tropical, in North and South America respectively. Taking evolution as the key to distribution, he points out that discontinuity is a proof of antiquity. Hence we find few if any discontinuous species, because if sufficient time has elapsed to get rid of intermediate individuals the species will probably have varied at either end from diversity of circumstances and want of mutual intercourse. Discontinuous genera are more common, and discontinuous families frequently occur.

In dealing with the geographical and geological changes which have affected distribution, Mr. Wallace introduces much fresh matter. Arguing in favour of his old thesis, the relative permanence of continents throughout geological time, he points out, from the dredgings of the Challenger, that shore deposits, containing material denuded from the land and deposited as sediment, are almost always confined to a distance of fifty or a hundred miles from the coast. Beyond these limits the only deposits are organic, consisting of small calcareous or siliceous shells. Accordingly all stratified rocks which include sand or pebbles must have been formed in the neighbourhood of existing continents, and often in the beds of shallow inland seas. Now the stratified rocks in the very centre of the great continents are all of this class, being either sandstones, limestones, conglomerates, or shales. As Prof. Geikie maintains, the stratified rocks of the earth comprise no formations which can be legitimately regarded as deep-sea deposits. Thus, instead of believing, with the older geologists, that every now and then the basin of an ocean like the Pacific is lifted up to form a plateau like that of Central Asia, we must suppose that each part of each continent has at various times formed part of a sea or of the ocean, but at the same time has been not far from land. The present state of the Baltic, the Mediterranean, and the Caspian will best illustrate these conditions. As to the chalk, so long claimed as a deep-sea formation, Mr. Wallace shows with much care that it resembles rather shoal-water deposits of Globigerina than the similar oozes found at great depths,—an opinion corroborated by Mr. J. Murray from the results of dredgings, and by Dr. Gwyn Jeffreys from the character of the chalk fossils, which he declares to be shallow, not deep, sea forms. Hence Mr. Wallace concludes that during the Cretaceous period the site of Europe was not occupied by the bed of a profound ocean, but that, on the contrary, only those portions of the continent were slightly submerged by local depression in which we now find Cretaceous deposits. Instead of being a vast expanse of water with a few scattered islands, it was just as much a part of the great northern continent as it is at the present day. The immense number of freshwater and shore deposits in all stratified formations, with remains of land animals and plants, he holds to be in like manner proofs of the comparative permanence of continents. On the other hand, the permanence of the great oceans is similarly vouched for by the absence of Palæozoic and Secondary formations, even in the merest fragments, on oceanic islands; while the want of terrestrial mammals on such islands clearly shows that they cannot be, as is often supposed by the ill-informed, small remaining portions of submerged continents. Mr. Darwin's facts and arguments with regard to the Fauna of the Azores have long since demolished the theory of "the lost Atlantis," while Mr. Wallace's reasoning in the present volume disposes of the hypothetical Lemuria in an equally satisfactory manner. Upon this question of the permanence of continents and oceans hangs the whole theory of zoological distribution.

With regard to glacial epochs, Mr. Wallace has a great deal to say that is new and interesting. Agreeing in the main with Dr. Croll's convincing astronomical explanation, that glacial periods depend upon the precession of the equinoxes and the motion of the aphelion, and tend specially to recur at the epochs of greatest eccentricity, he suggests that they are also largely influenced by the particular distribution of land and water which happens to prevail in either hemisphere at such exact moments of cosmical time. Without high land there can be no permanent snow and ice. Even in polar regions ice is found at sea level throughout the year only where glaciers descend to the water's edge from neighbouring mountains or elevated table-lands. Accordingly the alternate phases of precession could not produce a complete change of climate except in the case of a country which was partially snow-clad, while a totally glaciated area might continue its perpetual cold even with winter in perihelion. Mr. Wallace also argues a priori against the frequent existence of glacial conditions in earlier geological periods; but he does not refer at all to Prof. Ramsay's positive arguments on this subject in his Swansea address, which was probably not delivered till the present volume was ready for publication. This portion of his reasoning will doubtless meet with considerable criticism, but we think his general contention against the necessary recurrence of glacial phenomena with every recurrence of Dr. Croll's period is quite conclusive. The warm Arctic climates, which we know to have prevailed during the greater part of the Secondary and Tertiary periods, are similarly accounted for by the numerous currents of warm tropical water which are shown to have then penetrated the land of the northern hemisphere, and reached the polar sea by several channels.

Mr. Wallace thus reverses the parts ordinarily assigned to geographical and astronomical factors in the problem of geological climates, and his arguments seem for the most part satisfactory and convincing. More doubtful, we think, is his treatment of geological time, which he reduces within very slender limits. His modest estimate for the whole period covered by the fossiliferous formations, from the Cambrian upward, is no more than 28,000,000 years.

The second and larger portion of the work, dealing with insular Faunas and Floras, contains less that is at once novel and important, though it is worked out with the author's accustomed insight and wide grasp of facts. The oceanic islands are first passed in review, and it is shown that their zoology and botany depend wholly upon their relative position towards continents and the means of transport afforded by prevalent winds, hurricanes, or currents. None of them possesses any indigenous mammals. The Azores and Bermuda show the importance of a stormy position; for, though situated 900 and 700 miles from Europe and America respectively, the Fauna of each is essentially European or American in type, and constant new arrivals, blown by tempests, keep up the connexion with the parent species. Nevertheless, even here a few birds, beetles, and land-snails have varied specifically, and even in one case generically. The Galapagos Islands, though less distant from South America, are yet practically more inaccessible through their position in the stormless equatorial belt, and accordingly their Fauna, though still unmistakably South American in origin, displays far greater speciality of type. St. Helena and the Sandwich Islands, isolated in the midst of great oceans, show no such resemblance in Fauna and Flora to any one continent, but are peopled by waifs and strays from all quarters, some of which cannot be traced to their original habitat. The infrequency of fresh arrivals and the great antiquity of their first population have rendered their inhabitants generically distinct in a very high degree. Passing to continental islands, Mr. Wallace deals first with Britain, as an instance of a land recently isolated, and shows by a wide collection of instances that, though its species still remain for the most part identical with those of neighbouring Europe, a few peculiar species and several peculiar varieties have already begun to show themselves. This tendency to local differentiation is strongest in Ireland, and in the smaller islands—Wight, Man, Shetland, and Lundy. Borneo and Java, though not, perhaps, more anciently separated from their mainland than Britain, yet exhibit a higher degree of organic speciality, owing to their larger area, richer Fauna and Flora, and greater distance from the continent. The explanation now given of the peculiarities of Java in this respect is an advance and improvement upon that suggested by Mr. Wallace in his previous work. Japan and Formosa, again, are decidedly a little older islands, and show a corresponding peculiarity of organic forms; while Madagascar serves as an illustration of the very ancient continental islands, with a peculiar Fauna of an antiquated type, the relic of one which has long since died out in almost all other parts of the world, under the pressure of competition from more advanced and successful forms originated in the great continents. As to the hypothetical Lemuria, Mr. Wallace urges against it that the outlying islands, such as Bourbon, Mauritius, and Rodriguez, are purely oceanic in their Fauna, and therefore not parts of a wider submerged land; while the existence among them of the wingless dodos and solitaires proves the antiquity of their present condition. Finally, New Zealand and Celebes are classed as anomalous islands, and various ingenious explanations are suggested of their peculiarities. The chapters on New Zealand in particular are full of clever theories, which certainly account admirably for the existing zoological and botanical features of that very puzzling country; but though the intricate series of changes which Mr. Wallace supposes to have taken place would amply and satisfactorily account for the actual anomalies, they are, perhaps, too hypothetical to be unreservedly accepted in the present state of our knowledge.

The work throughout abounds with interest, and even the facts themselves with which it is richly stored would be of high value without the theories which they enforce and illustrate. But, taken as a whole, 'Island Life' represents the very fullest outcome of its author's researches, and it cannot fail to add to his recognised position as the greatest living authority on the questions with which it deals. It may be read with equal pleasure by those who are already acquainted with the general principles of distribution and by those who wish for the first time to learn something about modern biological geography.

INDO-CHINESE JOURNALS

COL. PREJEVALSKY'S recent journey is not surpassed in interest by any of his previous achievements. He has traversed the western Gobi desert from the frontier station of Zaimo to Su-chau, he has examined the eastern Thunshan and the mountains south of Su-chau, and, crossing the fertile plain of Tsaidam, has ascended the stupendous Tibetan highlands and surveyed the bleak and rugged northern caravan route to Lhasa as far as Nak-chu village. Portions of this exploration lie in tracts of which we knew nothing positively beyond the scanty and somewhat grotesque topography derived from the Jesuit fathers' and the Lamas' surveys. The most interesting passages of his last letters refer to his attempt to ascend the Hoang-ho river to its sources in the famous Sung-shai, or Shary Sea of the Chinese geographers. The country traversed by the head waters of the Hoang-ho appears to be characterized by huge precipitous ravines, which made further progress an impossibility; while to the west towers the mighty Burhan-Buddha range, marking the eastern escarpment of the plateau of Tibet, in which the Hoang-ho, like its mightier rival the Yangtze-kang, takes its rise. Prejevalsky's numerous observations and collections are a most gratifying feature in his travels, which will connect in most interesting fashion his previous work in 1872 with the late journeys of Count Bob Szechenyi. The general effect of all these travels when combined will be to furnish us with an enormous addition to our knowledge of High Asia.

We regret to announce the death of M. Erhard, which occurred at Paris on the 23rd of October. The deceased was a native of Freiburg in Baden, but came to Paris when a lad, and attained there a well-deserved reputation as a cartographer.

The experiment of growing French grapes in Cashmere has been highly successful. M. Ermens, who was chosen by the Société Horticole for the purpose, selected the land for the planting of the vine-cuttings. Under his direction regular terraces were cut on the side of a hill, and a canal was made to run along the top of the vineyards so as to keep up a supply of water. In January, 1877, he imported two kinds of white grapes for Sauterne and four kinds of black grapes for Bordeaux wine. The wine produced is said to be excellent, and in a few years M. Ermens hopes to be able to send table grapes to all the principal towns in India.

JAMES JORDAN'S glycerine barometer, a description of which was read before the Royal Society on the 22nd of January, has been erected in the Times office, and that journal commenced on the 25th of October to publish the readings of this gigantic barometer for intervals of two hours. The rapidity with which the changes take place in this instrument and the facility with which these changes are observed show the glycerine barometer to be peculiarly adapted for meteorological stations, at seaports, in the main shafts of collieries, and other situations where the observations of even small atmospheric changes are of great importance. These are scarcely indicated by the mercurial barometer, but they are at once rendered evident by this instrument. Four of these instruments are now in use—one in the Kew Observatory, one in the Museum of Practical Geology, one at South Kensington, and one in the Times office.

THE new part of the Philosophical Transactions contains a number of very philosophical papers, which philosophers only will be able to appreciate. A paper by Mr. G. F. Fitzgerald, 'On the Electro-magnetic Theory of the Reflection and Refraction of Light,' embodies results which confirm the beautiful experiments on the reflection of light from the pole of a magnet by Mr. Kerr, of Glasgow. Mr. R. T. Glazebrook contributes 'Double Refraction and Dispersion in Iceland Spar,' an experimental investigation with a comparison with Huyghens's construction for the extraordinary wave. Other papers are by Mr. W. M. Hicks, 'On the Motion of Two Spheres in a Fluid'; Mr. W. Ellis, of Greenwich Observatory, 'On the Relation between the Diurnal Range of Magnetic Declination and Horizontal Force, as Observed at Greenwich, 1841 to 1877, and the Period of Solar Spot Frequency,' illustrated by diagrams which represent the phenomena admirably; Mr. Spottiswoode, Pres. R.S., and Mr. J. F. Moulton, 'On the Sensitive State of Vacuum Discharges,' part ii.; Capt. Abney, 'On the Photographic Method of Mapping the least Refrangible End of the Solar Spectrum,' with a map of the spectrum from 7,000 to 10,750; Mr. Huggins, 'On the Photographic Spectra of Stars,' also with a large map; Mr. G. H. Darwin, 'On the Secular Changes in the Elements of the Orbit of a Satellite revolving about a Tidally Distorted Planet'; Prof. W. C. Williamson, 'On the Organization of the Fossil Plants of the Coal-Measures,' part x.; and Prof. Schorlemmer's third part of his researches 'On the Normal Paraffins.'

M. GAUDRY brought before the Academy of Sciences on October 18th a notice of a very perfect reptile found in the Permian rocks of Igornay by M. Roche, and presented by that gentleman to the Paris Museum. M. Gaudry proposes to call it Stereocrachus dominans. It appears to be a large carnivore, and possesses affinities with the Ganocephali and Labyrinthodonts, being closely allied with Mr. Cope's group of Pelycosaurians in North America.

M. KOZAN calls attention in the Journal für Praktische Chemie, No. 12, for 1880, to the fact that salicylic acid employed to keep water free from taint loses its power if the casks in which the water is kept are open to the air. This is an important fact.

FINE ARTS

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS IS NOW OPEN AT THOMAS M'LEAN'S Gallery, 7, Haymarket, next the Theatre.—Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

DON'S GREAT WORKS, 'CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM,' 'CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM,' and 'THE BRAZEN SERPENT' (the latter just completed), each 25 by 23 feet, with 'Dream of Pilate's Wife,' 'Soldiers at the Cross,' 'Night of the Crucifixion,' 'House of Caliph,' at the DORE GALLERY, 24, New Bond Street. Daily, 11am to 5pm.—1s.

Jahrbuch der königlich Preussischen Kunstsammlungen. Erster Band. Hefte I.—III. (Berlin.)

THE Jahrbuch der königlich Preussischen Kunstsammlungen, which the Prussian Ministry of Public Instruction has this year begun to issue quarterly, contains not only lists of all the acquisitions made for the various national museums and galleries, but is also a vehicle for the publication of special studies on artistic subjects written by leading archaeologists. Three parts are now before us, the issue of the second having been delayed by the editor, Dr. Dohme, in order that it should be accompanied by at least a preliminary account of the results of the recent excavations undertaken by the Prussian Government at Pergamus.

This "preliminary account" forms the most important section of the contributions to the Jahrbuch up to the present date, and comprises special notices of the architectural construction of the Great Altar building, of the Temple of the Cæsars, and of the Gymnasium, by Bohn, Stiller, and Raschdorff; a paper on the sculptures and inscriptions of the Altar by Prof. Conze, and on the inscriptions of the Gymnasium by Herr Lolling, accompanied by a history of the whole undertaking by Herr Humann, which is introduced by a general preface, in which Prof. Conze sums up the leading points of interest. It is not possible to exaggerate the value of the treasures which the exertions of fifteen months have brought into the Museum of Berlin. Not only is the world enriched by the possession of splendid works of art, rescued from oblivion and destruction, but the classical student obtains complete materials, hitherto wanting, for the examination of that art which, flourishing under the rule of the successors of Alexander, formed the bridge between the glories of Athens and the achievements of Rome. As Prof. Conze proudly remarks, we now have, in the remains of the magnificently decorated buildings with which the dynasty of Attalus enriched the Acropolis of Pergamus, a monument which gives as firm a standpoint for the history of art in the second century before the Christian era as does the Parthenon for the history of art in 400 B.C.

The honour of having brought about the undertaking, of which he gives a graphic description, belongs to Herr Humann, whose curiosity had been intensely excited by a visit paid to Pergamus in 1861, when travelling in Asia Minor for the sake of his health. At a later period, having been engaged in the work of road-making between Constantinople and Smyrna, and having finally selected his head-quarters at Pergamus, Herr Humann did what he could in the way of protecting and collecting antiquities, which now and again by some accident were brought to light. In this way he obtained, amongst other things, fragments and reliefs which attracted much notice, but it was not until 1877—when, after various negotiations, Herr Humann was put into communication by Curtius with Prof. Conze, the newly appointed Director of the Sculpture Gallery at Berlin—that he succeeded in arousing the attention of the Prussian authorities. From this moment the matter was not allowed to drop; the Crown Prince was eager, the Foreign Office bestirred itself, and a firman for a year was obtained from the Porte. A special object of search was also indicated, for Prof. Conze conjectured that a relief already despatched to Berlin by Herr Humann might possibly have formed part of the sculptures of the enormous marble altar mentioned by Ampelius in his 'Liber Memorialis,' "ara marmorea maxima alta pedes quadraginta, cum maximis sculptura. Continet autem gigantomachiam"; the site of this altar once determined, Conze hoped to complete the work of which the relief already in his hands must have been a part.

On the 9th of September, 1879, excavations were begun at a point most fortunately selected, for within three days such results had been obtained as made it evident that the right place had been struck. In the April following, when Prof. Conze arrived, accompanied by Herr Wilberg—to whom we owe the excellent plans and sketches which explain the narrative—no less than sixty-six slabs of the Gigantomachia, and twenty-three of the series depicting the story of Telephus, had been secured, besides statues, busts, horses, and innumerable fragments of architecture and sculpture. Enormous additions were afterwards made to this list; an ædæa built by Attalus II. was discovered and removed entire, together with the bronze statues with which it was originally adorned, and the number of inscriptions alone was carried up to 130; every day continued to bring fresh discoveries, and a systematic effort was made by the directors of the expedition to ensure a complete record of all the results obtained. As the excavations proceeded, the site not only of the Great Altar with its accompanying buildings, but that also of the Gymnasium, and of a splendid Corinthian temple to the Cæsars, was laid bare, and the three architects despatched to Pergamus—Bohn, Stiller, and Raschdorff—were specially devoted to the work of clearing and examining architectural indications, and of reconstructing for us the destroyed buildings.

The greatest difficulties in this respect had to be encountered in dealing with the altar, for, although there is scarcely a trace of the south front of the temple of the Cæsars, yet on the east and west a mass of details remained, such as the bases and capitals of columns, portions of the shafts, architrave, frieze, and cornice, whilst on the north side—where the site and confusion of the ruins presented great difficulties to the enterprise of the lime-burners, who have long been carrying on their industry on the spot—so much was found that Stiller and Raschdorff have arrived at a fairly certain reconstruction of the entire building and its contents. The temple, which was of the Corinthian order, had been richly decorated, and contained many colossal statues—the heads of those of Trajan and Hadrian were found amongst the fragments which filled the vaults beneath the cellæ, the flooring of which had been broken through—but the most curious pieces of sculpture which turned up were a series of Medusa heads accompanied by ornament simulating serpentine contortions. These had formed part of the frieze, which, decorated with a double band of ornament, must have presented the most original feature of the entire edifice. As to the reconstruction of the Great Altar, the remains showed that it had been surrounded by an outer wall of irregular shape and workmanship, and that the altar itself had been a rectangular building raised from the ground on a base of three stages, each of which was about 23 centimetres in height and 40 in projection. These points clearly established, the whole of the after labour of reconstruction has had to be based entirely on the measurement and comparison of the scattered and broken remains of the marbles with which the whole of the building was veneered. By these arduous means Bohn has arrived at a plan, of which the perspective elevation is given in the accompanying plates. This shows the altar raised on a base of vast extent, which is decorated with the Gigantomachia, the sculptured band turning in in front, and clothing the two sides of the flight of steps by which access is obtained to the platform above. This platform appears to have been completely surrounded on three sides by a Doric colonnade, the interior of which seems to have been coated by the smaller series of reliefs which represented the story of Telephus. Time and further examination may, of course, tend to largely modify the details of this conjectural scheme; nor can we, indeed, at present pretend to say in what direction, nor to what discoveries, the study of the reliefs and other monuments now at Berlin may eventually lead us. The activity and energy displayed on this occasion by the Prussian Government make it probable that the wish with which the leaders of the expedition parted from their workmen on the 3rd of March—"Auf wiedersehen hier zu neuer Arbeit"—will soon be fulfilled, and that they will return to Pergamus to glean their harvest. Another firman from the Porte will be readily obtained, and the Turks will be glad, as on the present occasion, to abandon all their rights in the find for a trifling sum in cash. We may expect that, in no distant future, not Pergamus only, but all the other buried cities of Asia Minor, will be reclaimed to the glory of Berlin, unless, indeed, the Greek inhabitants of Turkey's Asiatic provinces succeed in making their dissatisfaction felt; for Herr Humann tells us that the Greeks, and specially the Greeks of Smyrna, looked on the Prussian operations with a jealousy which we cannot blame, and grieved that the earth no longer covered the monuments of Pergamus, and reserved all discovery for the days when they should once more be lords of the land. And when one couples this ardent regret with the disinterested statement of the Prussian explorer that the Greek population at Pergamus, as elsewhere, has been doubling, whilst the Turks have been dwindling to less than half their original proportions, there is something piteous in his remark that, in his motley gang of Turks, Armenians, fugitive Bulgarians, and Greeks, the Greeks distinguished themselves by their skill, and to the Greeks alone was allotted the front rank in the field of labour and the delicate work of actual contact with the marbles in their removal from the soil.

The importance of the great discoveries made at Pergamus casts the other matter of the Jahrbuch, interesting as it is, into the shade. Something, however, must be said of the remaining papers: of Friedländer's 'Italienische Schaumünze'; of Bode's 'Adam Elsheimer'; of Hermann Grimm's brilliant article in support of an ingenious, if not very sound, conjecture respecting Michelangelo's original intentions as to the tombs of the Medici. Something must be said, too, of the excellent article by Herr Lippmann, the Director of the Berlin Print Room, on a unique Italian print, the work probably of a goldsmith, c. 1440-50, in which he sees a partial justification of Vasari's statement as to Finiguerra's discovery. Herr Lippmann writes also on three specimens of Dürer MSS. now preserved in the Print Room: two of these, a letter to Kress and a leaf from his diary, which is given in fac-simile, were published, without reference, by Campe in 1828, and Herr Lippmann now comes forward to tell us where the originals may be found. Dr. Max Jordan, the Director of the National Gallery, has also an important fact to communicate, for he has actually ascertained the existence of the lost treatise by Piero della Francesca on the proportions of the human body, and his examination of the MS., now in the Vatican, places beyond doubt the truth of the accusation of plagiarism and theft brought by Vasari and Egnatio Danti against Piero's pupil Luca Pacioli. Even the minor articles—such as Leasing on the stamped stuffs of the Middle Ages; Schults on a list of paintings once existent in a monastery at Brandenburg, which shows that as early as the middle of the fifteenth century theology, philosophy, poetry, and law were considered the correct subjects for the decoration of a library; and Dobbert on the early history of the crucifix—afford matter for serious consideration.

Space, however, forbids us to dwell on the points raised by the various contents of the Jahrbuch, although it is impossible to close our notice without some comment on the remarkable number and beauty of the reproductions of the medals of Pisano which accompany Friedländer's articles, and without calling special attention to the fact that Dr. Bode, under the modest title of 'Adam Elsheimer,' has produced a new biography, in which the diligent sifting of the facts of Elsheimer's life is accompanied by a no less diligent examination of his works. Elsheimer was certainly the most distinguished of that small group of German painters who, born in the later years of the sixteenth century, fell upon evil times, and worked on, like Poussin, in Rome under the disadvantages which denationalization always seems to entail on an artist. He is a representative of a curious epoch in the history of modern art, and Dr. Bode's labours are the more needed as, through the superficial negligence of previous writers, our knowledge of Adam Elsheimer and his works was both inaccurate and defective. The illustrations to this article also are excellent, and the liberality shown in this respect is, it must be confessed, maintained in respect of paper and style of printing. The Prussian Jahrbuch, in short, with its dry catalogues and strictly technical treatises, comes to us in the guise of an outrage de luxe.

EXHIBITION OF PICTURES BY BRITISH AND FOREIGN ARTISTS, FRENCH GALLERY, PALL MALL.

In this gallery there are a few paintings of note, and there are, too, a greater number than usual of meritorious works which have not hitherto attracted much attention. Foremost in the former class is the fine life-size figure of an acolyte seated on the floor of a sacristy, and polishing a silver crucifix which lies on his knees. It is by Madame H. Browne, and was, we believe, originally shown at the Salon, and afterwards in Pall Mall, where it now reappears. Preparations for the Festival (24)—such is the name it bears—is a masterly, broad, and solidly painted study in red and its allies and contrasts, deep brown, and warm, silvery grey. The flesh is excellent, the draughtsmanship first-rate. The absence of anything like an attractive subject is no novel shortcoming in the art of Madame Browne, although this example is unusually deficient in that respect. Artists, however, delight in technical qualities without caring for the absence of a subject.—Les Énergetes de Jumièges (66) is the picture by M. Luminais which we described in criticisms on the last Salon. We need repeat no more of this description than is involved in saying that the subject of the painting, M. Luminais's best work, is the crippled sons of Clovis II. descending the Seine. This work is a capital example of spectacular art, bold and superficial, showing good and powerful colour in parts, as in the pillows behind the heads, and remarkable for the force and spirit of the drapery painting. The horror of the subject is the condemnation of the picture.

Among the minor works may be mentioned two small examples by M. Sell, called respectively Prussian Skirmishers (3), troops on horseback, and "Va Victis" (4), French cuirassiers returning over a winter landscape after a lost battle. Both these little pictures are good in their way, and contrast favourably with Mr. E. Crofts's An Outpost (7), a man in English military costume of the seventeenth century sitting on a short-legged horse. Mr. Crofts paints military subjects cleverly, but he lacks the Frenchman's spirit and his brilliant execution.—Who Killed Cain? (12) is by Mr. J. Morgan, and represents one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools in the act of examining a "clam." The design is not without spirit of a commonplace sort. The general treatment reminds us, at a distance, of the art of M. E. Frère. The execution is flimsy, and the painting is thin and poor.—No. 13, The Lover and His Love, a middle-aged gentleman practising a serenade, is by M. A. Reinberg. It is marked by deft handling and taste in grouping tints of olive and grey, while the expression is good.—A Reverie (55), by M. Seiler, is of the same class. The figure of a gentleman, in the costume of the seventeenth century, seated by a table, is well foreshortened, and the piece of tapestry behind him is cleverly painted. This little picture belongs to the school of M. Meissonier, and though not otherwise important, proves the value of a training which is rarely attempted in England; the firmness, precision, and neatness of the draughtsmanship, to say nothing of the keeping of the entire picture, and its effective tones and colours, are interesting on this account.

A Flitting Glean before the Storm (59), by Herr Heffner, depicts a low coast of pale sands, with sloping cliffs, dark verdure, shining pools of seawater, a steel-like and level sea, all overborne by gathering clouds, through a rift in which a brilliant light descends to creep along the vista. The sharp definition of the nearer objects, the clearness of the distance, are characteristic of nature in this effect of light. The effect is very solid, attractive, and truthful; much good drawing appears throughout, but the workmanship is thin. The same painter has sent the capital in the Gloaming (76), comprising a well studied sky and perspective of calm water shining still in the light which fades; it is a first-rate sketch of clear evening after sundown.—Market-Day, Hungary (63), Leaving the Homestead (192), and Scheveningen (194), all by Herr G. Von Bochmann, are to be admired because of the abundance of incidents, a good, broad, and bold system of painting, much action, and an energetic conception of the subjects.—Mr. J. Pettie has a clever but unpleasant sketch for a picture of two marauding commanders seated and studying a map; as one of these truculent fellows has been badly wounded, his head is bandaged, much to the injury of his looks. The work is flimsy and pretentious, coarsely spirited, and repulsive.—No. 106, Straduarus, by Herr Zimmermann, shows an ugly, sordid old Franciscan friar with a fiddle. Gross as it is, the face is very spirited.—A Lady of the Seventeenth Century (107), by Herr F. A. Kaulbach, comprises a head in a white coil of the sixteenth (not seventeenth) century, neatly and smoothly painted. The expression of the features is over sweet.

We recommend to the visitor M. Munthe's Ice-Bound (125), a wintry landscape; M. A. Vally's In Maiden Meditation (139), the popular engraved picture; Herr Blommers's Fisherman's Family, Scheveningen (164). It is impossible to praise the big picture called A Satyr Family (162), by M. L. Priou, or Mr. F. Goodall's tame Rebekah at the Well (147).

THE FINE-ART SOCIETY, NEW BOND STREET.

THE collection of works of art which will be opened on Monday next in the gallery of the Fine-Art Society is of more than usual interest. It comprises about one hundred and twenty-five water-colour drawings and woodcuts by John Bewick. The originals of the famous illustrations to the 'British Birds' have been lent by the Misses Bewick, and the extreme delicacy, beautiful elaboration, and fidelity of not a few of them will surprise those persons who know the Newcastle artist as a wood engraver only. These drawings are generally, but not invariably, superior to the cuts for which they were made, and their colour is often charming. Henceforth every one must give a high place to the author as a master in small, especially in regard to style, an important quality which few would look for in studies such as these.

Nothing can exceed the pathos and mardonic humour which are to be found in some of the vignettes and tail-pieces. Among the most attractive of them is the drawing for the Poachers or Men Shooting (No. 9), which was made for the cut on p. 147, vol. 1. of 'British Birds.' Here is a charming snowy landscape; a hare flies all amazed across a meadow, and is followed by a man with a gun and dog. The man has put the long skirt of his coat over the lock of the gun, to keep the priming dry, or keep the chilly metal from his freezing fingers. This is one of Bewick's most "natural touches." The background of the vignette, where the geese go up a path after drinking from a brook, and announce the fact by quacking vociferously, is delightful for truth and delicate draughtsmanship. A cut of a farmyard, where a woman winnows grain with a sieve, and a crowd of poultry eagerly pick up food, while disinterested quadrupeds, who do not eat corn, look calmly on, is well known to the student of Bewick's art. The projection of the shadow of a ladder in differing angles on the sloping roof and the upright wall of a barn against which the ladder leans is proof of Bewick's subtle knowledge of nature. Wealth of character is expressed by the birds in this drawing, each differing in expression and attitude from its neighbours. In this respect, too, the geese, mentioned above, are perfect studies of character; although they are all doing the same thing, each bird does it in its own way. In short, the visitor may spend hour after hour most pleasantly in looking at these vignettes.

Among the famous "Birds" proper, no one should overlook the drawing for the famous 'Kitty Wren' ('Birds,' i. 227), a gem-like piece of sober lustre in colour, and a masterpiece of solidity; the White Owl (8) is immeasurably finer than the woodcut; The Royalton Crew (30) is a noble study of colour; The Nutcracker (71), The Red-Legged Crow (83), The Snipe (109), The Wryneck (117), The Stormy Petrel (118), are all first rate. The drawings for the famous Feathers of the Water-Crake (1) and Feathers (55) are much better than the cuts which reproduced them, yet even these have been ranked with Hollar's superb 'Shells' and 'Muffs.' With the above are to be seen the very famous Chillingham Bull, and T. S. Good's portrait of T. Bewick.

The above-named drawings are portions of the collection of the works of Thomas and John Bewick which, as the best monument to the memory of their father and uncle, the Misses Bewick have by will bequeathed to the nation, so that the whole may be preserved in the British Museum. Besides these examples, this noble bequest includes two large volumes of impressions from the blocks engraved by the artists, more, we believe, than a thousand in number, all duly arranged so as to supply standards of reference for testing the genuineness of works which may be attributed to the two draughtsmen.

In the same gallery may be seen a large number of etchings, being a complete collection of the works of Mr. S. Palmer, including a new plate, with some examples we have already described at length. There are also collections of etchings by Mr. J. C. Hook and Mr. J. Whistler, and a considerable number of specimens of the skill and learning of Mr. F. Seymour Haden; these are most interesting as marking the progress of the draughtsman from careful and elaborate studies to the more recent and courageous works. The visitor should especially notice Brentford Ferry, Greenwich, The Three Sisters, Battersea, and Erith Marshes.

The catalogue of this exhibition has been enlarged beyond the common practice, so that it may have permanent value. It includes a terse and readable memoir of T. Bewick, an analysis of his artistic achievements and powers, and special notes on examples from the drawings and cuts by this artist, selected to show some of their more noteworthy qualities and characteristics.

NOTES FROM NAPLES.

Oct. 26, 1880.

PROF. NOVI, the discoverer of the site of the extinct Casilino, is now reported by the Gazzetta di Napoli to have made yet richer contributions to archaeology. On the Via Gabunia he has discovered the necropolis of the Pago di Diana, containing many tombs with inscriptions—remains of Ionic columns, Corinthian cornices, hemicycles for funeral rites, objects in terra cotta, statues and fragments of various kinds. Traversing the sides of Mount Tifata, Novi found, at two and a half metres under ground, vestiges of a very ancient race which seems to have some analogy with that which was established in Suessola. In fact, the vases, of rough unpolished clay or with black enamel, have designs not formed by the brush, but with a pointed instrument made for scratching. The tombs are formed of two strata of large calcareous stones, and ornaments of coral, of Greek glass, fibulae, and copper rings adorn the remains. Under the mountains of Gerusalemme and Palombara Novi has laid open the ancient Via di Diana. It was buried under a stratum of compact argillaceous earth nearly three metres in depth. On the mountains which rise above this antea via once rose Sicopoli, a city founded by the Lombards in 827 A.D. The only remaining vestige of this city is an inscription, referred to in the critical-diplomatic annals of the kingdom of Naples. The vertical section now executed by Novi shows the probability of gathering fuller and more certain information about Sicopoli. At the depth of three metres there have been found broken tiles, plaster with frescoes, columns, broken arms, fragments of glass cups, of "dolia," of cinerary vases, and a large quantity of human bones as well as those of horses, as if they were the relics of a great battle fought on the heights above. The section where these discoveries were made was on the old road of Bellona-Cajazzo, in the province of Caserta. These studies of Prof. Novi, at the same time that they offer a new contribution to epigraphy, clear up many controverted points of the ancient geography of Campania, and it is to be hoped that he will continue investigations which may lead to important discoveries.

H. W.

MINIATURE PATRIMONIAL.

West Dulwich, Nov. 2, 1880.

IN your last week's issue Mr. Edward Scott publishes a document which he describes as "the original contract made by the Dean and Chapter of Cologne with the Burggrave of Drachenfels.....to quarry stones out of Mount Drachenfels to be employed in the building of the church." This statement does not tally with the account given by the late Dr. L. Ennen, Archivar and Librarian of Cologne, in a very interesting essay on the cathedral now appearing in the popular Gartenlaube.

Dr. Ennen says:—"Zur Gewinnung der nöthigen Quadersteine hatte das Dom-capital einen eignen Steinbruch am Drachenfels angekauft und in Betrieb gesetzt, und mittelst Vertrages vom 28 August, 1267, erwarb es von dem Burggrafen von Drachenfels einen von diesem Bruche in gerader Richtung zum Rheine führenden Weg. Im Jahre 1274 ward mit dem Burggrafen ein Abkommen getroffen, wonach sechs Arbeiter, von denen drei Steinbrecher und drei Vorschläger sein sollten, fortwährend beschäftigt sein müssten. Wiederholt wird dieser Vortrag erneuert und 1294 die Zahl der Steinbrecher auf vier erhöht; ebenso tritt 1306 eine Vermehrung der Arbeitskräfte ein, nachdem das Capital den Dombau durch Ankauf eines Weinberges erweitert hat."

According to Dr. Ennen, it would appear that the Chapter in 1267 acquired from the Burggraf a road leading from their quarry to the Rhine, and that in 1274 he promised to supply them with six workmen, which number was in 1294 raised to seven.

J. LORAINÉ HEHL.

'JACOB'S DREAM.'

Villa Novello, Genoa, Oct. 26, 1880.

PERMIT me to offer corroboration of the just protest made by your correspondent "Septuagenarian" in the Athenæum for October 23rd, 1880, on behalf of the poetical picture by Rembrandt in the Dulwich Gallery. William Hamlin, himself an accomplished amateur painter and an acknowledged fine judge of painting, writes thus in his volume entitled 'The Picture Galleries of England,' published in 1824, when discussing the gems in the Dulwich Gallery:—"This room is rich in masterpieces. Here is the 'Jacob's Dream,' by Rembrandt, with that sleeping figure, thrown like a bundle of clothes in one corner of the picture, by the side of some stunted bushes, and with those winged shapes, not human, nor angelical, but bird-like, treading on clouds, ascending, descending through the realms of endless light, that lose itself in infinite space! No one else could ever grapple with this subject, or stamp it on the willing canvas in its gorgeous obscurity but Rembrandt!"

MARY COWDEN CLARKE.

Five-Fri Society.

CONSIDERABLE works have lately been in progress in the interior of the National Gallery. The floor of the Wynn Ellis Room has been relaid with oak; the pictures have been temporarily placed in an adjacent gallery. The students practising in water colours now work in the Rembrandt Room. Many of the English pictures have been advantageously rearranged.

THE private view of selected pictures in Messrs. Agnew's "Old Bond Street Galleries, Piccadilly," is appointed for to-day (Saturday); the collection will be opened to the public on Monday next.

A picture of Constable's has found its way into "the custody" of a churchwarden. The following announcement, signed by the vicar and churchwarden, appeared on the doors of the parish church at Nayland a few days ago: "The altarpiece of this church (having been pronounced by a competent authority to be suffering rapid deterioration from the damp) has been removed, and is at present in the custody of the churchwarden. Steps will shortly be taken with a view to its complete restoration." The picture, says the East Anglian Daily Times, is highly prized, and very valuable. It is one of the only two portraits painted by Constable; the subject is our Lord at the Last Supper. The picture was painted by this celebrated artist whilst staying with a friend at Nayland, in the year 1801. He presented it to the church, and it was placed over the communion table. A recardo of Caen stone was placed in the chancel in 1869, and the painting was refixed in this. The picture is to be put in the hands of Mr. Grace, of London, to whom the task of restoring it has been entrusted. Constable's other example of portrait painting is in Bentham parish church.

THE last fragment of the wooden shed which has so long disfigured the façade of the British Museum is being removed.

OUR learned contributor Dr. Wilhelm Bode has been appointed Director of the Gallery of Medieval and Renaissance Sculpture at the Berlin Museum.

ON the recent occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the Berlin Museum a 'Führer durch die Königl. Museen' was published. It gives a short and comprehensive account of the various galleries of painting, sculpture, prints, drawings, casts, &c., pointing out the most important works. To the student of art visiting Berlin it will be invaluable. It also indicates the admirable and scientific system of arrangement and classification which prevails there.

WE regret to hear that General di Cesnola, the celebrated Cypriot excavator and Superintendent of the Metropolitan Museum of New York, is seriously ill.

THE fine statue of the elder Dumas by M. H. M. Chapu has been erected in the Place Mahebarbe, Paris, near which he lived.

A SPECIAL gallery is to be appropriated in the building in the Champs Élysées to a temporary exhibition of works by M. Puvis de Chavannes, reduced cartoons of the painter's works in the Panthéon, studies for the decoration of the Musée d'Amiens and the Musée de Marseille, and other works at Poitiers and elsewhere.

IT is proposed to erect statues of Théodore Rousseau and Millet in the Forest of Fontainebleau. A committee of amateurs of art and artists has been appointed to promote the execution of this idea.

THE French artistic journals add an interesting note to our knowledge of the late M. Jules Jacquemart. It appears that this artist was an indomitable collector of shoes and foot coverings in general, and that he possessed one of the richest museums of these articles which has been formed, including sandals, a cothurnus, productions of mediæval sons of St. Crispin, and of their successors of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Ladies' boots were fully represented.

GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS's march from Cabul to Candahar has been the means of bringing us some recent information respecting the famous tomb of Mahmud of Ghuzni, who lies buried amid the ruins of the old city, three miles north-east of the present city of Ghuzni. This great conqueror, who is said to have invaded India eleven times, now reposes in a rude and humble structure surmounted by a mud cupola, and formerly closed by the famous carved sandal-wood gates which Mahmud removed from the temple of Somnath in Gujarat in 1024. As is well known, these gates (or rather, it should be said, those that occupied the place and were traditionally reported to be the original gates) were carried back to India after General Nott's dismantling of Ghuzni in 1842. Those which now occupy their place are of a wood closely resembling sandal-wood, and are richly carved, while hundreds of horseshoes and other tokens nailed on to the lintel of the door attest the superstitious veneration of the numerous worshippers.

M. RAJON has in hand an important etching from the portrait painted in 1776 by Sir Joshua Reynolds, exhibited in that year, and well known as 'Master Crewe as Henry VIII,' being a whole-length figure in a masquerade costume after a work attributed to Holbein, and representing King Henry in the characteristic attitude of that monarch. The picture belongs to Lord Crewe, and remains at Crewe Hall. It was engraved by J. R. Smith.

THE Académie des Beaux-Arts has elected M. Chaps, sculptor, to the chair vacant by the death of M. Lemaire.

AN important sale of antique and mediæval ivories was advertised for the 29th ult., at 3 p.m., in the auction rooms, 10, Corso V. Emanuele, Florence. It has been postponed until the 2nd of December next. These ivories are part of the public collection of works of art belonging to the city of Volterra, and are to be sold in order to procure funds for the establishment of the museum of that place. Among them is a rectangular coffer with a flat top, of the fifth or sixth century, and comprising a series of heads in profile, seemingly copies of Roman coins, alternating with rosettes; the front is enriched with figures of a Roman warrior armed with a buckler and falchion, a woman fighting a bear with a lance, Hercules bearing his mace, a young warrior, Eurytheus with a lance, a bearded soldier and his enemy, Ganymede, Hercules with Hippolyta, Nessus with Dejanira, and a third warrior. In the middle of the top is a long plaque representing a combat at the gate of a city, including charioteers and horsemen. A second coffer is similar in form and of somewhat later date, and enriched with panels representing, in somewhat high relief, monsters, lions, stags, dogs, a huntsman, &c. The sculptured head of an abbot's crook, painted and gilt, formerly belonging to the Abbey of St. Just, is of florid thirteenth century work, and contains in the volute figures of the baptism of Christ. In the radially disposed fleurons of the head are busts of God the Father and the Prophets; a fleuron is lost. The head issues from the throat of a grotesque dragon; figures of SS. Paul and Peter and the Evangelists occupy niches of tabernacle work on the bottom of the staff proper. The head of a Gothic crook, which belonged to Benoit Aldobrandini, Bishop of Gubbio, 1331, is a fine specimen of Italian art of its time and of great interest. In the volute the Adoration of the Magi is represented. With this relic is an étui, or case, of cuir bouilli, impressed with the arms of the bishop. There is likewise a leaf of a diptych of Lombard sculpture, dating from the beginning of the ninth century, and representing incidents in the life of David. Three marriage coffrets of Italian origin, dating from the fourteenth century, complete the list.

THE Louvre has recently obtained two very interesting additions, being a fresco by Fra Angelico, brought from a convent near Fiesole, and a work by Ghirlandajo, representing an old man and a child.

ARCHÆOLOGISTS will rejoice to learn that M. Clermont Ganneau has received the appointment of French Vice-Consul at Jaffa. He will arrive in Palestine at the beginning of the year, and will at once renew those researches which have already given the world, among other things, the stone from Herod's Temple, the boundary inscriptions, the Head of Hadrian, the vase of Bezetha, and the ancient cemetery north of Jerusalem, any one of which is enough to make the reputation of an archaeologist. His appointment appears in the Journal Officiel of November 3rd.

THE death of the able French landscape painter M. Léon Herpin is recorded as having occurred last week. After beginning his career as a land-measurer, he practised painting with such success that he devoted himself thereafter to art and attained considerable distinction. M. Herpin was a pupil of MM. C. F. Daubigny and Bunsen. He received a medal of the second class.

THE recent conflagration at the Pavillon de Flore and consequent danger to the Louvre has roused the attention of French writers—and, it is to be hoped, the Government of their country—to another peril to which the picture galleries of the great Musée itself are exposed with an official fatuity which would be incredible if the fact were unique. The National Gallery was exposed to equal risks while the curator's apartments, including nurseries and rooms for servants, were below the galleries which held the greatest treasury of art in England. The new danger to the Louvre, the French journals say, is owing to the "installation" of the officials of the fine-arts department in the rooms which extend under the galleries occupied by Flemish and French paintings. The risks attending such an "installation," as this is truly terrible. Papers accumulate in the bureaux, lamps are used, open fires are burning, and officials cannot be kept from smoking. There are dozens of open fireplaces in the British Museum, but nobody lives under the galleries there, and as for danger, there is nothing more threatening in the neighbourhood of the Elgin marbles than a gigantic series of furnaces employed for warming the building.

M. LOUIS NOTT's statue of David d'Angers was uncovered with the usual ceremonies and many speeches in the Place de Lorraine, Angers, on Saturday week.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—'Rigoletto,'
CRYSTAL PALACE.—Fourth Saturday Concert.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Mr. Walter Jacobs's Recital.

THE most noteworthy feature of the performance of 'Rigoletto' at Her Majesty's on Saturday last was the unlooked-for excellence of Signor Aldighieri in the title rôle. This artist made no great impression on his first visit to this theatre twenty-three years ago; but he has since developed his powers, and is now entitled to rank as one of the best baritones of the day. Except for a slight tendency towards the trémolo, his vocalization on Saturday was all that could be desired, and the demands made on the dramatic capacity of a representative of the unfortunate jester were fully met. On the other hand, Miss Rosina Isidor disappointed those who had heard her on the previous Saturday in 'Lucia.' The character of Gilda is one of the most sympathetic in the operatic repertoire, but Miss Isidor failed to realize either its vocal or its dramatic possibilities. Her shortcomings were, it is true, negative rather than positive; but they were none the less apparent. The rest of the performance need not be dealt with, and for obvious reasons the promised début of Madame Giovannoni Zacchi in 'Les Huguenots' on Thursday must be reserved for consideration next week. Now that the chorus and the conductor have established a mutual understanding, the improvement in the voices is more noticeable than it was at the beginning of the season.

Three novelties were produced at the Crystal Palace Concert of Saturday last. These were Mr. Thomas Wingham's new festival overture, entitled 'Mors Janua Vitæ,' which was recently produced at the Leeds Festival, a Pianoforte Concerto, composed and played by Herr Bonawitz, and two orchestral movements from M. Massenet's 'La Vierge.' None of the new works, however, was fortunate enough to obtain more than a succès d'estime. Mr. Wingham's overture, like everything else which has proceeded from his pen, is a thoroughly musicianly and carefully written work; but it labours under the great disadvantage of an almost entire want of contrast, both in the subjects and in the orchestral colouring. The themes are elegant and pleasing in themselves, but their treatment becomes monotonous before the end of the piece. This is especially the case as regards the instrumentation. Nearly every important melody is given to the strings, the wind being employed in a very subordinate capacity, excepting in the introduction. The result is that the impression produced upon the ear is somewhat analogous to that made upon the eye by a well-executed but sombre drawing in sepia or neutral tint. Herr Bonawitz's pianoforte concerto cannot be considered in any respect a remarkable work. It is correctly written, showy for the solo instrument, and the orchestration, though in no way striking, is effective enough; but the ideas are of little individuality and of even less interest. The word "commonplace" will best describe the music, and, it may be added, the player also. Herr Bonawitz is a sound pianist, and evidently a good musician; but we do not consider him a great virtuoso, and it would be easy to name at least a dozen pianists resident in London who would be quite as well worth hearing at the Crystal Palace. Herr Bonawitz gave a specimen of good average playing, and nothing more. The two movements by M. Massenet are entitled respectively "Dernier Souffle de la Vierge" and "Danse Galiléenne." The former is a dreamy and mystical andante for muted strings with a solo violoncello, pleasing in its melody; but the device of dividing the violins and using the mutes is one which modern composers have so frequently employed that it is almost worn out. The "Danse Galiléenne" is a very original movement, in which great use is made of the percussion instruments; its principal theme is quaint, almost grotesque, and it is at least open to question whether M. Massenet has not secured originality at the expense of beauty. The remaining orchestral pieces of the afternoon were Schumann's Overture to 'The Bride of Messina' and Beethoven's c minor Symphony. Middle.

Louise Pyk, the vocalist at this concert, fully confirmed, on her second appearance, the favourable impression produced a fortnight previously.

A few lines will suffice in speaking of Mr. Walter Bache's pianoforte recital, which was given at St. James's Hall last Monday afternoon. There is no more genuine artist now before the public than Mr. Bache; but we venture to question whether the severe, almost ascetic, devotion to his art which he shows is not occasionally carried to an excess. We refer in this to the selection of his programmes. For example, on Monday Mr. Bache performed Bach's fifth 'Suite Anglaise,' Liszt's 'Bénédiction de Dieu dans la Solitude,' Chopin's Sonata in a flat minor, Op. 35, two short pieces by Tchaikowsky, and a transcription by Liszt from Handel's opera 'Almira.' Now in the whole of this programme there is not one item which can fairly be termed "popular"; and while we should be the last to advise Mr. Bache to lower in any degree the character of his performances, we think it worthy of his consideration whether he could not on another occasion include some piece or pieces more likely to attract the general public, without in the least pandering to a depraved taste. Of course Chopin's Funeral March, which is the slow movement of his sonata, is a favourite piece enough; but this is only one short fragment; and there was nothing else in the programme likely to interest any but musicians. The same remark may be made of the vocal music given by Miss Anna Williams. The 'Christmas Songs' by the late Peter Cornelius are charming little pieces; but they are entirely unknown, and the announcement of them would certainly not "draw"; while the same may be said of Dr. von Bulow's two romances. We make these remarks not in an unfriendly spirit, but because we feel that Mr. Bache so thoroughly deserves public support that it is a pity he should not use all means in his power to secure it. Of his excellent playing it is superfluous to speak; it will suffice to say that he has probably never played better than last Monday.

Musical Gossip.

FROM a musical point of view very little is to be said concerning the new productions at the Globe and Imperial Theatres last Saturday. 'Les Mousquetaires au Couvent' was produced at the Bouffes Parisiens in March of the present year. The librettists, Messrs. Prevel and Fevrier, found their materials in a vaudeville of 1835, 'L'Habit ne fait pas le Moine,' and the music was the joint work of Messrs. Louis Varney and Mansour. For the Globe the piece has been remodelled, and now consists of two acts only. The escapades of military officers among the inmates of conventual and scholastic institutions have formed a fruitful theme for playwrights, and the present treatment shows some humour, though occasionally it approaches dangerous ground. M. Varney's music is not without promise. It is his first important effort, and the want of freshness is thus easily explained. But the composer is happily at his best when he avoids the bouffe element, and his part-writing and orchestration are tasteful and musicianly.

MESSRS. H. P. STEPHENS AND EDWARD SOLOMON's so-called comic opera, 'Billee Taylor,' at the Imperial, is an obvious imitation, both in its dramatic and musical features, of the style invented by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan. Some slight success has been achieved in the characterization, but the music is, on the whole, disappointing. Mr. Solomon evinces no skill in development, and his orchestration is of the baldest description. This is probably due to insufficient study, and he should seek to remedy this defect, as his melodies are graceful and have a thoroughly English flavour.

THE prospectus of the Sacred Harmonic Society for the coming season at St. James's Hall has been issued. From it we gather that nine concerts will be given, on the following dates: December 3rd, Beethoven's Mass in c, Mendelssohn's 'Lauda Sion' and 'Christus'; 17th, 'The Messiah'; January 21st, Handel's 'The king shall rejoice,' Cherubini's 'Requiem,' and Mendelssohn's 'Athalie'; February 11th, the 'Lobgesang,' and Mr. Sullivan's 'The Martyr of Antioch'; March 4th, Costa's 'Naaman'; 25th, Benedict's 'St. Cecilia,' and Rossini's 'Stabat Mater'; April 8th, 'Samson'; 29th, 'Elijah'; May 20th, 'Moses in Egypt.' Judged by itself it cannot be said that this scheme is extraordinarily rich in novelty or interest, but as compared with those of recent years an improvement is noticeable. It is a pity that the directors should have waited until forced by circumstances to adopt a more vigorous policy; but if a sincere desire to move with the times is now manifested, previous shortcomings will be readily overlooked. The statement that "while the committee regret the reduction in the number of the members of the orchestra which their removal from Exeter Hall will involve, they believe this will be more than compensated by the new conditions under which the work of the Society will now be carried on," may therefore be received as evidence of a determination to face the inevitable with due courage and enterprise. Sir Michael Costa remains at his post as conductor, and Mr. Willing is again the organist.

THE first of Mr. F. H. Cowen's four orchestral concerts at St. James's Hall is to be given next Saturday evening, the 13th. A special feature of these concerts will be the production of at least one important work by an English composer on each evening. The prospectus announces as the novelties of the season Mr. Cowen's Third Symphony, a Violin Concerto by Mr. Arthur H. Jackson, a "tone-poem," entitled 'The Ebbing Tide,' by Mr. J. F. Barnett, and overtures by Messrs. W. Shakespeare, Julian Edwards, and H. C. Nixon. Such a scheme deserves, and we hope will obtain, warm support from the public.

MISS THERESA BENEY, a pupil of the National Training School for Music, will give an organ recital at Lancaster Hall, Notting Hill, on Wednesday, the 17th inst. Among other interesting items of the programme is an Adagio by Merkel, for violin and organ—a somewhat unusual combination.

AT Mr. Stratton's second chamber concert, given at the Masonic Hall, Birmingham, last Tuesday evening, the programme included Mr. Villiers Stanford's Piano Quartet in e, Saint-Saëns's Piano Trio in the same key, Haydn's 'Emperor' Quartet, Max Bruch's Romance in a minor for violin, and piano solos by Henrich and Schumann.

THE Glasgow Choral Union has issued its prospectus for the coming season. The committee has been fortunate enough to secure for the second time the services of Mr. Manns as conductor. Ten concerts—six orchestral and four choral—will be given in St. Andrew's Hall during the months of December and January. At the choral concerts the works to be performed are 'The Creation,' 'The Messiah,' Rossini's 'Moses in Egypt,' and Schumann's 'Paradise and the Peri.' Among the more important features of the orchestral concerts are Berlioz's 'Harold' Symphony, Mendelssohn's 'Reformation' Symphony, and Schubert's No. 9 in c, besides a Wagner selection, and a programme consisting entirely of Beethoven's works. Novelties by Dvorák, Mozart, Massenet, Saint-Saëns, Brahms, Schumann, and Mackenzie are also announced.

Rossini's opera 'Le Comte Ory,' which was originally produced at Paris in 1828, and which had not been heard since 1863, was revived on the 29th ult. at the Paris Opéra with great success. The principal parts were sustained by Mdlles. Daram and Janvier, and M.M. Dersims, Melchisedec, and Boudouresque.

One of the most extensive and valuable musical libraries which has for some years come under the hammer is to be sold at Berlin at the end of this month. It is the property of Dr. F. Gehring, and comprises nearly 1,700 lots, including a number of extremely scarce theoretical and historical works. The library is also particularly rich in dramatic music.

M. MASSENET is engaged upon an opera in four acts, 'Werther,' which is destined for the Opéra Comique, and which it is expected will be produced in the winter of 1881-82.

M. SYLVAIN SAINT-ÉTIENNE, well known in France as a librettist and musical critic, died at Paris on the 23rd ult., from injuries received by falling in the dark into an open sewer, which the workmen engaged had left imperfectly guarded. M. Saint-Étienne was seventy-three years of age.

HERR VON DINGELSTEDT, the director of the Vienna Opera, having from ill health resigned his post, Herr Jahn, of Wiesbaden, has been appointed his successor.

THE prospectus of the Philharmonic Society of Vienna, of which Hans Richter is the conductor, announces the following interesting scheme for performance: Beethoven's Third, Fifth, and Eighth Symphonies, and Overture to 'Fidelio,' Berlioz's Overture to 'Les Francs Juges,' Brahms's two new overtures, Gade's Symphony in a flat, Goldmark's Overture to 'Pentecôte,' Liszt's 'Festklänge,' Mendelssohn's Symphony in A, Schubert's Symphony in C, Schumann's Symphony in C and Overture to 'Julius Caesar,' Volkmann's Symphony in D minor, and Wagner's Introduction to 'Tristan und Isolde.'

THE Governor of Bombay was present lately at an entertainment given by a native musical society at Poona. After the performance he spoke in high terms in praise of the efforts made by the society for the preservation and study of national music.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LEADER AND MANAGER, MR. HENRY IRVING.

THE COBURN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.25. LOTIS and PABLO DEL FRANCHI Mr. IRVING at 7.30. 'BYRONIAN' Every Night at 7.30. NO PERFORMANCE OF THE COBURN BROTHERS SATURDAY November 6th and 12th, also on WEDNESDAY NEXT November 10th at 7.30. Box Office (Mr. Irving) open to 6. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE WEEK.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—'Anne-Mie,' an English Version of a Drama in Four Acts of Rosier Faassen.

MATTHEWST.—Revival of 'The Rivals' and 'The Toodles.'

THE first direct and incontestable proof of the influence exercised over the English stage by the visit of the Dutch comedians is afforded in the production at the Prince of Wales's Theatre of Mr. Rosier Faassen's drama of 'Anne-Mie.' To the rivalry inspired by those admirable artists the character of the performance at the St. James's is in part attributable. What, however, in that case was emulation is in the present instance direct imitation. In the performance of 'Anne-Mie' now given, the apparent aim of the management has been to reproduce with minute fidelity every feature in the original entertainment. Where a work is, like the Dutch performance of 'Anne-Mie,' all but perfect, and where its special features are such as cannot be equally well realized elsewhere, "the sincerest form of flattery" is the most conscientious and artistic method of work. Adherence to precedent seems, however, slavish when the obvious defects of an original are copied, and when slight manifestations of carelessness or perfunctoriness are treasured up as though they were supreme efforts in art. The English version is easy and natural, and one or two trifling alterations in the conduct of the story seem justifiable and even judicious.

It is, then, as a copy of a picture the performance of 'Anne-Mie' has to be judged. Regarded in this light, it has singular interest. Like all copies, it is necessarily, inasmuch as it is a copy, inferior to the original. Apart from this, however, it cannot be pronounced sustainedly equal to the well-remembered representations at the Imperial. To that level it occasionally rises, but for a brief time only. One performance alone may claim to be as good as that previously seen. The miser Dirksen of Mr. James Fernandez is a singularly fine piece of acting, which may stand comparison with the original exposition of the character. It is even more powerful, if perhaps less delicately shaded. In merit the two representations are about equal. Mr. Flockton as Jan Schuif, the villain, acts with grim power. A totally different type of wickedness is, however, shown. In place of a man whose badness is almost pathetic, so "down on his luck" does he seem, we have a stage villain of a conventional type, with one or two good instincts which lead to nothing, and showing a tendency to complain of fortune with very little cause. Mr. Flockton's is nevertheless a good performance, though the character is made up to look eight or ten years too old. Mr. Robertson's Koenrad Deel, the young boer, is gallant and earnest. That it should be less typically Dutch than that of Mr. van Zuylen can scarcely be imputed as a shortcoming. The Englishman, Herbert Russell, played with much care by Mr. Edgar Bruce, has undergone such alteration that comparison is not possible. Mrs. Leigh Murray as Neeltje, afterwards the wife of the innkeeper Kwak, was the most thoroughly Dutch figure in the representation, the innkeeper himself being praiseworthy played by M. de Lange, an actor whose only fault was that he drank off successive glasses of "schnapps" so rapidly as to take away the breath of the spectator instead of his own. The veriest drunkard that ever lived would not drink quite so quickly and joylessly as does Kwak, who is not a drunkard at all. The young girl Lise, one of the most attractive characters in the piece, was played by Miss C. Grahame with much tenderness and pathos.

There remains the central character of Anne-Mie. In this Miss Genevieve Ward plays with singular force and breadth of style. Her performance is artistic and powerful, and is such as no other English actress probably could give. It has not, however, the melting and overflowing tenderness of Miss Beeremans, a quality in which that actress stands, so far as our experience extends, pre-eminent. To their unutterable tenderness and tearfulness the scenes between mother and daughter owed their almost magical influence over those to whom the words spoken were incomprehensible. In the absence of these qualities explanation of the fact that a small portion of the audience was moved to annoyance or derision may be found. The Dutch songs and dances were admirably given, and so much of the spirit of the original was caught, that the mind was constantly carried back to that notable performance. In the manner in which the interest of the spectacle was kept alive, and the action generally was informed with life, a complete triumph was obtained.

'The Rivals' has been revived at the Haymarket. In the representation that is given of the play there is much that from the standpoint of modern possibilities is admirable. That a young actor of to-day should show to perfection the beau of the last century would argue a power almost divinator, seeing that no opportunity of studying the part is ever afforded. Mr. Conway must be credited, however, with much gallantry and some distinction as Capt. Absolute. Mr. Kemble presents a good picture of Sir Lucius. The merits of Mr. Clarke's Bob Acres have received full acknowledgment. This character in Mr. Clarke's hands is a masterpiece of drollery. Mr. Howes's Sir Anthony is now a ripe and eminently satisfactory performance, and the Mrs. Malaprop of Mrs. Stirling is perfect. So far as regards the two characters last named proof is afforded how constantly actors ripen into excellence. So far back as the days of the elder Farren modern experience may be held to extend. During that period a dozen actors, commencing with Farren himself, have begun to display ripe powers at a period when in another profession decline of intellectual or physical capacity might be anticipated. Against these not more than three or four men who have sprung into consideration while still young can be shown. In some cases, at least, it is true that the loss of energy which comes with ripening years is responsible for improvement. A man has more than once been known to overdo his art as long as he was able, and time has made an actor of him in his own despite. In 'The Toodles,' which has also been given at the Haymarket, Mr. Clarke repeats his very laughable performance of Toodles.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE reopening of the Princess's Theatre, postponed from last Saturday in consequence of the restoration of the house not being then complete, is fixed for to-night. Mr. Edmund Leathe will play Horatio instead of Mr. Harcourt, whose unfortunate death occurred in consequence of falling through a trap while rehearsing at the Haymarket for the opening performance at the Princess's.

A BURLESQUE of Lord Byron's poem of 'Don Juan' has been produced at the Royalty Theatre, with the title of 'Don Juan, jun.' It is wholly without literary pretensions, but obtains a success on the strength of bustling action and one or two clever performances.

THE revival of 'Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme' of Molière has brought to a conclusion the interesting performances at the Comédie Française in honour of the bicentenary of that institution. M. Thiron was M. Jourdain, and M. Delaunay Cléonte. MM. Got and Coquelin cadet, and Mdlles. Crozette, Reichenberg, and Samary, also took part in the representation.

The drama of 'Delilah,' founded by Mr. James Willing upon Ouida's novel of 'Held in Bondage,' and first produced at the Park Theatre, has now, with a slightly changed cast, been given at the Olympic.

It is rumoured that Miss Harriet Jay, the novelist, is about to make her début as an actress in the Olympic version of her own novel, 'The Queen of Connaught.' She will appear for the first time in London at the Crystal Palace Matinée, on November 17th, and will play the part originally sustained by Miss Ada Cavendish.

To CORRESPONDENTS.—F. D. F.—C. P. S.—H. V. B.—T. E. C.—F. O. E.—received.
J. B.—Too late.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Erratum.—P. 465, col. 3, line 10 from bottom, for "Court-house" read Short-house.

Just published, price 2s.

PHILOSOPHICAL TRANSACTIONS.—The FELLOWS of the ROYAL SOCIETY are hereby informed that the Second Part of the PHILOSOPHICAL TRANSACTIONS, Vol. VII. for the Year 1880, is now published, and ready for delivery on application at the Office of the Society, in Burlington House, daily, between the Hours of Ten and Four. WALTER WHITE, Assistant-Secretary, R.S. Burlington House.

MR. KINGLAKE'S

MYSTERY OF THE INVASION OF THE ORINOA.

This day is published, Vol. VI.

"THE WINTER TROUBLES."

Demy 8vo. with a Map, 12s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

BLACKWOOD'S FOREIGN CLASSIC FOR ENGLISH READERS.

Edited by Mrs. OLIPHANT

This day is published.

Vol. XI.—CERVANTES.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The Series continues.—DANTE, by the Editor.—VOLTAIRE, by Major-General Sir E. B. Hamley K.C.B.—PARCIVAL, by Principal Tulloch.—PETRARCH, by Henry Moore, G.B.—GORTCHIE, by A. Hayward, G.C.—MOLIÈRE, by the Editor and F. Turner, M.A.—MONTAIGNE, by Rev. Canon Collins, M.A.—MAHABHARATA, by Walter B. Dewart.—CALDERON, by E. J. Hasall.—SAINT SIMON, by Gifford W. Collins, M.A.

Philosophy in preparation.—CORNEILLE and RACINE, by Henry M. Trollope.—SHILLER, by James Sims, Author of 'Life of Lessing.'—ROEMER, by Henry Moore, G.B.—LA FONTAINE, by Rev. Canon Collins, M.A.—MADAME DE SEVIGNES and MADAME DE STAHL, by Miss Thackeray.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

A NEW AND IMPROVED EDITION.

This day is published.

A MANUAL OF ZOOLOGY.

FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS.

With a General Introduction on the Principles of Zoology.

By HENRY ALLESTREE NICHOLSON, M.D. D.Sc. Ph.D., &c.,
Professor of Natural History in the University of St. Andrews.

Sixth Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with Quantity of Scientific Terms and Index. Illustrated with 422 Engravings on Wood. Crown 8vo. pp. 686, 14s.

"It is the best manual of Zoology yet published, not merely in England, but in Europe." Full Mail Gazette.
"The best treatise on Zoology in moderate compass that we possess." Lancet.

Just published, by the same Author.

A MANUAL OF PALEONTOLOGY. For the Use of Students. With a General Introduction on the Principles of Paleontology. Second Edition, Revised throughout, and greatly Enlarged. Illustrated with 722 Engravings. 3 vols. 8vo. 42s.

"The most complete and systematic treatise on the subject in the English language. It has not only been thoroughly revised, and to a great extent rewritten, but so much enlarged by the addition of new matter that it may claim to be considered as all but a new and complete new book."—Saturday Review, 25th Sept. 1880.

By the same Author.

TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY. Third Edition. 6s.

INTRODUCTORY TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY. Fourth Edition. 2s.

OUTLINES OF NATURAL HISTORY. Second Edition. 1s. 6d.

ANCIENT LIFE HISTORY OF THE EARTH. 10s. 6d.

ON THE STRUCTURE AND AFFINITIES OF THE "TAULATHE CORALS" OF THE PALEOZOIC PERIOD. Royal 8vo. 21s.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

A DAVIS & FRANCIS INSERT ADVERTISEMENTS in all Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals.

Terms for transmitting business, and List of London Papers, can be had on application to

ADAMS & FRANCIS, 25, Fleet-street, E.C.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, with Maps, Coloured Plates, and numerous very fine Woodcut Illustrations, price 42s.

NEW GUINEA: What I Did and what I Saw. By L. M. ALBERTIN, Officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Economy Member and Gold Medalist of the L.E.O.S. C.M.S.S. &c.

"Long looked for come at last!—Full Mail Gazette.
"A book that has long been looked forward to... If enthusiasm, the ardent spirit of inquiry, resolution, love of nature so intense as to jar with the sportsman's instinct of destruction, courage to wrestle with bodily infirmity, keen observation of the minutest facts, a practical habit of scientific statement, and those qualities of the imagination which guide and support the intellect in pursuing actual definite knowledge, make a perfect traveller, here, surely, is the veritable type." Daily Telegraph.

PEASANT LIFE in the WEST OF ENGLAND. By FRANCIS GEORGE HEATH, Author of 'The British Peasantry,' 'The Farm Paradise,' 'Sylvan Spring,' 'The Farm World,' 'Our Woodland Trees,' 'Rural Scenes,' 'From and Farm,' &c. Crown 8vo. about 200 pages, 10s. 6d. [Ready.]

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 54s. 6d.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART. By
W. CLARK RUSSELL, Author of 'The Wreck of the Grosvenor,' 'John Melkeworth,' &c.

From the 'New York Times' Review of the American Edition.
"The same vivid power of description as was found in the 'Wreck of the Grosvenor' makes this at every page in the book... Very certainly 'A Sailor's Sweetheart,' like the 'Wreck of the Grosvenor,' will be read in many a drawing-room, as it will be devoured in the fore-batch of many a merchantman."

A Second Edition is nearly ready of
JULIUS VERNE'S NEW STORY,
The TRIBULATIONS OF A CHINA-
MAN. Fully illustrated, cloth extra, gilt edges, price 1s. 6d.
"No admirer of Jules Verne's writings will be disappointed with his latest work... The translator has done her part well." Newcastle Examiner.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BRITISH
SCHOOL OF PAINTING. By GEO. H. SHERREDD. Post 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d. [In the press.]

Specialty Suitable for Presentation.

An entirely NEW EDITION de LUXE for Christmas, &c., of
WASHINGTON IRVING'S LITTLE
BRITAIN, together with the SPECTER BRIDGEMAN, and a LEADER OF SHERRY HOLLOW. Illustrated by 120 very fine Engravings on Wood by Mr. J. D. COOPER designed by Mr. Charles O. Murray. Square crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt edges, price 12s. 6d.

CHIEF SERIES OF
ENGLISH PHILOSOPHERS.
Edited by IWM. MCLLEN, M.A., New College, Oxford.

Price and Size: 120 to 200 pages. Blue, crown 8vo. Price, 4s. 6d.
ADAM SMITH, J. FARRER, M.A., Author of "Primitive Manhood and Commerce."

ÉDITION DE LUXE OF

The EVE OF ST. AGNES. By John
KEATS. Illustrated by 16 Engravings by Charles O. Murray. Folia, cloth extra, 21s. [Ready.]

The GREAT MUSICIANS. A
Series of Biographies of the Great Musicians. Edited by F.
HURST.

1. WAGNER. By the Editor. [Nearly ready.]

The STORY OF THE ZULU CAM-PAIGN. By Major ARRE (late King's Dragoon Guards), Author of "The Military Institutions of France," &c. and Captain the Hon.
R. V. W. TATTENBELL (late Lieut. General, killed at Ulundi). Dedicated by special permission to Her Imperial Highness the Empress Dowager.
Price 12s. [Ready.]

The NAVAL BRIGADE IN SOUTH AFRICA. By HENRY F. NORMAN, C.B. R.N. Crown 8vo. cloth
extra, price 10s. 6d.

The PARLIAMENTARY HISTORY
OF THE IRISH LAND QUESTION, from 1820 to 1880, and the Origin and Results of the Ulster Custom. By R. HARRY O'BRIEN, of the Inner Temple Barristers-at-Law. Author of 'The Irish Land Question and English Public Opinion.' Price 6s. [Ready.]

NEW NOVELS.

SARAH de BERANGER. New Novel. By Jean
INGLOW. 3 vols. [Ready.]

A PLOT OF THE PRESENT DAY. By Kate Hope.
3 vols. [Ready.]

BLACK ABBEY. By M. Grommelin, Author of
'Guerres,' &c. 3 vols. [Ready.]

The GRANDIDIERES: a Tale of Berlin. Translated from the German by Captain WM. SAVILE. 3 vols. [Ready.]

The STILLWATER TRAGEDY. By J. A. Aldrich.
1 vol. [Ready.]

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

Crown 8vo. 570 pp. cloth, 12s. 6d.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WORLD,
IN ARTS, AGRICULTURE, COMMERCE,
MANUFACTURES, INSTRUCTION, RAILWAYS, AND PUBLIC WEALTH, SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

By MICHAEL G. MULLHALL, F.R.S.,
Author of 'The English in South America,' 'Handbook to the River
Plate Republics,' 'Handbook to Brazil,' &c.

"This is, in many ways, a remarkable book. It gives statistical information in a highly condensed form respecting every country in the world whence such information can be obtained. The statements given are well arranged and clear. The topics dealt with include almost every subject of material interest to the welfare of mankind. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to name another book which gives so much information of the same description in so small a space."—Review.

Large post 8vo. cloth gilt, 31s. each.

STANFORD'S COMPENDIUM OF
GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL FOR GENERAL READING.
Based on Hildwald's 'Die Erde und ihre Völker.' Translated by A. H. KEANE, B.A. A Series of Volumes descriptive of the Great Divisions of the Globe.

AFRICA. Edited and Extended by KEITH
JOHNSTON, F.R.G.S., late Leader of the Royal Geographical Society's East African Expedition. With 15 Maps, Ethnological
Appendix, and 65 Illustrations.

CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA. Edited and Extended by H. W. HATES, Assistant-Secretary of the Royal Geographical Society. Author of 'The Naturalist on the Amazon.'
With 15 Maps, Ethnological Appendix, and 75 Illustrations.

AUSTRALASIA. Edited and Extended by A. R.
WALLACE, F.R.G.S., Author of 'The Malay Archipelago.' With 20 Maps, Ethnological Appendix, and 55 Illustrations.

"The English reading public may be congratulated on possessing in these volumes a compendium of geography and travel unsurpassed in this or any other language."—Geographical Magazine.

Second Edition, Revised, demy 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, cloth, 14s.

THE GREAT ICE AGE,
AND ITS RELATION TO THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

By JAMES CHILDE, LL.D. F.R.S., &c.
Of H.M.'s Geological Survey of Scotland.

"The book shows everywhere the marks of acute observation, wide research and sound reasoning. It presents in a readable form the chief features of the Great Ice Age, and discusses them very amply from three points of view:—the geological, the physical, and the human.
It is a most distinct and most enduring work."—Quarterly Review.

Post 8vo. cloth, with 40 Illustrations and Maps, 1s.

GEOGRAPHY FOR LITTLE CHILDREN.

By ANTONIA ZIMMERN.

"The language is simple, the type large and clear, while the pages are enlivened by some good maps and many illustrations. These, we are sure, cannot fail to prove very valuable to all such little folk as the 'Daisy,' 'Fannie,' and 'Toe-Tee,' to whom this little volume is dedicated." Saturday Review.

"In a very simple and interesting way attempts to show the use of a map, and such some of the elementary points of physical geography.
Its numerous attractive and quite original illustrations are an important feature."—Nature.

Second Edition, crown 8vo. with 77 Illustrations, cloth, 7s. 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY OF NATURAL
SCIENCE,

AND OF THE PROGRESS OF DISCOVERY FROM THE TIME OF THE GREEKS TO THE PRESENT DAY.

For the Use of Schools and Young Persons.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY,
Author of 'The Fairchild of Science.' Bonneted Tables for the Use of Junior Students.

"Miss Buckley supplies to the present volume a gap in our educational literature. Guides to literature abound, guides to science, similar in purpose and character to Miss Buckley's history, are unknown. The writer's plan therefore is original, and her execution of the plan is altogether admirable. She has had a long training in science, and these are signs on every page of this volume of the careful and conscientious manner in which she has performed her task."—Full Mail Gazette.

"It is an admirable book, written with a fulsome and accuracy which are rarely to be found in compendiums of this sort. Any one who reads carefully to the end will have got a fair general notion of the vastness of physical science, and the manner of pursuing more completely any special portion of it, which may be desired. It is an excellent book for young people, and one not to be despised by their elders."—Guardian.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE FRENCH GRAMMAR.

For the Use of Students Preparing for the Local and other Examinations.

By F. LAURENT, B.L.,
Of the University of Paris, French Teacher at the Westminster and Lichfield Grammar Schools.

"It may safely be said that any student who can answer all these questions for himself, without reference to the key at the end of the book, has fully mastered all the elementary part of the French language, and may forthwith retire himself to his own room to study in this subject for a 'Local' without fear of a disastrous result."—Examiner.

London:

EDWARD STANFORD, 54, Charing Cross, S.W.

THE INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

AMOS (SHELDON).

The SCIENCE of LAW. Fourth Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

BAGEHOT (WALTER).

PHYSICS and POLITICS; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of Natural Selection and Inheritance to Political Society. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s.

BAIN (ALEXANDER), LL.D.

EDUCATION as a SCIENCE. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

BAIN (ALEXANDER), LL.D.

MIND and BODY; the Theories of their Relation. With 4 Illustrations. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s.

BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON), M.D.

The BRAIN as an ORGAN of MIND.
With 184 Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

BERNSTEIN (Professor JULIUS).

The FIVE SENSES of MAN. 91 Woodcuts.
Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

BLASERNA (Professor PIETRO).

The THEORY of SOUND in its RELATION to MUSIC. With numerous Illustrations. Second Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

COOKE (Professor JOSIAH P.), Jun.

The NEW CHEMISTRY. 31 Illustrations.
Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

COOKE (M. C.), LL.D.

FUNGI: their Nature, Influences, and Uses.
Edited by the Rev. M. J. BERKELEY, F.L.S. 109 Illustrations.
Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

DRAPER (JOHN WILLIAM), M.D.

HISTORY of the CONFLICT BETWEEN RELIGION and SCIENCE. Fourteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

HUXLEY (Professor T. H.).

The CRAYFISH: an Introduction to the Study of Zoology. With 28 Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown
8vo. cloth, price 5s.

JEVONS (W. STANLEY), F.R.S.

MONEY and the MECHANISM of EX-CHANGE. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

LOCKYER (J. NORMAN), F.R.S.

STUDIES in SPECTRUM ANALYSIS.
With 6 Photographic Illustrations of Spectra, and numerous Engravings on Wood. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s. 6d.

LOMMEL (Professor EUGENE).

The NATURE of LIGHT, with a General
Account of Physical Objects. 188 Illustrations. Third Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

MAREY (Professor E. J.).

ANIMAL MECHANISM. 117 Illustrations.
Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

MAUDSLEY (HENRY), M.D.

RESPONSIBILITY in MENTAL DISEASE. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

PETTIGREW (J. B.), M.D.

ANIMAL LOCOMOTION; or, Walking,
Swimming, and Flying. 130 Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown
8vo. cloth, price 5s.

QUATREFAGES (Professor A. de).

The HUMAN SPECIES. Second Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

ROOD (Professor OGDEN N.).

MODERN CHROMATICS. With Applications to Art and Industry. With 130 Original Illustrations. Crown
8vo. cloth, price 5s.

SCHMIDT (Professor OSCAR).

The DOCTRINE of DESCENT and DAR-
WINISM. 26 Woodcuts. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

SCHÜTZENBERGER (Professor F.).

ON FERMENTATION. 28 Illustrations.
Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

SMITH (EDWARD), M.D.

FOODS. 156 Illustrations. Sixth Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

SPENCER (HERBERT).

The STUDY of SOCIOLOGY. Eighth
Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

STEWART BALFOUR, LL.D.

The CONSERVATION of ENERGY; being an Elementary Treatise on Energy and its Laws. 14 Engravings.
Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

THURSTON (Professor E. H.).

A HISTORY of the GROWTH of the STEAM ENGINE. With 162 Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown
8vo. cloth, price 5s. 6d.

TYNDALL (JOHN), LL.D.

FORMS of WATER: a Familiar Exposition of the Origin and Phenomena of Glaciers. With 26 Illustrations.
Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

VAN BENEDEN (M.).

ANIMAL PARASITES and MESSMATES.
88 Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

VOGEL (HERMANN), Ph.D.

The CHEMICAL EFFECTS of LIGHT and PHOTOGRAPHY. 100 Illustrations. Third Edition, thoroughly
Revised. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

WHITNEY (Professor W. DWIGHT).

The LIFE and GROWTH of LANGUAGE.
Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

WURTE (Professor A.).

The ATOMIC THEORY. Translated by
R. CLEMINSHAW, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

A REMAINDER LIST OF STANDARD AND ILLUSTRATED WORKS
OFFERED AT LESS THAN HALF THE ORIGINAL PUBLISHED PRICES BY BICKERS & SON.

* All guaranteed to be new and perfect.

ADAM'S SMALLER BRITISH BIRDS. With Descriptions of their Nests, Eggs, &c. 24 Coloured Plates, royal 8vo. cloth, gilt edges (pub. 15s.) ..	2. 6. 6.
AMERICA. A Journey Across South America, from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. By PAUL MARCOY. Over 600 Engravings on Wood. 4 vols. folio, large paper copy. cloth gilt (pub. 42s.) ..	2 10 0
BIRDS. Drawn from Nature by Mrs. HUGH BLACKBURN. 45 Plates, copied from Stone on Fine Paper, Engraved by the Artist, folio cloth (pub. 42s.) ..	0 18 6
CADORE, or, TITIAN'S Country. By JOSHUA GILBERT, one of the Authors of 'The Dolomite Mountains.' Ac. With Map, Illustrative Drawings, and Woodcuts, large 8vo. cloth (pub. 31s. 6d.) ..	0 17 6
CERAMIC ART OF GREAT BRITAIN, from Prehistoric Times down to the Present Day. By LEWIS WELLYN JEWITT. Nearly 2,000 Illustrations, 2 vols. large 8vo. (pub. 21s. 6d.) ..	1 6 0
CHURTON and JONES'S NEW TESTAMENT. Plain Explanatory Comment, with Views from Sketches and Photos. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, gilt top (pub. 30s.) ..	0 6 0
CLICHÉ CAMÉES: Portraits of the Day. With Illustrations, medium 8vo. (pub. 15s.) ..	0 4 0
EDWARDS (AMELIA R.) UNTHRODDEN PEAKS and UN-REMARKED VALLEYS: a Midsummer Ramble in the Dolomites. 37 Illustrations and Map, etc. cloth (pub. 21s.) ..	0 7 6
FIGURES—RIFLES and BIRDS. Best Library Edition. 307 Illustrations, demy 8vo. cloth (pub. 14s.) ..	0 5 0
FRESHFIELD'S (DOUGLAS W.) TRAVELS in the CENTRAL CAUCASUS and HASSAN. With Maps and Illustrations, demy 8vo. cloth (pub. 34s.) ..	0 7 0
GILL and GANDY'S POMPEII, or, the Topography, Edifices, and Ornaments of Pompeii, with upwards of 100 Line Engravings by Goodall, Cook, Heath, Fry, &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, extra gilt (pub. 18s.) ..	0 10 0
HINCHCLIFF'S OVER the SEA: a Narrative of Wanderings Round the World. 14 Full-Page Illustrations, engraved on Wood, large 8vo. cloth (pub. 21s.) ..	0 7 6
HEAD'S (Sir F.) BURLESQUES from the SKUNKY of NASSAU. Post 8vo. (pub. 1s. 6d.) ..	0 3 0
HOGARTH'S WORKS. 150 Permanent Reproductions from very fine Impressions of the Original Engravings, with Essay by Charles Lamb. 2 vols. Imperial 4to. (pub. 34s.) ..	2 12 6
KORATH OPERA. Curs. H. H. MILMAN. 100 Illustrations, crown 8vo. cloth (pub. 1s. 6d.) ..	0 3 6
INDIA and its NATIVE PRINCIPLES. Travels in Central India and in the Presidency of Bombay and General. By LOUIS ROUSSELET. 216 Illustrations and 6 Maps, folio, cloth gilt, (pub. 31s.) ..	1 11 6
JACQUEMART'S HISTORY of the CERAMIC ART. Translated by Mrs. F. LALISSE. Numerous Engravings, royal 8vo. cloth extra (pub. 24s.) ..	0 12 0
MAREN'S LECTURES on the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. 8vo. (pub. 15s.) ..	0 6 0
MASTERPIECES of FLEMISH ART. 24 Photographs, with Memoirs of the Artists by Mrs. HEATON. 4to. cloth gilt, (pub. 42s.) ..	0 10 0
MAYHEW'S ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR. 400 Illustrations, 8vo. (pub. 15s. 6d.) ..	0 6 0
MAYHEW'S ILLUSTRATED HORSE MANAGEMENT. Edited by Lupton. 400 Illustrations, 8vo. (pub. 15s.) ..	0 6 6
MAYHEW'S GERMAN LIFE and MANNERS. Crown 8vo. (pub. 7s.) ..	0 2 6
MORAL EMBLEMS of all AGES and NATIONS. By CATS and FALLIER. Beautifully Illustrated by John Leighton, F.R.S. 4to. (pub. 31s. 6d.) ..	1 1 0
MARJOUX'S NOTES and SKETCHES of an ARCHITECT in the NORTH-WEST of EUROPE. 214 Illustrations, 8vo. cloth extra (pub. 16s.) ..	0 7 6
PLANCHÉ'S EXTRAVAGANZAS, 1827-71. Twelvemonth Edition. 5 vols. 8vo. (pub. 21s. 12s. 6d.) ..	1 4 0
READER'S (WINWOOD) AFRICAN SKETCH-BOOK. Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. (pub. 12s. 4s.) ..	0 7 6
REYNOLDS (Sir JOSHUA) as a PORTRAIT PAINTER. Illustrated by a series of Portraits of Distinguished Boutlers of the Court of George III. Reproduced by the Autotype Process from proof impressions of the celebrated Engravings. Folio, half-morocco, (pub. 51s. 6s.) ..	1 10 0
ROYAL ACADEMY ALBUM (The). 48 Photo Prints from Works of Art in the Exhibition of 1876. Folio, in Portfolio (pub. 6s. 6s.) ..	1 6 0
SALA'S (GEO. AUGUSTUS) PARIS HERESELF AGAIN, 1876-78. 40 Illustrations, 2 vols. 8vo. (pub. 24s.) ..	0 12 6
SANDERS'S Dr. NICOLAS, RISE and GROWTH of the ANGLICAN SCHISM. Translated by LEWIS. 8vo. (pub. 14s.) ..	0 4 6
SHAKESPEARE SCENES and CHARACTERS. A Series of Illustrations beautifully engraved on Steel, from Designs by eminent German Artists, with Explanatory Text by Prof. DOWNEY. 4to. (pub. 12s. 6d.) ..	1 1 0
STREET LIFE in LONDON DESCRIBED and ILLUSTRATED. With 30 Permanent Photographs, etc. cloth gilt (pub. 25s.) ..	0 2 0
SWITZERLAND its MOUNTAINS and VALLEYS. Described by WOLDBMAR BADEN With 418 Illustrations by eminent German Artists, royal 4to. cloth, super-elegant (pub. 42s.) ..	1 1 0
STONDS RECORDS of the ROCKS. Notes on the Geology and Antiquities of North and South Wales, &c. Demy, crown 8vo. (pub. 12s.) ..	0 2 6
THOMPSON'S (STEPHEN) THE OLD MASTERS. 24 Autotype Reproductions of Prints in the British Museum, with Biographical Notes. Folio (pub. 21s. 2s.) ..	1 10 0
THOMPSON'S STRAITS of MALACCA, INDO-CHINA, and CHINA. Map and 60 Wood Engravings, 8vo. cloth extra (pub. 21s.) ..	0 7 6
TYROL and the TYROLESE. The People and the Land in their Social, Sporting, and Mountaineering Aspects. By W. BAILEY GIBBARD. Numerous Illustrations on Wood, crown 8vo. (pub. 14s.) ..	0 6 0
VIOLET-LE-DUC'S ANNALES of a FORTRESS. Translated by H. KENALL. Coloured and other Illustrations, 8vo. (pub. 15s.) ..	0 6 0
VIOLET-LE-DUC'S HABITATIONS of MAN. Translated by H. KENALL. Illustrations, 8vo. (pub. 15s.) ..	0 6 0
VIOLET-LE-DUC'S MONT BLANC. Translated by BUCKNALL. 120 Illustrations, 8vo. (pub. 14s.) ..	0 6 0
WEINHOFF'S INTRODUCTION to EXPERIMENTAL PHYSICS. THEORETICAL and PRACTICAL. Coloured Plates and over 600 Woodcuts, 8vo. (pub. 21s. 6d.) ..	0 7 6

BICKERS & SON, 1, Leicester-square, W.C.

J. C. NIMMO & BAIN'S NEW BOOKS.
THE MODERN FOREIGN LIBRARY.

QUISISANA.

From the German of F. SPIELHAGEN. By H. E. GOLDSCHMITZ, Fettes College.

From the TIMES.

"It seems to us that Spielhagen improves in his art, and 'Quisisana' is unquestionably one of the most finished and pathetic of his productions.....It is singularly compact; the characters group themselves artistically round one grand central figure; and all the ideas converge toward the dominating conception.....Qui si sana—'Here you have your cure'—is the name of a little inn that stands in the shade of the orange groves on the sunny cliffs of Capri. But though we fancy that we are to have a Southern tale, set off by Italian scenery, we are speedily undeceived. We hear of the hostelry in question at the opening of the story, and it figures again in the closing chapter, poetically rather than in real stone and stucco. The scenes take place in the romantic environs of a country town in the Thuringian forest, and the plot, like the people, with a single exception, is strongly and essentially German. It deals chiefly with the passions and the deeper feelings, yet there is vigorous delineation of subordinate characters, with vivid sketches of life and manners, and some slight infusion of more sensational elements."

Also ready,

The COUNT of TALAVERA. From the Dutch of J. van Lennep. By A. ARNOLD.

The CHASE: a Tale of the Southern States. From the French of J. LERMINA. By A. SERGEANT.

A SHEEP in WOLF'S CLOTHING. From the French of C. DEBANS. By EVELYN JERREOLD.

The SERGEANT'S LEGACY. From the French of E. Berthet. By GILBERT VENABLES.

The RIVAL DOCTORS. From the French of A. Lapointe. By HENRI VAN LAUN.

Each, French paper, 2s. 6d.; cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW EDITIONS,

ILLUSTRATED WITH ETCHINGS, OF THE OLD SPANISH ROMANCES

Cloth, rough edges, per volume, 7s. 6d.; parchment boards, do., 7s. 6d.

The HISTORY of DON QUIXOTE DE LA MANCHA. Translated from the Spanish of Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, by MOTTEUX. With copious Notes (including the Spanish Ballads), and an Essay on the Life and Writings of Cervantes, by JOHN G. LOCKHART. Preceded by a short Notice of the Life and Works of Peter Anthony Motteux, by HENRI VAN LAUN. Illustrated with 16 original Etchings by R. de Los Rios. 4 vols. crown 8vo.

LAZARILLO DE TORMES. By Don Diego MENDOZA. Translated by THOMAS ROSCOE. And GUZMAN D'ALFARACHE. By MATEO ALEMAN, Translated by BRADY. Illustrated with 8 original Etchings by R. de Los Rios. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

"There are very few books which have had so great an influence on English literature: an effect indirect, it is true, but not the less distinct for that reason. The effect of the 'Lazarillo' was, as we have already said, to form a new school of fiction. Cervantes was laughing out of court the unreality of the old romances, and showing the practical anachronism involved in talking high chivalry in a world which had become obstinately prosaic; while the example of the Lazarillo was demonstrating how needless it was to go in search of outlandish knights and impossible shepherds, when there were far more entertaining heroes to be picked up in any market-place in Spain. There is no single production of any Spanish writer except Cervantes marked with the same originality, invention, and truth to nature."

Cornhill Magazine.

The ADVENTURES of GIL BLAS of SANTILLANE. Translated from the French of Le Sage, by TOBIAS SMOLLETT. New Edition, carefully Revised. Illustrated with 12 original Etchings by R. de Los Rios. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

The BACHELOR of SALAMANCA. By Le Sage. Translated from the French by JAMES TOWNSEND. Illustrated with 4 original Etchings by R. de Los Rios. Crown 8vo.

ASMODEUS. By Le Sage. Translated from the French. Illustrated with 8 original Etchings by R. de Los Rios. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

14, KING WILLIAM-STREET, STRAND, W.C.

MISS BRADDON'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

ON NOVEMBER 10, PRICE ONE SHILLING,
Illustrated with 8 Whole-Page and other Engravings.

THE MISLETOE BOUGH.

THE CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.

By the AUTHOR of 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' 'VIXEN,' &c.

"The New Annual will be the best in Literary and Artistic quality, and the largest in quantity, of any similar work hitherto produced."

MISS BRADDON'S ILLUSTRATED ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Superbly Illustrated by Gustave Doré and other Artists, and thoroughly Revised by the Author of 'Lady Audley's Secret,' &c., ornamental cover, 3s. 6d. cloth gilt, bevelled edges.

1. ALADDIN; or, the Wonderful Lamp.
2. SINDBAD the SAILOR; or, the Old Man of the Sea.
3. ALI BABA; or, the Forty Thieves.

N.B.—The above Work is the most gorgeous and the cheapest Gift-Book ever produced.

NEW EDITIONS OF MR. G. A. SALA'S GREAT WORK ON LONDON.

Price 2s. 6d.; cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.; Illustrated with 47 Whole-Page Engravings, from designs by M^cConnell, forming the most attractive description of the hours of the Day and Night in London ever published, and the cheapest.

TWICE ROUND THE CLOCK.

By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

Opinion of the DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"As we go with Mr Sala 'Twice Round the Clock,' and as hour by hour he, Asmodeus-like, exposes the inner life of this bewildering city, we are more than instructed, we are also entertained. No more genial and chatty guide did ever sightseer have. Philosopher and friend is he, as well as guide—a laughing philosopher often, a weeping one sometimes, a friend always, as he is a friend who points a moral even when adorning a tale. How craftily as well as pleasantly he talks. Does he take us to Billingsgate, he diverts our attention from strong smells and stronger language by quoting Wordsworth, making incidental reference to Voltaire, Racine, and Madame de Sévigné, and an excursion to Lodovico. Do we watch with him in Covent Garden Market, he crowds the historic purlieus with all the men who have made them famous. In the Mall he conjures up for us an interminable procession of majesties and dignities who once knew that spot. In Regent-street he throws a fierce light upon type after type of humanity, shabby and spruce, false and true; and at a charity dinner, amid turtle soup and Macedonian jellies, he reminds us of the Pot of Ointment which was put to a better use than though it had been sold for an hundred pence and given to the poor. But, indeed, everywhere and always, Mr Sala is equal to the occasion, and as we read on we marvel more at the versatility he displays. Facts are crowded upon facts, in sometimes reckless profusion, yet so rarely is a slip made that when our author speaks of Mozart as dying at Salzburg instead of Vienna our faith in the master's biographers receives a shock. No more than this need be said. On all hands 'Twice Round the Clock' will meet with a hearty welcome, for none who read its teeming pages can do so without adding vastly to their knowledge, or without benefiting both mind and feeling."

Vide Daily Telegraph, August 5, 1879.

CHEAP EDITION OF MISS BRADDON'S LATEST NOVEL.

Price 2s.; cloth, 3s. 6d.; postage, 4d.

THE STORY OF BARBARA:

HER SPLENDID MISERY AND HER GILDED CAGE.

By the AUTHOR of 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

JUST AS I AM.

By Miss Braddon.

THE NEW NOVEL BY FREDERICK TALBOT.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE:

A NOVEL.

By FREDERICK TALBOT,
Author of 'Sophie Crewe,' &c.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols.

JUST AS I AM:

THE NEW NOVEL.

AUTHOR OF 'LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET,' &c.

Opinion of the WORLD.

"'Just As I Am,' Miss Braddon's latest novel, is as fresh, as wholesome, as enthralling, as amusing, as any of the stories with which, for a series of years, she has proved her title as queen of the circulating library; and the thought and pathos which mark her more recent fictions in no way interfere with the 'revel' and 'go' which originally made her reputation. 'Just As I Am' is an excellent example of the author."—Vide World, Oct. 18.

Opinion of the SPECTATOR.

"'The Scarpsdale Peerage' is a creditably constructed and well-written story of the romantic kind, very much to be preferred to the doubtful morals and sickly sentiment of much that we are condemned to read."—Vide Spectator, Oct. 23.

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE.

By Mr. F. Talbot.

London: J. & R. MAXWELL, Publishers, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

MR. DAVID BOGUE'S PUBLICATIONS.

BRITISH PAINTERS of the SEVENTEENTH CENTURY. Illustrated with 80 Examples of the Work of L. Alma-Tadema, R.A., M. J. Foster, R.A., P. R. Morris, A.R.A., Sir J. N. Pauson, R.A., Mr. R. Landseer, R.A., W. F. Frith, R.A., J. M. W. Turner, R.A., J. Constable, R.A., W. Mulready, R.A., W. E. Bay, R.A., Sir J. Gilbert, R.A., David Cox, H. Stacy Marks, R.A., F. Holl A.R.A., G. H. Boughton, A.R.A., F. Waller, A.R.A., &c. Demy 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth gilt, 5s.

LITTLE WOMEN; or, Meg, Jo,

Beth, and Amy. By LOUISE M. ALCOTT. Illustrated with 200 New and Original Woodcuts, and a Portrait of the Author. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 15s. [In November.]

LIKENESS OF CHRIST, The. Being an Enquiry into the verisimilitude of the received Likeness of our Blessed Lord. By THOMAS NEAPHY. Edited by WYKE BAYLISS, F.R.S. Illustrated with 12 Photographs Coloured by Hand, and 80 Engravings on Wood from Original Frescoes, Mosaic, Paintings, and other Works of Art of the Best Six Centuries. Handsomely bound in cloth gilt, 4s. 6d.

SWORD and SURPLICE; or, Thirty

Years' Reminiscences of the Army and the Church. By the Rev. M. J. WALKER, M.A. With Frontispiece, demy 8vo. 15s.

MANUAL of the INFUSORIA. Including a Description of the Flagellata, Ciliata, and Testiculiferous Protozoa, British and Foreign, and an Account of the Organization and Affinities of the Sponges. By W. RAVILLI KENT F.R.S., F.R.S. F.R.M.S., formerly Assistant in the Nat. Hist. Department of the British Museum. To be completed in Six Monthly Parts, 10s. 6d. each. Parts I. and II. now ready.

UNCONSCIOUS MEMORY; a Comparison between the Theory of Dr Ewald Hering of Prague, and the Philosophy of the Unconscious of Dr Edward von Hartmann. With Translations from these Authors, and Preliminary Chapter bearing on 'Life and Habit' and 'Evolution, Old and New.' By SAMUEL BUTLER. Author of 'Erewhon,' 'Life and Habit,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 11s.

BRITISH WILD FLOWERS by

NATURAL ANALYSIS. Being a Complete Series of Illustrations of their Natural Orders and Genera, Analytically Arranged. By FREDERICK A. MESSER. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

PHYSIOLOGICAL CHEMISTRY.—

DEMONSTRATIONS IN PHYSIOLOGICAL and PATHOLOGICAL CHEMISTRY. Arranged to meet the requirements for the Practical Examination in these Subjects at the Royal College of Physicians and Colleges of Surgeons. By CHARLES LUNNEY BAILEY, M.A., M.D. Chair of F.R.C.P. Lond., late Teacher of Physiological Chemistry, St. George's Hospital, &c. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 8s.

VOICE and SPEECH, the PHYSIO-

LOGICAL and PATHOLOGICAL RELATIONS of. By J. S. FOTHERGILL, M.D. F.R.C.P. Senior Physician, St. James's Hospital, &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

BIRDS, FISHES, and CETACEA commonly frequenting Belfast Lough. By ROBERT LLOYD PATTERSON, Vice-President of the Belfast Natural History Society, &c. With a Map and Tables, demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"This is a very interesting book, in which the naturalist and the sportsman will find their tastes, and which the reader who has no particular liking except for sights of nature will read with pleasure."—Spectator.

HOME NURSING, and HOW to HELP in CASES OF ACCIDENT. By SAMUEL BENTON, L.R.C.P. M.B.C.S. Examiner to the St. John's Ambulance Association, &c. Illustrated with 10 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

LONDON CHARITIES, 1880-1881,

ROYAL GUIDE to. Showing in Alphabetical Order their Name, Date of Foundation, Address, Objects, Annual Income, Chief Officers, &c. By HERBERT FRY. Seventeenth Annual Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

NATURE'S BYE-PATHS: a Series of Recreative Papers in Natural History. By J. E. TAYLOR, F.L.S. F.G.S., Editor of Science Gossip. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

HOLIDAYS in HOME COUNTIES.

By EDWARD WALFORD, M.A. Uniform with 'Pleasant Days in Pleasant Places.' With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 5s.

OUR ACTORS and ACTRESSES:

Biographical Sketches of all the Principal Living Actors and Actresses of the British Stage. By CHARLES B. PARSON. New, Enlarged, and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MUSIC and MORALS. By the Rev.

H. B. HAWES, M.A. Ninth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

BYRON BIRTHDAY BOOK, The.

Compiled and Edited by JAMES BURROWS. Second Edition. 16mo. maroon, gilt edges, 5s. 6d.

LETTERS from a CAT. Published by her Mistress, for the Benefit of all Cats and the Amusement of Little Children. Illustrated with numerous Woodcuts. Second Thousand. Small 4to. cloth, gilt edges, 4s.

London: DAVID BOGUE, 3, St. Martin's-place, W.C.

Oblong 6to. bound, post free, 6s.

ARTISTIC CONSERVATORIES.—About FORTY PHOTO-LITHOGRAPHS and LETTER-PRESS, from Designs by R. W. GODWIN F.R.S., and MAURICE B. ADAMS, on Manganese & Co.'s Patent System of Conservation.

R. T. Balfour, 15, High Holborn.

Fourth Edition, post free, 1s.

DR. WATTS on ASTHMA: a Treatise on the only successful Method of Curing this Disease. By ROBERT G. WATTS, M.D. F.R.S. F.C.S., &c., 5, St. Luke's-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.
London: C. Mitchell & Co. Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

Enlarged Edition, pp. 300, bound, 1s.; or 14 stamps.

HOMOEOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR.
By DR. RICHARD and WASHINGTON KEPE.
Describes fully and Prescribes for a Hundred Diseases.

London: James Nisps & Co. 48, Threadneedle-street, and 179, Piccadilly.

BAGSTER'S BIBLES.

The FAC-SIMILE POLYGLOT SERIES comprise Bibles in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, German, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, and English, which can be interspersed two languages together in any desired combination. Catalogues free by post.

3 Bagster & Sons, 15, Paternoster-row, London.

EVERY DAY.

"It tantalises us."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"In it, throughout, a touch of nature, and a catholic taste for what is good."—Fen.
"Fascinating, and by no means dull."—Chart Journal.

Cloth, 2s.; boards, 1s. 6d.

Hamington & Co. 122, New Bond-street, W.

Just published, crown 8vo. price 2s.

THE FIRST QUARTO EDITION OF 'HAMLET,' 1608.

TWO ESSAYS.

To which the HARNESSE PRIZE was awarded, 1899.

1. By C. H. HERFORD, B.A., Trinity College, Cambridge.

2. By W. B. WIDGERY, B.A., St. John's College, Cambridge.

(The above were declared equal in merit).

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

SPRUNGER'S HISTORICAL ATLAS.

Just completed, the THIRD EDITION, price 4. 14s. 6d. half-bound.

HISTORICAL ATLAS of the MIDDLE AGES and MODERN TIMES.

By K. v. SPRUNGER.

THIRD EDITION, ENTIRELY RE-ENGRAVED.

Edited by Dr. T. MENKE.

50 Coloured Maps, containing also 578 Detail Maps and Plans in their margins, half-bound, 4. 14s. 6d.

Gotha: Justus Perthes. London and Edinburgh: Williams & Norgate, D. Nutt, Dulau & Co.

WILL BE PUBLISHED NOVEMBER 25,

In 2 handsome vols. demy 8vo. price 2s., with a Portrait by Paul Hagen, and other Illustrations.

THE LIFE of Sir BOWLAND HILL, K.C.B.

D.C.L. F.R.S. F.R.A.S., &c.

HISTORY of PENNY POSTAGE.

By Sir ROWLAND HILL,

AND HIS SONS.

GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L.,

Author of 'Dr Johnson: his Friends and his Critics,' &c.

London: Theo. De La Rue & Co.

Ready in One Volume, handsomely bound and extra gilt, price 3s.

THE THIRD and COMPLETELY REVISED EDITION of THE STORY of the DIAMOND NECKLACE, Told in Detail for the First Time

By HENRY VIETZELLY

Illustrated with an exact Representation of the Diamond Necklace, from a Contemporary Drawing, and a Portrait of the Comtesse de La Motte, Regent on Basel.

Some Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Mr. Vietzelly's tale has all the interest of a romance which is too strange not to be true. His summing up of the evidence both negative and positive, which accumulates Marie Antoinette from any complicity whatever with the scandalous intrigue in which she was represented as bearing a part, is admirable."—Saturday Review.

We can without fear of contradiction describe Mr. Henry Vietzelly's 'Story of the Diamond Necklace' as a book of thrilling interest. He has not only executed his task with skill and faithfulness, but also with tact and delicacy."—Standard.

"Let us say at once that Mr. Vietzelly has performed his work admirably. He has diligently searched, patiently studied and collaborated with rare discrimination all the contemporary evidence bearing in any degree on the subject of the greatest lie of the eighteenth century. Mr. Vietzelly's two volumes are absorbing in their interest, and after a perusal of them the best novels are dull."—Daily Telegraph.

Vietzelly & Co. 10, Southampton-street Strand.

THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN BANKING COMPANY (Limited).

CAPITAL PAID UP, 1,000,000 £. RESERVE FUND, 100,000 £.

HEAD OFFICE, 21, CLEMENTS-LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Branches: Alexandria, Cairo, and Laraca (Cyprus).

This Bank transacts every description of Banking Business in Egypt, issues Letters of Credit, and affords other facilities to Travellers proceeding to Egypt and the Nile.

21 Clements-lane, E.C. O. F. O. A. Secretary.

EAGLE INSURANCE COMPANY,

79, FLEET-MALL.

For LIVES ONLY. ESTABLISHED 1807.

Accumulated Funds £3,043,343

Also a Subscribed Capital of more than £1,000,000

Reports, Prospectuses and Forms may be had at the Office, or from any of the Company's Agents, or from

GEORGE HUMPHREYS, Actuary and Secretary.

COLONIAL, INDIAN, and FOREIGN ASSURANCE.

The SCOTCH IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY has made important reductions in the Premiums chargeable for Foreign Residence. Immediate reduction to Home Rates for those having for Europe or other temperate climates.

Office: Glasgow, 151, Great George-street.

London: 7, King William-street, E.C.

M. AMMON SMITH, Secretary and Actuary.

NEW WORK BY G. O. TREVELYAN, M.P.

Now ready, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 18s. cloth,

THE EARLY HISTORY OF CHARLES JAMES FOX.

By GEORGE OTTO TREVELYAN, M.P.

Author of 'The Life and Letters of 'Lord Macaulay.'

London: LONGMANS & Co.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SOUTH AMERICA. By Antonio Gallenga. 1 vol. demy 8vo. [This day.]
with a Map.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS of INDIA. By George G. M. BIRDWOOD, C.S.I. With Map and 174 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 14s.

NEW NOVEL BY HAWLEY SMART.

SOCIAL SINNERS. By Hawley Smart. 3 vols. crown 8vo. [This day.]

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ABEL DRAKE'S WIFE.'

The TWO DREAMERS. By John Saunders. 3 vols. [This day.]

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE PARSON O' DUMFORD.'

The CLERK of PORTWICK. By George Manville Fenn. [This day.]
3 vols.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, 193, Piccadilly.

MACNIVEN & WALLACE, EDINBURGH.

PUBLICATIONS.

THE HOUSEHOLD LIBRARY OF EXPOSITION.

ISAAC, JACOB, and JOSEPH. By Marcus Dods, D.D., Author of 'Israel's Iron Age.' Price 2s. 6d. [Just published.]

The LIFE of DAVID, as REFLECTED in his PSALMS. By ALEXANDER MACLAREN, D.D. Fourth Thousand. Price 3s. 6d.

"Real gems of exposition are to be found in this slight work which might be sought in vain for in more ponderous tomes. We have nothing but admiration for this valuable little reprint."—Expositor.

"A charming volume for devotional reading."—British Quarterly.

"The very best results of Biblical study."—Westminster Magazine.

ADAM, NOAH, and ABRAHAM: Readings in the Book of GENESIS. By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D. Price 3s. 6d.

"The more of such books the better. Dr. Parker is always sparkling and fresh. Sketches of life and character strikingly drawn by a vigorous hand."—C. H. BURTON, in Sword and Trowel.

CABINET OF BIOGRAPHY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.; gilt edges, 3s.

GREAT ORATORS: Burke, Pitt, Sheridan, Fox. By Henry J. NICOLL, Author of 'Great Scholars.' [Just published.]

GREAT SCHOLARS: Buchanan, Bently, Porson, Parr. By H. J. NICOLL.

"Decidedly the best of the useful series of short popular biographies."—Academy.

GREAT NOVELISTS: Scott, Thackeray, Dickens, Lytton.

"Mr. Watt's volume is on the whole carefully done, and likely, we should think, to be of interest and service."—Academy.

MASTERS in HISTORY: Gibbon, Grote, Macaulay, Motley.
By the Rev. P. ANTON DYSART.

"Displays a thorough mastery of the subject and considerable facility of appreciation."—Scotsman.

Edinburgh: MACNIVEN & WALLACE.

This day is published, crown 8vo. 2s.

SKETCHES OF ARMY LIFE IN RUSSIA.

By F. V. GREENE,

Lieutenant of Engineers, U.S. Army; late Military Attaché to the U.S. Legation in St. Petersburg; and Author of 'The Russian Army and its Campaigns in Turkey, 1877-8.'

London: WM. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place, S.W.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ST. OLAVE'S'

Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.

DIMPLETHORPE.

By the AUTHOR OF 'ST. OLAVE'S,' &c.

Also, just published, in 3 vols.

STRICTLY TIED UP.

A NOVEL.

"'Strictly Tied Up' is entertaining. It is in every sense a novel conceived in a light and happy manner. The action of the story is well proportioned, and worked out in all its complications with much care and skill."—Athenæum.
"This novel may be described as a comedy of life and character, and in the changing society to which we are introduced the author shows abundant knowledge of the world. There is humour as well as excitement in the volumes, and not a few of the descriptions of people and scenery are exceedingly graphic and piquant."—Saturday Review.

HURST & BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NOW READY.

In 1 vol. large 8to. handsomely bound in cloth, gilt edges, price Two Guineas.

SWITZERLAND:

ITS SCENERY AND ITS PEOPLE

PICTORIALLY REPRESENTED BY EMINENT SWISS AND GERMAN ARTISTS.

With Historical and Descriptive Text, based on the German of Dr. GSELL-FELS.

Illustrated by above 300 Engravings printed in the Text, and 60 Full-Page Pictures, 16 of which are in Tint.

London: BLACKIE & SONS, 49 and 50, Old Bailey.

Price ONE SHILLING, ready on the 12th.

WARNE'S ILLUSTRATED INTERNATIONAL ANNUAL.

With Original Contributions by English and Foreign Authors, and Choice Illustrations.

CONTENTS.

INTRODUCTION. Joseph Hutton.
STORIES TO TELL. Joseph Hutton.
SONG—"I'm SITTING ALONE at MY WINDOW." "O."
WITHIN the SPELL. Mrs. B. H. Duxton and W. W. Penn.
A STORY of a RED SHIRT. Joseph Cowen, M.P.
CHRISTMAS CAROL. J. G. Holland.
THE LAST of the NARWHAL. John Boyle O'Reilly.
PARTING: a Poem. John G. Saxe.
HIDE-AND-SEEK TOWN. "H. H."
THE LAST TOKEN. Edmund Clarence Stedman.
WALDEMAR'S VIOLIN. Lady Lindsay (of Belcarres).
THE BETTER CHRISTMAS. Guy Rostlyn.

THE SYMPHONIUM at the CONCERT-HOUSE. F. M. WILKIN.
THE GUILDER and the PANTOMIME. Stephen Fiske ("Seraph").
"FOR THOUGHTS": a Poem. Celia Thaxter.
A CATAMARAN VOYAGE. P. G. Hamerton.
The MAGIC WAND. G. R. Sims.
DOMESTIC MUSIC in AMERICA. W. L. Alden (New York Times).
STORY of REBELLION. Miss J. Cowen.
AT the WINDOW. Richard Henry Stoddard.
PAPA HOORN'S TULIP. R. V. C. Mayers.
ALONG the SEA-WALK. Barnet Phillips.
The FATEFUL FIRST. Hon. Lewis Wingfield.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. Bedford-street, Strand.

E P P S ' S C O C O A.

GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

JAMES EPPS & Co. HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS, LONDON.

MAKERS OF EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE FOR AFTERNOON USE.

PHOENIX FIRE OFFICE, LOMBARD-STREET and CHARTING CROSS, LONDON.—Established 1788.
Prompt and Liberal Loss Settlements.
Insurances effected in all parts of the World.
JOHN J. BROOMFIELD, Secretary.

SUN LIFE OFFICE, LONDON.

CHIEF OFFICE—8, Threadneedle-street.
BRANCH OFFICE—80, Charing Cross.
And at Oxford-street, corner of Vere-street.
Life Assurances of all descriptions.
Specially Low Rates for Young Lives, and for Non-Participating Policies.
Prompt Settlement of Claims.
A new and greatly simplified form of Proposal, also the Society's newly-revised Prospectus, will be forwarded on application.
J. G. PRIESTLEY, Actuary.

BONUS YEAR, 1880.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

OFFICE—
21, Lombard-street, E.C. (Head Office), and 51, Charing Cross, S.W.
Established in the year 1797.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The next Bonus will be declared out of the Profits earned up to the 31st December next. All Policies effected on or before that date on the 'With Profit System' will share in such Bonus.
Forms of Proposal and Prospectus will be sent at once to intending Assurers, on application to Messrs G. TERNAN, Actuary and Secretary.

LOSS OF TIME IS LOSS OF MONEY.

ACCIDENTS CAUSE LOSS OF TIME.
And may be provided against by a Policy of the
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY.
The Oldest and Largest Accident Assurance Company.
Right Hon. Lord KIDNARD, Chairman.
Subscribed Capital, 1,000,000. Moderate Premiums.
Bums allowed to Insurers of Five Years' standing.
A Good sum in case of Death by Accident, and a Weekly Allowance in the event of injury.
ONE MILLION and a HALF has been paid as COMPENSATION.
Apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, the Local Agents, or 64, Cannon-street, London. WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT on
MONDRE'S HIRE SYSTEM.
The Original, Best, and most Liberal.
Cash Prices.
No extra charge for time given.
Estimated Prices: Chamber, with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MONDRE, 22, 24, 26, Tottenham Court-road; and 12, 24, and 26, New-street, W.C. Established 1822.

F. MONDRE begs to announce that the whole of the above Premises have recently been rebuilt, specially adapted for the Furniture Trade, and now form one of the most commodious Warehouses in the metropolis.

Bed-room Suits, from 12 to 20 Guineas.
Drawing-room Suits, from 12 to 20 Guineas.
Dining-room Suits, from 12 to 20 Guineas.
And all other Goods in great variety.
F. MONDRE, 22, 24, 26, Tottenham Court-road; and 12, 24, and 26, New-street, W.C. Established 1822.

A POLLINARIS WATER.

"Laurel-essence of Apollinaris."—Harcourt, Book 17, Ode 3.
GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1879.
ANNUAL SALE, 8,000,000.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY, Limited, 10, Regent-street, London, S.W.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—Nothing is so highly appreciated as a Case of GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY, which can be ordered of any Wine Merchant, or direct of T. GRANT, Distillery, Maidstone. Queen's quality, as supplied to Her Majesty,
4s. per dozen nett. Sportsman's special quality, 3s. per dozen. Prepayment required. Carriage free to England.

PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

BRYANT & MAY'S

PATENT SAFETY MATCHES.

RIGHT PRIZE MEDALS.
ADVANTAGES—
Are not POISONOUS.
Are free from SMELL.
Are perfectly harmless.
Without Phosphorus.
Are perfectly harmless.
To the Operatives employed.
Are very DAMP PROOF.
LIGHT ONLY ON THE BOX.
RIGHT PRIZE MEDALS.

PROTECTION TO HEALTH.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have approved of this Pure Solution as the best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEAD-
ACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION, and as the safest Sedative for Delicate Constitutions, Ladies, Children, and Sufferers.

PREPARED BY DINNEFORD'S

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness,
tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice.
For these symptoms use

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 1/2d and 1s. 1/2d, labelled "James Epps & Co. Homoeopathic Chemists, London."
A letter received.—"Gentlemen.—It may perhaps interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm. Yours respectfully, Gordon Brown, M.D., F.R.C.S., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Dispensary."

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

JUST PUBLISHED, in Two Volumes, imperial 8vo.

ROMOLA.

By GEORGE ELIOT.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY SIR FREDERICK LEIGHTON,
President of the Royal Academy.

The number of Copies Printed is limited to One Thousand, each copy being numbered. The mode of publication adopted is that of Subscription through Booksellers. Information regarding the Terms of Subscription may be obtained from any Bookseller.

THE WORKS OF W. M. THACKERAY.

THE ÉDITION DE LUXE.

Complete in Twenty-four Volumes, imperial 8vo.

Containing 348 Steel Engravings, 1,473 Wood Engravings, and 88 Coloured Illustrations.

The Steel and Wood Engravings are all printed on real China Paper.

Only 1,000 Copies printed, each set numbered.

The mode of Publication adopted is that of SUBSCRIPTION THROUGH BOOKSELLERS.

Particulars regarding the Terms of Subscription, &c., may be obtained of any Bookseller.

Now ready, royal 8vo. 26s.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Now ready, crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The POETRY of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor,
Author of 'The Borderland of Science,' 'Science Byways,' &c.

FARMING in a SMALL WAY for PLEASURE and PROFIT.
By JAMES LONG. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. [In the press.]

LYRICS and ELEGIES. By Charles Newton Scott, Author of
'The Forebears of Christianity.' Crown 8vo. 4s. [Immediately.]

NEW EDITIONS.

A HISTORY of ENGLISH THOUGHT in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By LESLIE STEPHEN. Second Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 26s. [Shortly.]

LIFE of LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR JAMES OUTRAM.
By Major-General Sir FREDERICK J. GOLDSMID, C.B. K.C.S.I. Second Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s. with illustrations and Maps. [In the press.]

NEW NOVELS.

The TRUMPET MAJOR. By Thomas Hardy, Author of 'Far
From the Madding Crowd,' &c. 3 vols. post 8vo. [Just published.]

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes. 2 vols. post 8vo. [Just published.]

MATRIMONY. By W. E. Norris, Author of 'Heaps of Money,' 'Mademoiselle de Merano,' &c. 3 vols. post 8vo. [In the press.]

HAROLD SAXON. By Allan Muir, Author of 'Children's Children: a Story of Two Generations.' 3 vols. post 8vo. [In the press.]

NEW STORIES.

NOTICE.—The CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JANUARY, 1881, will contain the First Parts of
Two New Stories.

One entitled,

A GRAPE from a THORN. By James Payn, Author of 'Lost
Sir Masingford,' 'By Proxy,' &c.

The other,

LOVE the DEBT. By a New Author.

The Stories will be illustrated by Mr. Du Maurier and Mr. W. Small.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 261,

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE,

For NOVEMBER.

With Illustrations by George Du Maurier and W. Small.

Contents.

MY FAITHFUL JOHNNY. (With an Illustration.)

Chaps. 1-4.

QUEVEDO.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF DRESS.

LORD MACAULAY and Dr. JOHNSON'S WIFE.

THE BURMESE. By Shway Yoo.

DECORATIVE DECORATIONS.

SOCIAL LIFE AMONGST the ANCIENT GREEKS.

WASHINGTON SQUARE. By Henry James, Jr. (With an Illustration.) Chaps. 30-35.

WORKS BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

PASSAGES from the PROSE WRITINGS of MATTHEW
ARNOLD. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Contents.—1. Literature—2. Politics and Society—3. Philosophy and Religion.

LAST ESSAYS on CHURCH and RELIGION. With a Preface.
Crown 8vo. 7s.

MIXED ESSAYS. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 9s.

Contents.—Democracy—Equality—Irish Catholicism and British Liberalism—Pope Urban and Neoscholasticism—A Guide to English Literature—Palkland—A French Critic on Milton—A French Critic
on Goethe—George Sand.

LITERATURE and DOGMA: an Essay towards a better
Apprehension of the Bible. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.
* The References to all the Bible Quotations are, in this Edition, added for the first time.

GOD and the BIBLE: a Review of Objections to 'Literature and Dogma.' Reprinted from the Contemporary Review. Entirely Revised. With a Preface. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ST. PAUL and PROTESTANTISM. With an Essay on Puritanism and the Church of England. Third Edition, Revised. Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

CULTURE and ANARCHY: an Essay in Political and Social Criticism. Reprinted from the Cornhill Magazine. With a Preface and Alterations. Second Edition, 7s.

ON the STUDY of CELTIC LITERATURE. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

FRIENDSHIP'S GARLAND. Being the Conversations,
Letters, and Opinions of the late Arminius Baron Von Thun-Hohen-Trunckh. Collected and Edited, with a Dedictory Letter to His Imperial Highness Leo, Reg., of the Daily Telegraph. Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

WORKS BY JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

RENAISSANCE in ITALY.

AGE of the DRAPERS. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 15s.

THE REVIVAL of LEARNING. Demy 8vo. 16s.

THE FINE ARTS. Demy 8vo. 16s.

STUDIES of the GREEK POETS.

First Series. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 16s. 6d.

Second Series. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

SKETCHES in ITALY and GREECE. Second Edition.

Crown 8vo. 8s.

SKETCHES and STUDIES in ITALY. With a Frontispiece.

Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

MANY MOODS: a Volume of Verse. Crown 8vo. 9s.

THE SONNETS of MICHAEL ANGELO BUONARROTI and TOMMASO CAMPANELLA. Now for the first time Translated into Rhymed English. Crown 8vo. 7s.

NEW and OLD: a Volume of Verse. Crown 8vo. 9s.

WORKS BY SIR ARTHUR HELPS, K.C.B.

COMPANIONS of MY SOLITUDE. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FRIENDS in COUNCIL: a Series of Readings and Discourses thereon. First Series. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 7s.

FRIENDS in COUNCIL. Second Series. 2 vols. crown
8vo. 7s.

ESSAYS WRITTEN in the INTERVALS of BUSINESS.
To which is added, An Essay on Organization in Daily Life. Crown
8vo. 3s. 6d.

Also a New Edition, 3 vols. crown 8vo.

FRIENDS in COUNCIL. First Series. 1 vol. crown 8vo.
7s. 6d.

FRIENDS in COUNCIL. Second Series. 1 vol. crown 8vo.
7s. 6d.

COMPANIONS of MY SOLITUDE. Essays written during the intervals of BUSINESS. An Essay on Organization in Daily Life.
1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, 20, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.

Printed by R. J. FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Tuck's-court, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN FRANCIS, at No. 20, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Agents: Sir ROBERT L. MANN, Bell & Bodderts, and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh;—for LONDON, Mr. John Robertson, Dublin.—Saturday, November 6, 1880.

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1880.

RUSSIAN thoroughly TAUGHT, and Proficiency in Reading Writing and Speaking the Language guaranteed within a comparatively short time. Lessons by Correspondence carried on, and Translations promptly done. Terms moderate.—Address 1142, 10th, West Fourth-st. and R. W.

STANDARD WORKS IN HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY

PUBLISHED BY MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.

The EARLY HISTORY of CHARLES JAMES FOX. By GEORGE OTTO TREVELYAN, M.P., Author of 'The Life and Letters of Lord Macaulay.' 8vo. price 18s.

The CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY of ENGLAND since the ACCESSION of GEORGE III. By Sir THOMAS ERSKINE MAY, K.O.B. D.O.L. Sixth Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

DEMOCRACY in EUROPE: a History. By Sir THOMAS ERSKINE MAY, K.O.B. D.O.L. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

HISTORY of ENGLAND in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By W. E. H. LECKY, M.A. Vols. I. and II. 1700-1760. Second Edition. 2 vols. 8vo. 36s.

HISTORY of EUROPEAN MORALS, from AUGUSTUS to CHARLEMAGNE. By W. E. H. LECKY, M.A. Cabinet Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

HISTORY of the RISE and INFLUENCE of the SPIRIT of RATIONALISM in EUROPE. By W. E. H. LECKY, M.A. Cabinet Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

The HISTORY of ENGLAND from the FALL of WOLSEY to the DEFEAT of the SPANISH ARMADA. By J. A. FROUDE, M.A. Cabinet Edition, 12 vols. crown 8vo. 37. 12s. Library Edition, 12 vols. demy 8vo. 37. 18s.

SHORT STUDIES on GREAT SUBJECTS. By J. A. FROUDE, M.A. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

CÆSAR: a Sketch. By J. A. FROUDE, M.A. With Portrait and Map. 8vo. 18s.

HISTORY of CIVILIZATION in ENGLAND and FRANCE, SPAIN and SCOTLAND. By HENRY THOMAS BUCKLE. Cabinet Edition. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 34s.

CONYBEARE and HOWSON'S LIFE and EPISTLES of ST. PAUL, copiously illustrated with Steel Plates, Landscapes, Vignettes, Coins, Maps, &c.

LIBRARY EDITION, with all the Original Illustrations, Maps, Landscapes on Steel, Vignettes, Woodcuts, &c. 2 vols. 4to. 42s.

INTERMEDIATE EDITION, with a Selection of Maps, Plates, and Woodcuts. 2 vols. square crown 8vo. 21s.

STUDENT'S EDITION, Revised and Condensed, with 48 Illustrations and Maps. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE LIFE AND WORKS OF LORD MACAULAY.

The COMPLETE WORKS of LORD MACAULAY. LAYS of ANCIENT ROME:

Edited by his Sister, Lady TREVELYAN.

LIBRARY EDITION, with Portrait, 8 vols. demy 8vo. 57. 8s.

CABINET EDITION, 16 vols. post 8vo. 47. 18s.

HISTORY of ENGLAND from the ACCESSION of JAMES II.—

STUDENT'S EDITION, 3 vols. crown 8vo. price 12s.

PEOPLE'S EDITION, 4 vols. crown 8vo. 8s.

CABINET EDITION, 8 vols. post 8vo. 45s.

LIBRARY EDITION, 8 vols. 8vo. 47.

CRITICAL and HISTORICAL ESSAYS contributed to the Edinburgh Review :—

STUDENT'S EDITION, 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

PEOPLE'S EDITION, 3 vols. crown 8vo. 8s.

CABINET EDITION, 4 vols. post 8vo. 34s.

LIBRARY EDITION, 3 vols. 8vo. 30s.

CHEAP EDITION, 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. sewed, 4s. 6d. cloth.

SIXTEEN ESSAYS, Reprinted separately:

Addison and Walpole, 1s.
Frederick the Great, 1s.
Croker's Boswell's Johnson, 1s.
Hallam's Constitutional History, 16mo. 1s.; fcap. 8vo. 6d.

Warren Hastings, 1s.
Pitt and Chatham, 1s.
Rankin and Gladstone, 1s.
Milton and Macbride, 6d.
Lord Bacon, 1s. Lord Clive, 1s.

LORD BYRON and the COMIC DRAMATISTS of the RESTORATION, 1s.

The ESSAY on LORD CLIVE annotated by H. Courthope Bowen, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. with Map, price 2s. 6d.

With IVRY and THE ARMADA. New Edition, with 41 Wood Engravings by G. Pearson from Original Designs by J. E. Weguelin. Crown 8vo. price 6s. cloth extra, gilt edges.

With IVRY and THE ARMADA, 16mo. 2s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED from the ANTIQUÉ by G. SCHARF, fcap. 4to. 31s.

The SAME, MINIATURE EDITION, imperial 16mo. 10s. 6d.

SPEECHES CORRECTED by HIMSELF:—

PEOPLE'S EDITION, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS:—

LIBRARY EDITION, 3 vols. 8vo. Portrait 31s.

PEOPLE'S EDITION, 1 vol. crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS and SPEECHES:—

STUDENT'S EDITION, 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

SELECTIONS from the WRITINGS of LORD MACAULAY. Edited, with Occasional Notes, by G. O. TREVELYAN, M.P. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The LIFE and LETTERS of LORD MACAULAY. By his Nephew, G. O. TREVELYAN, M.P.

CABINET EDITION, 3 vols. post 8vo. 12s.

LIBRARY EDITION, 3 vols. 8vo. with Portrait, 36s.

London: LONGMANS & CO. Paternoster-row.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, 7, Paternoster-row.

Crosby Lockwood & Co.'s List.

STATIONARY ENGINE DRIVING:

A Practical Manual for Engineers in charge of Stationary Engines. By MICHAEL REYNOLDS ("The Engine Driver's Friend"). Author of "Locomotive Engine-Driving." The Model Locomotive-Engine, &c. With Plates and Woodcuts, and Portrait of James Watt. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d. cloth. [Ready.]

A TREATISE ON METALLIFEROUS

MINEWATER AND MINING. By D. C. DAVIES, F.R.S., Author of "A Treatise on Slate and Slate Quarrying." &c. With numerous Wood Engravings. Second Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d. cloth. [Ready.]

ENGINE-DRIVING LIFE; or, Stirring Adventures and Incidents in the Lives of Locomotive-Engine Drivers. By MICHAEL REYNOLDS ("The Engine Driver's Friend"). Author of "Locomotive Engine-Driving." The Modern Locomotive-Engine, &c. Crown 8vo. [Nearly ready.]

* A Christmas Volume for Engine-Drivers, Firemen, &c.

MINE DRAINAGE; being a Complete and Practical Treatise on Direct-Acting Underpumped Steam Pumping Machinery. With a Description of a large number of the best-known Engines for their General Utility and the Special Sphere of their Action, the Mode of their Application, and their Merits compared with other forms of Pumping Machinery. By STEPHEN MICHELL, Joint-Author of "An Essay on the Best Mining Machinery and the Cornish System of Mine Drainage." With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. [Nearly ready.]

The BOYS OWN BOOK: a Complete

Encyclopedia of Sports and Pastimes, Athletic, Scientific, and Recreative. A New and greatly Enlarged Edition, including the Newest Games and Amusements, with more than 600 Illustrations (many of them quite new), 10 Yggotte Titles printed in gold, and over 700 pages. Imperial 16mo. 2s. 6d. handsomely bound in cloth. [Ready.]

MERRY TALES FOR LITTLE FOLK.

Illustrated with more than 300 Pictures. Edited by Madame DE CHATELAIN. 2s. 6d. cloth elegant, 4s. gilt edges. [Ready.]

RIVER BARS: an Account of the Promoted Removal of the River Bar at Dublin by the Method of Induced Tidal Scour. Prefixed by a Consideration of the General Principles of River Bars. By I. J. MANN, C.E. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo. [Nearly ready.]

The LADIES' MULTUM-IN-PARVO

FLOWER GARDEN, and AMATEURS' COMPLETE GUIDE With Illustrations. By SAMUEL WOOD, Author of "Good Gardening." 16mo. Crown 8vo. [In the press.]

THE GERMAN PREPOSITIONS;

Exemplified in 2,500 useful Colloquial Phrases. By S. GALINDO, Professor of Languages, Madrid. 16mo. [In the press.]

GERMAN COLLOQUIAL PHRASE-

BOOK. Exemplifying all the Rules of the German Grammar. By S. GALINDO, Professor of Languages, Madrid. 16mo. [In the press.]

WHALE'S RUDIMENTARY SERIES.

New Vols. and New Editions.

Slate and Slate Quarrying: Scientific,

Practical, and Commercial. By D. C. DAVIES, F.R.S. Second Edition, carefully Revised. 2s. [Ready.]

Pioneer Engineering: a Treatise on

Engineering Operations in New Countries. By EDWARD DOBSON, A.I.C.E. Second Edition, Revised. 4s. 6d. [Ready.]

Coal and Coal Mining. By Waring-

TON W. SMYTH, M.A. F.R.S., &c. Chief Inspector of the Mines of the Crown. Fifth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 2s. 6d. [Ready.]

Materials and Construction. A Theoretical and Practical Treatise on the Principles Designing, and Direction of Works of Construction. By FRANCIS CAMPIN, C.E. [Nearly ready.]

Sewing Machinery; being a Practical

Manual of the Sewing Machine. By J. W. UQUHART, C.E. With numerous Illustrations. [Nearly ready.]

Civil Engineering, Rudimentary

TREATISE. By LA WOOD and HERNELL. With Large Additions on Recent Practice in Civil Engineering. By D. KINNEAR CLARK, M. Inst. C.E. [Nearly ready.]

Measures, Weights, and Moneys of all

NATIONS. By W. R. R. WOOLHOUSE, F.R.A.S. F.R.S., &c. New Edition, thoroughly Revised. [In the press.]

Magnetic and Angular Surveying.

By WILLIAM LINTERN, Mining Engineer, &c. [In the press.]

The Boiler Maker's Assistant, in

Drawing, Tempering, and Calculating Boiler Work and Tank Work. By JOHN COURTNEY. Edited by D. K. CLARK, M.I.C.E. 2s. [Just published.]

House Painting, Graining, Marbling, and SIGN-WRITING. With 9 Coloured Plates of Woods and Marbles, and nearly 150 Wood Engravings. By ELLIS A. DAVIDSON. Third Edition. 2s. [In the press.]

Manual of the Mollusca: a Treatise on Recent and Fossil Shells. By I. F. S. P. WOODWARD, A.L.S. With Appendix by RAIPHE TATE. With Numerous Plates and 200 Woodcuts. Fourth Edition. 2s. 6d. [In the press.]

London: CROSBY LOCKWOOD & Co. 7, Stationers' Hall-court, E.C.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

Now ready, crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The CHURCH of the FUTURE: its Catholicity—Its Conflict with the Atheist—Its Conflict with the Deist—Its Conflict with the Rationalist—Its Dogmatic Teaching—Practical Counsels for its Work—its Cathedrals. By ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Archbishop of Canterbury.

ISLAND LIFE; or, the Phenomena of Insular Faunas and Floras, with their Cause, including an Entire Revision of the Problem of Geological Climates. By ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, Author of "The Malay Archipelago," "The Geographical Distribution of Animals," &c. Medium 8vo. with Illustrations and Maps, 18s.

"Mr. Wallace has long devoted himself to the problems of geographical distribution, and his new volume gives us the cream of his latest thinking in a pleasant and eminently readable form. No other living naturalist has the same union of high literary excellence with profound scientific knowledge. His wonderful grasp of detail, depth of insight, and breadth of view, remind one at every turn of Darwin. 'Island Life' is a work to be accepted almost without reservation from beginning to end. Whoever reads his book must be charmed with it."

St. James's Gazette.

"The work throughout abounds with interest. It may be read with equal pleasure by those who are already acquainted with the general principles of distribution, and by those who wish for the first time to know something about modern biological geography."—Athenæum.

A VISIT to WAZAN, the SACRED CITY of MOROCCO.

By ROBERT SPENCER WATSON. 8vo. with Map and Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

"Mr. Watson's account of his experiences in Morocco is much more pleasant than that of any other traveller's know of. And as a record of an independent and unprejudiced observer his little book is of value."—Times.

The NECKLACE of PRINCESS FIORIMONDE; and other Stories. By MARY DE MORGAN. With 25 Illustrations by Walter Crane. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s.

Also an Edition printed on hand-made paper, with the Illustrations on India paper, and mounted in the text. The Edition is limited to ONE HUNDRED COPIES. Fcap. 4to.

"Mr. Walter Crane's characteristic illustrations combine, with Miss De Morgan's pretty fancies, to form a charming gift-book."—Graphic.

A CHRISTMAS CHILD: a Sketch of a Boy-life. By Mrs.

MOLESWORTH, Author of "Carrots," "The Cuckoo Clock," &c. Illustrated by Walter Crane. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PANSIE'S FLOUR-BIN. By the Author of 'When I was a Little Girl,' &c. Illustrated by Adrian Stokes. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

ENGLISH MEN of LETTERS. Edited by John Morley.

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LOCKE. By Professor FOWLER.

[New Volume.]

"In the case of Locke's biographer we venture to say that Mr. Morley has been exceptionally fortunate. A man more competent than Professor Fowler's for this particular work might have been sought and sought in vain."—Review.

FOOD for the INVALID, the CONVALESCENT, the DY-

ING, and the GOUTY. By J. MILNER FOTHERGILL, M.D., Author of "The Practitioner's Handbook," &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Immediately.]

A TEXT-BOOK of the PHYSIOLOGICAL CHEMISTRY of the ANIMAL BODY, including an Account of the Chemical Changes Occurring in Disease. By ARTHUR GARROD, M.D. F.R.S., Professor of Physiology in Owens College, Manchester. Medium 8vo. Vol. I. 18s.

"The arrangement and plan of the whole work are excellent, and the student has here for the first time a text in the English language which is available for the study as well as the laboratory. Professor Garrod has produced a work which will be sympathetically the text-book for the advanced student, and will be invaluable as a work of reference to the scientific physician."—Lancet.

The STORY of ACHILLES, from HOMER'S ILIAD. Edited, with Notes and Introductions. By J. H. PRATT, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Assistant-Master at Harrow; and WALTER LEAF, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

NEW NOVELS READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

By GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel' and 'Mirage.'

The HEAD of MEDUSA. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"The Head of Medusa' is far better than the common rack of novels. The book is full of talent."

Saturday Review.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

WHITE WINGS: a Yachting Romance. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

31s. 6d.

"Mr. Black can translate his vocabulary into an infinity of tints and tones. Nor do we know any living novelist who has more completely the gift of awakening the bodily senses through the medium of printer's ink."

Times.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

HE THAT WILL NOT WHEN HE MAY. 3 vols. crown

8vo. 31s. 6d.

"There is a great amount of beautiful work in this book."—Athenæum.

"This is a novel which no one can read without pleasure. She writes from the fulness of experience, with the mastery of methods. We do not know where to look among her sister novelists for any one who could—considering all things—have told the story so well."—Spectator.

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

LOVE and LIFE: an Old Story in Eighteenth-Century Costume. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

"This is a study in grey and amber, with just enough tint of a shadow in one corner to give brightness to the prevailing hue."—Pall Mall Gazette.

MACMILLAN & CO. London.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

THE NEW SEASON.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY was established in 1842, in order to meet the growing demand of the age for a Higher Class of Books than could then be readily obtained on moderate terms from the ordinary Circulating Libraries.

From its commencement the original purpose of the Library has been kept steadily in view. The best Books of every shade of opinion, on all subjects of general interest, have been taken in large numbers—Hundreds, and in some instances Thousands, of Copies of the Leading Works of every Season having been placed in circulation on the day of publication.

In the selection of Books great care is taken to study the wishes of Subscribers, and to make the Library not only 'Select,' but comprehensive.

Additional Copies of all the best New Works in History, Biography, Religion, Philosophy, Travel and Adventure, and the Higher Class of Fiction continue to be added as the demand increases; and arrangements are made with the leading Publishers for an ample supply of the principal Works already announced for the New Season, and of all other Forthcoming Books of general interest as they appear.

FIRST-CLASS SUBSCRIPTION, ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM,

For a constant succession of the Newest Books.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS AND UPWARDS,

According to the number of Volumes required.

NEW BOOKS IN GENERAL DEMAND.

McCarthy's History of our Own Times (One Thousand Five Hundred Copies); Unbeaten Tracks in Japan, by Miss Bird (One Thousand Copies); New Guinea, by L. M. D'Albertis; Trevelyan's Life of C. J. Fox; Life of Sir Rowland Hill (nearly ready); Memoirs of Frances R. Havergal; Guizot in Private Life; Kinglake's War in the Crimea, New Vol.; Christie's Memoir of Etienne Dolet; Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi; A Tramp Abroad, by Mark Twain (One Thousand Copies); Life and Letters of Cicero, by G. E. Jeans; Blaikie's Life of Livingstone (nearly ready); Lady Eastlake's Sketch of Mrs. Grote; Faiths and Fashions, by Lady Violet Greville; New Ireland, by Sir C. Gavan Duffy; History of Japan, by Sir E. J. Reed; Island Life, by Alfred R. Wallace; A Tour in Corsica, by Gertrude Forde; Echoes from the Counties; The Church of the Future, by the Archbishop of Canterbury; Ecclesiastical Essays, by Dean Stanley (nearly ready); English Studies, by Professor Brewer; The Manifold Witness for Christ, by Canon Barry; Duty, by Samuel Smiles (nearly ready); all the Best New Novels, and every other Recent Work of General Interest.

SEE MUDIE'S LIBRARY CIRCULAR FOR NOVEMBER.

NEW EDITION NOW READY, POSTAGE FREE ON APPLICATION.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW OXFORD-STREET.

CITY OFFICE: 2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S NEW WORKS.

THE CORAL LANDS OF THE PACIFIC.

Being an Account of nearly all the Inhabited Islands of the Pacific, their People, and their Products.

By H. STONEHEWER COOPER.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 36s.

A LADY'S TOUR IN CORSICA.

By GERTRUDE FORDE.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

DEAN HOOK: HIS LIFE AND LETTERS.

Edited by the Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS.

The Popular Edition, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. with a new Portrait, 6s. [Thursday next.]

THE HISTORY OF ANTIQUITY.

From the German of Prof. MAX DUNKER, by Dr. EVELYN ABBOTT, Balliol College, Oxford.

The Fourth Volume, demy 8vo. 21s.

A TRIP UP THE NIGER AND DENUEH.

By ADOLPHE BURDO.

Translated by Mrs. GEORGE STURGE.

In demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

DOROTHY FOX.

By Mrs. FARR.

Author of 'Adam and Eve.'

Crown 8vo. 6s.

JOHNNY LUDLOW. FIRST SERIES.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD.

Author of 'East Lynne,' &c.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ADAM AND EVE.

By Mrs. FARR.

Author of 'Dorothy Fox.'

8 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'GEORGE GEITH. THE MYSTERY IN PALACE GARDENS.

By Mrs. RIDDELL.

Author of 'George Geith,' &c.

In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MR. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL.

THE RED RAG.

By E. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON.

Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c.

2 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW WORK BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

JOHNNY LUDLOW. SECOND SERIES.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD.

Author of 'East Lynne,' &c.

3 vols. crown 8vo.

"Fresh, clear, simple, and vital, strong in purpose, these stories have won admiration as true works of inventive art. The present gathering is better than that which preceded it."—Daily Telegraph.

"Three most exquisite studies."

Nonconformist and Independent.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.
I'll 'hears in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

An ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip.

Dramatic, Narrative, and Descriptive: from the Recollections of an Actor in Australia, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, California, Nevada, Central America, and New York. By EDMUND LEBATES. 8vo. 12s.

"A readable, gossiping, agreeable record of the changes and changes of an actor's career in far distant lands. Many of the sketches of character display considerable literary skill."—Review.

"A very readable book. It is a continuation of the experiences of the voyager with those of the artist."—Academy.

MONSIEUR GUIZOT IN PRIVATE LIFE (1787-1874). By his Daughter, MADAME DE WITT. Translated by Mrs. SIMPSON. 1 vol. 8vo. 12s.

"Madame de Witt has done justice to her father's memory in an admirable record of his life."—Saturday Review.

THE VILLAGE OF PALACES; or, CHRONICLES OF CHELSEA. By the Rev. A. G. L'ESTRANGE. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

"These volumes show some out-of-the-way remembrance, and are written in a lively and gossiping style."—Times, Oct. 11.

MY JOURNEY ROUND THE WORLD,

via Ceylon, New Zealand, Australia, Torres Straits, China, Japan, and the United States. By Capt. E. H. JONES-PARRY, late R.N. Royal Marine Fusiliers. 4 vols. 21s. [Just ready.]

CHEAP EDITION OF YOUNG Mrs. JARDINE. By the AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALIFAX.' Forming the New Volume of HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY. 6s. bound and illustrated.

THE NEW NOVELS.

LITTLE PANSY. By Mrs. Randolph.

Author of 'Gentianella,' &c. 3 vols.

DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of 'ST OLAVE'S,' &c. 2 vols.

STRICTLY TIED UP. 3 vols.

"Strictly Tied Up" is entertaining. It is in every sense a novel con- sidered in a light and happy vein."—Athenæum.

"This novel may be described as a comedy of life and character, and in the changing society to which we are introduced the author shows abundant knowledge of the world and observation of human nature. 'Strictly Tied Up' is a very cleverly constructed novel, so amusing as it is ingenious."—St. James's Gazette.

ROY and VIOLA. By Mrs. Forrester.

Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' &c. SECOND EDITION. 2 vols.

"An admirable tale; told by one who can vividly describe the manners and general of modern society."—The World.

"Roy and Viola may be recommended as an interesting story, containing very well drawn sketches of character."—John Bull.

LORD BRACKENBURY. By

AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of 'Barbara's History,' &c. SECOND EDITION. 2 vols.

"Lord Brackenbury is a very readable story. The author has well conceived the purpose of high-class novel writing, and succeeded in no small measure in attaining it. There is plenty of variety, cheerful dialogue, and general news in the book."—Academy.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By

SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of 'His Last Stake,' &c. 3 vols.

"A novel of no common merit."—Pall Mall Gazette.

GERALDINE and HER SUITORS.

By Mrs. SIMPSON, Author of 'Wanda's History,' &c. 3 vols. [Just ready.]

CHEAP EDITIONS.

Each Work complete in 1 vol. price 6s. (any of which can be had separately), elegantly printed and bound, and illustrated by Mr. J. GILBERT, MILLAR, HUNT, LEBCH, FOYNTNER, FOSTER, TERNER, RANDY, S. HUGHES, SAMBOURNE, &c.

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY

OF CHIEF EDITIONS OF POPULAR MODERN WORKS.

Barbara's History. By Amelia B. Edwards.

Life of Irving. By Mrs. Oliphant.

No Church. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Christian's Mistake. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

Alec Forbes. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

A Noble Life. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

Drum's New America. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

Robert Falconer. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

The Woman's Kingdom. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

A Study of an Eventful Life. By G. W. Dancer, D.C.L.

David Elphinstone. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

A Brave Lady. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

Hannah. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

God's Stick's Americans at Home.

The Unwind Ward. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

A Keen Young Man. By Mrs. Oliphant.

My Little Lady. By S. Frances Poynter.

Phoebe Junior. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Life of John G. D. Young.

Mr. Gibley. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

Sam Slick's American Honour.

Young Mrs. Jardine. By the Author of 'John Halifax.'

A. & C. BLACK.

In demy 8vo. pp. 720, price 24s.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF FISHES.

By ALBERT C. L. G. GÜNTHER, F.R.S., &c.,
Keeper of the Zoological Department in the British Museum.
Illustrated with 320 Wood Engravings. [Ready.]

In 8vo. with Portrait and Fac-simile of Sermon, price 12s. 6d.

MEMORIALS OF ROBERT SMITH CANDLISH, D.D.,

Late Minister of St. George's Free Church, and Principal of the New College, Edinburgh.

By WILLIAM WILSON, D.D.

With Concluding Chapter by Principal RAINY. [Ready.]

In crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

THE WAY TO THE CITY, AND OTHER SERMONS.

By the late ALEXANDER RALPH, D.D.,
Author of 'Quiet Resting Places,' &c. [Ready.]

NEW ISSUE

WAVERLEY NOVELS.

CENTENARY EDITION (Copyright). In 26 vols. crown 8vo.

This popular Edition of the Waverley Novels, edited by the late DAVID LAING, LL.D., contains several Notes by Sir Walter Scott which are to be found in this Edition only, and is enriched with 158 Steel Plates.

VOLUME I. to XIII. now ready. Price 3s. 6d. each.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA.

Edited by Prof. T. SPENCER BAYNES, LL.D.
Assisted by 500 Contributors, and Illustrated with Engravings on Wood and Steel.

Price 30s. in cloth; or 36s. half-morocco.

VOLUME I. A—Ann.

VOLUME II. Ann—Ath.

VOLUME III. Ath—Bol.

VOLUME IV. Bol—Can.

VOLUME V. Can—Cla.

VOLUME VI. Cla—Day.

VOLUME VII. Day—Eld.

VOLUME VIII. Eld—Fal.

VOLUME IX. Fal—Fys.

VOLUME X. Fys—Gou.

VOLUME XI. Gou—Hip.

VOLUME XII. Hip—Hyp.

VOLUME XIII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XIV. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XV. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XVI. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XVII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XVIII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XIX. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XX. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXI. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXIII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXIV. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXV. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXVI. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXVII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXVIII. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXIX. Hyp—Hyp.

VOLUME XXX. Hyp—Hyp.

DE QUINCEY'S WORKS.

The COLLECTED WORKS, in 16 vols. crown 8vo. price, in cloth, 31. 12s.; or in Roxburghe binding, gilt tops, 41. 4s.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS.

COMPLETE EDITION.

Edited by JOHN H. INGRAM.

In 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Memoir and Index, price 14s.
1. TALES GROTESQUE.—2. TALES ARABESQUE.—3. POEMS.—4. CRITICISM, &c.

BLACK'S GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

A Series of 56 Maps of the principal Countries of the World, with Descriptive Letter-press and an Index of 68,000 Names.
In folio, half-morocco, 31. 3s.

Edinburgh: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1880.

CONTENTS.

LADY EASTLAKE'S MEMOIR OF MRS. GROTE	633
D'ALMEIDA'S TRAVELS IN NEW GUINEA	634
CHARLES TENNYSON'S SONNETS	635
JEVONS'S STUDIES IN LOGIC	636
MRS. OLIPHANT'S CERVANTES	636
WISDOM OF THE WISE	636
CHRISTMAS BOOKS	639
THEOLOGICAL BOOKS	640
LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	640
THE BIOGRAPHIES OF LOCKE; THE DARTON PAMPHLET, THE PERSONALITIES OF CRITICISM	641-642
LITERARY Gossip	643
SCIENCE—GORDON ON ELECTRICITY AND MAGNETISM; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; Gossip	644-645
FIVE ARTS—GIFT BOOKS; THE VOLTEIRA CAMEL; Gossip	645-647
MEMO—THE WEEK; Gossip	647-648
DRAMA—THE WEEK; Gossip	648-649

LITERATURE

Mrs. Grote: a Sketch. By Lady Eastlake. (Murray.)

WE are glad to meet Lady Eastlake again in the world of letters, and we should have been still more glad had we been able to congratulate her on a success. But this little book must rather be classed among the literary mistakes of accomplished authors. It is less surprising that (as is stated in the preface) the publisher should have delayed its publication owing to the political excitement of the spring, than that he should not have found some equally good reason for a further indefinite delay. Mrs. Grote herself expressed a doubt whether "any biography could be satisfactorily put together," and, though Lady Eastlake replies that "this small work represents no biography," the reply really makes the matter worse. What this book would appear to be is an estimate of character—in short, a "study" of Mrs. Grote. But Mrs. Grote was neither remarkable enough nor well-known enough for such a study. When, for example, M. Scherer gives us an étude on Diderot, he is throwing the light of a trained intellect on the picture of an illustrious writer, the details of whose life are supposed to be familiar to his readers. When Lady Eastlake puts together this sketch of Mrs. Grote, she is speaking of a lady who left behind her no important work, and of whom a large number of people, outside a certain section of cultivated London society, will never even have heard. Indeed, Lady Eastlake owns all this. She says:—

"She was no celebrated authoress; she had performed no extraordinary actions; she had personally taken part in no great public event. Her fame, if such it could be called, was confined to a comparatively small sphere, and rested on grounds which never took her beyond the limits of private life."

But then she adds:—

"Nevertheless, the fact remains that she was so remarkable a woman, both in character and attainments, as to call us strictly for the tribute of a record as if she had been historically eminent."

This volume, then, contains a mere sketch, with very few dates, with few incidents, and a vast amount of eulogy. One thing Lady Eastlake might surely have given her readers—a list of Mrs. Grote's very miscellaneous writings, of which 'The Personal Life of George Grote,' to which Lady Eastlake makes little or no reference, is the only one likely to be remembered. That is certainly a very singular book. It is a life by a most admiring wife, written with an absence of tact and taste, and with a frank egotism, almost without a parallel in biography. In some aspects it might, perhaps, be compared with the old Duchess of Newcastle's life of her husband, but the great Margaret is constantly forgetting herself in the contemplation of her husband's perfections, whereas Mrs. Grote never forgets herself at all. "The Historian of Greece," as she is always calling him, scarcely appears without the wife of "the Historian" by his side. In short, it is hardly unfair to say that the book is as much autobiography as biography, and, if we could suppose that all Lady Eastlake's readers are conversant with it, it would be the best excuse for the meagreness of the present sketch.

The most interesting part of this book is the second chapter, which really does contain some new facts of Mrs. Grote's early life, drawn up from notes of her own. Lady Eastlake begins by telling us that "Mrs. Grote was an aristocrat in mind and also in lineage, especially on her mother's side, and she prided herself on coming of a good stock, on the principle that noblesse oblige," and she does not at all approve of M. Guizot having spoken of her heroine as belonging to the bourgeoisie. This is particularly delightful, considering Mrs. Grote's intensely democratic opinions, but it is most undoubtedly true, and her case is by no means uncommon. She was always fond of great people, and in the life of George Grote she mentions with a charming naïveté how their old Radical friends fell out of favour with them, and how she and her husband "even went so far as to accept friendly overtures from Lord and Lady Holland," and she adds a list of the guests she met there at dinner. But that Miss Lewin (Mrs. Grote's maiden name) should have prided herself on being "an aristocrat in lineage" is extremely droll. Her father, Mr. Thomas Lewin, had been in the Madras Civil Service, and her mother was a daughter of a General Hale, the "younger son of an ancient and opulent family in Hertfordshire, connected with several families of our nobility." Her parents were in fact well-to-do people of the upper middle class, and that was all. Mr. Lewin seems to have been a little wild in his youth, and one of his friends was Madame Grand, afterwards Madame Talleyrand, whom he met when on her way back to Paris after her love passages with Sir Philip Francis. Mrs. Grote used to speak of her father as "a true specimen of the fine gentleman of the day," while her mother had a "totally undeveloped and uninteresting character."

Harriet Lewin was born in 1792 near Southampton. She was a strong and high-spirited girl, and she was called "the empress." She seems to have led her governesses a sad life, and they tried in vain to stop her as she "rode horses bare-backed," or went out alone with a sister in a fisherman's boat. In London it was almost worse:—

"We used to 'dazzle' with looking-glasses the inmates of the upper stories of the Duke of Grafton's house (opposite to ours) in Clarges Street, or we flew a sort of light paper kite across into their open windows, till the Ladies Fitzroy lodged a complaint against us."

"After these confessions," says Lady Eastlake,

"we can better understand the high-spirited woman, who hated all precocious proprieties, warmly encouraged active sports for girls as well as boys, and especially for both together, and herself dared do all that might become a strong, healthy, artless human creature; turning her fine hands to everything; even seizing, as she was once known to do, the handles of a certain agricultural implement [why cannot Lady Eastlake call it a plough at once?] and herself tracing a furrow."

Certainly there never was a child more completely the mother of the woman.

In 1820 Miss Lewin, who had been engaged to Mr. Grote for two years, grew tired of waiting for her father's consent, and one March morning she slipped away to a neighbouring church, got married without any one knowing, and came back to breakfast as if nothing had happened. It was a sort of runaway match, in which it is difficult not to believe that it was the husband who was run away with. In fact, the ordinary position of husband and wife often seemed inverted in their case; but it is clear that they were warmly attached, and she was always a true, good wife to him. We will again quote from Lady Eastlake:—

"They differed as to society, for he was both reserved and shy—she, as we have observed, neither, though awfully 'stately' while little known. But her character in this respect overbore his.....Each gave and took an education. He endowed her mind with a more solid basis, she fashioned, mounted, framed, and gilded him."

Harriet Martineau has described them as "tall at all times of capital conversation; she with all imaginable freedom; and he with a curious, formal, old-fashioned, deliberate courtesy, with which he strove to cover his constitutional timidity and shyness."

But the best of all descriptions was one Sydney Smith once gave, "I do like them both so much, for he is so ladylike, and she is such a perfect gentleman."

No sooner was Mrs. Grote married than she set to work industriously to improve her mind. She tells us herself in the 'Life' of her husband:—

"Mrs. G. Grote was habitually studious, after her fashion, under the direction of her husband, who laid great stress upon her cultivating the ratiocinative vein of instruction—above all, logic, metaphysics, and politics; and she accordingly strove to master these subjects, out of deference to his wish, and in order to qualify herself to be associated with his intellectual tastes and labours as time wore on."

There is an old story of Lord Monboddo expressing deep regret to Mrs. Garrick that Hannah More had refused to marry him, "for I should have so liked to teach that nice girl Greek." Mr. Grote had a better fortune, and no doubt proved an excellent preceptor. It is certain that it was at his wife's suggestion that, later on, he undertook the 'History of Greece.' She one day said to him:—

"You are always studying the ancient authors whenever you have a moment's leisure. Now here would be a fine subject for you to treat. Suppose you try your hand?"

But neither this nor other characteristic anecdotes are to be found in Lady Eastlake's sketch, which, after the description of Mrs.

Grote's early life, is little more than a panegyric, in which there is scarcely any shade to tone down the strong lights of admiration. Still the reader can see for himself pretty much what Mrs. Grote was like. She was a very practical woman, knowing "how everything should be done, from the darning of a sock to the building of a house"; and Lady Eastlake tells how, when any one wished to borrow a book from her, she would reply, "I'll trouble you for a sovereign," and the sovereign was kept till the book was returned. Then she was a masterful woman, who knew her own mind, and what she liked, and how to get it. Without being by any means "a perfect woman," she was no doubt nobly planned

To warn, to comfort and command, though the capacity for warning and commanding would be more apparent on the surface than that of comforting. Still she was a true friend and made true friends. Was there a flavour of patronising in her treatment of some people,—it might well be forgiven for the sake of the good and honest purpose which lay beneath it. She was Jenny Lind's earliest friend, and she never tired of being of service to those who interested her. On the other hand, she was not particularly tolerant of uninteresting people, and they had some excuse for looking upon her as an ungraceful and masculine woman. Lady Eastlake tells us that "Mrs. Grote prided herself once to Sydney Smith on her patience in enduring bore. 'That may be, dear 'Greta' (a name by which he always called her), 'but you do not conceal your sufferings.'" Sydney Smith seems to have been fond of a joke at her expense. On one occasion when Mrs. Grote appeared at an evening party in a turban, he whispered to a friend, as he pointed out the headdress, "There you see the origin of the word 'grotesque.'"

If the reader wishes to form an estimate of Mrs. Grote's intellectual powers, Lady Eastlake will not help him very much. She compares Mrs. Grote both to Madame de Sévigné and Madame de Staël, but she acknowledges that she cannot make much of either comparison, and, in fact, the attempt to compare them is a little absurd. Mrs. Grote's letters were very shrewd and sensible, but certainly not brilliant, and her only important book, 'The Life of George Grote,' is (as has been said) singular and eccentric rather than well written.

Mrs. Grote's reputation really rests on her conversation, and that in the very nature of things is the least enduring foundation for any reputation. She was a bright, clever woman of the world, with few prejudices, somewhat audacious, extremely well read, and gifted with a perfect memory. She was excellent in the give and take of conversation, and if she said few memorable things, she said much that threw a strong or humorous colour on the matter which at the moment was discussed. But conversation will not bear repeating, and such conversation as Mrs. Grote's was especially dependent on the tone, the gesture, and the readiness of retort. As years passed on her qualities became more widely recognized, and it was a privilege to be numbered among her friends. De Tocqueville was one of those who thought most highly of her, and his death and that of Mendelssohn were the two great sorrows of her life, till a still deeper and more enduring sorrow fell upon her at the death of him whom she had truly loved and honoured for more than fifty years.

New Guinea: What I Did and What I Saw.

By L. M. D'Albertis. 2 vols. Map and Illustrations. (Sampson Low & Co.)

THE publication of Signor D'Albertis's work on New Guinea has been looked for with much interest, and, although the geographical results of his explorations have already been published, it was expected that he would give a graphic and instructive account of the island, and more especially of its natural history. The author has spent altogether nearly three years in New Guinea and its immediate neighbourhood; he has penetrated into the very heart of the island, and throughout his various explorations he has been indefatigable in forming his valuable collections and gathering information about the native population. His labours have been amply rewarded. Mainly owing to him, the interior of New Guinea no longer figures as an almost complete blank upon our maps, whilst ornithology has been enriched by him with sixty-one new species belonging to forty-two distinct genera. Two of these genera are new. The Harpyopsis Nova Guinea, a handsome hawk, akin to the Thrasetus kerpis of South America, and Drepanornis Albertisii, a bird with plumage inferior in brilliancy only to that of the true birds of paradise, were discovered by him.

The author left Genoa on the 25th of November, 1871, and first set foot upon New Guinea on the 9th of April, 1872, when he shot his first bird, saw kangaroos hopping along, and was able to enjoy the beauties of a tropical forest:—

"I was so pleased at finding myself in a primeval forest that I wanted to run about everywhere. But I suffered for my inexperienced impulse; now a thorn pierced my clothes and tore my skin; now a liane, stretched across my path, would throw me down, gun in hand, damaging my hand and knees, and putting me in peril of my life from the gun; again, a spider's web, which had widely spread its insidious snares, would cling to my face and beard, while the spiders fell on my hands, neck, and face, producing a singularly unpleasant sensation. After a ramble of several hours, I had to acknowledge that, after all my dreams, a primeval forest is not the earthly paradise. It was long, nevertheless, before I made up my mind to return on board with the birds I had killed, and which, being the first shot by me in New Guinea, are among my most cherished treasures."

At Masinam and Dorey, places well known from the descriptions of older explorers, D'Albertis found two Dutch missionaries at work, their schools being filled with puny, sickly, and deformed children, who would probably have died of neglect had they been left with their parents. The attendance at church was small, and the congregation inattentive, notwithstanding that all who stayed to the end of the service were rewarded with a little sago. The author is clearly no great advocate of Christian missions. He thinks that greater things might be achieved by agricultural and industrial missions. He admits, however, that the Dutch missionaries have almost "tamed" these savages.

There can hardly be a doubt that the savageness exhibited by the natives of North-eastern New Guinea is largely due to the incursions of Malay slave dealers. The author remarks on this subject:—

"Although the traffic in slaves has not assumed here the proportions which it has attained in other parts of Africa [sic], it is sufficiently active to call for the attention of European governments, as it numbers many victims every year. The Dutch, who claim to be the masters of this territory, ought surely, for the honour of civilization, to be foremost in putting down the slave trade here—unless, indeed, they tolerate it from policy, as a means of keeping in subjection the chiefs who carry on that infamous traffic. If the inhabitants along the coast of New Guinea, from Sorong to the Straits of Doura, have such an aversion to strangers, it may fairly, I think, be accounted for by the fact that for centuries past they have been exposed to the incursions and rapine of the rajahs, who are dependent on the Sultan of Tiler and the Dutch. Who does not know that there are slave markets in Ternate, in Macao, in Timor, in Ke, and Arru? If the negroes of Africa inspire so much interest, why should those of New Guinea be forgotten? The Dutch Government and the officers of the Dutch navy, who officially visit Arru, Goram, Ceram, Ke, and many of the islands which form archipelagos in the west of New Guinea, ought not to ignore what every one who visits these islands soon clearly."

On his return from North-eastern New Guinea Signor D'Albertis fell in with a Dutch man-of-war, which had been commissioned to visit every point along the coast where he and his friend Beccari had been, and to distribute Dutch flags in the villages. More welcome to the Italian explorer was the unexpected appearance of the Vettor Pisani, as it enabled him, through the kindness of the captain, Count Lovera, to pay flying visits to Ke, Arru, and Orangerie Bay, near the eastern extremity of New Guinea, before he returned to Europe.

Thus ended the first expedition. Far more extensive, and in their results more important, were the expeditions made between 1875 and 1878. Nearly seven months were devoted to Yule Island and its vicinity; and the Fly river was ascended thrice: first in the company of the Rev. Mr. Macfarlane, in December, 1876, and subsequently in the steam launch Neva, which had been furnished through the liberality of the Government of New South Wales.

His long residence in the country not only enabled the author to add greatly to his natural history collections, but it also afforded numerous opportunities for studying the customs of the natives. A large number of skulls was gathered in various parts of the island, but more especially amongst tribes who are "head hunters," and are willing to part with their trophies for a consideration. The author likewise succeeded in obtaining two complete skeletons from a deserted house on the Upper Fly river, and this sacrilegious act may in part account for the hostility exhibited by the natives. Similar conduct in civilized countries would certainly lead to very serious consequences, and in the interest of science itself it is useful to discourage such "irregularities" on the part of explorers.

The author fails in bringing order into the chaos of New Guinea tribes, and vaguely talks of "Arab," "Malay," "Negro," and other types. But this much may be gathered from his measurements of skulls (many of which figure amongst the illustrations), that the type in the west and throughout the interior is clearly "Papuan." The crania are dolichocephalic, the facial index prognathous, the noses flattened, the hair woolly, and the complexion black. Numerous varieties occur, however, but in two instances only do we hear of brachycephalous and orthognathous crania. The most remarkable case is that of the natives of Amberkaki (west of Dorey), whom the author speaks of as "real Africans." These people are described as tall and black, with round faces and curly hair. Their physiognomy "was characterized by the absence of prognathism." Far fuller information is afforded on the inhabitants of Yule Island, who are clearly Polynesian (Maori), brachycephalous and "distinctly not prognathous," with long glossy hair, and chestnut and in some cases almost grey eyes. The author thus confirms the observations of his predecessors. The true Papuans occupy the centre of the island and many parts of the coast; Malays have intruded in the west, Polynesians or Maori in the east, and from an intermixture of these elements has resulted the great variety of types, which has not yet been satisfactorily unravelled.

The Italian explorer discovered no traces of cannibalism, nor did he find any idols amongst the mainland tribes. He feels justified in stating that there exists a belief in a future state and in evil spirits, and his description of an Arfak chief rising in the stillness of the night, and taking aim at an invisible "settan" hovering round the camp, is one of the most graphic sketches in his book. Superstition is rife. The people believe in witchcraft and the evil eye, and divination is practised with a pebble attached to a string, as in Italy. The author did not hesitate to act upon the superstitious fears of the natives in order to inspire them with dread of his person, and "if there is an art," he says, "my ignorance of which I regretted more than another in New Guinea, it was that of sleight of hand." Let intending travellers make a note of this.

At Epa, where a chief inimical to him was practising divination through a tame serpent, he struck terror into the hearts of the natives, and proved himself the better sorcerer, by secretly setting fire to a little gunpowder which he had strewn over the ground. After this exhibition a reconciliation was quickly effected, and sealed, more italico, with a kiss, which must have astonished a people who are accustomed to rub their noses together as a sign of affection:—

"To show that I really meant to be friendly with Aira and his people, I embraced and kissed him in the open place in the village, and afterwards, amidst general laughter, I proceeded to kiss all the women. The scene was certainly a very comical one; some of the most timid wanted to repel my embrace, but were urged by the others to submit. Although it was incumbent on me, in order to prove my impartiality and to give a ceremonial appearance to the performance, to kiss all the old and ugly women, in reality I kissed the youngest and prettiest only. The men also wished to seal their friendship by a kiss, but I explained to them that only the chief and the women had a right to this observance."

But lest the reader should fancy that this ceremony may have proved in any way repulsive to the author, it is right to add that in many parts of his work he speaks of the comeliness, attractiveness, and even beauty of the women. One of them, whom he calls a Papuan Venus, he describes as follows:—

"I shall not soon forget her beautiful eyes, which were a marvel of beauty and vivacity, nor her good manners, nor the air of intelligence in all her gestures and words. She burst out laughing when she saw herself in my looking-glass, and then put on a necklace I had given her."

It is to be presumed that this girl, who "need not have been afraid to compete with many a fair European in beauty," was amongst the crowd whom Signor D'Albertis treated so impartially.

Of information strictly geographical these volumes contain little that is new. The natural history portion is, however, abundant, but it is scattered, and, as there is no index, difficult of reference. The narrative is frequently full of interest, and there are passages in it which arrest the attention; but, owing to the introduction of many details and matters of no interest, it is in the end fatiguing. The author admits this when he says:—

"To write the history of a day which has got no history is neither pleasant nor easy, and it is especially difficult to begin. When the first step is taken we can go on to the end of the page, and if the reader find what has been written is neither useful nor amusing, it has nevertheless served to amuse and interest the writer."

The illustrations are a charming feature of the book, the coloured plates of birds, from the designs by Gould and Hart, being more especially deserving of admiration. The map, however, is defective, and the author's route is inaccurately laid down upon it.

As a whole, the work can scarcely be called entertaining. Signor D'Albertis might easily have compressed the two volumes into one, without omitting a single fact of scientific interest, and made his narrative far more readable.

Collected Sonnets. By Charles Tennyson Turner. (C. Kegan Paul & Co.)

THE sonnet is distinctly what may be called the amateur's form of poetry. Many great poets have, of course, written sonnets, but, with the one exception of Petrarch, no great poet depends upon his sonnets for his reputation. For a man otherwise occupied, however, who has at the same time a share of the poetical faculty, there is no doubt that the sonnet offers by far the most convenient mode of expression. It is easily portable; that is to say, a man can make a sonnet in his head, on his way to or from his business—the country person, let us say, can put into this form any thought which strikes him on his road to an outlying cottage—and carry it in his head until he is again within reach of pen and ink. He can correct and polish it at odd intervals. If it does not wholly please him, he can suppress it without the feeling of labour lost. On this principle, Mr. Charles Tennyson—his adscititious name of Turner may be, and probably will be, dropped in this connexion—is the master sonneteer of the present century, as in point of number he is, by virtue of his 341 sonnets against Petrarch's 317, the most copious since sonnets were.

It must, of course, be allowed that Mr. Tennyson's sonnets are only to be included in that class of poetry by the help of a very comprehensive definition; in fact, so far as outward form goes, they possess only that one of the properties of the sonnet which was originally the least essential, namely, the restriction to fourteen lines. The arrangement of the rhymes is quite arbitrary, and the rhyming couplet at the end, which of all departures from the type is that most contrary to the true sonnet nature, is frequently found, sometimes with the additional aggravation of a terminal alexandrine. We cannot deny that this, per se Mr. Spedding, to some extent diminishes the pleasure with which we read many of these otherwise charming pieces. The sonnet thought is so markedly present that the ear instinctively demands the sonnet form. Mr. Tennyson is at his best when his inspiration comes directly from external impressions, though he also deals felicitously at times with "states of feeling." Of the former class the following, in which he seems to occupy a position somewhat between Wordsworth and his own illustrious brother, is a good specimen:—

REBUCKING OF PANOT.

The edge of thought was blunted by the stream
Of the hard world; my fancy had wax'd dull,
All nature seem'd less nobly beautiful,
Hobbl'd of her grandeur and her loveliness;
Methought the Muse within my heart had died,
Till, late, awakened at the break of day,
Just as the East took fire, and doff'd its grey,
The rich preparatives of light I spied;
But one sole star—none other anywhere;
A wild-rose odour from the fields was borne:
The lark's mysterious joy fill'd earth and air,
And from the wind's top met the hunter's horn;
The aspen trembled wildly, and the morn
Breathed up in rosy clouds, divinely fair!

The picture here is very Tennysonian, and except, perhaps, for the "hunter's horn," which is not apt to be heard when "wild-rose odours" are about, true to nature.

Of the more "subjective" sonnets No. xiii. is a fair average example:—

No trace is left upon the vulgar mind
By shapes which form upon the poet's thought
In instant symmetry: all eyes are blind
Save his, for ends of lower vision wrought;
Think't thou, if Nature were to every gaze
Her noble beauty and commanding power,
Could harsh and ugly Doubt withstand the blaze
Or front her Sinai presence for an hour?
The seal of Truth is beauty—when the eye
Sees not the token, can the mission move?
The brow is veiled that should attack the lie
And lend the magic to the voice of Love.
What wonder then that Doubt is ever nigh,
Urging such spirits on to mock and deny?

This is pure Shakspeare as to form; the thought and mode of expressing it rather recall Michael Angelo. The sonnet belongs to that earlier series published before the author had completed his twenty-third year. They enjoyed the high privilege of being read with critical attention by Coleridge, whose estimation of them, as may be seen from his marginalia printed in this edition, was decidedly favourable. Mr. Spedding, in the "Introductory Essay" prefixed to this volume, points out with much truth that "professional critics, whose business it is to pronounce judgment without delay upon all volumes that are brought before them," are not the best people to direct public taste in regard to a collection of sonnets, which "should be read one by one, with intervals between long enough to let the impression of each get out of the other's way." It is, of course, manifestly unfair to the writer to treat these sonnets—embodying as they do the fancies and meditations of a long life, during which a thought will often recur in a varied form, and perhaps be not less often contradicted—as if they formed one connected "cycle." The reader who does this will in all probability lay the book down with a confused impression of sunsets, nightingales, and other "common objects of the country," entangled with a little theology to bewilder his brain. But if he will do as Mr. Spedding advises, and turn over the pages, reading a sonnet here and there, where a line or a word attracts his attention, he will not have to make many trials before lighting on something which will go near to justify both the opinion formed by Coleridge as to Charles Tennyson's early promise and that expressed by a no less competent judge than the present Laureate in regard to his more mature work.

It should be added that the volume contains by way of preface a little poem and a brief memoir, signed respectively "A. Tennyson" and "Hallam Tennyson." Of the second it will suffice to say that it is gracefully and affectionately written; the first, consisting of seven short stanzas, will be welcomed by all those—and they are the great mass of cultivated Englishmen between early youth and old age—who can say to their author:—

Tu primo m' inviasti
Verso Parnaso a ber nelle sue grotte.

These will rejoice to find that the Tennysonian lyre of forty years ago is yet not wholly mute.

MIDNIGHT, JUNE 21, 1871.

Midnight—in no midsummer tune
The breakers lash the shores
The cuckoo of a joyless June
Is calling out of doors:
And thou hast vanished from thine own
To that which looks like rest,
True brother, only to be known
By those who love thee best.

Midnight—and joyless June gone by,
And from the deluged park
The cuckoo of a worse July
Is calling through the dark:
But thou art silent underground
And o'er thee streams the rain,
True poet, surely to be found
When Truth is found again.

And now to these unsummer'd skies
The summer bird is still,
Far off a phantom cuckoo cries
From out a phantom hill;
And thro' this midnight breaks the sun
Of sixty years away,
The light of days when life began,
The days that seem to-day,
When all my griefs were shared with thee,
And all my hopes were thine—
As all thou wert was one with me,
May all thou art be mine!

Studies in Deductive Logic. By W. S. Jevons.
(Macmillan & Co.)

Or all the so-called "moral sciences," logic alone admits of definite answers for examination purposes. A question in metaphysics or ethics, or frequently even in psychology, may be answered, and answered correctly, in two or three different ways according to the standpoint of the examinee. But most questions in logic admit of only one answer, and the subject thus becomes capable of definite "marking"—an important quality for any study in these days of competitive examinations. It is, therefore, natural that Prof. Jevons, who has had the courage to defend "cram," should prepare a series of questions on the subject in which he has won his greatest triumphs. In the book before us he has done this with complete success; he has compiled nearly six hundred and fifty questions ranging over almost all the topics of deductive logic, and, as many of the questions have a number of applications, another four hundred and fifty must be added before we have exhausted the extent of Prof. Jevons's perseverance.

But this is not all; the professor offers to students 220 models of answers to questions, and rightly claims some credit for having thought of this method of explaining difficulties. In this expedient he is not altogether without predecessors; the 'Shorter Catechism' and 'Mangnall's Questions' are very popular experiments on somewhat the same lines. But the Socratic method has hitherto been neglected in scientific manuals, and the innovation has the merit of giving the self-taught student models upon which to frame his own answers. We doubt if the professor would obtain full marks for all his answers—question 6 of chap. xiv. is not fully answered; but as a rule they are clear, concise, and to the point, and in every way worthy of their author's reputation. This method has enabled Prof. Jevons to answer the criticisms that have been made by his fellow specialists on his most important logical work, the 'Principles of Science.' Thus he still remains in the opinion that proper names are connotative, assuming that logic can take cognizance of knowledge or ignorance in individual minds. He would have to grant that "Augustus de Morgan," to use his own example, would not be connotative to the mind of a great number of people, and if so, how far can we term it connotative? Again, exception has been taken to Prof. Jevons's claim that the conclusion "potassium metal—potassium floating on water" is logically superior to the Aristotelian form, "some metal floats on water." His answer here (p. 90) does not meet the point raised: logic, as the science of discursive reasoning, aims at discarding the middle term. Even with regard to his most flagrant heresy, that two negative premises may give a valid conclusion, the professor shows that, if convinced, he has been convinced against his will.

The professor likewise takes the opportunity afforded by these answers to refer to and criticize the views of his predecessors. At times these references are somewhat superfluous: Levi Hedge and Wesley, s.g., are scarcely accessible authorities, though it is pleasant to see a reference to Bowen's excellent manual. It is to be regretted that Prof. Jevons has thought fit to disparage Sir William Hamilton's labours, to which most of the interest now taken in logic can be traced. Criticism cannot be objected to, but it might have been more generous in its tone. There can be no doubt that Hamilton's doctrine of the quantification of the predicate was the first step towards the foundation of equational logic, in which Prof. Jevons has made his fame as a logician. And if it be objected that Hamilton was anticipated by G. Bentham, the objection comes with an ill grace from one who confesses that his system is based on that of Boole, and who is thought by many to have marred it in the transference. While Prof. Jevons's system is more adapted for ordinary minds, it has adapted itself too readily to their inaccuracy; the ambiguous use of the disjunctive is decidedly a falling off from the original.

Besides these answers to questions, which greatly increase the value of the book and make it almost an independent manual of the subject, Prof. Jevons has taken occasion to supplement his previous works in various directions. He gives a full account of Mr. Cunyaghame's logical cards, an invention quite after the professor's own heart. By their means the working of a syllogism can be performed mechanically. Prof. Jevons had been led by Mr. A. J. Ellis's views to obtain a further theoretical aid in equational logic, which he terms the "criterion of consistency." Connected with this is a new view of the professor's with regard to the measure of logical force which has not yet been developed to maturity. Finally, a logical index is given, by which the inverse process may be performed with any result involving only three terms; the logical index for four terms would fill a volume of 1,024 pages.

It will thus be seen that the book is something more than a mere collection of problems, analogous to Mr. Wolstenholme's classical volume of mathematical "nuts to crack." It will be indispensable to the many students of the higher logic who have been brought into existence by Prof. Jevons's other excellent books; and it may be hoped that it will aid them in rendering more popular a subject which vies with mathematics for training in accuracy and definiteness, and is superior to them in the universality of its application. A word of praise should be added on the aptness of many of the examples, which are drawn from a very wide range of knowledge. Some signs of professorial humour appear, for which the author's previous works had not prepared us, and the subject has rarely given occasion. It may not be amiss to quote one question which displays this quality and, at the same time, conveys an interesting piece of information with regard to the author of a familiar quotation:—"vii. 5. Criticize the following definition:—A gentleman is a man having no visible means of subsistence (Orton)."

Foreign Classics for English Readers.—Cervantes. By Mrs. Oliphant. (Blackwood & Sons.)

Mrs. OLIPHANT has written for English readers the best life of the author of the 'Don Quixote' that has appeared up till now. It is not so full as the life prefixed to Jarvis's version, written by Señor Mayans y Siscar, and translated by Ozell, but it is better, because written in a finer spirit and with a deeper sympathy. It surpasses for the same reason the dull and laboured accounts of Smollett and Lockhart, Tiekner and

Roscoe, and yet the writer's knowledge of the language of Cervantes is less than that possessed by the least of these. The reason of her success is not far to seek. During the past quarter of a century "the learned and the curious" have been looking deeper than ever into the works of the great Spaniard, into the stirring times when he lived and fought and suffered and wrote, into the influence which his writings have had over English literature as well as French; whilst discoveries have been made that have stimulated inquiry and provoked controversies, not yet concluded, which have resulted in greater light being thrown upon the life of a man of whom it may be said that he is now far less known in his own country than among ourselves. Many of these discoveries have been published from time to time in literary journals, reviews, and magazines—some of them in our own columns; and Mrs. Oliphant has made abundant, perhaps unconscious, use of them all. We mention this because she feels scant gratitude to "the few but devoted students" without whom she could not have written this new life nor have gained for it the attention which it unquestionably deserves. Mrs. Oliphant has caught a glimpse of the real Cervantes; and her conception of his character is rendered with a clearness, a vigour, and an accuracy that will make the hero of Lepanto, the captive of Algiers, and the author of the 'Don Quixote' as well known as any one of the heroes of her own novels. This is the best part of the book, and the only part that can call forth hearty praise. "What Dante was to Italy," she says, "and Shakespeare to England, Cervantes was to Spain. Shakespeare has a more splendid breadth and grasp, but it is in the nature of Shakespeare that Cervantes was made." "He was a man to whom it was a delight to stand for others—to answer for them," and "he does this out of pure nobility and daring of nature, with positive pleasure in the risk he runs." This is in allusion to his attempt at escape from captivity in Algiers. In company of some sixty of his fellows, Cervantes hoped to gain his liberty by a daring flight, but he was betrayed by a wretched renegade, once a Dominican friar. All such attempts at escape were visited, as is well known, with satanic cruelties. Some noble Spaniards were impaled, and those that were not hanged were beaten in the most shocking way; while many a faint-hearted grandee of Castile to save his body from stripes made over his soul to Mohammed and perdition. It was this which moved Cervantes to take upon himself the whole blame and responsibility of the plan of escape, because his courage alone was equal to bearing the penalty attached to it. "The strange thing is that he was always permitted to do so, and that no other generous soul, touched by his example, ever stood up by his side and claimed a share"; "but," as Mrs. Oliphant remarks, with the keenness of vision we have pointed out, "he knew the character of the people for whom he was so willing to stand substitute." Another part of the book, which tells how Cervantes erected his own tribunal of justice in order to vindicate his personal character and put a stop to any possible paradventures about himself in the future, is rendered in the very spirit of romance. The wearisome details of the petitions to the king for some office, if only that of a stipendiary magistrate in Peru; the stupid imprisonments; the household embarrassments and constant disappointments, are relieved by reflections which are as full of sympathy as of truth:—

"How much better it was for us and Spain that great Philip paid no attention to his petitions... Far better!—if he had not gone roving about through those farms and villages, dusty and weary, and lodged in these poor little inns, and lived on that hard fare, not knowing, perhaps, from week to week, how the poor women were managing to get bread to eat at home, we should never have had our Sancho Panza, nor known that old Spain—that big piece of Christendom, with all the good and evil in it..... No man in all the round of genius has borne this fate [of one man suffering for the people] with the same good humour and dauntless laughing courage as Cervantes. Most of them grumble, it must be allowed; he never. He made a fight now and then for his rights; but not getting them, never sat down to complain, but laughed and trudged on. 'A merry heart goes all the way; the sad times in a mile.'"

This is excellent, but Mrs. Oliphant too often challenges us to notice the little title she has to indulge in original criticism on the life and labours of Cervantes. She speaks of his poverty in a way that cannot fail to leave an impression on the reader who is not "learned and curious" that it was a poverty both disgraceful and repulsive—disgraceful because he lived on the manual labours of his wife and daughter, and repulsive for the meanness of the house in which he lived and the straits to which he was reduced, writing his stories by the same poor candle that lighted the women to stitch for his daily bread. There is as much truth in this as in the notion that "the torn bits of printed paper in the streets," which he was fond of picking up and reading, were like to the tattered newspapers and other worthless trash which litter our own green lanes and country sides of to-day. The stray leaves that were to be picked up now and again in the streets of Toledo or Salamanca, Seville or Saragossa, in the times of Cervantes would be leaves of some book that had just been cursed by the Pope, or, may be, rescued by a favouring wind from the fire of the unholy Inquisition—delightful rarities perhaps. At any rate, printed books were not yet common; and if Mrs. Oliphant had known more of those times she would have taken care to guard her readers from falling into any errors with regard to local colouring, and especially such an error as suggests that the poverty of Cervantes was at all like to the miserable complaining poverty of the literary hack of our own time. But if you do not know the language which a man spoke nor the land in which he lived, you have no claim to write of, much less attempt to describe, his domestic circumstances. This is one of the grave defects of the book. Cervantes was poor, there is no doubt, but it was not the poverty which our own poor authors regard with so much horror, and which it is impossible for a man to acknowledge to his friends and survive in their esteem; he was, from his earlier to his later years, the companion of high-born gentlemen who loved and honoured him, and whatever his poverty, it must have been of a peculiar kind, as it most certainly was borne with nobleness of mind and heart of grace.

Mrs. Oliphant has ventured to give her own view of the 'Don Quixote' and the motive which led to its being written. It is not the right one. 'The Ingenious Knight of La Mancha' was the first novel with a purpose ever written, and the only one of that class that has enjoyed a long life. That purpose is abundantly set forth by its author, and how it was achieved history tells without the slightest uncertainty. Mrs. Oliphant's view of the matter cannot, therefore, be accepted. Another mistake is that she has included the 'Tia Fingida' among the works of Cervantes, and writes such apologies for it as "that it is a sketch...not outwardly indecent or licentious, and might be gone through by an innocent reader without any clear understanding as to what" certain references are made. Had Mrs. Oliphant read the original of this questionable little novel for herself, she would have been the last thus to speak of it; had she been better acquainted with the history of the Spanish tongue, she would have known that this pretended work by Cervantes is an impudent forgery. But she sines in fashionable company: Ticknor has no hesitation in accepting it as the genuine work of the noble soldier poet, who in his novels opened as a test

A way whereby the language of Castile
May season fiction with becoming rest;

Gallardo also, in his 'Criticon,' thinks that to doubt 'The Feigned Aunt' to be the work of Cervantes is to doubt the existence of common sense; and other critics of more or less note make no question that he who declares of himself that he never wrote a line that was not thoroughly Catholic and wholesome wrote this disgusting tale. One of the saddest incidents in modern Spanish history is the eager delight with which the degenerate Spaniard of to-day recognizes in the lofty, pure-minded Cervantes the author of a book that might have been written by the imitators of 'La Celestina,' the 'Coloquios de las Damas,' or the Arch-priest de Hita. The 'Tia Fingida' comes to us from a highly tainted source; it was first made known to the world by the same famous literary society of Berlin that "discovered" two missing chapters of the 'Don Quixote,' chapters which set forth the loves of the Don with the ladies of Don Antonio's house during his brief and fatal stay in Barcelona. Happily the writer had not at all mastered the Spanish idioms peculiar to the literature of the sixteenth century, and the critics of Madrid had no difficulty in detecting him. But five years later the same hand had acquired more cunning, and we were then favoured with the 'Tia Fingida.' It is much better written than any of the other forgeries; it is even more skilful in the marshalling of Cervantine phrases than the very successful imposture of the 'Buscapie'—or the 'Cracker,' as we should call it—which appeared, of course, very much later. But there is one palpable blunder which is fatal to it. Spanish readers are familiar with the forms of politeness practised in Ollendorff and the grammars of to-day, "¿Tiene Usted mi cuchilla?" In the time of Cervantes, and for half a century after his death, quite another form than this was in use; "Usted" is never found in the 'Don Quixote,' or any of the writings of its author, but only "Vuestra merced"; the latter is never used in the 'Tia Fingida,' while the other form is the only one that the forger knows how to use. All the metaphors are also painfully overdone; there is no "example" in the story of which Cervantes could boast, and he never makes the least allusion to it in any of his works. There is nothing to show that he was ever ashamed of anything that he wrote, and whilst he invariably made known the children of his brain to his friends, not the slightest mention is made of it by any of them. It obviously belongs to the period when the "Indexes" of our own Bowle made the Spaniards for the first time acquainted with the work of their renowned countrymen, and, being the greatest forgers in the world, they straightway set to work to produce that which would bring the highest price to the most successful cheat. It is true that some unnamed friend pointed out something of this to Mrs. Oliphant, and a saving clause is therefore hastily inserted in the introduction to her book. The mention of Bowle reminds us of the absence of his name and all notice of his great and singular work from Mrs. Oliphant's pages, an omission which is as inexcusable as any fault of commission that we have named; but being one of the "learned and curious" to whom she is, though she knew it not, indebted for authentic knowledge of her subject, the Rev. John Bowle remains secure from any grateful notice from her. Had Mrs. Oliphant known more of her subject she might have written a book as long, as interesting, and as enduring as any of the creations of her own fancy; and had she known less she might have fallen into fewer errors than she has in producing this the latest fruit of her prolific pen.

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

The Two Dreamers. By John Saunders. 3 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

From the Wings. By B. H. Buxton. 3 vols. (Tinsley Brothers.)

Social Sinners. By Hawley Smart. 3 vols. (Chapman & Hall.)

Mildred Forrester. By Adma. (S. Tinsley & Co.)

Mother Molly. By F. M. Peard. (Bell & Sons.)

The Crookit Mag: a Story of the Year One. By J. Skelton. (Longmans & Co.)

MR. SAUNDERS'S new story is written with much of the power which characterized his earlier novels, but in some respects, such as probability of plot and character, it is unlike, and perhaps unequal to, them. It is of course possible that a young girl should have contracted a passing fancy for a "detrimental" lover so strong as to involve her in a clandestine marriage, and that that passion should so pass away as to leave her anxious to get rid of her trammels as soon as possible. The mixture of remorse, ambition, and fear of her father's anger might be too strong for her fidelity; but that before the birth of her first child she should neglect her husband so far as to hasten his end, and then absent herself from his deathbed, is difficult to imagine in one who long after shows herself by no means without natural affection, and a devoted wife to a man who has no qualities to attract passionate attachment. Senguin, the speculative merchant and Liberal M.P., is a dreamer of a different calibre from the gentle artist and poet to whom Caroline's first vows were given. The transactions, commercial and political, which build up the edifice of his fortunes to a height the fall from which is as terrific as it is inevitable, are described with a good deal of skill; and the strategy employed at the election and the discomfiture of the venal six who hail from the Fox and Grapes are told with much humour. A little more of that quality might have relieved the portrait of the sentimental Hamilton, Caroline Senguin's ill-used son, who, coming from his adopted father in Australia with a large fortune at his back, asserts the legitimacy of his claim to his grandfather's property, and, what is more important to him, brings his mother to tenderness and repentance. If the process by which this last change is brought about appears a little too fine-drawn and unnecessarily deliberate, the results are complete, and the dénouement natural and pathetic. In real life Hamilton's attachment to Effie would have brought things to a more rapid climax.

'From the Wings' is gracefully dedicated to the gentleman "who was the first to help and encourage" the author. No doubt he was quite right in his encouragement, for it is undoubtedly true that the writer of 'Jennie of the Prince's' showed considerable promise. But encouragement often has the unfortunate effect of making an author over-estimate his powers and become too confident of success to take the pains which alone make success deserved. 'From the Wings' is one more book to add to the list of the author's unsatisfactory works. Its object is to show, what nobody surely can want to learn, that there may be perfectly virtuous and simple-minded girls playing quite subordinate parts in even second-class theatres. To render a story with such an object interesting the most obvious device would certainly be to show forcibly the difficulties and temptations to which a girl is exposed, and to some extent the author of 'From the Wings' has tried to do this; but there is a marked want of power or of work in the carrying out of the task. Though the dangers are stated with more or less distinctness, they are not made essential to the story; the reader is not forced to tremble for the heroine, nor even to feel his sympathy strongly drawn out for her, and the impression left upon his mind is that her troubles were very slight indeed. That may be perfectly true, but, if so, the story was hardly worth telling. Besides the weakness of the main part of the story, there are faults in the episodes. An episode when once introduced should be carried out to the end, and not be left incomplete, to be hastily patched up on the last page. Nor is 'From the Wings' by any means free from faults of detail. A little thought or pains would have saved the author from saying that women are "kittle kattle," and writing "cum otium dignitate," and from making an advertisement in the Times of a marriage begin thus: "Hetheringham—Lee." Perhaps if the author meets with a little less encouragement after showing on so many occasions that it is not deserved, it may seem worth her while to write with more care, to bestow more labour upon the construction of a plot, and more thought upon delineating something better than the very commonplace characters exhibited in 'From the Wings' and its immediate predecessors.

A very sinful set are Mr. Hawley Smart's social puppets. We cannot think the author so successful in his new experiment of unearthing the skeletons and garbage below the social surface as he usually is in disporting himself on the outside of that glittering field. Despite the attraction of the tide, there is nothing exciting or suggestive in the doings of the hardened gambler Riverley and the unhappy woman who believes herself for a time his wife. The murder of the captain by his creature and accomplice Solano, a dull villain of a lower social type, throws a lurid light over the end of the book. The best characters are of the lighter order, and have a strong family likeness to the sabres and sportsmen we have been accustomed to in the author's earlier books. Ralph Tealie, the Indian colonel, is of a higher type, and well deserves success with his heroine, who on her side is clearly in need of his fatherly advice and example. Ethel's plot against Hainton is certainly unworthy of her character. The style is lively enough, but shows great marks of hurry. "Miss Clothole and her Poide de camp," "he had come to the determination to what our French neighbours term rangé himself," are specimens of this fault.

'Mildred Forrester' is a work of the slenderest possible texture. It relates the troubles of a young lady whose father introduces an obnoxious "companion" to her, and makes the lady by marriage his own companion after she has ousted the daughter, taken possession of the keys, and dismissed the old servants. Moreover, the young lady's brother adds to her troubles by marrying a gamekeeper's granddaughter, while her father peremptorily refuses her hand to the charming Hugh Trevor, and commands her to accept in place of him an odious lord. Of course, the father dies shortly after consummating his iniquitous marriage, the gamekeeper's granddaughter turns out a paragon of refinement, the gardener is reinstated, and Hugh returns from the battle of Ulundi to find his Mildred unmarried and unchanged. It is impossible to cowl at such satisfactory results, though there is nothing striking in the method of their achievement.

Miss Peard is probably wise in coming to her own country for the scene of her new story. The little domestic drama of French provincial life, tinged with a tender melancholy, which has had such attractions for her, and which she could so delicately set forth, is nearly "played out"; and, indeed, it was perhaps hardly sufficiently robust for healthy, growing English girls. It is with satisfaction, therefore, that we observe that Miss Peard has left the rose gardens of Bayonne and the orchards of Normandy for the more invigorating air of Plymouth and Dartmoor in the stirring times of 1779. There is little room for the employment of sub-dued tints (of which one may have enough in all branches of art) when a French spy or a British man-of-war is to be described, and Dartmoor scrambles do not encourage "self-analysis," which is apt to result in self-consciousness. Instead of being engaged or married to some French Robin Gray, the "Mother Molly" of the story has a good, straightforward English sweetheart on board her own father's ship, and need have no shame in talking to her younger sister, in whose mouth the story is put, about their plans for the future, when the French shall have been safely beaten off. Altogether this is a pretty picture of a quiet Devonshire household, not without those excitements which must have fallen to the lot of most families whose fortune it was to live within sight of French ships at the end of the last century.

Mr. Skelton deals with a somewhat later part of the same stirring period, and takes us to a very different portion of the island. Whether it be that broad Scotch is less melodious to southern ears than broad Devonshire, or that he deals with less attractive developments of human nature, it is certain that his story, though no less well written, is less pleasant reading than Miss Peard's. It contains one really effective scene—a somewhat sad one perhaps, for a reader is apt to feel sympathy for a pretty heroine, even when he is constrained to admit that she has got no more than her deserts. Unluckily, however, her punishment comes upon her just as she is within reach of reformation, and this, though dramatically justifiable, seems a little cruel. Probably, however, her lover, distressed as he is at the moment, would not have gained by a more fortunate conjunction of circumstances. Mr. Skelton might have spared his reader a long note, quite irrelevant to the story, relating to the character of a friend of his who fell in some of the recent fighting at the Cape. A tribute of this kind is out of place in a novel.

CHRISTMAS BOOKS.

- Stories of the East from Herodotus.* By the Rev. A. J. Church. (Sealey & Co.)
My Lovely Lane. By Editha Lyster. (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.)
Bernard Hamilton. By Mary A. Shipley. (Same publishers.)
The Necklace of Princess Fiorimonde, and other Stories. By Mary de Morgan. With Illustrations by Walter Crane. (Macmillan & Co.)
Mudge and her Chick. By a Brother and Sister. (Griffith & Farran.)

THE many friends whom Mr. Church made by his stories from Homer and Virgil will be glad to welcome him this year under his new title of professor. He provides for this Christmas a collection of anecdotes and descriptions translated or paraphrased from the earlier books of Herodotus. He begins with the history of Croesus, which is followed by that of Cyrus and the incidental account of Babylon. We then have some portion of the famous description of Egypt, with tales of Psammetichus and other Egyptian kings, and the history of the conquest of that country by the Persians under Cambyses. The scene now changes to Persia, and the story is given of the usurpation of Smerdis the Magus and the accession of Darius the son of Hystaspes. The expedition of Darius against the Scythians introduces the latter people, and the book concludes with an account of their manners and customs, the cruelties of the Persians, and similar marvels. It is probable that this volume will be the most popular with grown-up persons of Prof. Church's productions in this kind, for Herodotus has hitherto been far less accessible than the ancient poets to ordinary English readers, and Prof. Church's extracts comprise, besides the most charming old-world tales of the historian, the chief of his many contributions to ethnology and archaeology. The simple and antiquated style of the paraphrase, moreover, is much more nearly representative of Herodotus than it was of the artifices and complexities of Virgil or the Greek tragedians. To young people, who perhaps care little for these matters, the book is a storehouse of strange and fanciful scenes, pretty or amusing tales, and exciting histories. The illustrations, taken mostly from frescoes or bas-reliefs in the British Museum, are not the less interesting because they are not specially appropriate to the incidents of the text.

The "lovely lassie" is an admirable young governess, who turns out to be an earl's granddaughter in disguise. She is, of course, exemplary in all relations of life, and her successful struggles with an unamiable and ill-bred set of youngsters are not badly described. There is more human nature in her character than in many of the heroines of the schoolroom, and nothing morbid, if nothing very edifying, in her story.

The same class of youthful readers who are strongly attracted by the virtues of governesses will, it may be supposed, be deeply interested in the trials of oracles. Mr. Hamilton's woes are rather of the crumpled rose-leaf kind. He is much hurt by the scandalous tongues of two old ladies whom he is impelled by duty to visit, and not being, we suppose, a deep student of his mother-tongue, is greatly puzzled and disgusted by the provincial dialect of his parishioners. The existence of a parish clerk is also a grievance to him. He manages, however, to survive his misfortunes, become a rector, and marry an amiable girl.

Mrs. de Morgan's stories are of a different type. They are slightly didactic, but the moral is highly gilded with allegory, and set off by æsthetic illustrations, in which low-browed and wide-mouthed princesses, intense-looking swans, and bearded magicians play the leading parts. The woes of Aramoon and Chryseas will be too high-flown for little readers, but some of the fairy stories deserve popularity in the nursery.

The title is, perhaps, the silliest part of the story of 'Mudge and her Chick.' The said chicks are far from exemplary; their conduct and language with regard to two poor old maiden ladies next door would have earned them a scourging in the consulship of Plancus. But their "home doings" are natural enough, if not very remarkable, though it does not seem desirable that children should consciously model themselves, even at play, upon literary examples.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL BOOKS.

The Congregationalism of the Last Three Hundred Years, as seen in its Literature. In Twelve Lectures. With a Bibliographical Appendix. By H. M. Dexter. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—The author of this bulky volume prints twelve lectures on Congregationalism, prepared in the first instance for the students of an American theological seminary, and repeated in various places of the United States. He goes to the sources of the history which he gives with much minuteness of detail; he has consulted libraries, deciphered MSS., and sought the aid of all who could in any measure further his object. The rise and early fortunes of the Independent churches are faithfully described. The reader will find the story of Robert Browne, the Martin Mar-Prelate controversy, the martyrs of Congregationalism, the exodus to Amsterdam, with the fortunes and misfortunes experienced there, John Robinson and his doings in Leyden, the early and later Congregationalism of New England—all painted in distinct colours.

Congregationalism in England is more briefly treated. The volume is enriched with a large appendix of 266 pages, containing "collections towards a bibliography of Congregationalism." The whole work furnishes sufficient evidence of industry, labour, and research. Mr. Dexter writes as an intelligent advocate of Congregationalism who believes in its Scriptural authority and final success. He has added to our knowledge of this system's origin and early advances various particulars hitherto unknown, and has corrected some mistakes made by previous writers. The best lecture is that on Robert Browne, whom he judges charitably and kindly, though we cannot agree with his general estimate of the man. To assign him a "natural primacy among the great thinkers of Liberalism and of modern Congregationalism" is extravagant praise. The lecture on councils, a part of American Congregationalism which the author commends, might have been omitted without loss to the volume. It reveals the weakness of the system in the frequent "dissension" of ministers from their congregations, and their repeated removals from one position to another. The causes of dissension are many—some curious, such as that of the Rev. H. P. Strong in 1816, whom a council dismissed chiefly on the ground that "he appeared to be much more interested in having the best animals of the male gender, of all the domestic kinds, 'han in advancing the interests of his Master in the vineyard of the Lord.'" Mr. Dexter fails to see the devotion implied in these councils from Independency proper. Are they not a feature borrowed from Presbyterianism? When they refuse to ordain an elected pastor, as happened not long since in New Hampshire, on the ground of defective theology, is such arbitrary ruling consistent with the boasted freedom of Congregational churches? The literature of Congregationalism as displayed in this volume is of little value or excellence. It might have made a better show had it embraced the writings of men belonging to the denomination, though even then it would have been poor beside that of the Anglican Church. The author meant to give nothing more than books or pamphlets distinctly advocating sectarian opinions held by men belonging to his own communion. Mr. Dexter is sanguine about the future of Congregationalism. He extols its all-embracing character, and its peculiar adaptability to a regenerated age of Christian culture. His enthusiasm carries him far towards a Congregationalist millennium, when episcopacy and presbytery shall have disappeared. It is not easy to share his expectations, just as it is difficult to concur in his glorification of the denomination at the present day. The author attaches paramount importance to a theme of comparatively little significance. Ecclesiastical politics, not to speak of ecclesiastical creeds, change and disappear; nor do we suppose that any existing system has perpetual vitality. We can smile at the bright picture floating before the mind of this American lecturer when he speaks of Congregationalism as the millennial polity, "all childish things, bishops, presbyteries, liturgies, which had their use once as crutches for the lame, as tonics for the feeble," being abolished. The volume contains numerous specimens of this inflated sort of writing, and its general style cannot be commended. It suffers from its consisting of lectures prepared for audiences more or less popular. It proceeds from an earnest-minded man, who is fully impressed with the conviction that Congregationalism as a polity, with its evangelical creed, is destined to be the salt of the earth. But his range of vision is limited; neither has he any claim to be considered a philosophical thinker, a liberal theologian, or a good writer. He is the ardent partisan of a sect.

M. Halévy's article on Cyrus et le Retour de l'Exil, Étude sur deux Inscriptions Ounifformes relatives au Règne de Nabonide et à la Prise de Babylone par Cyrus, read before the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres on the 26th of June last, will appear, as already mentioned in the Athenæum, in the forthcoming first number of the Revue des Études Juives. After having given a revised translation of the two inscriptions, and having spoken of Cyrus as not being of Persian, but of Suman or Elamite origin—a conclusion arrived at recently and independently by Prof. Sayce—M. Halévy gives a full account of the prophecies and the psalms written on the occasion of the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus. First of all he says that since Nabonidus was the last king of Babylon, who died, according to the inscription, eight days after the conquest of Babylon, the reign of Belshazzar cannot be historical unless we admit that Nabonidus and Belshazzar are identical; and even in that case, we may add, the words in Daniel v. 30, "In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain," do not agree with the death of Nabonidus as reported in the inscription. He then rejects the supposition of Sir H. Rawlinson that Belshazzar, a son of Nabonidus (a name which may be identified with that of Belshazzar), was killed at the head of the Kuten rebels when they organised a resistance in the Temple of Bel-Kitti, on the ground that from a more accurate translation of the text of the inscription it results that Cyrus found Babylon pacified, and that no siege was necessary, as related by Herodotus. That Isaiah xiii.-xiv. (which M. Halévy calls Isaiah iii.), xlv. to xlviii. (which he calls Isaiah ii.), refer to the conquest of Babylon by Cyrus, is beyond doubt; the passage in Isaiah xiii. 17, "Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them," &c., alludes certainly to the Median army under the command of Cyrus. The same is the case with Jeremiah i. and ii., where the conquerors are again "the nations of the kings of the Medes," and with Psalm cxxxvii. Not so certain is it that Psalms xlii. to xlv. refer also to the same epoch, although we confess that neither the language nor the contents of them are opposed to that idea. M. Halévy thinks that these are not the only psalms written during the captivity of Babylon, but he chooses to analyze these only because the modern critics have assigned them to the time of the Maccabees, written on the occasion of the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. We disagree, however, with his conclusion about the date of the composition of the Pentateuch. After having shown, probably against some French critics, that the point of departure of monotheism cannot be seen in the rise of the empire of Cyrus, but that the origin of this dogma must be much older, he says: "Partout et en tout temps, les religions ne devaient vraiment vivaces que lorsqu'elles s'appuient sur un code inspiré dont elles cherchent à réaliser l'idéal. Comment donc imaginer que la plus originale et la plus profonde évolution de l'idée religieuse, le monothéisme des prophètes, se fût développée sans un livre de fond qui en sanctionnait le principe? Cela me paraît impossible. Il y a des soi-disant critiques qui attribuent à Moïse la rédaction du Pentateuque, ce serait peut-être possible si l'avènement des Achéménides avait donné la première impulsion au monothéisme. La haute antiquité de ce dogme entraîne naturellement une antiquité encore plus haute pour le code, du moins pour les parties essentielles. Et cela avec d'autant plus de probabilité que l'idée religieuse est loin d'y avoir l'épanouissement et la largeur qu'elle a chez les prophètes."

Herr Salomon Buber has just published an interesting part of Midrashic literature, viz., the Midrash Leqah Tob on Genesis and Exodus by R. Tobiah ben Eliezer, of Castoria in Macedonia, composed at the beginning of the twelfth century. It seems that, just as the compilations of the Talmud were made by the Geonim down to Maimonides (ninth century to the twelfth) for the convenience of persons and congregations who could not easily obtain copies of the voluminous Talmud, so the Midrashim have been amplified in various countries, with this difference, however, that whilst the Halakha of the Talmud was in a certain sense limited by tradition, the homily of the Midrashim received additions from the compilers. In many cases they excerpted Midrashim which are at present either lost or hidden in some remote private libraries in the East. In editions of later Midrashim it is, therefore, absolutely necessary to give references to older Midrashim of which the compiler made use, to indicate the variations of the passages in question, and, when the opportunity presents itself, to mention the differences in the application of them to the Bible by the original Midrash and by the compiler. This, we are glad to say, is fully done by Herr Buber for this inedited part of the 'Leqah Tob,' on the same plan as in his excellent edition of the 'Pesiqtha' of R. Kahna some years ago. For the text the editor has made use of three MSS.: (1) of the National Library of Florence, discovered by Dr. Neubauer some years ago; (2) of the Imperial Library of St. Petersburg, discovered by R. N. Rabinowicz, the editor of the serie lectiones of the Babylonian Talmud; (3) of a library in Jerusalem, procured by Herr S. J. Halberstam. It is a pity that Herr Buber did not consult the Bodleian MS. containing this Midrash on Exodus, which seems to be the oldest of all, and most probably contains better readings than the other MSS. Anyhow, the text of the 'Leqah Tob' which we have before us is fairly correct, and scholars will thank an indefatigable worker for the new addition which he has made to the Midrashic literature. His commentary, which also contains the references to the original sources, will help much towards the understanding of Tobiah's Midrash, although he has not always been happy in his interpretations. The foreign words, which naturally are mostly Greek since the author lived in a Greek-speaking country, are also explained. In the literary and bibliographical introduction in Hebrew nothing is omitted. We understand that the parts of this Midrash on Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy have been reprinted from the Venice edition in the same shape and with a similar commentary; this edition has not yet reached us.—We take the opportunity of mentioning the critical edition of the Pesiqtha Rabbati, the great Pesiqtha, another Midrashic book, by Herr Friedmann, of Vienna. The editor had unfortunately no MSS. at his disposal, and had, therefore, to rely on previous editions of this Midrash; but his commentary is so complete that his edition will be considered the standard one of this Midrash, unless sooner or later some MSS. turn up.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. Cassell & Co. have sent us a very pretty little volume, The Praise of Books as Said and Sung by English Authors, selected by Dr. John Alfred Langford. It is preceded by a preliminary essay, or rhapsody, in praise of books, from which the reader proceeds to a series of fine and, as a rule, unacknowledged passages from the greater authors. We are glad to find included the noble eulogy on the Muse from Ben Jonson's 'Epistle to Elizabeth, Countess of Rutland.' The author specially deprecates the supposition that these selections are the only ones that occurred to him or seemed appropriate, and of course every reader who has any familiarity with literature will be able to suggest other passages. Only on one occasion will he be inclined to quarrel with what Dr. Langford has given; surely the obscure and lengthy quotation from Devenant's 'Gondibert' is a little out of place in so small a book, although it is redeemed by one magnificent line, which describes the truth of heaven as

The garment seamless as the firmament.

This tasteful little volume will prove particularly appropriate as a gift for thoughtful children who are beginning to show an independent taste for reading. It is a pleasant collection of pieces of classic English in prose and verse.

Mr. BENTLEY sends us A Lady's Tour in Corsica, by Miss G. Forde. The writer possesses many of the qualities of a successful traveller, activity, good humour, sympathy, and a genuine love of nature, but she has not sufficient literary skill to make her account of an uneventful tour interesting. However, her two volumes will supply some useful hints to intending travellers in Corsica, more especially as she discourses at length the merits and demerits of every inn she entered, and her remarks should not be neglected by the editor of Mr. Murray's promised handbook to the Mediterranean islands. Her summary of Corsican history Miss Forde had better have omitted. It is by no means accurate.

MANY attempts have been made to establish a publication which should give periodically an abstract of all Blue-Books and other Parliamentary Returns. The late Mr. Thomas Smith, Prof. Leone Levi, Mr. Hertalet, and several other experienced persons have had their hands at an undertaking of this kind, but without obtaining the support which they were entitled to expect. Yet Mr. Toulmin Smith's digest—to refer to the one which perhaps had the longest lease of life—exhibited so much research, and was in every way so admirably done, that it practically left nothing to be desired. We hope that the Praxis of Official Papers issued during the session of 1880, which Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co. are now publishing, may meet with greater public appreciation. This monthly issue gives a careful outline of the contents of the "Command" Papers presented to both Houses of Parliament, as well as of the Lords' and Commons' Papers. In many instances the information is conveyed in so complete a form as to render it unnecessary for the reader to refer to the original documents. Of course it is impossible for the editors to summarise large Blue-Books on so extensive a scale, but, at the same time, the contents of these works are clearly and, so far as we can judge, impartially described.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

THEOLOGY.

- Boyce's (W. B.) The Higher Criticism and the Bible, 4s. 6d.
 Canterbury's (Archbp. of) Church of the Future, 6s. 4d.
 Dod's (M. D. D.) Immac. Jacob, and Joseph, 6s. 6d.
 Hall's (W. J.) Some Scriptural Fallacies of certain Modern Writers Examined, 18mo. 5s. 6d.
 Howson's (Rev. J. S.) The Evidential Value of the Acts of the Apostles, 12mo. 7s. 6d.
 Japp's (A. H.) Master-Missionaries, Chapters in Pioneer Effort throughout the World, 6s. 4s. 6d.
 Maclellan's (Mrs.) Notes on the Prophecies of Ezekiel, 8vo. 2s. 6d.
 Maclellan's (Mrs.) Notes and Extracts on Miscellaneous Terms, 8vo. 2s. 6d.
 Robertson's (Rev. F. W.) The Hymns Row, and other Devotions, 8vo. 1s. 6d.
 Bushin's (J.) The Lord's Prayer and the Church Letters to the Clergy, edited by Rev. F. A. Malleson, 8vo. 1s. 6d.
 Southgate's (H.) Suggestive Thoughts on Religious Subjects, 8vo. 10s. 6d.
 Talmudic (A.) Miscellany, a Thousand and One Extracts from the Talmud, compiled and translated by P. I. Marban, 8vo. 1s. 6d.

LAW.

- Burnell's (H. R.) The London (City) Tithe Act, 1870, and the other Tithe Acts, with Notes, 8vo. 10s. 6d.
 Harrison's (J. C.) An Epitome of the Laws of Probate and Divorce, 8vo. 5s. 6d. 1p.

FINE ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY.

- British Painters of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries, with Eighty Examples of their Work, 4to. 3s. 6d.
 Cooper's (C. H.) Memorials of Cambridge, Vols. 3 and 4, 2s. 6d.
 Penn's (W. W.) After Sundown, or the Palette and the Pen, 3 vols. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
 Kent's (J.) The Eve of Saint Agnes, Illustrated in Etchings by C. H. Murray, 18mo. 2s. 6d.
 Switzerland, its Scenery and People, Vignettes Represented by English Swiss and German Artists, with Descriptive Text based on the German of Dr. Geel Fide, 8vo. 4s. 6d.

POETRY.

- Holmes's (O. W.) The Iron Gate, and other Poems, 8vo. 6s. 6d.
 Olm's (O. H.) Ballads of Babylon, 8vo. 2s. 6d.
 Tennyson's (A.) Works, Royal Edition, with Portrait and 24 Illustrations, royal 8vo. 3s. 6d.
 Thompson's (J.) Vane's Story, Widdell and On-ot-Busell, and other Poems, 8vo. 5s. 6d.

Philosophy.

Turner's (G. L.) Wish and Will, an Introduction to the Psychology of Desire and Volition, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Duffy's (Mr C. G.) Young Ireland, 8vo. 31/ cl.
 Leader's (J. D.) Mary Queen of Scots in Captivity, 8vo. 31/ cl.
 Nicoll's (H. J.) Great Orators: Burke, Pitt, Sheridan, Fox, 2 v. 3 s.
 Page's (M. A.) Leaders of Men, a Book of Biographies, 16mo. 4/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

Burde's (A.) The Niger and the Senegal, Travels in Central Africa, from the French by Mrs. G. Sturge, cr. 8vo. 10/6
 Eden's (C. H.) Africa seen through its Explorers, cr. 8vo. 5/6
 Forde's (G.) A Lady's Tour in Corvica, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 31/ cl.
 Gumpelshausen & Allen's Royal Relief Atlas of all Parts of the World, 4to. 31/ 1/2 bd.

Poetry.

Chenre Pro Lago Nautica, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
 Crosses, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Story of Achilles from Homer's Iliad, edited by the late J. E. Pratt and W. Luff, 12mo. 4/ cl.

Science.

Bartholinus's (R.) Treatise on Practice of Medicine, for Use of Students, 8vo. 21/ cl.
 Dauguet's (Dr.) Manual of Ophthalmology, translated by C. S. Jefferies, 12mo. 4/ cl.
 Leming's (J.) Quantity Survey, for the Use of Architects, Builders, and Engineers, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.
 Proctor's (R. A.) The Poetry of Astronomy, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.

General Literature.

Aunt Milly's Childhood, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.
 Away on the Waters, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Blackmore's (E. D.) Mary Anselmy, a Yorkshire Tale, 4/ cl.
 Bourne's (S.) Trade, Population, and Food, a Series of Papers on Economic Statistics, 8vo. 13/ cl.
 Butler's (S.) Unconquered History, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
 Cooper's (J.) Old Fashioned Stories, Popular Library Edn., 3/6
 Conventual Women, by Claudia, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
 Dippes's Book of Epitaphs, Humorous, Eccentric, Anecdotal, and Remarkable, cr. 8vo. 2/4 cl.
 Dorothy, a Country Story, in Elegiac Verse, 8vo. 5/ cl.
 Dorothy Compton, a Story of the 15th, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
 Dunlop's (C. J.) and King's (A.) Free-Lance Toldings in Many Lands, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
 Echoes from the Coudon, cr. 8vo. 9/ cl.
 Fenton's (J.) Early Hebrew Life, 8vo. 5/ cl.
 Fitzgerald's (F. J.) The Lancasters and their Friends, 2/6 cl.
 Gibber's (A.) Duties and Duties, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
 Gomme's (R. W.) The Path of the Just, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
 Gray's (E. C.) Wise Words and Loving Deeds, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
 Guest Book (The), An Autograph Record of Arrivals, 8vo. 9/ cl.
 Hooking's (S. E.) Reddyford, or Creed and Character, 3/6 cl.
 Hodder's (H.) Tom Horiot, his Adventures and Misadventures, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
 Hood's (E. F.) Vignettes of the Great Revival, 12mo. 4/ cl.
 Hope's (A. R.) Stories of Long Ago Retold, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
 Hunt's (M. B.) Little Remembrance, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 James's (H. jun.) Confidence, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Japp's (A. H.) German Life and Literature, 8vo. 15/ cl.
 Johnson's (V. W.) The Outland Fairies, illustrated, 4/ cl.
 Kingston's (W. H.) The Boy who Bullied with Blake, 3/6 cl.
 Prosser's (Mrs.) Unkay, and Number Twenty Nine, 3/6 cl.
 Reaney's (Mrs. G.) Rose Gurney's Discovery, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
 Rust's (C. T.) Break of Day in the Eighteenth Century, 2/6 cl.
 Smith's (J. M.) The Wooing of the Water Witch, 4/ cl.
 Three Cups (The), or the Girls of St. Andrews, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
 Umphrey's (Mrs.) A Mother for a Daughter, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.
 Winchester's (M. E.) A Nest of Sparrows, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.

Fiction.

Theory.

Lippert (J.) Der Sozialcult in seinen Beziehungen zur Altheologischen Religion, 3m. 60.
 Luthardt's (C. E.) Gründe u. Gründe, Predigten, 7th series, 3m. 60.
 Weber (F.) Die Altheologische Pädagogische Theologie, 7m. 60.

Law.

Whitaker (C. G. v.) Pandekten, edited by O. v. Wächter, Part I, 12m.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Leaning (O.) Bas-Reliefs der Neuzeit, Part I, 3m.
 Stark (K. B.) Vorlesungen u. Aufsätze aus dem Gebiete der Archäologie, edited by G. Hirtel, 12m.
 Triarte (C.) Florance, Part I, 30fr.

Drama.

Prüfer (R.) Geschichte des Neuen Dramas, Vol. 1, Part 2, 10m.

Philosophy.

Hartke (F.) Die Philosophie in ihrer Geschichte, Part 2, 4m. 50.

History and Biography.

Prison (R. F. v.) Das Meinum Leben, 3 vols. 12m.
 Hartwig (O.) Forschungen zur Situation Geschichte der Stadt Florenz, 16m.
 Lamb (F. J.) Das Ägyptische Vornit, Parts 4 and 5, 3m.

Philosophy.

Adam (L.) Die Odyssee u. der Epische Cyklus, 3m.
 Carpenter (W. H.) Neuzeitliche Grammatik, 4m.
 Hilgard (A.) Die Alte Grammatik Dionysii Thracii, 3m.
 Just (F.) Neuzeitliche Grammatik, 3m. 10.
 Körner (E.) Angelsächsische Grammatik, Part 2, 3m.
 Plotin's Enneades, edited by H. F. Müller, Vol. 2, 3m.
 Popovic (G.) Wörterbuch der Serbischen u. Deutschen Sprache, Vol. 2, 1m. 20.

Science.

Bailett (F.) Handbuch der Organischen Chemie, Part 1, 3m.
 Cogitvina (D.) Centigrad-Photometer, 2m. 20.
 Koutoly (N. v.) Beobachtungen am Observatorium in Ogynia, Vol. 2, 3m.
 Meuser (O.) Elastizität u. Festigkeit der Menschlichen Knochen, 3m.

General Literature.

Triller (E.) et Senne (C. L.) Monsieur Candide, 2fr. 50.
 Vincent (J.) Miles Fidei, 2fr. 50.

THE BIOGRAPHERS OF LOCKE.

Oxford, Nov. 2, 1880.

It is no fault of mine if in this letter I should appear to be changing from an attitude of friendliness towards Mr. Fox Bourne to one of at least temporary hostility. In writing my book I endeavoured to seize every opportunity of paying him a compliment, and, even after his passionate and unreasonable letter to you, I hoped that I had replied to him with the utmost courtesy. But he now repeats his attacks with increased bitterness, and I am obliged, therefore, so far as is consistent with self-respect, to meet him on his own ground.

Mr. Fox Bourne, notwithstanding the statements in my former letter, persists in describing my book as a "barefaced compilation" from his. This I can only regard as a slanderous assertion thrown out for the mere purpose of annoyance. If my book be simply a compilation from his he has a legal remedy, and, unless he be prepared to try that remedy, he has, by the laws which govern the correspondence of gentlemen, no right to reiterate a statement which I have emphatically denied. There are many individual pages of what Mr. Fox Bourne is pleased to call an "epitome" which were not composed till I had spent several hours, a few even till I had spent some days, in the consultation of authorities; and I certainly could not estimate the aggregate time spent in the preparation of my biographical chapters alone at less than four months of continuous labour. I believe that I have not taken a single fact contained in any other printed book on Mr. Fox Bourne's sole authority. And, though I do not in the least pretend to put the time spent by me in the examination of MSS. against that spent by Mr. Fox Bourne himself, I have not been idle in this respect. Thus, if Mr. Fox Bourne will compare our extracts from the papers of the Board of Trade, he will not find that mine were copied from his, and, on recurrence to the original authority, he may possibly even be willing to correct one of his extracts from mine. But I am perfectly aware that in a case of this kind, where there is a ruling passion which, to use Locke's phrase, has entered the mind like "the sheriff of the place with all the posse," it is in vain to employ argument. It is a curious instance of the strength of a preconceived idea that Mr. Fox Bourne is so fully possessed with the notion that I can know nothing of Locke except what I have derived from his book, that, when he detects me (on p. 17) using the expression "we find" in reference to an entry on the Fire of London in Locke's 'Register,' he exults in having discovered a startling example of my unfounded 'affectations of original research.' I had no idea that this innocent expression implied so much meaning as Mr. Fox Bourne reads into it. But perhaps I may tell him that I was by no means first indebted to his book for a knowledge of Locke's 'Register.' It is contained in Boyle's 'Collected Works,' the pages of which I was constantly turning over years ago in preparing my edition of Bacon's 'Novum Organum.'

It is particularly ungenerous of Mr. Fox Bourne to represent my book as designed to supplant his. My book is intended as a popular delineation of Locke's life, character, and works; Mr. Fox Bourne's is an elaborate compilation of all the materials which he could find for an exhaustive life of Locke. I cannot conceive any one, who would otherwise purchase Mr. Fox Bourne's volumes, contenting himself with the possession of the 126 pages to which the biographical matter of my book is confined. On the other hand, I hope that many of my readers will be led on by interest in the subject to possess themselves both of some of Locke's works and of Mr. Fox Bourne's life. Nor do I see why the publication of my book should in any way prevent Mr. Fox Bourne from reproducing his own in a compressed and cheaper form. There are undoubtedly many persons who would be glad to have a life of Locke, as of many other great English authors, in one thick volume when they do not care to buy two.

Mr. Fox Bourne has compelled me to revert to two topics which I would gladly have passed over with merely the slight allusion which I made to them in my former letter. In his first letter he challenged me to state any important respects in which my book was more precise than his, and in my reply I instanced (without intending them to be exhaustive) two points, the account of Locke's Oxford life and the translations from Latin. As regards the first, he seems to be still unaware of the ridiculous character of some portions of his account of Locke's student life at Oxford as contained in his second chapter (a chapter, I am bound to say, standing alone in his book, but unfortunately calculated to deter academical readers from proceeding any further). This being the case, I can hardly be surprised that Mr. Fox Bourne fails to appreciate the points, both positive and negative, in which I regard my account of Locke's connexion with Oxford as superior to his own. In his second letter Mr. Fox Bourne insists upon my giving specimens of his translations from Latin, an exposure which I had hoped to spare him. As, however, he says I have made a "grave insinuation" against him which I ought to "substantiate," I have no alternative but to "substantiate" my "insinuation" by at least one instance. On p. 155 of his second volume Mr. Fox Bourne thus begins a translation from one of Locke's letters to Limborch, bearing date June 6th, 1689: "I doubt not you have heard before this that toleration is now established among us by law; not with such breadth as you and true men like you, free from Christian arrogance and hatred, would desire; but 'tis something to get anything." The original runs as follows: "Tolerantiam apud nos jam tandem lege stabilitam te ante hæc audire, nullus dubito. Non ea forsitan latitudine, qua tu et tui similes vari et sine ambitione christiani optarent. Sed aliquid est prodire tenus." I do not at all deny that Mr. Fox Bourne has here succeeded in avoiding "the pedantic tone inevitable in a very literal translation." But any of your readers who have received the rudiments of a classical education will, I think, agree with me that he has hardly "retained the sense of the original." This feat of translation by no means stands alone. Any one interested in collecting curiosities of the kind will find a still more valuable possession in vol. 1, p. 48. And, generally, I think it may be said of Mr. Fox Bourne's translations that they are more successful in avoiding "pedantry" than in "retaining the sense of the original."

Mr. Fox Bourne's reiterated complaint that I did not communicate with him during the progress of my work resolves itself, I suppose, simply into this: that I did not apply for a permission which was not needed, in order that he might have the opportunity of refusing it.

I have only to add that I have no intention of engaging in a protracted controversy with Mr. Fox Bourne. According to the strictest laws of chivalry, a man may decline to prolong a combat with an antagonist who does not observe the rules of the lists. Should you continue to open your columns to Mr. Fox Bourne's attacks upon me, you can henceforth do so without the slightest fear that I shall encroach upon them in return.

I will now leave Mr. Fox Bourne in the hands of Mr. Noel Sainsbury, whose charge of appropriating a mass of unpublished material without any acknowledgment whatsoever is incomparably graver than the charge which Mr. Fox Bourne has brought against me, of employing some of his published materials, and only making seven acknowledgments of the fact.

THOMAS FOWLER.

I VERY much regret having to encroach yet again on the space of the Athenæum, but Mr. Sainsbury's note of October 30th requires an answer.

Either Mr. Sainsbury's memory or mine is at fault on some of the points on which he touches. It is quite true that, while I was collecting information about Locke, I called upon him at the Record Office, and asked him to assist me in consulting the Shaftesbury Papers, of which he had prepared an official calendar, and which were then lodged in the room occupied by him and under his special custody. Seeing him thus frequently, I doubtless talked freely with him about the materials I had obtained from Mr. Burrell as well as other matter in my possession; but I do not remember his having told me of his "ambition" to write a life of Locke, or his offering me any "private notes and memoranda" in his possession. It is quite likely that, with his ample knowledge of seventeenth century history, and especially of our early colonial affairs, of which I had long before availed myself, and for which I had acknowledged my obligations to him in print, he may have helped me with hints and suggestions that were useful to me; indeed, I am under the impression that he was good enough to lend me a printed book from his library, and I have a lively and grateful recollection of the assistance he rendered me in clearing away difficulties, identifying handwritings, and such other work as his long and wide acquaintance with manuscripts made easy to him; but I neither recollect nor can trace in my memoranda his having lent or given me any "private notes which he had been collecting for years," and, as he seems to admit that he had abandoned any project he may have had for writing a life of Locke, I may take it for granted that he did not then, and should not now, object to my having undertaken the work. I believe that all the favours I asked or obtained from him were of such a sort as other officials in the Record Office, in the British Museum, and in other great storehouses of manuscripts, have always been amiable enough to render me, and not much greater than any literary student has some reason to expect from any gentleman employed by the Government to facilitate the public use of the literary treasures in its keeping.

Mr. Sainsbury blames me for not "acknowledging whence and from whom I derived all my new materials." He seems not to be aware that I derived a great deal of my material from other sources, and only a part—though a very important part—from the Shaftesbury Papers in the Record Office. Of my indebtedness to that and to all other sources I believe I made ample acknowledgments both in my preface and in several hundred foot-notes. It never occurred to me that Mr. Sainsbury expected his zealous performance of his official duties to be specially advertised, or I should have been glad to honour him. If I owe him any apologies, however, I must also apologise to some dozens of other librarians and assistant librarians, clerks, messengers, and others, to whom my gratitude is none the less real because, in helping me in various researches during the past twenty years or more, they have only efficiently performed the duties they were paid to perform.

Mr. Sainsbury also blames me because, in a newspaper report of a lecture which I delivered five and a half years ago, I was credited with having "discovered" certain unpublished treatises by Locke. I am hardly to be held responsible for the wording of a very short newspaper report, and I made no claim in my book to the "discovery" of those treatises or of the other valuable manuscripts which I believe I was the first to transcribe from the Shaftesbury Papers. The extreme value of those papers was first made known by the late Mr. W. D. Christie, who used them in his 'Life of the First Earl of Shaftesbury' (1871), and it was the disclosure of their value then made, I believe, which led the present Earl generously to transfer those portions of them which were of public interest to the Record Office, in order that there they might be open to public inquiry.

The late Deputy-Keeper of the Records made a wise choice of Mr. Sainsbury as the official to be entrusted with the delicate business of arranging and cataloguing these documents, and Mr. Sainsbury's catalogue or calendar was in due time published in a Parliamentary paper. It was from Mr. Christie's work that I learned that most important Locke MSS. were among the Shaftesbury Papers, and the Parliamentary paper, with which I was well acquainted long before the interview with Mr. Sainsbury to which he refers, first showed me the nature and extent of these Locke MSS. In my preface I clearly stated the use I had made of this collection.

As I am not the author of the 'Life of Rubens' to which Mr. Sainsbury refers, and as I fail to see the reason for which it is introduced into this controversy, unless by way of further illustrating the unfairness that authors of small books may show towards authors of large books within their reach, it is not necessary for me to defend it against his insinuations; nor do other parts of his letter call for any reply from me.

H. R. FOX BOURNE.

THE DANISH PASSIONAL.

11, King William Street, West Strand, Nov. 10, 1880.

PERMIT me, by way of supplement to Mr. Reid's notice in the Athenæum of October 30th (p. 577) of the Danish Passional now in my possession, to offer some particulars from a bibliographical point of view.

Of the fifty-one woodcut illustrations, twelve are of Old Testament subjects, the remainder, or thirty-nine, of the New, proper to the Passional and life of our Lord; and opposite each of them is the text of Scripture and a prayer suited to it by Luther.

The preface of "Doctor Martin Luther to the Christian Reader" I am almost tempted to give in extenso, as it has been kindly rendered into English by a Danish gentleman and neighbour.

"I have thought it well," Luther says, "to have the Passional with figures and pictures put to the Prayer-Book, more especially for the sake of children and simple folk, who by figures and parables are better made to mark and retain the words of God than by mere words and doctrine, even as St. Mark writeth that Christ also for the sake of the simple hath preached nothing but parables to the people."

"I have also added some more stories out of the Bible [those of the Old Testament] and added sentences and sayings from the text, in order that it may the better and more surely be marked and retained, and that all for a good beginning and example, if peradventure some would follow it and improve it, if therefor suitable and able."

"For I do not reckon it to be wrong if such histories were painted in rooms and closets, with the texts thereto, so that one might ever have the Word and works of God before the eyes in all places, and thereby exercise one's fear of God and faith in God."

"And what harm would it do if any one were thus to get all the most curious histories in the whole Bible painted into a book, that such a book should be called the Layman's Bible? Of a truth one cannot hold the Word and works of God too much or too often before the common people. . . . But if any one should gape and despise this, I lay no stress on that. They need not our doctrine, nor will we have ought to do with their teaching, and thus we are easy to please. Misuse and false confidences I have always condemned and punished, just as well in pictures as in all other matters. But what is not misuse I have always left standing, and order it to be left and kept, so that one may bring it to a useful and blessed application. Thus we teach our own and the simple. The self-wise shall neither be our disciples nor masters," &c.

Until its appearance at the sale of Dr. Laing's remarkably rich collection of books on Scottish literature, the volume was quite unknown, and it became the gem of the sale. In his habitual candour he wrote in pencil, inside of the first board, "On vellum, supposed unique. A mistake. I have since seen another in the Royal Library at Copenhagen. D. L." And I have searched every bibliographical work from Bear to Graesse without finding the slightest indication either of it or of its German prototype. It thus appears not only to represent the Danish text, but that of an utterly extinct original. Seckendorf ('Historia Reformationis') notes a small volume reprinted in 1563, 'Baptism und seinen G[e]k[te]n, gemalet und geschrieben,' sixty-six woodcuts, with preface and epilogue by Luther, but was evidently ignorant of the Passional, circumstances in perfect accord with the purely educational object of the work, like the 'Biblia Pauperum,' 'Speculum Humane Salvationis,' and other early block-books of the fifteenth century, which were so used or misused as to be known only by their extreme rarity, or to have disappeared and remained altogether unknown.

In this case the only two copies existing of a doubtless extensive impression owe their preservation to the fact of their having been printed on vellum.

The volume is in perfect preservation, in a second binding (half gilt) of the seventeenth century. The impressions of the woodcut illustrations are beautiful, and look almost like enamel. Bink, the artist, was a scholar of Albert Dürer, and, according to Bryan ('Dictionary of Painters and Engravers'), "holds a distinguished rank among those denominated by the name of the Little Masters, on account of the small size of their prints. His style is very neat, similar to the works of Aldegraver, but his plates evince greater facility in the execution. His drawing is more correct, and there is a more agreeable taste in the turn of his figures."

C. J. BREWSTER.

THE PRIMAVERIA IN LITERATURE.

6, Bedford Gardens, Nov. 5, 1880.

If you will favour me with the small space needed, I should like to set myself right in your columns with regard to a literary matter in which my name has (as it appears to me) been not fairly dealt with.

In Macmillan's Magazine for September there was an article written by Mr. Harry Quilter, named 'The New Renaissance'; and in that article was the following sentence: "We know that . . . one Rossetti wrote poems and painted pictures, and the other wrote criticisms on them, and so influenced both arts."

I wrote to the editor a note for publication, asking whether this sentence "means (as, according to grammatical rules, it naturally would mean) that I wrote criticisms on the poems and pictures of my brother, Dante Rossetti, and, if so, what is the evidence which he [Mr. Quilter] adduces in proof of this?" or whether the meaning really intended was that I wrote criticisms on poems and pictures generally, other than those of my brother.

I received in reply a letter (not written by Mr. Quilter) acknowledging that "the construction is lax, and the words were not intended to bear the meaning which they do bear"; and it was added that Mr. Quilter was "very sorry" for this "oversight." I therefore had reason to expect that, when my note should come to be printed, a simple admission of inexactness would be made. But in this I was mistaken.

In Macmillan's Magazine for November Mr. Quilter professes to "justify" his assertion, in an answer which he expressly declares to be "final." His so-called justification consists of a reference to a passage in a book of mine published in 1867. He does not quote the passage verbatim, but I will do so: "The real and only reason why I do not here republish any reviews of my brother is simply that he never has been to any moderate extent an exhibiting artist, and that consequently I never have had an opportunity of criticizing his works; except in two or three instances, when the works exhibited were of secondary importance, and the reviews were correspondingly slight." This statement is strictly true, and I here reaffirm it. The "two or three instances" in question were of the remote date 1850 to 1852.

Such is the extent to which Mr. Quilter can justify, in his final answer, his assertion that I wrote criticisms on my brother's pictures. His final answer passes in total silence his original statement that I wrote criticisms on my brother's poems.

W. M. ROBERTS.

Literary Gossip.

Messrs. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will sell by auction on the 17th inst. a copy of the first edition of Shelley's 'Queen Mab,' with copious manuscript emendations in the autograph of Mrs. Shelley, altering the poem to the 'Dæmon of the World.' Mr. Buxton Forman in his edition of Shelley's works, vol. iii. pp. 459-68, doubts the existence of a second annotated copy. We have not examined the copy announced for sale, but may it not be that seen by Medwin, whose statement is looked upon with so much doubt?

We are glad to hear that Mr. Thomas Hardy is recovering from the severe illness which has caused much anxiety to his friends.

PROF. SAYCE will leave England in the course of the present month for a tour in Rhodes, Cyprus, and Phœnicia. He will, we understand, pay a special visit to Tyre and the Wady Akkabah for the purpose of inspecting the prehistoric remains discovered by M. Lortet.

Messrs. BESANT AND RICE have completed a new novel for the Graphic, to run for six months, the publication of which will begin on December 4th. The title is 'The Chaplain of the Fleet,' and it will be published simultaneously in the American Queen (New York), Melbourne Argus (Australia), Toronto Globe (Canada), and in a German version in a Berlin paper. The German translation is from the pen of the well-known scholar Herr Paul Jungling, who has been engaged upon the translation of Messrs. Besant and Rice's other novels. An Italian version of the novels of Messrs. Besant and Rice is being prepared by Signora Marta Saffratti, the latest of the novels published being 'Al Pergolato di Clovia,' which appears in Le Fratte, Naples.

As for some years past, Messrs. Besant and Rice have again written the Christmas number of Charles Dickens's All the Year Round. The title this year is 'Over the Sea with the Sailor.' The number will be issued early in December. A leading feature of the Christmas number of the World will likewise be from the pens of Messrs. Besant and Rice. 'The Ten Years' Tenant' is the title of this story, which contains a narrative of events as marvellous as those related in 'The Case of Mr. Lucraft,' by the same authors, which appeared in the World several years ago. The Christmas number of Home will contain contributions by Mrs. Oliphant, Miss Thackeray, Mr. Laurence Oliphant, Mr. Frederick Locker, &c.

It is notable that the present month has witnessed the first issue of a London University list in which the B.A. degree is granted to lady candidates, two being placed in the first class, and two in the second.

In the sale of Messrs. W. Tegg & Co.'s stock, which took place this week at Messrs. Hodgson's rooms, upwards of sixteen thousand volumes of the "Family Library" were catalogued. These books, which many years ago were popular, have long been lost sight of by the booksellers. We hear that, notwithstanding the sale of the entire stock of books, copyrights, &c., belonging to the firm of W. Tegg & Co., Mr. Tegg intends to continue in business as a publisher on his own account.

THE new comprehensive 'Reference Catalogue,' which has long been in progress in the hands of Mr. J. Whitaker, the energetic editor of the Bookseller, is expected to be ready at the end of this month. The index, which will be more extensive than was expected, has caused the delay which has occurred.

PROF. BAIN writes:—

"As you have given a wide currency to a rumour, founded no doubt on my resignation of my chair in Aberdeen University, that I am about to settle in London, with the view of editing a series of manuals in mental philosophy, I beg you will allow me to say that I have formed no such intention. It may concern some persons to know explicitly, that the task assigned to me is one that I never contemplated, and am very unlikely to undertake."

Messrs. W. BLACKWOOD & SONS will shortly issue a Scotch story, in pamphlet form, by the author of 'Flitters, Tatters, and the Counsellor.' It will appear simultaneously in America. The tale, which is a "School Board" experience, is entitled 'Baubie Clarke,' and is to be illustrated by the author of 'Gleanings from Gladstone,' Mr. G. R. Halkett.

THE catalogue of the library of Baron James de Rothschild in Paris, of which the Athenæum had a notice some time ago, is in the printer's hands.

THE Armenian inscriptions, which have long defied the skill of decipherers, have, it is said, been read by Prof. Sayce. He has for some considerable time been engaged on the work of decipherment, and has, we believe, succeeded in translating the greater portion of them. His labours have been much hampered by the inaccurate nature of the copies, those of M. Schultz being the only ones accessible; the copies made by Sir Henry Layard, which were far more accurate as well as more copious in the number of inscriptions, being unfortunately lost. The decipherment of these inscriptions was attempted by the late Dr. Mordtmann, but with little success, owing to his scanty knowledge of Assyrian, and also to his having formed a theory as to the language being akin to Armenian. The inscriptions being in script and in construction based on models of the middle Assyrian Empire, a knowledge of Assyrian has greatly assisted in the decipherment. The language has but scant affinities to any existing dialect, but in some few points resembles the Georgian. The translation of these inscriptions will fill up an important gap in Western Asiatic history, and will possibly lead to the decipherment of the Hittite texts, which, there seems reason to suppose, are in a degree akin to the language of the tribes of Western Armenia.

THE proposed elevation of the Punjab University College to the status of a university was discussed at a recent meeting of the Committee of the Indian Association at Lahore. The Committee recorded their disapproval of the educational system of the Punjab University College, and their opinion that the severance of the connexion between the colleges of the Punjab and the Calcutta University would be a calamity.

MR. CORHAM, Commissioner at Larnaca in Cyprus, has discovered a Phœnician inscription on the new road from Scala to Nicosia, dedicated to Esmun by Sirdal, grandson of Reshiathion and interpreter of the two courts. It is of the period of Melkiathon, King of Citium and Idalium, who reigned about B.C. 350. Other inscriptions of Reshiathion are known.

THE Danish patriot and political writer, Peter Christian Koch, died at Copenhagen on the 2nd inst. He was born at Gram in North Sleevig, February 19th, 1807, and greatly distinguished himself by his advocacy of the Danish cause during the wars of 1848 and 1864. His most popular work was his so-called '220 Danish Proverbs.'

THE Folk-lore Society has undertaken the publication of a new work by the Rev. Walter Gregor, of Pitaligo, entitled 'Folk-lore of the North-East of Scotland.' Mr. Gregor is the author of an exhaustive glossary of Banffshire words, published by the Philological Society.

A MEMBER of the Manchester School Board, Mr. Joseph Gillow, is engaged in the production of an historical treatise on the Roman Catholic colleges and schools of England from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the restoration of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in England in 1850. Mr. Gillow has been able to obtain for his work information from original sources at Ushaw and other well-known Catholic seminaries in England.

IT is at last proposed that an omission of ordinary courtesy to honorary graduates of Cambridge University shall be remedied, so far as library privileges go. Hitherto honorary graduates, however distinguished, even though residing in Cambridge, have had only the privileges of respectable strangers in the library. If the University honours men with a degree, it ought to be willing to give them all its privileges.

THE Ascham Society, formed to promote social intercourse among persons engaged in educational work, will hold its first meeting in the rooms of the Society, 18, Baker Street, Portman Square, on Wednesday next, at 8.30, when Dr. Richardson, F.R.S., will read a paper on 'Temperaments in Relation to Education.' The future meetings of the Society will be held on the second and fourth Wednesdays in each month.

THE last volume of Gustav Freytag's 'Ahnen' is in the press.

DON P. DE GATANGOS has discovered in the course of his researches at Simancas interesting notices of Cervantes, and also of other great writers of the golden age of Spanish literature, more especially of Lope de Vega and Calderon.

THE article in the current number of the Quarterly Review on the newspaper press is said to be from the pen of Mr. J. F. Hitch-

RUSSIAN translations of Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress' and 'Holy War' are to be published shortly, along with the illustrations which appear in Messrs. Cassell's editions.

MESSRS. MASTERS & Co. will shortly publish sundry stories for children: 'Our Next-Door Neighbour,' by Stella Austin; 'The Little Blue Lady, and other Tales,' by Mrs. Mitchell; and 'Auld Fernie's Son,' by the author of 'The Chorister Brothers,' &c.

PROF. H. GRAETZ is engaged upon a commentary on the Psalms, which will most likely not be out before the end of next year.

MR. DE SOYRES's edition of Pascal's 'Provincial Letters,' which we mentioned some time ago, will be published shortly by Messrs. Deighton, Bell & Co.

WE have received a letter from Mr. R. Lecky, denying that Dean Burrowes wrote "The night before Larry was stretched." The song is attributed to the dean by Lever and other writers, but Mr. Lecky appears to have disproved the ascription in Notes and Queries, 5th S. xi. 277.

MR. POSTGATE, of Trinity, Cambridge, has become Professor of Comparative Philology at University College, Gower Street. Prof. Jevons intends to resign the chair of Political Economy.

SCIENCE

A Physical Treatise on Electricity and Magnetism. By J. E. H. Gordon, B.A. 2 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

MR. GORDON, the Assistant Secretary of the British Association, has here given, in two handsome octavo volumes, a clear and interesting account of the best modern instruments and methods of experiment in electricity and magnetism. The illustrations are particularly good; and to students who have not the opportunity of inspecting such collections as that of the Cavendish Laboratory, it is no small advantage to have good drawings of first-class instruments. The descriptions of the use of the instruments are clear and businesslike. The author is evidently an enthusiastic worker in the subject which he has undertaken to expound.

There is no other book from which so much information can be obtained respecting the electrical researches of the last few years; those, for example, relating to specific inductive capacity with its relation to index of refraction, equipotential lines in a plate, the phenomena of discharge in vacuum tubes, Crookes's radiant matter, Planté's secondary batteries, contact electricity, comparison of the static and magnetic units of electricity, magnetic effect of a rapidly moved static charge, magnetic rotation of plane of polarization, double refraction produced in glass by electro-static strain, polarization of light reflected from a magnet, and variation of resistance of selenium under the action of light.

The book also gives a clear notion of some of the latest steps in electrical hypothesis; for example, Maxwell's electro-magnetic theory of light. We may give a quotation on this point as a specimen of the author's style:—

"Prof. Clerk Maxwell's theory is briefly this: Electro-magnetic induction is propagated through space by strains or vibrations of the same ether which conveys the light vibrations, or, in other words, 'light itself is an electro-magnetic disturbance.' Let us examine the evidence which causes us to believe that the luminiferous and the electro-magnetic ethers are one and the same. The first point of resemblance between the modes of propagation of light and of electro-magnetic induction is that in both cases it can be shown mathematically that the disturbance is at right angles to the direction of propagation. It is known that the waves of light take place in directions at right angles to the ray. Prof. Clerk Maxwell has shown that the directions of both the magnetic and electric disturbances are also at right angles to the line of force..... Another argument in favour of the theory is that it gives a real mathematical reason for the fact that all good true conductors are exceedingly opaque. All metals, for instance, conduct and are opaque. The conduction of electricity by transparent liquids takes place in a different manner from the conduction by metals, and does not affect the deduction, which can be shown mathematically to be a necessary consequence of the theory, namely, that all good true conductors must be opaque to light. But far more important evidence in favour of the view that the ethers are not two, but one, is obtained by comparing the velocities with which optical and electro-magnetic disturbances are propagated under different circumstances. If it can be shown that the velocity of electro-magnetic induction is sensibly the same as that of light, not only in air and vacuum, but in all transparent bodies, we shall be quite sure that there are not two ethers, but one; for it would be unreasonable to suppose that the whole of every part of space is filled with two ethers which are identical in the only properties which we can examine, but which are yet different and not the same. And further, if the velocities nearly agree, but not quite, we must reserve our judgment; but we may be allowed to speculate on the possibility of the same ether vibrating somewhat differently when disturbed by electricity and by light..... On the whole, a sufficiently close agreement has been observed to give us fair hope that some day the discrepancies may be explained and eliminated; and meanwhile the close agreement of the velocities of light and electro-magnetic induction in air and in gases, and the numerous direct relations which exist between light and electricity, leave us but little doubt that they are very closely related, and that their effects are but two forms of that common energy whose nature is unknown, but which certainly underlies all physical phenomena."

Besides these novelties there is a tolerably full statement of the leading facts and conventions in electrical science, systematically arranged, and given with as much precision as can be reasonably expected from one who does not profess to be a mathematician. The clear and lively style of the book makes it pleasant reading for a learner, and the large amount of information and reference regarding modern work which is collected in it renders it a most valuable book to the professional investigator.

ASTRONOMICAL NEWS

THE supplementary number of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society has been published. The most interesting paper in it is by the Astronomer-Royal, and is itself supplementary to one communicated by him to the April meeting of the Society, 'On the Theoretical Value of the Acceleration of the Moon's Mean Motion in Longitude produced by the Change of Eccentricity of the Earth's Orbit.' He remarks that in completing the calculation for that paper he had limited himself to the expressions for the change of magnitude of the force which (historically) had been adopted in the earliest investigations. In this he has employed the more complete formula, and the result differs but little from the value found by Prof. Adams. In fact, the amount of the acceleration in longitude now finally determined by Sir George Airy is $5''.4773$ in a century, and he remarks that he cannot terminate his investigations without offering to Prof. Adams his "very hearty congratulations on his success in making a correction so large to a theory so important." We must give in his own words the Astronomer-Royal's reflections on the present state of this difficult point in the theory of the moon's motion. "I think," he says, "that the lunar theory is now placed in a difficult position. With the elements formerly received the ancient eclipses were very well explained. With the modified theory the agreement cannot be so good, and perhaps is impossible. I am unwilling to abandon the interpretation of the ancient eclipses, and I think that reconciliation must be sought in some new secular term, or in some alteration of the mean motions either of the sun or of the moon." It is at any rate satisfactory to find the highest authorities now in agreement with regard to the theoretic value of the lunar acceleration. To the late M. Delaunay is due, as is well known, the suggestion that part of the larger observed value is apparent, and produced by a real retardation of the rotation of the earth, which he thought might arise from tidal action.

The same supplementary number of the Monthly Notices contains Mr. Gill's complete observations of the large comet (Comet I. 1880) observed last February in the southern hemisphere; the tail only being seen at the Cape Observatory in the early days of that month (commencing February 2nd), and the actual observations of the nucleus extending from February 10th to 15th. There is also a curious paper by Mr. R. H. M. Bosanquet and Prof. A. H. Sayce, giving a translation of the inscriptions on a Babylonian tablet recording different appearances of the planet Venus under the name Nin-ai-anna, i.e., "Lady of the defenses of heaven."

The planetary discoveries of Herr Palm and Prof. O. H. F. Peters announced in the Athenæum of October 16th refer, in fact, to the same planet, which was first discovered by Palm at Pola on September 30th, and afterwards independently by Peters at Clinton, New York, on October 10th, who estimated the magnitude at that time to be 9.3. The known number of this large family of small planets is, therefore, now 219.

No. 2346 of the Astronomische Nachrichten contains Dr. Julius Schmidt's account of his observations of the remarkable variable star discovered by Ceraski in the constellation of Cepheus, to which reference has been made. The period of variability is very nearly two days and a half, and the minima occurred during October at times which correspond in Western Europe to about midday and midnight alternately, so that the latter only could be observed in Europe. The two next night minima will occur on the 17th inst. at 9^h 50^m p.m., and on the 22nd at 9^h 36^m p.m., Greenwich time. Mr. Knott observed a minimum at Cuckfield, Sussex, on October 23rd, at 11^h 10^m p.m. "When at minimum," he remarks, "the colour of the variable was thought by me to be slightly ruddy. As it regained light this tint was lost, and the colour appeared to be white or bluish white." Schmidt asks the attention of observers to a very fine black spot in the most northern belt of Jupiter, which appears to indicate a rotation period five minutes shorter than do the strongly marked white clouds in the central zone of the planet. The opportunity is now favourable to test the unequal length of the planet's rotation as shown by different spots, and it is desirable not to confine our interest exclusively to the red spot.

Mr. H. Draper, of New York, announces to the French Academy (Comptes Rendus for October 26th) that he has succeeded in photographing the brilliant part of the Orion nebula, the duration of exposure being fifty minutes. "The photographs," he says, "show very distinctly the mottled appearance of the regions near the trapezium, and will serve as a standard of comparison for evidence of any future change in this part of the nebula."

The first part of the seventh volume of the Annales of the Observatory of Moscow has been published, under the superintendence of Prof. Bredichin.

A Dun Echt circular from Lord Lindsay announces the discovery by Mr. J. G. Lohse on Sunday night of a faint comet in the constellation Lacerta. The place at half-past three o'clock on Monday morning was R.A. 22° 46', increasing; N.P.D. 47° 26', decreasing.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

GEOGRAPHICAL.—Nat. R.—Lord Aberdeen, President in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Mr C. F. Rhand, Major General W. A. Myers, Col R. Harrington, Messrs R. Bayly, W. Calow, H. Collier, C. Cooper, G. H. Drew, C. R. Fewick, W. Powell, and M. S. Thorburn.—The paper read was 'Journey to the Lukuga Outlet of Lake Tanganyika, and the North End of Lake Nyassa,' by Mr J. Thomson.

GEOLOGICAL.—Nos. 3.—R. Etheridge, Esq., President, in the chair.—Mr. R. B. Woodward was elected a Fellow.—The following communications were read:—'On the Serpentine and Associated Rocks of Anglesey, with a Note on the so-called Serpentine of Porth-diaileyn (Caernarvonshire),' by Prof. T. G. Bonney.—'Note on the Occurrence of Remains of Recent Plants in Brown Iron Ore,' by Mr. J. A. Phillips.—and 'Note on the Locality of some Fossils found in the Carboniferous Rocks at Tang Shan, situated, in a N.N.E. direction, about 120 miles from Tientsin, in the Province of Chih Li, China,' by Mr. J. W. Corroll, with a Note by Mr. W. Carruthers.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Nov. 4.—Sir John Maclean in the chair.—On this, the opening meeting of a new session, the Chairman congratulated the members upon the success of the second meeting of the Institute at Lincoln, and on the exhibition of helmets and mail held at the rooms of the Institute in June.—Mr C. D. E. Fortnum read a paper 'On Finger Rings and on some Engraved Gems of the Early Christian Period,' which was in fact a continuation of former papers by the author on the same subject, which have been printed in the Archæological Journal. The paper treated respectively of Christian finger-rings, rings Christian or otherwise, and engraved gems of various kinds.—Prof. Westwood read a paper 'On an Earthenware Posset-pot inscribed "Job Heath, 1702,"' and gave an interesting account of the potters of the Heath family in Staffordshire, mention being also made of earthenware gravestones which may be seen in the district of Burslem.—Mr. Fortnum then read a second paper, entitled 'Notes on other Signacula of St. James of Compostella,' this subject being treated by the author for the second time. It would appear that yet the azarache of the Spaniards—is indigenous to Spain as well as to France and England; and Mr. Fortnum's fine examples of figures of St. James carved in this intractable material, and emanating from Compostella about the middle of the sixteenth century, show that the material was both plentiful and held in high estimation. The closing of monastic institutions in Italy appears to have brought to light many hitherto hidden objects of rarity and value.—Mr. Sparvel-Barly read a paper 'On Hadleigh Castle in Essex,' giving a careful historical and architectural account of this little-known fortress. Its whole history, it was shown, may, however, be found inscribed upon the public records, and it seems probable that Hadleigh Castle owed its erection to the master mind of William of Wykeham. But Wykeham's building took the place of an older structure, built by Hubert de Burgh in the early part of the thirteenth century. It finally passed from the Crown in the time of Edward VI.—The Chairman exhibited some fine enamels and bronzes from the Summer Palace, and personal ornaments from the South Sea Islands.—The Rev. A. Oriebar sent a fine tilting-helm with the wooden crest of Sir John Gostwick, Master of the Horse to Henry VIII., as well as a close helmet of the time of Charles I., of a later member of that now extinct family, from their tomb in Willington Church, Beds.—Mr. Thompson Watkins sent a photograph and notes on a remarkable inscribed stone of the time of Septimus Severus, found at Brough, Westmoreland, the Veteran of the Romans.

CHEMICAL.—No. 4.—Prof. H. E. Roscoe in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'On the Compounds of Vanadium and Sulphur,' by Mr. E. W. E. Kay;—'On the Atmospheric Oxidation of Phosphorus, and some Reactions of Ozone and Peroxide of Hydrogen,' by Mr. C. T. Kingzett: the author concludes that in the above oxidation both ozone and peroxide of hydrogen are formed: the former passes on in the current of air, the latter remains in the water in which the phosphorus is oxidised: in several experiments the proportion of peroxide of hydrogen to the ozone formed was as 1 to 2.—'On the Action of Zinc Ethyl on Benzoylic Cyanide,' by Messrs. E. Frankland and D. A. Louie;—'On Bismuth and Bismuth Compounds,' by Messrs. M. M. P. Muir, G. B. Hoffmeister, and C. E. Robba;—'On the Colour Properties and Relations of the Metals Copper, Nickel, Cobalt, Iron, Manganese, and Chromium,' by Mr. T. Bayley;—'Action of Diazo-naphthalin on Falcyclic Acid,' by Mr. F. Frankland;—'On the Bari-sulphates of Iron' by Mr. S. Pickering;—'Fourth Report on Researches in Chemical Dynamics,' by Messrs. C. E. A. Wright and A. E. Menke;—'On some Naphthalin Derivatives,' by Messrs. C. E. Armstrong and N. E. Graham;—and 'On Acetylorthomidoibenzoic Acid,' by Messrs. P. P. Bedson and A. J. King.

PHILOLOGICAL.—Nov. 5.—Mr. A. J. Ellis, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. Sweet opened the adjourned discussion on spelling reform. He reviewed the temporary decisions arrived at by the meetings last July, read from his printed 'Further Notes on English Spellings,' that had been sent to all members, passages from 'Caxton and Shakespeare to his altered spelling, but in the pronunciation of their respective times, and moved his printed resolutions on "Immediate Reforms of English Spelling." After much discussion, the first three of these were carried in the following form: 1. That an immediate partial phonetic reform of English spelling is both desirable and practicable. 2. That one of the chief objects of such a reform is to facilitate the acquisition of English spelling. 3. That the Society does not pledge itself not to go beyond the principle of etymological limitation in certain cases.—The discussion will be resumed on November 19th.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Nov. 9.—Mr. W. H. Barlow, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'On Machinery for Steel-making by the Bessemer and the Siemens Processes,' by Mr. E. Walker.—The Council reported that they had, since the last announcement, transferred six gentlemen from the class of Associated Members to the class of Members, and had admitted thirty-eight Students.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHEOLOGY.—Nov. 2.—At the opening meeting of the session 1880-81, the Secretary, in the absence of the author, Rev. A. H. Sayce, read the following communication: 'On the Bilingual Hittite and Cuneiform Inscription of Tarkondémou.' Dr. Mordtmann appears to have been the first (1852) to describe the boss bearing the inscription of Tarkondémou. At that time it was in the possession of M. Alexander Jovanoff, of Constantinople, who had obtained it at Smyrna. Made of very thin silver, 1½ "English lines" in diameter, circular in form, like half an orange, he thought it must have served as the knob of a staff or dagger. The outer surface was divided into two fields, the inner and larger of which had the figure of a clothed warrior standing erect in the centre, holding a spear in the left hand, and surrounded by a series of "symbols." Mr. Sayce, having come across the description, and recognized the Hittite character of the object, with some difficulty found the periodical in which the copy of it appeared, but his doubts as to its genuineness were not satisfied until he had compared Mordtmann's plate with the various casts extant. This comparison at once satisfied him that the copy we possess is as good as the original itself. The cuneiform legend he read as follows, "Tarrik Timme, King of the country of Erna."—Mr. T. Tyler, M.A., read a paper 'On the Inscription of Tarkutimme, and the Monuments from Jerahme, in the British Museum.'—Remarks were added by Rev. W. Wright, R. Cull, Rev. C. J. Ball, Dr. Birch, and the Secretary reminded the meeting that those who had seen the original silver boss had pronounced it a forgery; under any circumstances it could hardly be thought to be of the age stated. He also mentioned that the Society had a quantity of "Hittite" type in progress of manufacture, and hoped at an early date to publish correct plates of both the inscriptions from Hamath and Jerahme.

ENGLISH SPELLING REFORM ASSOCIATION.—
 Nov. 2.—Mr. A. J. Ellis in the chair.—Mr. E. Jones

read a paper on the necessary conditions in a better system of spelling intended for use in public elementary schools. These conditions were that each recognized sound should have a distinctive symbol; that the new spelling should be one that could be easily and readily printed; that it should be adaptable to both writing and printing; and that children taught by it should be enabled to pass readily to the ordinary spelling. The language at present was to a large extent spelled phonetically, and the exceptions could be levelled with comparatively small change. If, therefore, reformers confined themselves to adapting the existing material which was sufficient for the purpose, a better system could be devised without difficulty.

REMARKS FOR THE EVALUATING WORK

[illegible]Science Center.

On St. Andrew's Day, November 30th, the anniversary meeting of the Royal Society will be held and the Council elected for the year ensuing. The following nomination paper has been issued to the Fellows: President, W. Spottiswoods; Treasurer, J. Evans; Secretaries, Prof. G. G. Stokes and Prof. T. H. Huxley; Foreign Secretary, Prof. A. W. Williamson; Other Members of the Council, W. H. Barlow, Rev. Prof. T. G. Bonney, G. Bask, Right Hon. Sir R. A. Cross, E. Dunkin, A. J. Ellis, T. A. Hirst, W. Huggins, Prof. J. Marshall, Prof. D. Oliver, Prof. A. Newton, Prof. W. Odling, H. T. Stanton, Sir J. Paget, Bart., W. H. Perkin, and Lieut.-Gen. R. Strachey.

The new number of the Bulletin of the Imperial Academy of Sciences, St. Petersburg, among chemical, astronomical, and natural history papers, contains two by Mr. A. Faminin on a subject which has of late given occasion for much experimental research, namely, 'De la Décomposition de l'Acide Carbonique par les Plantes sous l'Eclairage Artificiel' and 'Effet de l'Intensité de la Lumière sur la Décomposition de l'Acide Carbonique par les Plantes.'

M. POINOT, in a note to the Académie des Sciences 'Sur les Effets produits par la Culture de l'Absinthe comme Insectifuge et sur son Application Préventive contre le Phylloxera,' states that no insect is ever found in the neighbourhood of Artemisia absinthium, and that branches of wormwood laid upon the soil act as fertilisers, and rid the vines of the phylloxera.

DR. SALVATOR VINCIG, of Catania, announces to scientific societies, by "proclamation," that a great revolution in the physical sciences is at hand, and that he has discovered, and will demonstrate are long by indubitable and invincible proofs, that the essence of heat, of light, of electricity, of magnetism, and of life is—oxygen.

The Graham Medal in gold, value about 12l., will be awarded for the best paper in pure or applied chemistry at the end of the present session by the Chemical Section of the Philosophical Society of Glasgow. Papers are to be sent not later than February 1st, 1881, to the secretary of the section.

THE forthcoming number of the Zeitschrift der Deutsch-morgenländischen Gesellschaft will contain an interesting article by Prof. August Müller, of Halle, 'On Arabic Sources for the History of Indian Medicine.'

SPALLANZANI, the celebrated professor of natural history at Padua, who died on the 30th of February, 1799, is at last likely to have a monument to his memory erected in his native town, Scandiano, in the duchy of Modena, where he was born on the 12th of January, 1729. The secretary of the Académie des Sciences, at the Séance of October 26th, announced the opening of a subscription for this purpose.

M. PANCHON on October 26th made an interesting communication to the Académie des Sciences on the influence of light on germination. He measured the quantities of oxygen absorbed by identical lots of seeds in light and darkness. Light accelerates the absorption in a very constant manner, regulated by the degree of illumination, the absorption being accelerated by low temperatures. M. Panchon states that the absorptive acceleration produced by daylight is continued for several hours in darkness.

FINE ARTS

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is NOW OPEN at THOMAS WILKINSON'S Gallery, 7, Regent-street, and the Theatre. Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

DONALD'S GREAT WORKS. 'CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM,' 'CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM,' and 'THE BRAZEN SERPENT' (the latter just completed), each 22 by 28 feet, with 'DREAM OF PAUL'S WIFE' (soldier of the Cross), 'NIGHT OF THE CRUCIFIXION,' 'SCENE OF CRUCIFIXION,' at the DONALD GALLERY, 25, New Bond Street. Jolly, Ten to Six.—1s.

GIFT-BOOKS

Daniel's Bible Gallery: Illustrations from the Old Testament. (Routledge & Sons.)—This large and costly volume is handsomely bound in white vellum and cloth, and is ornamented with decorations in gold and red. It contains woodcuts of at least average merit, reproducing designs by some of the noteworthy artists of the day. The best known of them are Sir F. Leighton, Messrs. Poynter, F. M. Brown, H. H. Armistead, S. Solomon, G. F. Watts, E. B. Jones, and W. H. Hunt. All the designs were cut by, or for, Messrs. Dalziel Brothers. The subjects of the illustrations have been chosen for their dramatic and picturesque rather than their didactic, ethical, or historical qualities. A prefatory notice says that "these Bible pictures" are from original drawings made expressly for this publication, and never before published. The fact is that several of them have been reproduced from pictures and designs made long ago by the artists, but they are not the less valuable on that account. The most liberal and powerful contributors to the series are the P.R.A. and Mr. Poynter. Messrs. Solomon, Armistead (not "Armistead," as the Contents has it), and E. Armitage (not "Armitage") have given full measure. Mr. F. M. Brown's 'Death of Egion' retains all its startling and quaint elements, but few of those characteristics which give force and passion to a wonderfully dramatic and energetic work; nor are the colour and chiaroscuro of the original picture adequately reproduced in the cut. This artist's vigorous and most original 'Elijah and the Widow's Son' has suffered less, but it by no means retains all its value. 'Joseph's Coat,' by the same painter, is the most fortunate of three reproductions of Mr. Brown's pictures, but even this might be better than it is. The prefatory note declares that the promoters of this book have been engaged on it for many years, and there is proof of this in the date "1863" on Mr. Hunt's single design of 'Elihu and Rebekah at the Well, the fine and sound draughtsmanship of which, e.g., the bare leg of the male figure, has hardly obtained justice at the wood-cutter's hands. The figure of the messenger is too "intense," and that of the damsel is somewhat self-consciously graceful; but it has much beauty, and is, above all, marked by nobility of style, a certain stateliness which is lacking. Among the best of Sir F. Leighton's contributions is 'Cain and Abel,' the conception of which is highly original. 'The Death of the First-born,' by the same painter, is a remarkably sculptural composition, admirably suited to the subject, and reminding us of a Cinquecento bas-relief; the boldest and most impressive of all is 'Samson carrying the Gates,' which evinces so powerful a grasp of the subject that the idea deserves to be painted on a large scale, for which its simplicity and energy are adapted. 'Samson and the Lion' is less fortunate, but this may be owing to the scale of the figures; it lacks nothing of passion. Every one will admire 'The Sun and Moon Stand Still,' by Mr. Armistead; it is full of movement, is composed in a picturesque manner, and tells the story perfectly. Hardly less admirable is 'The Fall of the Walls of Jericho,' by the same artist, the motive of which recalls the grandly monumental character of one of Blake's pictures of still passion. This book has been so long delayed that we recognize with fresh zest Mr. Solomon's skill and just feeling for Biblical subjects. Every one must admire his 'Melchizedek blesses Abram.' The figure of the boy in 'Abraham and Isaac' is first-rate, but that of the old man and the conception of the subject are not acceptable. Much better is 'The Infant Moses,' where pathos and a dainty grace unite with picturesque composition. There are considerable disproportions in 'Naomi and Obed,' which mar a good design. The best of Mr. Solomon's designs is 'Hosannah!' that figure of the young Jewish priest with the harp which we all know well. We regret that it is impossible to devote to Mr. Poynter's contributions so large a share of our space as their merits deserve. They are all remarkable for dramatic conception, characteristic accuracy of draughtsmanship, costume, and details; they abound in incident and are extraordinarily well arranged, i.e., each figure has been placed in right relationship to its fellows and accompaniments. The last is a quality of the highest importance, and imparts a strong individuality as well as verisimilitude to the compositions, which in consequence look unusually like nature. The position—by which word we do not mean the attitude—of Joseph in 'Joseph before Pharaoh,' especially with regard to the colonnade behind, is proof of careful study and the uncommon solidarity of the designer's view of his subject. Here, however, the important figures lack grandeur and dignity; their subordinates are of much greater value. 'Pharaoh honours Joseph' would make a splendid picture, because it exhibits potentialities of colour in combination with a simple and stately design of a subject which suits the mind of the artist much better than 'Moses keeping Jethro's Sheep.' But Mr. Poynter's most picturesque and dramatic contribution is the remarkable 'Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh,' a varied and complex composition, which in painting would "come out" wonderfully. We should also like to see 'Miriam dancing painted. When we have further mentioned Mr. E. B. Jones's 'Parable of the Boiling Pot,' we have named the best of these designs. Most of the others are very inferior.

The Schools of Modern Art in Germany. By J. B. Atkinson. Illustrated. (Seeley, Jackson & Halliday.)—This volume consists of a reprint of articles contributed to the Portfolio, with the corresponding etched versions of chosen pictures. Mr. Atkinson has stated his opinions about German art and artists of this century clearly and carefully, and in doing so has imparted the results of a large stock of knowledge, many inquiries, and wide study.

He has wisely dealt with his subject from a geographical point of view. After a general discourse on the history of German art and the effect of historical events on the modern development of design in that country, especially the transplantation from Rome to Munich of the so-called "revival" of that quasi-classicism which was created by Cornelius and Overbeck, he proceeds to treat of painting as it exists in the centre of culture in the Bavarian, Prussian, and Austrian dominions, in Munich, Düsseldorf, Berlin, and Vienna, treating each as a distinct province of art. In no other way does it seem possible for a writer to grasp the true general characteristics of a theme such as this. German art, with a few splendid exceptions, is marked by timidity rather than by greatness, by demonstrative action rather than by dignity or energy, and that reserve which never fails where culture is something more than learning, where education does not mean acquirements, where artists are not professors. Our author has given a comprehensive view of his subject, not selecting only those masterpieces which stand out in a dull world of mediocrity. His sympathies are wide, but he has studied in academies rather than in the workshop of the naturalists. His mind has not been disturbed by over-sensitiveness, and his opinions are scholarly. We like his estimate of the greatest of modern German masters, Alfred Rethel, although it appears to us that the influence of Dürer on the designs of the frescoes in the Town Hall of Aix-la-Chapelle, 'Death the Avenger' and 'Death the Friend,' was of no account, while the art of Holbein is supreme in the conception and execution of these tremendous but unequal compositions. A certain tendency to be sententious as well as didactic mars many pages of a book which has been prepared with creditable industry, and is in every respect worthy of its subject, large and ambitious as that is.

The Grants and the Cam, from Byron's Pool to Ely. Drawn and Etched by R. FARRER. (Macmillan & Co.)—Here is a series of neat and pretty etchings, taken from those picturesque points of view on the river and its banks in which all Cambridge men delight. Although the graceful sketches are not devoid of artistic merit, their associations are more noticeable than their technical value, and therefore we place the work of Mr. Farrer among the "gift-books" rather than with engravings and etchings. In thirty-five views the clever and neat-handed draughtsman leads us down the Cam. After many struggles with excessively troublesome scraps of loose tissue paper, needlessly placed to protect the prints, we can select for special praise 'Byron's Pool,' 'Grandchester Meadows,' 'King's Bridge,' and the very brilliant and pure 'Trinity Bridge,' the reflections of which in the smooth water are capitally drawn. 'Magdalene College' is delicate and broad. The sky in 'Stourbridge Common' is meritorious, and the etching is the most solid of a series of which the chief defects are occasionally weak draughtsmanship and amateurishness.

THE VOLTEIRA CASKET.

Oldlands, Uckfield, Nov. 6, 1880.

MANY years ago the late M. Lenormant, of the Bibliothèque (then) Royale at Paris, showed us a cast of the ivory casket described in the Athenæum of to-day (p. 615), which cast M. Lenormant had procured from Volterra.

Instead of being of the fifth or sixth century, the probable date of this casket is the eleventh or twelfth. A casket in many respects similar is in the public museum at Arezzo, another in the sacristy of the cathedral of Lyons, another was in the sacristy of the monastery of La Cava, and I have seen some twenty or more in public or private collections elsewhere. The finest I have seen is that now in the South Kensington Museum, which once belonged to the collegiate church of Veroli, the sides of another, taken to pieces and badly put together (some of the figures being upside down), have been used to cover the front of the "Cathedra Petri" preserved in St. Peter's at Rome.

In the memoir which I wrote in 1870 to accompany plates of the Cathedra Petri published by the Society of Antiquaries, I went in Appendix III. at some length into the reasons why ivory carvings of this class should be assigned to the eleventh or twelfth century for their date and to Constantinople as their place of origin. I then said of them: "They are all characterized by certain peculiarities and mannerisms. Among these are an exaggerated slenderness of limb, a marked prominence of the knee-joints, and a way of rendering the hair by a mass of small knobs. The subjects are generally taken from some mythological story, and some work of classical art has, in many cases, evidently been copied by the ivory-carver, but the story is often misunderstood and misrepresented, and the movement of the figures copied with so much exaggeration as to become ridiculous; animals are generally represented with much truth and spirit and in very natural attitudes. The execution is usually remarkably neat and sharp, and the state of preservation of the ivory very good." ALAN NEAVE, F.S.A.

P.S.—Carvings of this class have been very generally supposed to date from the classical period. The fact that the labours of Hercules form the subjects of many of the tablets attached to the Cathedra Petri has been used as an argument to prove that the chair was probably the curule chair of the Senator Pudens, but they are not really constituent parts of the chair.

. We simply copied the date given in the official catalogue.

Art Society.

The Royal Academicians and Associates will meet on the 18th inst. to elect a Treasurer. In the course of January they will probably choose four new A.R.A.s.

The approaching Winter Exhibition of the Royal Academy will be exceptionally rich in interest through the liberality of several owners of fine pictures. For instance, Mrs. Hope has agreed to lend the whole of that large collection of Dutch pictures which is famous all over Europe. A large selection will be made from the gallery of the Earl of Carnarvon. Lord Cowper's collection at Panabanger will furnish many great attractions, including the little Raphael. Many drawings by Flaxman, comprising those the Academy has bought, and examples belonging to the Flaxman Gallery, University College, London, will be arranged in a separate room at Burlington House. The Academy will open its doors on the first Monday in January next, as usual.

The "sale season" may be said to begin on the 27th inst., when Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods will offer by auction a collection of ancient and modern water-colour and other drawings and pictures. Many of these works represent the modern, not the current, French school, and include examples by Gericault, such as studies for the 'Race of the Barbarians in Rome,' from the antique and the nude, groups prepared for the 'Wreck of the Medusa,' horses drawn for 'Le Maréchal-Ferrant,' 'Adelphi Wharf,' and the like. There are drawings by P. Potter, G. Romano, G. da Bologna, Parmigiano, Claude, Le Sueur, N. Poussin, Girodet-Trioson, Decamps, Charlet, and Gros. Among his pictures are works ascribed to Bonington, Charlet, Gericault, Girodet-Trioson, Gros, Marilhat, T. Rousseau, Van Dyck, Poussin, Rembrandt, Luini, Mantegna, Marcellis, and Rubens. Most of these examples belonged to the late M. Haes de la Salle.

It is said that Mr. Harry Quilter, whose monograph on Giotto we reviewed a short time since, has succeeded to the place long occupied by Mr. Tom Taylor in connexion with "Fine Art" and the Times.

In addition to the drawings by British and foreign painters which were mentioned in these columns as likely to be included in the forthcoming Grosvenor Gallery Exhibition, Sir Coutts Lindsay has obtained promises of the loan of a considerable number of designs and studies for decorations made by Messrs. E. Burne Jones, Walter Crane, W. B. Richmond, and others.

The private view of the Hanover Gallery Exhibition, 47, New Bond Street, is appointed for to-day (Saturday). It contains oil paintings by British artists and original drawings and sketches for Punch. The collection will be opened to the public on Monday next.

GENERAL DI CERNOLA has so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to take carriage exercise.

MESSRS. AGNEW & SONS are about to publish the under-mentioned engravings from popular pictures: 'Imprisoned,' by Mr. S. Cousins, after Mr. Briton Riviere; the same painter's 'Persepolis,' which was at the Royal Academy in 1878, has been engraved by Mr. F. Stacpoola. M. Waltner has made great progress with a large and vigorous etching from F. Walker's 'Wayfarers,' which represents a youth leading a blind man in a landscape. Mr. Millais's portraits of Mr. W. E. Gladstone and Mr. John Bright, as engraved by Mr. T. O. Barlow, are nearly ready for publication, together with 'The Bride of Lammormoor,' by the same artists, a companion to their 'Effie Deans.' M. Waltner has in hand an etching after Mr. E. B. Jones's picture 'A Sibyl,' which was lately at the Grosvenor Gallery Exhibition.

THE system adopted for free admission on Sundays to the exhibition of pictures at the Royal Institution, Manchester, this season is by ticket, and for last Sunday, the first free one, about 3,000 tickets were issued, but a portion only of the holders availed themselves of the privilege of entry, owing presumably to the bad state of the weather in Manchester. The rooms, however, were well filled.

At Messrs. Agnew & Sons' Gallery, Old Bond Street, may be seen a considerable number of pictures, the more important of which we have already criticized. Our readers will, however, not regret to have an opportunity for seeing the following examples, some of which are novelties. There are two luminous and rich waterfalls painted by W. Davis of Liverpool, 'The Mountain Stream' (No. 3) and 'Near Bettway-Cood' (8). 'Odd Fish' (4), by Mr. J. E. Hodgson, is acceptable on account of the beautiful painting of fish in an Algerian shop. 'The Doctor's Visit' (17), an interior with an Algerian lady, by the same, will be remembered. 'Young Eyes for the Old' (21), a child threading a needle for an aged woman, is by M. E. Frère; likewise 'The Young Translator' (66), 'The Little Drummer' (117), and 'A House at Antwerp' (158). 'A Winter's Morning' (27) is a glowing snow-piece by M. L. Münthe. Herr Schenck's masculine 'Goats in Distress' (31) we admired at the Salon some years ago. Signor H. Corradi's 'Moonlight, Venice,' (53) has many charms. 'The Connoisseur examining a Painting' (57), by M. E. Fichel, shows the best form of a hackneyed subject, and is careful and delicate. 'Brothers of the Brush' (65), painters at work on the front of a dismal London house, by Mr. E. Crowe, impressed us long ago at the Academy. 'The Concert' (80), a musical party, is among the more refined of the works of M. Tissot. Although it is deficient in brilliancy, and to be improved by additions to the beauty of the ladies, there is abundance of chaacter in this noteworthy picture. By the same is 'Blue and White' (87), a party at breakfast in the bay window of an old room. Mr. Edwin Ellis has painted with power, richness of tone and colour, but with each element pitched too high for refinement, and every part exaggerated, an interesting coast scene called 'Towing Timber, Barmouth' (89). 'The Woodlands' (93), though hot in colour, has most of the fine qualities of the art of its painter, Mr. Linnell. Besides these we noticed 'Half Hours with the Best Authors' (102), girls asleep over "good books," by Mr. Calderon; two sketches—'Study of Trees' (126) and 'Study of a Horse' (129)—by G. Mason; 'Moonlight' (134), by J. Stark; 'A Study from Nature' (138), by Constable; 'The Festival of Pomona' (153), the energetic dance of a Roman family in a garden, by Mr. Alma Tadema; and other works by Messrs. T. Faed, J. Bertrand, J. D. Watson, F. Heilbut, H. Hardy, B. Riviere, P. A. Protain, L. Fildes, G. Morland, Crome, Nasmyth, Bonington, J. Holland, and John Brett.

We have been overwhelmed with letters regarding Constable's picture in Nayland Church, with which we have no space to deal this week.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

MR. MAJESTY'S.—'Les Huguenots' and 'La Favorita.'
CRYSTAL PALACE.—Fifth Saturday Concert.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Monday Popular Concerts.

THE cognoscenti of the opera have waited long for the advent of a new dramatic soprano worthy to be accounted a legitimate successor of Pasta, Schroeder Devrient, Gisi, and Tietjens. That Madame Giovannoni Zacchi will fill the vacant place does not seem likely, for she lacks some of the attributes which are most desired in a great lyric artist. But it is doing her no more than justice to say that her assumption of the rôle of Valentine in 'Les Huguenots' last Thursday week was more satisfactory than any witnessed of recent years on a London stage. She is possessed of a full, powerful, and penetrating voice, unalloyed by vibrato, and apparently under good control. Madame Zacchi refrained from attempting that great test of vocal endurance, the sustained c in the duet with Marcel; but at other times the compass of the music did not appear to occasion her any inconvenience. Her style is essentially dramatic, although she did not manifest the possession of any extraordinary histrionic powers. A further opportunity of gauging her capacity will be afforded by her embodiment of Lucrezia Borgia, advertised for Thursday evening. The less said about the general interpretation of Meyerbeer's masterpiece the better. With the exception of Madame Trebelli, the whole of the performers were unsatisfactory, and some of them beneath criticism. On Friday Signor Manfrini, another débütant, essayed the difficult rôle of Fernando, with very indifferent success. It was stated in the house that the singer had only arrived from Italy on the same day, and much may be excused under the circumstances. But Signor Manfrini has obviously passed the plenitude of his natural powers, and, though still capable of good declamation, cannot render justice to such an air as "Spinto gentil." The public, thanks to Mr. Armit, is being enabled to form a decisive opinion of the present status of lyrical art in Italy. The experiment is instructive, and in a certain degree interesting; but it is far from pleasing. Comparisons may be invidious, but they are sometimes necessary; and if we contrast the present performances at Her Majesty's Theatre with those given under Mr. Carl Rosa's management last winter, it becomes a question whether the time has not arrived for hackneyed Italian operas performed by third-rate artists to give place to something infinitely superior in lyric art. Public support is a matter of certainty; it is the enterprise alone that is wanting.

After many years of undeserved neglect the works of Hector Berlioz seem at length to be taking the position to which, in spite of occasional eccentricities, they are fairly entitled. It is only a few months since his 'Harold' Symphony was given at St. James's Hall, under the direction of Mr. Ganz, and last Saturday it formed the opening number of the programme at the Crystal Palace, where it had been previously given in November, 1878, just two years ago. Every fresh opportunity of hearing this most interesting work enhances our opinion of its great musical value. Much that on a first acquaintance appears vague or crude becomes clear as we grow more familiar with it. This is especially the case with the "Orgy of Brigands," which forms the finale, and absolutely demands study and repeated hearing for its proper appreciation. We still adhere to our opinion that the second and third movements (the "Pilgrims' March" and "Serenade") are the finest parts of the work; but we feel sure that the whole symphony needs only to be well known to become, in the best sense of the term, a favourite with the public. The performance on Saturday was most excellent, the solo viola part being admirably rendered by Herr Straus. A very interesting novelty was produced at the concert in Mozart's charming serenade for stringed orchestra, entitled 'Eine kleine Nachtmusik.' This is one of a class of pieces of which Mozart produced at least a dozen, hardly any of which are generally known in this country. The work in question was written in 1787, four years before the composer's death, and a month or two before 'Don Giovanni'; it therefore dates from its composer's ripest period. It is but a small piece as regards length, but every movement bears the genuine Mozart stamp and reveals its author at once. The character of the melodies, the simplicity and, at the same time, the perfect finish of the workmanship, are as characteristic of the composer as anything to be found in 'Don Giovanni' or 'Figaro.' Though the work is published among Mozart's quartets, it is evident, both from the inscription on the autograph and from the style of the music, that it was not intended for solo instruments, and that therefore the performance at the Crystal Palace by the whole of the strings was not open to the objection so frequently and justly urged against the performance of chamber music by full orchestra. Madame Koch-Bossenberger, from the Royal Opera, Hanover, made her first appearance at the Crystal Palace on Saturday. She possesses a soprano voice of sufficient power and very remarkable compass, ascending with apparent ease to z in alt. She gave a concert aria by Mozart, "Ma che vi fece, o stelle," with great brilliancy, and subsequently songs by Jensen, Schubert, and Eckert, besides Philine's air from Thomas's 'Mignon.' M. Saint-Saëns's clever Overture to 'La Princesse Jaune' concluded the concert.

With the resumption of the Monday Popular Concerts at St. James's Hall last Monday the London musical season may be said to have commenced in earnest. The history of Mr. S. Arthur Chappell's enterprise, which has now entered upon its twenty-third year, is too familiar to need recapitulation. Happily the Popular Concerts are now an established institution, and they have done more to promote a taste for, and a knowledge of, high-class music than any other concerts in London. The programme of Monday last included one item of great interest. This was Mozart's Serenade in a flat for two oboes, two clarinets, two bassoons, and two horns, written in the year 1781, immediately after 'Idomeneo.' A somewhat later work for the same combination of instruments—the Serenade in c minor—was produced last February at one of the Saturday Popular Concerts, and noticed in our columns (Athen. No. 2730). The serenade given on Monday, while in no way inferior to its companion, is even more attractive in style, being less serious in tone and much more brilliant. It was originally written for six instruments only, the addition of the oboes having been an afterthought. Hence the clarinet parts are much more important in this work than in the Serenade in c minor, and the music gains in proportion. Of the five movements of which the work consists it is difficult to select one for special praise; but the favourite number will probably be the adagio—an exquisite conversation between the instruments, of which Mozart knew so well how to show off the distinctive features. The serenade is by no means easy for any of the executants; but the performance by Messrs. Dubruoc, Horton, Lazarus, Egerton, Wotton, Haveron, Mann, and Standen was perfection. Finer playing could not have been desired. It is to be hoped that Mr. Chappell may continue his researches among Mozart's Serenades and Divertimenti; he will find many works which are well worth reviving. There is, for instance, the delightful Serenade in a flat for thirteen wind instruments, which as a piece of tone colour is superior to either of the works he has yet given us; and, to name but one other, there is a charming Divertimento in d for strings, one oboe, and two horns, recently published for the first time in the new edition of Mozart's works, which would well repay his attention. The rest of Monday's programme consisted of familiar pieces. Mdlle. Janotha played Mendelssohn's Variations in a flat; Signor Piatti gave Locatelli's Sonata in d; and Beethoven's Trio, Op. 11, in which the pianist was joined by Mr. Lazarus and Signor Piatti, concluded the concert. Madame Koch-Bossenberger, of whose début at the Crystal Palace we have already spoken, was the vocalist.

Musical Society.

THE annual festival service of the London Church Choir Association was held in St. Paul's Cathedral on Thursday, the 4th. This association has now entered on the eleventh year of its existence, and we cannot doubt it has been the means of promoting improvement in the musical arrangements of many churches. Forty-two choirs took part in the above-mentioned service, the total number of voices amounting to 600, or 273 boys and 326 men. The music was, as usual, composed expressly for the occasion. The double chants were by Mr. F. G. Ogbourne; the 'Magnificat' and 'Nunc Dimittis' by Mr. C. E. Stephens; an eight-part anthem, "The Lord hear thee in the day of trouble," by Mr. Hamilton Clarke; and hymn tunes by Messrs. W. H. Bayne, J. B. Calkin, J. R. Murray, J. F. Bridge, and F. E. Gladstone. Mr. H. R. Bird was the organist, and Mr. J. R. Murray the choirmaster.

THE prospectus of the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society, which reached us just too late for notice last week, announces a series of eight concerts for the coming season, the first of which took place on Thursday, when 'Judas Macabeanus' was given. The other works selected for performance are the 'Messiah,' 'Elijah,' the 'Hymn of Praise,' Rossini's 'Stabat Mater,' and Macfarren's 'St. John the Baptist,' which has not before been heard at the Royal Albert Hall. The prospectus further states that arrangements are pending for a grand performance of Sullivan's 'Martyr of Antioch.' Mr. Joseph Barnby will continue to hold the post of conductor, and Dr. Stauner will, as heretofore, preside at the organ.

HAYDN'S 'Creation' was given at the first concert of the Brixton Choral Society, conducted by Mr. W. Lemaire, last Monday evening.

At Mr. George Riseley's fourth Monday Popular Concert at the Colston Hall, on the 1st inst., Schumann's Symphony in a flat, and the overtures to 'Ruy Blas,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Semiramide,' and 'Der Freischütz,' were the chief works performed.

It is intended next May to give three complete performances of Wagner's 'Ring des Nibelungen' at Berlin, in the Victoria Theatre. The Leipzig Opera company is to be engaged, and to be supported by Frau Materna, Hart and Frau Vogl, and Herren Jäger and Reichenberg. Herr Seidl is to be the conductor.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LEASER AND MANAGER, MR. HENRY IRVING.
"THE COBURN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.15. LOUIS and PIERRE DEL FRANCHI Mr. IRVING at 12.15. STOOTER'S Doors open at 7. WORKING PERFORMANCES OF THE COBURN BROTHERS. SATURDAYS, November 19th and 20th. 8.15 at 12.15. NEXT November 17th at 12.15. Box Office (Mr. Booth) open 10 to 4. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE WEEK.

PRINCESS'S.—'Hamlet.' Hamlet, Mr. Edwin Booth.
THERE are two sources from which a light of illumination may be directed by an individual actor upon a character such as Hamlet. From accumulated stores of analysis and criticism there may be drawn a conception which, embodying the latest conclusions of scholarship, is to the playgoer what a critical text is to the student, or the passionate temperament and the insight of an individual exponent may charge a representation with a fire which burns through it and reveals what before was hidden. A man capable of the latter effort is a great actor, one who accomplishes the former and easier task is ordinarily described as a sound artist. Mr. Booth is a sound artist.

So far as the present generation is concerned, Signor Salvini's representation of Othello is the principal, if not the only, instance that has been witnessed of revelation emanating directly and wholly from the actor. Since the retirement of Macready a dozen more or less competent artists—English, French, German, Italian—have brought to bear upon the character of Hamlet a large amount of very varied reading and of intelligent speculation. Before the arrival of Mr. Booth—dismissing all thought of his brief season at the Haymarket in 1861, and regarding the present performance as his début—four men may be held to have contributed during the present half century to the adequate interpretation of Hamlet. These are Emil Devrient, who from German sources threw a strong light upon the manner in which certain scenes are to be played; Charles Kean, who, foraging in the past, selected and discarded with judgment; Fechter, who brought a large amount of intelligence to bear upon stage business, and as an iconoclast did good service; and Mr. Irving, who, with an insight subtler than any of his predecessors whom we have named, went near informing the character with something before unrecognized, and would probably have succeeded in so doing had not a curiously erratic and occasionally grotesque method impaired the value of his efforts, and drawn on him a kind of criticism which discouraged further experiment.

Mr. Booth's chief merit consists in giving a most temperate, thoughtful, and judicious rendering of Hamlet. The latest conclusions of scholarship are accepted by him and reproduced upon the stage; there is no attempt to force upon the public new readings solely on account of their novelty; variations from former practice are enforced by a certain amount of authority; and there are few recent suggestions of criticism the value of which has not apparently been tested. From the German stage Mr. Booth has thus taken the idea of holding the sword in front of him like a cross while following the Ghost, while the idea, which also found favour in Germany, that Hamlet should cover his face with his cloak while listening to his father's condemnation of his mother's conduct, is dismissed. It is impossible to follow seriatim the numerous instances of conformity with precedent or departure from it which are exhibited. One change that is made in the representation, that of introducing the Player Queen in the second act in the costume of a boy, was first recommended in these columns. Mr. Booth may claim the credit of being the earliest to profit by it.

The cardinal fault in Mr. Booth's conception of Hamlet seems to be that it shows an almost slavish respect for the letter, and treats as formal and significant utterances what are, in fact, mere expressions of temporary and transitory feeling. This is frequently illustrated. When Hamlet says to his mother, "Look on this picture and on that," there is some justification for bringing forward two paintings, since such may easily have been at hand. When, however, addressing Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, he says, ad propos of the poor repute into which the players are said to have fallen, "It is not strange; for my uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats apiece for his picture in little,"—we quote from Mr. Booth's acting version,—there is something prosaic in assigning a directly offensive application to these words by making Hamlet lift miniatures of Claudius from the breasts of his two colloquutors. It is needless, moreover, to draw the dagger from its sheath on the words "a bare bodkin." Perhaps the strongest instance of this kind of over-caution consists in bringing Hamlet on the stage in the last act in a suit of sables. Not at all an improper or an unbecoming dress is this, though its effect is not in proportion to its costliness. It suggests, however, in connexion with the general treatment of the text, that the actor has read as a direct declaration of purpose the words spoken by Hamlet when he is told by Ophelia that his father's death occurred two months ago, and not within these two hours, as he has wildly stated. "So long?" says Hamlet. "Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables." To take these words seriously is treatment altogether too matter of fact. One more instance of a similar kind is more important, seeing that, in order to force upon a passage a meaning it does not bear, a speech of Ophelia ordinarily given is excised. "You are as good as a chorus, my lord," says Ophelia, in answer to some explanation of the murder of Gonzago which Hamlet affords. To this he answers, "I could interpret between you and your love if I could see the puppets dallying," and Ophelia once more retorts, "You are keen, my lord; you are keen," words which provoke Hamlet into coarseness. Mr. Booth speaks the first half of the sentence as an aside, and, conjoining the second portion with a subsequent speech, forces on it a new meaning. "I could interpret between you and your love" is inaudible to Ophelia, and is spoken with a sort of melancholy. "If I could see the puppets dallying" is then delivered as an expression of impatience, and is at once followed in the same strain by "Begin, murderer; leave thy damnable faces and begin."

This alteration, which a keen, excellent, and generally judicious critic, Mr. W. Winter, incorporates in the acting edition of 'Hamlet,' has for result to substitute a wrong meaning for one that, besides being right, is just as intelligible, and to detract from the value of the exposition of Hamlet's character which is afforded. That Hamlet, while giving up his claim on Ophelia, whom he thinks in league with his enemies, is strangely tortured is evident, and the utterances to her in which in the play scene he indulges, though ascribable to his assumed madness, are, in fact, outbursts of restlessness, jealousy, and discontent.

It is needless to multiply instances of departure from the character of Hamlet. Mr. Booth's method is interesting, but not altogether satisfactory. The extreme temperance and sweetness of his Hamlet seem at times out of place. In his dealings with Ophelia, and even in his conduct towards Horatio, they are defensible, and their effect is pleasing and satisfactory. At other times, as in the closet scene and the graveyard scene, they are less good. His delivery is admirable, not only in intelligence, but in elocutionary ability, in which respect it stands altogether apart from most English performances. The attitudes employed are almost always well chosen. No attempt is made to force "points," and no eccentricity or affectation disturbs the audience. The shortcomings that chiefly interfere with the hold of the actor are that his performance strives vainly by restlessness to escape the charge of monotony, and that there is a lack of passion, command of which is apparently outside Mr. Booth's resources. It would be easy to adduce instances of scenes which receive from the actor added beauty. Such are, to mention one or two only, the lines concerning the shapes of the clouds, which are spoken while Hamlet looks through a window, the addresses to the players, and especially the passage from familiarity to earnestness in the injunction not to mock Polonius, and the start on the recognition that the obsequies he contemplates are those of Ophelia. On the other hand, the scenes of action and of strongest passion, the close of the play scene and the death scene, lose a portion of their effect. Many assumably competent actors had been secured to support Mr. Booth. It cannot, however, be said that they rendered him much service. The chief object of the Ghost appeared to be to reveal in the strongest light the stalwart and substantial form of his exponent. Mr. Leathes's intelligent conception of Laertes was marred by the affectations of manner into which during the past year or two he has been betrayed. Mr. Farren's Polonius might almost have been mistaken for Adam in 'As You Like It,' and Mrs. Vezin's Gertrude showed none of the gifts we expect from an actress of her stamp. During the closet scene she fell into that feeblest of errors of never once following the direction of Hamlet's distracted gaze, a thing in real life absolutely impossible. Miss Maud Milton's Player Queen was good, and Miss Gerard's Ophelia developed towards the close high excellence. During the early acts nothing beyond formal prettiness was shown. In the closing scene, however, of her appearance, in which she distributes flowers to those around her, she displayed singular intelligence. Her manner of caressing her brother and the Queen as by some instinct of remembered tenderness, and the pulseless falling off of vacant fingers when the transient light of emotion died from her eyes, were fine, as was her momentary shriek upon recognizing her brother. The play is, on the whole, effectively mounted.

Dramatic Society.

IN spite of the feeling of excessive height which is produced in the Princess's Theatre, and in spite of some confusion of styles in the decorations, the general impression produced by the new theatre is favourable, and Mr. Phipps, the architect, may be congratulated upon having efficiently discharged his task of including a new theatre within the walls of the old. The approaches and lobbies are excellent, and the entire portion of the house which is without both the stage and auditorium, and includes the foyers, dressing-rooms, smoke-rooms, and the like, is excellent. A special feature is the handsome entrance hall. In many respects the new building is satisfactory, and in some it is in advance of most existing theatres.

EMIL PALLERKE, the author of an excellent and far-famed book upon Schiller and his works which has passed through repeated editions, died at Eisenach on October 28th, at the age of fifty-six. He was born at Tempelburg in Pomerania, and, after studying philosophy at the universities of Berlin and Bonn, turned his attention to history and the drama. For seven or eight years he acted at the Oldenburg Stadttheater, and assisted powerfully in elevating the character of that stage, mainly by persuading the actors to meet together regularly for the common study of their parts. In 1861 he left the stage, and began to give dramatic readings in the great cities of Germany, Austria, and Switzerland, with brilliant success. His own plays, although some of them were acted at Oldenburg, were regarded by himself as studies. After his retirement as a public reader he lived at Weimar and devoted himself chiefly to the study of Shakspeare. Two of his own dramas, 'King Monmouth' and 'Oliver Cromwell,' bear witness to his interest in English seventeenth century history.

The revival at the Odéon of 'Charlotte Corday,' the historical drama of Ponsard, has been accomplished with some clat. Costumes of the utmost exactitude are obtained, and the representatives of Robespierre (M. François), Danton (M. Dumaine), and Marat (M. Clément-Just) reproduce faithfully the likenesses of these personages. Madame Tessandier is Charlotte Corday, and Madame Alice Chêne, Madame Roland.

A CATALOGUE of books to be sold on Tuesday and Wednesday next by Messrs. Puttick & Simpson includes some scarce theatrical works, among which are collected editions of dramatists of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries whose works have never been reprinted.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—C. E. B. E. P.—W. R.—J. B. D.—J. S.—T. H. C.—W. L.—F. S. L.—L. G.—A. F. M.—received. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Just published, price 12s. 6d.

CANTERBURY IN THE OLDEN TIME. SECOND EDITION, copiously illustrated.

By JOHN BRENT, F.S.A.

"The visitation to the old city would find Mr. Brent's book an entertaining and profitable companion."—Daily News.
"Mr. Brent's admirable work is a perfect storehouse of information on matters connected with the past history of Canterbury."—Religious.
"The book is full of amusement for those who are fond of the social history of Old England."—Reverend.
"To say that Mr. Brent's volume is the best guide to Canterbury by far since the first. It may be read with pleasure and studied with profit."
C. E. B. E. P. S. A. Collectanea Antiqua, Part 3, Vol. VII.
Limpin, Marshall & Co. London.

MR. JAMES THOMSON'S WORKS.

Price 6s. each; large paper, 10s.

VANES STORY, and other POEMS. [Just ready.]

The CITY OF DREADFUL NIGHT, and other POEMS.
"There can, we think, be no doubt that 'The City of Dreadful Night' contains many passages of great beauty. The impress of real genius is upon it. ... He is both a scholar and a thinker. ... His mind takes a very wide and bold sweep."—Westminster Review.
See also an article entitled "A New Poet" in the Fortnightly Review for September.

Reverend & Turner, 108, Strand.

WALTER SMITH'S LIST. (Late MOZLEY & SMITH.)

GREEK and GOTHIC. Progress and Decay in the Three Ages of Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting. By the Rev. H. R. JOHN TYREWHITT, Christ Church, Oxford. Crown 8vo. cloth. Now ready.

The ART SCHOOLS OF MEDIEVAL CHRISTENDOM. By A. C. OWEN. Edited by J. EUSKIN, M.A.; Glads. Professor. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

NEW WORK.

By the Author of 'Make up for Lost Time,' 'The Secret Trials of the Christian Life,' &c.

The CONSOLATIONS OF THE CHRISTIAN SEASONS.
Part I.—ADVENT to EASTER. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Now ready.]
Part II.—EASTER to ALL SAINTS. [In the press.]
By HUGH BOWARD JELF, M.A., Canon Residentiary of Rochester, and Vicar of St. Martin's, Walpole.

The DOCTRINE OF THE INCARNATION OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST. By the late Archbishop WILBERFORCE, M.A. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

WOMANKIND. Third Edition. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Author of 'The Hair of Betsy.' Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

By the same Author.

BURNT OUT: a Story for Mothers' Meetings. Second Edition. Fcap 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"The story will please a far larger circle of readers than those for whom it is so judiciously written."—John Bull.
London: Walter Smith (late Mozley & Smith), 4, Paternoster-row.

MARCUS WARD & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

THREE POPULAR NOVELS, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CROSS PURPOSES.

By CECILIA FINDLAY.

One Volume.

"One of the brightest, pleasantest, healthiest stories we have read for some time."—Daily News.
"Fresh, vivid full of animation, and full of character."—Nonconformist.
"Written with grace and freshness, full of interest."—Graphic.

GRISSEL ROMNEY.

By M. E. FRASER-TYLER.

Two Volumes.

"Very interesting novel."—Standard.
"Plot full of interest narrative brisk and animated story told with purity and simplicity, bright, pleasant, and very readable."—St. James's Gazette.
"Excellent story."—Advertiser.

MATE OF THE JESSICA.

By F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

Two Volumes.

"A dashing, delightful story of the sea."—Reverend.
"Exceptionally well written."—Morning Post.
"A good, healthy smack of the sea about it."—Scotsman.
"A book of stirring incidents, never tedious."—Daily News.

NEW HISTORICAL FICTION, JUST PUBLISHED.

HOW THEY WERE CAUGHT IN A TRAP:

A TALE OF FRANCE IN 1808.

By ESMÉ STUART.

A very suitable Present for Young People (Girls as well as Boys); excellent for reading aloud in the Home Circle. Price 6s.

"A charmingly written tale."—Sunday Times.
"The character sketches and the glimpses of the Emperor are good."—Arden.
"Simply and unaffectedly written, the story is sure to please."—Graphic.

THE MOST ORIGINAL GIFT-BOOK OF THE SEASON

STORY OF A DEWDROP.

By Rev. J. R. MACDUFF, D.D.

A Fairy Story, whose centre of interest is a dewdrop and in which Nature, by means of bird and flower and sunshine is made the interpreter of one of her most beautiful laws. Printed in brown ink, upon one side of the paper only, the picture surrounded by a handsome border illustrated with four full-sized coloured plates, replete with fancy, and executed in the highest style of art. Price 6s.

ENTERTAINING, ORIGINAL BOOK OF NATURAL HISTORY.

TAMMANIAN FRIENDS AND FOES.

FEATHERED, FURRED, AND FINNED.

By Mrs. L. A. MEREDITH.

Illustrated with 8 superb Coloured Plates of Tammanian Flowers, Fruits, Butterflies, and Fishes, and with numerous Woodcuts. Every adventure narrated is strictly true, and the anecdotes of birds and animals are taken not down simply from the experience of the author and her family. The volume is very handsomely bound, and forms a most excellent gift-book. Price 12s.

"The coloured illustrations are admirable—a credit alike to artist and printer. There can be but one opinion as to the beauty and sterling worth of this splendidly gotten-up book, which, thanks to its author and to Messrs. Marcus Ward, has come out just in time for Christmas. It will make a choice present for young people."—Graphic.
"To all youthful lovers of Natural History this will be the gift-book of the season. We have been tempted to take large extracts from it, but must resist with a heavy commendation and a desire that before Christmas it may be in the hands of many a youthful and delighted reader."—Land and Water.
"We have not seen a book of its kind for a long time which we can recommend so thoroughly."—Animal World.

"Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest."

THE GUEST BOOK:

A REGISTER for GUESTS to RECORD their VISITS at FRIENDS'.

The pages are divided by lines into spaces, which the Guests will fill up under the following printed headings: Name, Residence, Arrived, Left, Going to, Events, Adventures, Remarks. With appropriate mottoes. Printed on the best writing paper strongly bound gilt edges. A necessary and valuable book for every town and country house eventually becoming an interesting and useful record. Forms a most acceptable present, and is particularly appropriate for a wedding gift. Price 6s.

NEW EDITION OF MISS HAVERGAL'S BIRTHDAY BOOK.

RED LETTER DAYS:

A REGISTER OF ANNIVERSARIES AND BIRTHDAYS.

With Terms and Original Verses Written by FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL, for each day in the Year.
The Nineteenth Thousand is now ready in a New and Attractive style of binding, price 2s., or with gilt edges, price 3s. 6d.

CHILD'S LIFE OF OUR LORD.

By SARAH GERALDINA STOCK.

A New and Original Book for Children. Illustrated with numerous A. and N. pictures. Written in an easy, simple style. Handsomely bound, with gilt edges, price 6s.
A CHEAPER and ANALOGOUS EDITION for the use of Sunday Schools, &c., can also be obtained, price 2s.

MARCUS WARD & CO.'S

DESCRIPTIVE LIST OF NEW PUBLICATIONS, Suitable for Christmas Presents, School Prizes, &c. and for Home Reading, will be sent, post free, to any address on application.

67 and 68, Chandos-street, Charing Cross, London, W.C.

31, SOUTHAMPTON-STREET, STRAND, NOV. 13th, 1880.

SAMUEL TINSLEY & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

TWO POPULAR NOVELS OF THE DAY,
AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

THE DEAN'S WIFE.

By Mrs. BILOART.

3 vols. 31s. 6d.

WITH CUPID'S EYES.

By FLORENCE MARRYAT.

3 vols. 31s. 6d.

SAMUEL TINSLEY & Co. 31, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

MADE IN THE NEW YORK

The Burtons of Dunroo. By

M. W. BREW 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

The Scotsman says:—"The book is a specimen of careful and intelligent literary workmanship."

Charlie: a Waif's History, told

by himself. By Mrs. WOODWARD. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

The Dean's Wife. By Mrs.

BILOART, Author of 'The Captain's Discipline,' 'How He Won Her,' &c. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

John Bull says:—"Any reader who wants a good story thoroughly well told cannot do better than read 'The Dean's Wife.'"

Octavia's Lovers. By the Author of 'Lalage.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

Amy Wynter. By Thomas A.

FINKERTON, Author of 'Cromford.' 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

"A pleasant story of simple English life.... Almost every character is truly and distinctly drawn."—Scotsman.
"A capital book to read."—Daily News.

Carmela. By the Princess Olga

QANTACERNE, Author of 'Is the Spring of My Life.' Translated by EUGENE KLAUS, with the Author's approval. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.

The Daily News says:—"Can be read from beginning to end with interest, rising frequently to admiration."

After a Dark Night—The Sun.

By C. O. HAMILTON. 2 vols. 21s.

With Cupid's Eyes. By Florence

MARRYAT. 3 vols.

[Immediately.]

EACH COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME.

Civil War in Home and Land.

By the Author of 'A Bride from the Highlands.' Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Under the Rose: a Prose Idyll.

By Mrs. HERBERT DAVY. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Graphic says:—"The work of a gentlewoman who has the soul of a poet and the refinement of genius. A pleasant companion for a railway or yachting journey than 'Under the Rose' we cannot conceive. It is impossible to find any fault with it."

Dona Perfecta: a Tale of Modern

Spain. By D. PEREZ GALLDIA, Translated by D. F. W. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Mildred Forrester: a Tale of

Our Own Times. By "ADMA." Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Red Cross. Translated from the German by R. J. FELLOWS. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The Minister's Daughters. By

S. FRANCIS. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Whom Did She Love? By Adair.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

London: SAMUEL TINSLEY & Co. 31, Southampton-street, Strand.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

JUST PUBLISHED, in Two Volumes, Imperial 8vo.

ROMOLA.

By GEORGE ELIOT.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY SIR FREDERICK LEIGHTON,
President of the Royal Academy.

The number of Copies Printed is limited to One Thousand, each copy being numbered. The mode of publication adopted is that of Subscription through Booksellers. Information regarding the Terms of Subscription may be obtained from any Bookseller.

THE WORKS OF W. M. THACKERAY.

THE ÉDITION DE LUXE.

Complete in Twenty-four Volumes, Imperial 8vo.

Containing 248 Steel Engravings, 1,473 Wood Engravings, and 88 Coloured Illustrations.

The Steel and Wood Engravings are all printed on real China Paper.

Only 1,000 Copies printed, each set numbered.

The mode of Publication adopted is that of SUBSCRIPTION THROUGH BOOKSELLERS.

Particulars regarding the Terms of Subscription, &c., may be obtained of any Bookseller.

The POWER of SOUND. By Edmund Gurney, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Royal 8vo. 2s.

The POETRY of ASTRONOMY. By Richard A. Proctor,
Author of 'The Borderland of Science,' 'Science Byways,' &c. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

PHILOSOPHY of CHARLES DICKENS. By the Honourable
ALBERT S. G. CANNING, Author of 'Philosophy of the Waverley Novels,' 'Religious Strife in British History,' &c.
Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"Mr. Canning has produced a pleasing book: he has shed much light on Dickens's genius and methods, and we heartily thank him for his volume."—British Quarterly Review

LYRICS and ELEGIES. By Charles Newton Scott, Author of
'The Forgoings of Christianity.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

FARMING in a SMALL WAY for PLEASURE and PROFIT.
By JAMES LONG. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

NEW EDITIONS.

A HISTORY of ENGLISH THOUGHT in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By LESLIE STEPHEN. Second Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 20s.

LIFE of LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR JAMES OUTRAM.
By Major-General Sir FREDERICK J. GOLDSMID, C.B. K.C.S.I. Second Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 35s. with Illustrations and Maps.

NEW NOVELS.

The TRUMPET MAJOR. By Thomas Hardy, Author of 'Far
From the Madding Crowd,' &c. 3 vols. post 8vo.

"Mr. Hardy in his latest novel has produced, perhaps, a finer study of character, in a certain sense than he has before given to his readers. His hero, ... is a fine figure in a landscape, drawn with the truth and insight which has raised Mr. Hardy to the high place he occupies among novelists of our time."—Saturday Review

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes. 2 vols. post 8vo.

"Full of indication of more than ordinary talent, and one of the most promising works of fiction that the present season has produced."—Athenæum

HAROLD SAXON. By Allan Muir, Author of 'Children's Children: a Story of Two Generations.' 3 vols. post 8vo.

NEW STORIES.

NOTICE.—The CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JANUARY, 1881, will contain the First Parts of
Two New Stories,
One entitled,

A GRAPE from a THORN. By James Payn, Author of 'Lost
Sir Mungibard,' 'By Proxy,' &c.

The other,

LOVE the DEBT. By a New Author.

The Stories will be illustrated by Mr. Du Maurier and Mr. W. Small.

WORKS BY ELIZABETH BARRETT
BROWNING.

POEMS by ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.
3 vols. Twelfth Edition. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. 20s.

AURORA LEIGH. With Portrait. Sixteenth
Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.; gilt edges, 8s. 6d.

A SELECTION from the POETRY of ELIZABETH
BARRETT BROWNING. With Portrait and Vignette.
First Series. Ninth Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.; gilt edges,
8s. 6d.
Second Series. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.; gilt edges, 8s. 6d.

WORKS BY ROBERT BROWNING.

POETICAL WORKS of ROBERT BROWNING.
New and Twelfth Edition. 3 vols. demy 8vo. 12s. each.

DRAMATIC IDYLS.

First Series. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.
Second Series. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

A SELECTION from the POETICAL WORKS of ROBERT BROWNING.

First Series. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.; gilt edges,
2s. 6d.
Second Series. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.; gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

LA SAISIAZ: The Two Poets of Croisic. Fcap.
8vo. 7s.

The AGAMEMNON of ÆSCHYLUS. Transcribed
by ROBERT BROWNING. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

PACCHIAROTTO, and HOW HE WORKED in DISTANCE. With other Poems. Fcap. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The INN ALBUM. Fcap. 8vo. 7s.

RED COTTON NIGHT-CAP COUNTRY; or, Turf and Towers. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

BALAUCTION'S ADVENTURE; including a Transcript from Hamlet. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

ARISTOPHANES' APOLOGY; including a Transcript from Hamlet, being the Last Adventure of Balauction. Fcap.
8vo. 10s. 6d.

FIFINE at the FAIR. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

PRINCE HOHENSTIEL-SCHWANGAU,
SAVIOUR of SOCIETY. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

The KING and the BOOK. 4 vols. fcap. 8vo.
2s. each.

WORKS BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

PASSAGES from the PROSE WRITINGS of
MATTHEW ARNOLD. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Contents:—1. Literature—2. Politics and Society—3. Philosophy and Religion.

LAST ESSAYS on CHURCH and RELIGION.
By MATTHEW ARNOLD. With a Preface. Crown 8vo. 7s.

MIXED ESSAYS. Crown 8vo. 9s.

Contents:—Democracy—Equality—Irish Catholicism and British Liberalism—Pope's View of Manhood—A Guide to English Literature—Ruskin—A French Critic on Milton—A French Critic
on Goethe—George Sand.

LITERATURE and DOGMA. An Essay towards a better Apprehension of the Bible. Fifth Edition. Crown 8vo. 9s.
"The References to all the Bible Quotations are, in this Edition,
added for the first time."

GOD and the BIBLE: a Review of Objections to 'Literature and Dogma.' Reprinted from the Contemporary Review
Library Review. With a Preface. Crown 8vo. 1s.

ST. PAUL and PROTESTANTISM. With an Essay on Persecution and the Church of England. Third Edition, Revised.
Small crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

CULTURE and ANARCHY: an Essay in Political and Social Criticism. Reprinted from the Cornhill Magazine. With a Preface and Alterations. Second Edition, 7s.

ON the STUDY of CELTIC LITERATURE. 8vo.

FRIENDSHIP'S GARLAND. Being the Conversations, Letters, and Opinions of the late Arminius Baron Von Trenckler-Trenckh. Collected and Edited, with a Dedictory Letter to Adolphus Leo, Esq., of the Daily Telegraph. Small crown
8vo. 4s. 6d.

CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

ÉDITION DE LUXE.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE.

PROSPECTUSES, and SPECIMEN PAGES with ILLUSTRATIONS, may be obtained on application to the Publishers on and after the 25th inst.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, 193, Piccadilly.

NEW BOOKS.

SOUTH AMERICA. By Antonio Gallenga. With a Map. Demy 8vo. [This day.]

LIFE of CICERO. By Anthony Trollope. 2 vols. crown 8vo. [December 1.]

SOCIOLOGY BASED upon ETHNOGRAPHICAL PRINCIPLES. By Dr. CHARLES LETOURNEAU. Translated by HENRY M. TROLLOPE. Large crown 8vo. [1st December.]

JAPANESE POTTERY. Being a Native Report. Edited by A. W. FRANKS, F.R.S. F.S.A. With numerous Illustrations and Marks. Large crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

WALKS THROUGH the CITY of YORK. By Robert DAVIES, F.S.A. Edited by his WIDOW. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

SOLDIERS of the VICTORIAN AGE. By C. R. Low. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s.

ON DUTY: a Ride Through Hostile Africa. By Parker GILLMORE, Commandant of Native Levée during the late Zulu War. Demy 8vo. 16s.

HISTORY of the ZULU WAR and its ORIGIN. By FRANCES E. COLENSO. Assisted in those portions of the Work which touch upon Military Matters by Lieut.-Colonel EDWARD DURNFORD. Demy 8vo. 18s.

CURIOSITIES of the SEARCH-ROOM. A Collection of Serious and Whimsical Wills. By the Author of 'Flemish Interiors,' &c. Demy 8vo. 16s.

NEW EDITIONS.

The INDUSTRIAL ARTS of INDIA. By George C. M. BIRDWOOD, C.S.I. With Map and 174 Illustrations. Large-Paper Edition. 16s.

The RACEHORSE in TRAINING. With some Hints on Racing and Racing Reform. By WILLIAM DAY. Demy 8vo. Third Edition. 16s.

SKETCHES in the HUNTING-FIELD. By A. E. T. WATSON. Illustrated by John Sturgess. [Third and Cheaper Edition in the press.]

The "A. D. C.," being Personal Reminiscences of the University Amateur Dramatic Club, Cambridge. By F. O. BURNAND, B.A., Trin. Coll., Cam. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 12s.

TEN LECTURES on ART. By E. J. Poynter, R.A. Second Edition. Large crown 8vo. 2s.

The LETTERS of CHARLES DICKENS. (Now for the first time published.) Edited by his SISTER-IN-LAW and ELDEST DAUGHTER. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30s. Second Edition. Fifth Thousand.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'BREEZIE LANGTON.'

SOCIAL SINNERS.

By HAWLEY SMART.
3 vols.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ABEL DRAKE'S WIFE.'

THE TWO DREAMERS.

By JOHN SAUNDERS.
3 vols.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE PARSON O' DUMFORD.'

THE CLERK of PORTWICK.

By GEO. MANVILLE FENN.
3 vols.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, 193, Piccadilly.

TRÜBNER & CO.'S LIST OF PUBLICATIONS.

NOW READY.

GULSHAN I RAZ: the Mystic Rose Garden of the East-Din Mahmud Shabistan. The Persian Text with an English Translation and Notes, chiefly from the Commentary of Muhammad San Yahya Lahiri. By R. H. WHITFIELD, M.A., Lecturer-at-Law, late of R.M. Bengal Civil Service.

Vol. II, part two, pp. viii+328, cloth, 12s. 6d.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE POLYNESIAN RACE: its Origin and Migration. By A. FORDMANN.

SIXTH EDITION, with a New Preface and Steel Engravings, crown 8vo. pp. xiv+121, cloth, 2s. 6d.

SAPPHO: a Tragedy, in Five Acts. By STELLA, Author of 'Records of the Heart,' &c.

"It presents us with a vivid picture of the victor-romantic London."

"The play is full of life and action, and is thoroughly reliable."

Post 8vo. pp. xxiv+328, cloth, 12s.

EARLY HEBREW LIFE: a Study in Sociology. By JOHN FENTON.

NEW VOLUMES OF TRÜBNER'S ORIENTAL SERIES.

Post 8vo. pp. xviii+328, cloth, 12s.

A TALMUDIC MISCELLANY; or, a Thousand and One Extracts from the Talmud, the Mishnah, and the Gemara. Compiled and Translated by F. I. HERSHMAN, Author of 'Gemara according to the Talmud,' &c. With Preface by the Rev. F. W. FARNAK, D.D., Dean of Westminster.

Vol. I, part two, pp. xiv+328, cloth, 12s.

BUDDHIST BIRTH STORIES; or, Jataka Tales. From the Original Pali of the Jātakatthakāya, now for the first time edited by Prof. F. FAUPEL. Translated by T. W. RAY'S DAVID.

SECOND EDITION, post 8vo. pp. xvi+328, cloth, 12s. 6d.

The GULISTAN; or, Rose Garden of Shakh Nushirwan the Great of Shiraz. Translated for the first time into French and Urdu, with a French and a Latin of the Author. From the Arabic text. By EDWARD A. BARTWICK, F.R.S.E.S.

CHIEF EDITION OF MR. ARNOLD'S POPULAR POEM ON BUDDHISM AND BUDDHISM.

Crown 8vo. pp. xvi+328, limp parchment wrapper, 12s. 6d.

The LIGHT OF ASIA; or, the Great Renunciation. Being the Life and Teaching of Gautama, Prince of India and Founder of Buddhism. Told in Verse by an INDIAN BUDDHIST. By EDWIN ARNOLD, C.B., Author of 'The Indian Song of Songs.'

NEARLY READY.

Post 8vo. cloth.

Dr. APPLETON: his Life and Literary Relics. By JOHN M. APPLETON, M.A., late Vice-Chancellor of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, and a Fellow of the University of Cambridge, Oxford, and Deputy Professor of Comparative Philology.

Post 8vo. with Illustrations, parchment.

The ENEMIES OF BOOKS. By WILLIAM BLADES. Typograph. Author of 'The Life and Typography of William Caxton,' &c. Second Edition.

BRITISH ANIMALS which have become EXTINCT. With HISTORIC TIMES, with some Account of British Wild White Cattle. By J. R. MARTIN, F.R.S.E.S.

Post 8vo. cloth.

The HISTORY OF ESARHADDON (Son of Sennacherib), King of Assyria, 681-680 B.C. Translated from the Cuneiform Inscriptions upon Cylinders and Tablets in the British Museum Collection. Together with a Grammatical Analysis of such Words. Explanations of the Ideographs by Sir Henry Rawlinson, Bart., and a Glossary. By E. H. PLUMMER, M.A., Assistant Librarian, Christ's College, Cambridge, Member of the Society of Biblical Archaeology.

Post 8vo. cloth.

The HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY. By ANTON LEGG.

Post 8vo. cloth.

THE CLASSICAL POETRY OF THE JAPANESE. By BASIL HALL CHAMBERLAIN, Author of 'Yogo Monochrome Pictures.'

NEW VOLUMES OF THE ENGLISH AND FOREIGN PHILOLOGICAL LIBRARY.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE HISTORY OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE HUMAN RACE. Lectures and Discussions. By LAZARUS GRIGER. Author of 'Origin and Evolution of Human Speech and Reason.' Translated from the German by DAVID ARMER, F.R.D.

Vol. III, part two, cloth.

A HISTORY OF MATERIALISM, and Criticism of its Present Importance. By FREDERICK ALBERT LANGE, late Professor of Philosophy in the University of Zurich and Marburg. A thorough Translation by HERBERT G. THOMAS, late Scholar of Trinity College, Oxford.

NOW READY.

Sixth Edition, with a New Preface and fine Steel Plate Frontispiece, price 2s. 6d.

SAPPHO:

A TRAGEDY, IN FIVE ACTS.

By STELLA,

Author of 'Records of the Heart,' 'The King's Strategem,' or, 'the Pearl of Poland,' &c.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Daily Telegraph says:—"It presents us with a vivid picture of the victor-romantic London."

The Graphic says:—"The play is full of life and action, and is thoroughly reliable."

The Echo says:—"Miss Stella's character Stella has shown herself with very much power, through all her phases of passion and jealousy and pain, to be outside of the usual reach of London."

The Manchester Guardian says:—"Sappho" shows distinct dramatic power. It has not only the profound interest of passion, but it has variety, and depth, and distinct power of continued individual action."

The Liverpool Mercury says:—"In the present tragedy the well-known American poetess, under the name of Stella, the female Sophocles of Lorraine, and not unjustly styled herself the Sappho of America, has exhibited the beauty and strength of her heroine in a vivid drama, and throughout in a most classical model, and yet in the nineteenth century the very structure as well as the spirit of Sophocles and the Greek stage. A work like this implies boldness of an ordinary character; but from the opening scene of Sappho's home in Mytilene down through all the phases of her life and career, to her death on the fatal rock of Lemnos from which she springs into the sea, the action is thoroughly sustained, the result being a composition of marvellous power and energy, combining us of Tolstoy's 'War,' and not infrequently of Shakespeare's 'Macbeth.'"

The University Reporter says:—"There are many charming lines scattered over this tragedy. There is force in the drama as a whole. It would do excellently well for a theatre."

The Eastern Mercury says:—"Miss Stella's play has been published without a play, without a person of which a substantial author and an excellent poetess could be proud. The Greek play has received so much attention as the 'Sappho' of today."

The Northern Echo says:—"Stella's work is at once elegant and vigorous, and it is rendered with passages of which the truth and beauty render them worthy to become proverb."

The Liverpool Daily Post says:—"The work before us shows the boldness of the life of the Lesbian poetess as recorded in the generally received narrative. The style and diction are thoroughly Grecian. Many of the scenes have a grace and richness of imagery which are most charming, while in the crisis of the play Stella manifests an almost marvellous vigour and power."

Public Opinion says:—"A play which has such words as these in it to stand as a law. The student of ancient Greek plays may discover in it a very ripe and ready acquaintance with the characters of the old Greek drama, the variety of its life is like a sea, rising with the rise and fall of the Greek chorus and monologue, and the playwright will find a number of incidents that will undoubtedly afford scope for the introduction of the most striking situations. It is sufficiently evident that Stella is thoroughly imbued with the principles of good verbiage. No man of the difficulties which would attend the manipulation of ancient Greek plays by the modern stage manager could doubt the success of a play that has already gone on a Greek stage."

The Athenian says:—"The tragedy of 'Sappho' has been translated into Greek by a native of Athens, and is to be played upon the Athenian stage."

Chamberlain, the Greek Post, says (in its Journal, September 1879):—"Stella's 'Sappho' is the translation of the Lesbian work which I study in my dreams. With the aid of an English scholar I have composed a perfect translation of it for the Athenian stage, which all Greece is discussing and admiring."

Quintus's Messenger says:—"Sappho" is a work of great merit, written with unusual vigour, replete with classical allusions, and founded on a series of striking incidents. The author has critically drawn from the writings of the most ancient Greek and Latin authors."

On November 20 will be ready,

Second English Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, with 612 Steel Plate Illustrations.

THE

RECORDS OF THE HEART.

By STELLA,

Author of 'Sappho,' 'The King's Strategem,' &c.

This Work originally appeared in America, and soon ran through nine editions. The first English Edition was published in 1880, and has long been out of print. The readers of 'Sappho,' the latest work of the same Author, have made so many and earnest inquiries after the 'Records of the Heart,' that 'Stella' has at length been induced to re-arrange the Poem, add some new ones, and re-issue it.

THE WORK

New ready, price 1s.
THE ANNUAL FOR THE HOME CIRCLE.
'BOW BELLS' CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.
ELEGANT ILLUSTRATIONS. GENUINE ARTISTS.
London: John Dicks, 214, Strand.

This day is published, price 6s.
ON MUSICAL EDUCATION.
By ALBERTO S. BACH.
Wm. Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

E V E R Y D A Y.

"It is published on:—For every day."
"In it, throughout, a touch of nature, and a catholic taste for what is good."
"Familiar, and by no means dull."
"Chest, 1s. boards, 1s. 6d."
Hampden & Co. 118, New Bond-street, W.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.
Just published. Two Parts, in 1 vol. 12s. 6d.

HARMONIES OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.
By FREDERICK BASTIAT. Translated from the French, with a Notice of his Life and Writings, by PATRICK JAMES STIRLING, LL.D. F.R.S.E. Author of 'The Philosophy of Taxes.'

"Bastiat speaks with the greatest force to the highest order of intellect, at the same time he is almost the only political economist whose style is graceful and fascinating."
"Dr. Stirling's excellent translation."
"Professor Cairnes."
Edinburgh: Oliver & Boyd. London: Longmans, Green & Co.

CECIL BROOKS & CO.'S
NEW AND FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS.

New ready, crown 8vo. cloth, pp. viii+328, price 1s. 6d.
EGYPT for the EGYPTIANS: a Re-

"The whole book abounds in curious revelations... The work is admirably gotten and bound, and with credit on Messrs. Cecil Brooks & Co. who are rapidly assuming an excellent position among publishers of serious works of this class."
"Horsing Post."
"Nothing but gratitude is due to a writer who has before us so much as account of the late political and financial affairs of Egypt."
"Illustrator."

New ready, crown 8vo. cloth, pp. viii+328, price 1s. 6d.

The CATHOLIC CHURCH and MODERN SOCIETY. By H. R. HENRY EDWARD CARDINAL MANNING.

"A brilliant reply to Mr. Froese's attacks on the influence of the Catholic Church in England. A model of good taste in the typography and binding."
"Preston's Journal."

New ready, crown 8vo. with Frontispiece.
ONE YEAR in his LIFE, and other Poems. By J. R. FANTON.

New ready, crown 8vo. price 1s.

The JOHNSONS, By a Friend of the Family. Edited by CHARLES BURNELL.

"The author is a humorist and a satirist, and he is so kind to his satire as to be amusing in his humor."
"English World."
"We have seldom seen more amusing and gratified by the portrait of a work of the nature."
"English World."

New ready, price 1s.

ODDITIES OF a ZULU CAMPAIGN.
By WARREN BURTON. Illustrated by Walter Baskby.

In the press, 3 vols.

SHADOWS in the SUNLIGHT: a Novel. By R. OWEN BLANCHARD.

New ready, price 1s.

ENGLAND from a BACK WINDOW.
By J. R. BAILLET, the Embassy Novelist. Abridged English Edition.

New ready, price 1s. 6d. No. XXXI.

The HOUSE DECORATOR and SCHOOL OF DESIGN.

Contents: Design for Prints—Every-day Art (Illustrated)—Decorative Style—Application to Domestic Purposes (Illustrated)—Furniture—Work and Lace—Writing (Illustrated)—Decorative of Carpentry and Joinery (Illustrated)—Drawing in Board Rooms—Proposed Military Architecture—Decorative—Notes and Queries—Botanical and Useful Notes—Contracts—Patents—Exchange and Value, &c.

"The Fourth Monthly Part (price 6d.), containing upwards of 120 illustrations, is now ready. Post free, 6d."

"Full of matter interesting to the general reader, as well as those for whom it is especially constituted."
"Sunday Times."

"A beautifully illustrated publication."
"Glasgow Herald."

"Contains much information, and is full of interest to other classes than those for which the publication is specially designed."
"Glasgow."

"It is well illustrated and well printed."
"Lloyd's."

"An excellent variety of useful information in connection with the practical art and recreation."
"Glasgow."

"It contains an abundant supply of useful matter, is liberally equipped with woodcuts, and is calculated, we should say, to obtain a large circulation."
"Glasgow."

New ready, price 1s. 6d. No. III.

The LADIES ILLUSTRATED PAPER.

Contents: A Rare Revenge; a Novel. By E. Owen Blackmore (Continued)—When Autumn Leaves were Falling. A tale by W. Wilson Words by Frank Sharp. (With Illustrations)—Fashions (Illustrated)—Notes on News. News-Paper. Notes and the Drama. The Library—New Books.—State of Literature.—The Garden.—Medical Notes.—Gems of Thought.—Bibliography and Sale, &c.

"Messrs. CECIL BROOKS & Co. undertake the Publication, on Commission, of approved Works of Fiction, Travels, Science, &c., and possess exceptional advantages for introducing the same to the Public and the Trade."

London:

CECIL BROOKS & Co. Catherine-street, Strand.

SAMUEL TINSLEY & Co., 81, Southampton-street, Strand.

Now ready, super-royal 8vo. cloth elegant, sunk centre, 12s.

ENGLISH LAKE SCENERY:

A SERIES OF TWENTY-FOUR PLATES

IN THE HIGHEST STYLE OF COLOUR PRINTING, FROM DRAWINGS BY A. F. LYDON.

WITH DESCRIPTIVE LETTER-PRESS.

London: JOHN WALKER & Co. 96, Farringdon-street, E.C.

Now ready, cloth elegant, 10s. 6d.

SUGGESTIVE THOUGHTS ON RELIGIOUS SUBJECTS.

A DICTIONARY OF QUOTATIONS AND SELECTED PASSAGES FROM THE BEST WRITERS, ANCIENT AND MODERN. FOR THE USE OF THE CLERGY AND OTHERS.

Compiled and Analytically Arranged by HENRY SOUTHGATE, Author of 'Many Thoughts of Many Minds.'

In square 8vo. printed on Toned Paper.

London: CHARLES GRIFFIN & Co. Stationers' Hall-court.

IN MEMORIAM: W. J. MACQUORN RANKINE.

Nearly ready.

MISCELLANEOUS SCIENTIFIC PAPERS.By W. J. MACQUORN RANKINE, LL.D. F.R.S., Late Regius Professor of Civil Engineering in the University of Glasgow.

With Memoir by P. G. TAIT, M.A.,

Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh.

Edited by W. J. MILLAR, C.E.,

Secretary to the Institute of Engineers and Shipbuilders in Scotland.

In 1 vol. royal 8vo. with FINE PORTRAIT on Steel, Plates, and Diagrams.

London: CHARLES GRIFFIN & Co. Stationers' Hall-court.

MR. TENNYSON'S NEW VOLUME.

NOTICE.—A New Volume by Mr. TENNYSON, entitled 'BALLADS and other POEMS,' is now in the press, and will be ready for publication in the course of the present month, price 5s.

C. KEGAN PAUL & Co. 1, Paternoster-square.

WITH 25 ILLUSTRATIONS AND PORTRAIT.

NOTICE.—The ROYAL EDITION of TENNYSON'S POETICAL and DRAMATIC WORKS, in One Volume, with Portrait and Twenty-five Illustrations, is now ready, super-royal 8vo. cloth extra, bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 21s.

C. KEGAN PAUL & Co. 1, Paternoster-square.

EPPE'S CHOCOLATE
ESSENCE

Product of a special refining process. It is Chocolate devoided of its over-richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of Coffee. An Afternoon Chocolate. Each packet is labelled

JAMES EPPE & CO.

Homoeopathic Chemists, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'SSTEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers throughout the World.

FURNISH your HOUSES or APARTMENTS

THROUGHOUT ON

MOEDER'S BLUE SYSTEM.

The Original Best and most Liberal

Cash Prices.

No extra charge for time given.

Illustrated Price Catalogue, with full particulars of terms, post free.
F. MOEDER, 26, 28, 30, Tottenham Court Road; and 19, 20, and 21, Newmarket-street, W.C. Established 1852.

F. MOEDER begs to announce that the whole of the above Provision have recently been rebuilt, specially adapted for the Furniture Trade, and now form one of the most commodious Warehouses in the metropolis.

Bed-room Suites from 4s. to 50 Guineas.

Dining-room Suites, from 21s. to 45 Guineas.

Dining-room Suites, from 7s. to 40 Guineas.

And all other Goods in great variety

F. MOEDER, 26, 28, 30, Tottenham Court Road; and 19, 20, and 21, Newmarket-street, W.C. Established 1852.

HEAL & SON.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.

DINING-ROOM FURNITURE.

DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE.

HEAL & SON.

108 to 100, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, W.

KNIVES, FORKS, and SPOONS.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE FOR SILVER.—The REAL NICKEL SILVER, when strongly SILVER-PLATED, cannot be distinguished from silver.

With ordinary usage this quality will wear 30 years.

Best Quality, strongly Plated.

		Piddle or Oval Silver	Round or Thread	King's or Shell
Table Forks	per doz.	1 10 0	2 1 0	2 6 0
Table Spoons	per doz.	1 10 0	2 1 0	2 6 0
Desert Forks	per doz.	1 2 0	1 0 0	1 11 0
Desert Spoons	per doz.	1 2 0	1 0 0	1 11 0
Ten Spoons	per doz.	14 0 0	1 0 0	1 2 0

A SECOND QUALITY of Piddle Pattern Table Spoons or Forks, 2s. per dozen. Desert 1 1/2s. Ten Spoons, 12s.

CUTLERY WARRANTED.Handles, Seamed or Rivetted.
Blades of the Finest Steel.

	Table Knives	Desert Knives	Carvers per gr.
2 1/2 in. Ivory Handles, per doz.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0
do. do. do.	12 6 0	12 6 0	12 6 0

CAREFULLY PAID to any Railway Station.

Samples at above rates post free.

WILLIAM S. DUTTON, General Furnishing
Ironmonger, 30, Oxford-street, W. &c.
Catalogue, containing 500 Illustrations, post free.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S TRAVELLING BAGS.

ALLEN'S STROMBO BAGS.

ALLEN'S TRAVELLING BAGS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE of 500 Articles for Continental Travelling post free. Cash Discount, 10 per cent.
27, West Strand, London.APOLLINARIS WATER."Largest demand Apollinaris" — Nevers, Beck (v. Ode 2).

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1879.

ANNUAL SALE, 5,000,000.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY Limited, 19, Regent-street, London, E.W.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—Nothing is so highly appreciated as a box of GRANT'S MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY which can be ordered at any Wine Merchant, Grocer's, or supplied to Her Majesty 42s. per dozen. Sportsman's special quality, 50s. per dozen. Manufacturer T. GRANT, Distillery, Maidstone.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for over Forty Years have approved of this Pure Magnesia as the best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, BRUISES, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, and INDIGESTION, and as the safest Agent for Bilious Complaints, Ladies, Children, and Invalids.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

"I CAN highly recommend Dr. LOOGER'S PULMONIC WAFERS for Throat Irritation and Chest Disease."
(Signed J. Swain, M.P.S., 10, Mill-street, Liverpool.)
They instantly relieve and rapidly cure Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Cough, Hoarseness, and all the ailments of the Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and are the most reliable and pleasant remedy for these ailments.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use

EPPE'S GLYCERINE JUBUBES.

Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of speaking, becomes actively healing. Hold only in boxes, 7/6 and 1s. 1/6, labelled "James Eppe & Co. Homoeopathic Chemists, London."
A letter received from "Gentlemen,"—It may perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial I have found your Glycerine Jububes of considerable benefit, with or without medical treatment, in almost all forms of throat disease. They soothe and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm. Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, L.R.C.P.E. Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, 20, Wellington-street, Strand 1, London, W.C.
Printed by E. J. FRANKS, at the Crown Press, Toth's Court, Chancery-lane, E.C.4; and Published by JOHN FRANKS, at No. 20, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.
Agents: Sir R. DODD, Messrs Bell & Bradstreet and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh—per Islander. Mr. John Robertson Duffin—Saturday November 13, 1886.

Valuable Law Library of the Right Hon. ALFRED HENRY THESIGER, deceased, late one of the Lords Justices of Appeal embracing also that of the late Right Hon. Lord CHELMSFORD, formerly Lord Chancellor of England.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms 115, Chancery-lane, W.C. on TUESDAY December 1 at 1 o'clock the valuable LAW LIBRARY of the late Lord Justice THESIGER, including also that of the late Lord CHELMSFORD (formerly Lord Chancellor of England), comprising 11 vols. State Trials 1677 to 1794, a capital Series of Reports in King and Queen's Bench Common Pleas and Common Bench Exchequer Chancery and House of Lords, Privy Council Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Cases—a good selection of useful Modern Practical Works, including several on the Law of Scotland—two handsome Mahogany Bookcases, &c. Catalogues are preparing.

The DE LA SALLE Collection of Pictures and Drawings. MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION at their Great Rooms 13, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY November 27 at 1 o'clock precisely the valuable COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN DRAWINGS WATER COLOURS and PICTURES left by the late Monsieur DES DE LA SALLE, of Paris, including Works of R. P. Boussington, N. T. Charlet, T. Goussier, L. Robert, T. Rousseau, N. Poussin, Van Dyck, Rubens, Rembrandt, R. Hottelot, G. Correggio, L. Lais, F. Mantegna, L. Caracci, &c. &c. May be viewed two days preceding, and Catalogues had.

The Duxbury Park Library, the Property of the late W. T.

CARR STANDISH, Esq.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on WEDNESDAY, December 1 at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable LIBRARY of W. T. CARR STANDISH, Esq. deceased (removed from Duxbury Park, Lancashire), comprising Books of Prints—Picture Galleries—Picture-books—Works on the Fine Arts—Publications of the French Government (Presentation Copies from King Louis Philippe and Napoleon III.)—and many valuable Works in English, French, and Italian Literature, including Musée Français, 6 vols. proofs before letters, Morocco extra—Description de l'Égypte, original edition—Voyages Pittoresques dans l'Antiquité Française, 12 vols. Morocco extra—Documents Inédits sur l'Histoire de France, 12 vols.—Cabinet des Rois, 40 vols.—Galerie Historique de Versailles, 12 vols.—Collection Originale de la Bibliothèque Royale, 1 vol.—Mémoires de Napoléon—Précis, Voyage autour du Monde, 13 vols.—Dapper, Voyage autour du Monde, 6 vols.—Du Claret, Musée de Sculpture, 12 vols.—De Bonnard, Les Arts du Moyen Âge, 5 vols.—Bury de St. Vincent, Expédition de Morée, 1 vol.—Labrousse, Voyage Pittoresque de l'Espagne, 4 vols.—Cheatham Society's Publications, 105 vols.—Trésor de Numismatique et de Glyptique, 18 vols., &c.

This day is published, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, with 26 Illustrations, price 32s.

TURKEY, OLD AND NEW: HISTORICAL, GEOGRAPHICAL, AND STATISTICAL.

By SUTHERLAND MENZIES,
Author of 'Royal Favourites,' &c.

London: WM. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place.

With 13 Illustrations, price 6s.

THE CONJURER'S DAUGHTER: A TALE.

By J. W. SHERER, C.S.I.

"The incidents are well connected, the dialogue is rational, and the author's narrative style is most agreeable."
"It must be said that the volume is eminently readable, and that it should come into popular favour."
—St. James's Gazette and Scotsman.

London: WM. H. ALLEN & Co. 13, Waterloo-place.

Nearly ready, fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, 1s.

OUR VISITORS; AND HOW TO AMUSE THEM.

AFFORDING HINTS AND SUGGESTIONS FOR CARRYING OUT WITH PERFECT SUCCESS EVERY DESCRIPTION OF ENTERTAINMENT AT HOME.

"Life is fortified by many friendships."—Sydney Smith.

Now ready, crown 8vo. sewed, 1s.

OUR JEMIMAS. RESPECTFULLY ADDRESSED TO THE GREAT MIDDLE CLASS.

By "A VICTIM."

"Deals humorously with a subject that is very seriously considered by thousands of housekeepers—the vagaries and shortcomings of domestic servants."—Times.

London: HOLLISTON & SONS, Paternoster-square, E.C.

THE PINEAPPLE WORK OF THE BRANCON.

In small 4to. price 6s. Picture Boards.

AFTERNOON TEA: RHYMES FOR CHILDREN.

With Original Illustrations by J. G. Sowerby and H. H. Emmens.

This Volume marks the progress of Colour Printing to the Season 1880-81. It is the work of two Artists whose Pictures find places on the line of the Royal Academy, and has been produced by the Publishers regardless of outlay, with the desire that it should be

THE CHRISTMAS BOOK OF THE YEAR.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. Bedford-street, Strand.

Price 1s.; post free, 1s. 3d.

WARNE'S INTERNATIONAL ANNUAL.

FULLY ILLUSTRATED.

In Imperial 8vo. 128 pages, Picture Covers, with Original Contributions by English and Foreign Authors.

STORIES to TELL. Joseph Hutton.

A STORY of a RED SHIRT. Joseph Cowen, M.P.

The MAGIC WAND. G. R. Sims.

The FATEFUL FIRST. Hon. Lewis Wingfield.

Beside Twenty other TALES, STORIES, POEMS, &c., by Popular Authors.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. Bedford-street, Strand.

RARE MUSICAL LIBRARY.

SALE BY AUCTION AT BERLIN.

MR. RUDOLPH LEPKE, of Berlin, will SELL by AUCTION, on MONDAY, November 22, at 10 o'clock, the valuable MUSICAL LIBRARY of Dr. F. GRIERING, Professor at the University, Vienna, with Contributions from other Collections, the most important for the last twenty years, including many rare Works on Musical History and Theory, Practical Music, the Art of Dancing, Opera Treatise, &c. Catalogues on application to Messrs. Asher & Co. 13, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, who will attend the Sale and receive Commissions.

NEW SUBMARINE TELEGRAPHIC OFFICE.

—See the BUILDERS (4d. by post, 4d.). View of Doorways Columns, of Station Church Institute, and Manchester and County Bank. Architecture in Cyprus—Art Companies—Bewick's Works—The Flood Gleaner—Builders' Bazaar—Institution—Barnes's Planning, &c. &c. Catherine-street, and all Newsagents.

NUTTEEN FARM.

NEW STORE, by Mrs. J. H. RIBBELL.
SEE DOUBLY CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF KENSINGTON.

Ready 27th November. Price One Shilling.

London: Cecil Brooks & Co. Manchester, John Heywood, Edinburgh: John Murray & Co. Aberdeen, John Avery & Co. And at all Railway Stalls and Bookellers.

NOTICE TO AMATEUR MECHANICS, &c.

A NEW WORK by the Popular Author of 'The Ladies and the Lads,' 'The Amateur Mechanic's Workshop,' &c., will be commenced in an Early Number of

THE HOUSE DECORATOR and SCHOOL OF DESIGN.

One Penny, Weekly, Sixpence, Monthly.

Contents of Current Number. The Labour Market—Machine for Turning Wood Illustrated—Military Engineering in France—Congress of Electricians—Seventeenth Century Furniture—Brieklaying (Illustrated)—Design for Church Window—Miscellaneous Paintings—Monuments of Churches and Cemeteries (Illustrated)—Kew Gardens (Illustrated)—Flintwork Work and Lead Working (Illustrated)—Birmingham Architectural Association—Dry-Bot in Houses—Scientific Notes—Notes and Queries—Cleaning—Contracts—Patents, &c.

"THE FOURTH MONTHLY PART, containing over 300 columns of Letter-press and upwards of 100 Illustrations, is now ready. Price 4d. post free, 4d."

"Full of matter interesting to the general reader, as well as those for whose use it is especially constituted."—Sunday Times.

"A beautifully illustrated publication."—Country Times.

"Contains much information, and is full of interest to other classes than those for which the publication is especially designed."—Observer.

"It is well illustrated and well printed."—Manchester.

"An excellent and useful art publication."—Lloyd's.

"It contains a variety of useful information in connection with the practical arts and mechanics."—Academy.

"It contains an abundant supply of useful matter, is liberally supplied with woodcuts, and is calculated, we should say, to attain a large circulation."—Leader.

London: Cecil Brooks & Co. Catherine-street, Strand.

THE ARTIST.

"The only newspaper of the art world published; and a very good one too."—Journal and Journalism. "What we want in England, Daily,"—J. E. Boehm, A.R.A. "Exactly what the student requires."—Letter from Kensington. "Your paper is fulfilling a most valuable work, and every month I believe it is more and more appreciated."—W. H. Baylis. "Full of interesting matter."—Professor Church, A.R.A. "The best thing of the kind that has appeared within our recollection, now running over fifty years."—Messrs. W. & A. G. & Co. "An exceedingly elegant little paper."—Leip. Correspondent. "Worth one's while to those in any way interested in the well-being and promotion of art."—Letter from Windsor. "Its literary direction is so capable hands, and the care with which it is edited from infinite credit."—Publishers' Circular. "The art news from abroad are ample and altogether this is a most valuable publication."—American Art Journal (New York). "It contains well-written summaries of news that artists care to know: reports of meetings, exhibitions, academies, and art sales—a very interesting feature: letters from correspondents in the provinces, collected opinions on works in the Royal Academy; obituary notices of artists; notes of lectures, leading articles and reviews and a variety of miscellaneous matter of current and permanent value."—Illustrated Chronicle. "A very interesting paper that devoted to 'Collected Opinions on Art Work.' It brings at it down the spirit of the principal criticisms on the important exhibitions. At a glance can be seen the general impression created by a given artist's work. There are also reviews, art abroad, art in the provinces, art in the house, art in the trade—in fact, an unusual amount of art matter in a very handy form."—Yorkshire Post.

Price 6d.; by post, 7d.

THE NOVEMBER NUMBER OF

THE ARTIST, and Journal of Home Culture.

W. Reeves, 165, Fleet-street, London.

ONE'S MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST.

FIFTH EDITION.

This day is published in 1 vol. 8vo. 32s. cloth.

ONE'S MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST; being a Complete Collection of Forms and Precedents for Practical Use in all Cases out of Court, Relating to the Property Matters by Magistrates, their Clerks, Solicitors and Constables. Sixth Edition. By THOMAS W. SAUNDERS, Esq. Metropolitan Police Magistrate. London: Butterworths, 1, Fleet-street, Her Majesty's Law Publishers.

POPULAR EDITION.

Now ready, 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

THE VIOLETTIN: ITS FAMOUS MARKS AND THEIR IMITATIONS.

BY GEORGE HART.

Illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings from Photographs.

Dulux & Co. 21, Soho-square, Schott & Co. 120, Regent-street.

READY.—Co. up to date in this Part, 1,000 pages, 4to.

A CONTEMPORARY HISTORY OF AFFAIRS IN IRELAND from 1841 to 1879, as far as the first time published. With Portrait and Illustrations. Edited by J. T. GILBERT, F.R.S.E., for the Irish Archaeological and Celtic Society.

"We know what the English had to say about the Irish but we did not know what the Irish had to say about themselves, the editor of this work has in a grand manner removed this omission. Such volumes may be read with pleasure and advantage."—Leader.

"A very small number of Copies has been printed, and solely for Subscribers.—For Prospectus apply, by letter, to the Hon. Secretary of the Society, Villa Nova, Blackrock, Dublin; or to Mr. Quaritch, 15, Piccadilly, London."

MEN OF LIGHT AND LEADING.

EDITED BY

A. J. SYMINGTON.

The aim of the volumes of which this Series is composed is to give an intelligible account of the authors included in it, and of their writings, accompanied with specimens of their works.

While no formal biography is attempted, the details of the life and career of each author are given in sufficient fulness to enable the reader to form a clear conception of the man; and while no attempt has been made to give a complete collection of the writings of any one, a sufficient number of characteristic extracts is given to enable an adequate idea to be formed of the spirit and style of each writer, and the general scope of his works.

The Series will, therefore, it is hoped, be helpful to that large class of readers in every part of the realm who desire to gain a knowledge of our principal authors, but whose leisure precludes the attempt to study elaborate biographies or complete collections of literary works, whether in poetry or prose.

NOW READY,

THOMAS MOORE. In 1 vol.

SAMUEL LOVER. In 1 vol.

W. C. BRYANT. In 1 vol.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. In 2 vols.

[Nearly ready.]

London: BLACKIE & SON, 49 and 50, Old Bailey.

NEW NOVELS

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DOROTHY FOX.'

ADAM AND EVE. By Mrs. Parr, Author of 'Dorothy Fox.' In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"Adam and Eve" has all the merits that have distinguished the author's former novels. The characters are, without exception, carefully conceived, and the leading ones dramatically thrown into the foreground. Mrs. Parr's more finished portraits abound in subtle but effective touches, nor is she by any means wanting in the quality of humour.
Times, November 12.

BY MRS. RIDDELL.

The MYSTERY in PALACE GARDENS. By Mrs. RIDDELL, Author of 'George Geith,' &c. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MR. JEPHSON'S NEW NOVEL.

The RED RAG. By R. Mountaney JEPHSON, Author of 'A Pink Wedding,' 'The Girl he Left Behind Him,' &c. In 2 vols. crown 8vo.

"Mr. Jephson's bright animal spirits infect his reader. We cannot criticise the story but we can enjoy it. Mr. Jephson evidently had the stage before him as he wrote."
Queen.

BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, Author of 'East Lynne,' &c. In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

"Fresh, clear, simple, and withal strong in purpose and execution, these stories have won admiration as true works of inventive art."
Daily Telegraph.

IMMEDIATELY,

FOLLY MORRISON. By Frank HAMILLT. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NEW EDITION OF

DOROTHY FOX. By Mrs. Parr, Author of 'Adam and Eve.' Crown 8vo. with illustrations, &c.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

CHATTO & WINDUS, PUBLISHERS.

MRS. LINTON'S NEW NOVEL.—3 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.

The REBEL of the FAMILY. By E. Lynn Linton, Author of 'Patricia Kemball,' &c.

JAMES PAYN'S NEW NOVEL.—3 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.

A CONFIDENTIAL AGENT. By James Payn, Author of 'By Proxy,' &c. With 12 illustrations by Arthur Hopkins.

MR. FRANCILLON'S NEW NOVEL.

QUEEN COPHETUA. By R. E. Francillon. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

MRS. HUNT'S NEW NOVEL.

The LEADEN CASKET. By Mrs. Alfred W. Hunt. 3 vols. crown 8vo.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S NEW NOVEL.—3 vols. crown 8vo. at every Library.

ELLICE QUENTIN, and Other Stories. By Julian Hawthorne.

Complete in 4 vols. demy 8vo. 12s. each.

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES. From the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P.

"Criticism is disarmed before a composition which provokes little but approval. This is a really good book on a really interesting subject, and works piled on works could say no more for it."
Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, with 214 illustrations, 1s. 6d.

A TRAMP ABROAD. By Mark Twain.

"A piece of work that is not only delightful as mere reading, but also of a high degree of merit as literature.... The book is full of good things."
Athenæum.

To be Completed in Five Volumes, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. each.

BRET HARTE'S COLLECTED WORKS.

Vol. I. COMPLETE POETICAL and DRAMATIC WORKS. Vol. II. EARLIER PAPERS—LUCK of BOARING CAMP, &c. Vol. III. TALES of ARGONAUTS—EASTERN SKETCHES. Vol. IV. GABRIEL CONROY. (In the press.) Vol. V. STORIES—CONDENSED NOVELS, &c. (In the press.)

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

CRIMES and PUNISHMENTS. Including a New Translation of Beccaria's 'Dei Delitti e delle Pene.' By JAMES ANSON FARRER.

MISS G. BOWERS'S NEW HUNTING SKETCHES.—Beautifully Coloured, and handsomely half bound, oblong 8vo. 2s.

LEAVES from a HUNTING JOURNAL. By G. Bowers, Author of 'Castles in Cranepshire,' &c. Coloured in Fac-simile of the Originals.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. a New Edition of CONFIDENCE. By Henry James, jun.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s.

SONGS and POEMS from 1819 to 1879. By J. R. Planche.

Edited, with an Introduction, by his Daughter, Mrs. MACKERRASS.

A HANDSOME GIFT-BOOK.—Small 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

The WOOING of the WATER WITCH: a Northern Oddity.

By EVAN DALDRUP. With 125 fine illustrations by J. Moyr Smith.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth 11s. 2s. 6d.

A SIMPLE TREATISE on HEAT. By W. Mattieu Williams, F.R.S.A. F.C.S., Author of 'The Fuel of the Sun.'

Post 8vo. cloth 11s. 2s. 6d. each.

The SPEECHES of CHARLES DICKENS. With Chapters on Dickens as a Letter-Writer, Poet, and Public Reader.

FELICLOS. By WILLIAM T. DOBSON

A HANDBOOK FOR POTTERY-PAINTERS.—Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

PRACTICAL KERAMICS for STUDENTS. By C. A. Janvier.

Demy 8vo. Illuminated Cover, price One Shilling.

THE GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL.

Containing The POETRY RING. By Mrs. Alfred W. Hunt.—SKELETON KEYS. By D. Charlotte Murray.—LOVE that PURIFIES. By Harriet A. Duff.

Demy 8vo. beautifully illustrated, price One Shilling.

BELGRAVIA ANNUAL Containing—

SYNTH. By R. Montgomery Ranking. Illustrated by H. Gandy.
THE YOUNG LADY in ORRY. By F. W. Robinson.
BALLAD of ANTIQUE DANCES. By W. E. Henley. Illustrated by E. J. Wheeler.
PRINCE BARON'S WIFE. By Julian Hawthorne. Illustrated by T. C. Heath.
MAX BINKER'S GREAT BOOK. By E. C. Grenville-Murray.
A CHANT for WINTER. Illustrated by Rudolf Blind.
The COLONEL. By H. W. Lucy.

THE REDUCED DINNER PARTY. By James Payn.
IS SHE an HEIRLOOM? By Percy Fitzgerald. Illustrated by G. L. Meymott.
THE CHINESE PLAY at the HAYMARKET. By J. Arden.
A PROVERB. By J. Libell. Illustrated by F. S. Walker.
SO LIKE the PRINCE. By A. Remond Hake.
THE TRANSACTIONS of the GATO CLUB. By Deism Cook.
A CHRISTMAS NIGHTMARE. By T. F. Thelston Dyer.

BELGRAVIA for 1881.—A New Serial Story, entitled 'A ROMANCE of the NINETEENTH CENTURY,' by W. M. MALLOCK, Author of 'The New Republic,' will be begun in the JANUARY NUMBER of BELGRAVIA, which Number will contain also the First Chapter of a New Novel by D. CHARLES MURRAY, entitled 'JOSEPH'S COAT,' illustrated by Fred. Barnard, and the First of a Series of Illustrated Papers by ALFRED HINCHES, Author of 'Our Old Country Towns,' entitled 'ROUND ABOUT ETON and HARROW.'

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.—The January Number of this Periodical, in addition to many other features of interest, will contain the First Chapter of a New Serial Story, entitled 'THE CYMBET of a SEASON,' by JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P., Author of 'Donna Quixote,' &c.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

NEW BOOKS IN GENERAL DEMAND.

Endymion, by the Earl of Beaconsfield (3,000 copies, in a few days); McCarthy's History of our Own Times (1,500 copies); Unbeaten Tracks in Japan, by Miss Bird (1,000 copies); Trevelyan's Life of C. J. Fox (1,000 copies); Memoirs of Frances Ridley Havergal; Young Ireland, by Sir C. Gavan Duffy; Guizot in Private Life; Kinglake's War in the Crimea, New Vol.; Christie's Memoir of Etienne Dolet; Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi; A Tramp Abroad, by Mark Twain (1,000 copies); Memorials of Dr. Candlish; A New Volume of Poems, by Alfred Tennyson (in a few days); A New Volume of Sermons, by Rev. F. W. Robertson; Coral Lands of the Pacific, by H. S. Cooper; History of Japan, by Sir E. J. Reed; Island Life, by Alfred R. Wallace; A Tour in Corsica, by Gertrude Forde; Echoes from the Counties; The Church of the Future, by the Archbishop of Canterbury; The Manifold Witness for Christ, by Canon Barry; Duty, by Samuel Smiles; all the Best New Novels, and every other Recent Work of General Interest.

SEE MUDIE'S LIBRARY CIRCULAR FOR NOVEMBER.

NEW EDITION NOW READY, POSTAGE FREE ON APPLICATION.

FIRST-CLASS SUBSCRIPTION, ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM,

For a constant succession of the Newest Books.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM,

For the Free Delivery of Books in every part of London.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTION, TWO GUINEAS PER ANNUM AND UPWARDS,

According to the number of Volumes required.

BOOK SOCIETIES AND INSTITUTIONS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

THE NAMES OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS ARE ENTERED DAILY.

Revised Catalogue of Works recently added to the Library, and of Surplus Copies withdrawn for Sale at greatly reduced prices, are now ready, and will be forwarded, postage free, on application.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS AND SCHOOL PRIZES.

A NEW EDITION of MUDIE'S CATALOGUE of Works of the best Authors, in Morocco, Tree-Calf' Calf Extra, Vellum, and other Ornamental Bindings, adapted for Gentlemen's Libraries or Drawing-Room Tables, and for Christmas, Wedding, or Birthday Presents, and College or School Prizes, is now ready, and will be forwarded on application.

All the Books in Circulation and on Sale at MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY may also be obtained by all Subscribers to

MUDIE'S LIBRARY, BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER,

And (by order) from all Booksellers in connexion with the Library.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY (LIMITED), NEW OXFORD-STREET.

CITY OFFICE: 2, KING-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

HODDER & STOUGHTON'S AUTUMN LIST.

"MEN WORTH REMEMBERING."

A New Biographical Series.

Now ready, in crown 8vo. cloth, price 2s. 6d. each.

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE.

By JOHN STOUGHTON, D.D.

The English Independent, in noticing the first volume of this series, says:—"This charming biography is one of a series which, when completed, will be a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the men who have done good work in the cause of religion and philanthropy in England. It is intended that lives of Martyn, Doddridge, Grellet, Baxter, Knox, Carey, Hall, Fletcher of Madeley, Wycliffe, Chalmers, and Jonathan Edwards, shall be published in the same form, and the work of writing them has been entrusted to competent men."

HENRY MARTYN.

By Canon BELL, D.D.

CHOICE ANTIQUE EDITION OF FULLER'S 'GOOD THOUGHTS.'

Good Thoughts in Bad Times, and other Papers.

By THOMAS FULLER. Beautifully printed on Hand-made Paper. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The type, the paper, and the size of the book are all equally to be well spoken of; as to the work itself, praise would be as superfluous as would be recommendation of the contemporary Pilgrim's Progress. Every one who likes to read good thoughts expressed in vigorous and plain English will welcome this reprint."—Athenæum.

The Brothers Wiffen: Memoirs and Miscellanies.

Edited by SAMUEL ROWLES PATRISON. With 2 Portraits, crown 8vo. 6s.

MR. R. W. DALE'S SERMONS FOR THE TIMES.

The Evangelical Revival, and other Sermons. By

R. W. DALE, M.A., Author of 'The Atonement,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Dale's sermons are pointed, practical, full of worldly wisdom, and plain moral teaching. The reader feels that he is listening to the true words of an able man, full of path and point. The volume as a whole is kind and thoughtful above the level of pulpit literature, both in the quality of the matter and direction of the matter."—Scotsman.

The Laws relating to Religious Liberty and Public

Worship. With a Sketch of the Rise and Progress of Religious Liberty in England. By JOHN JENKINS, Esq. Registrar of County Courts, and Delegated Judge in Bankruptcy. This day. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Health Studies: Lectures to Young Men. By H.

SINCLAIR PATERSON, M.D. Price 2s. 6d. cloth.

New Zealand: Past and Present. By James

BULLER, Author of 'Forty Years in New Zealand.' Price 3s. 6d. with 8 Illustrations and Map. (Ready.)

The Heavenly World: Views of the Future Life by Eminent Writers. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Theistic Problems: Essays on the Existence of God and His Relationship to Man. By GEORGE BEXTON, M.A. LL.D. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The Atonement, and other Discourses; being a Second Series of 'Plain Pulpit Talk.' By THOMAS COOPER, Author of 'The Purgatory of Solitude,' 'The Bridge of History over the Gulf of Time,' &c. 3s. crown 8vo. price 5s.

The Book of Job: a Metrical Translation, with

Introduction and Notes. By HENRY JAMES CLARKE, A.K.C., Vicar of Great Barr, late Theological Lecturer at King's College, London. Crown 8vo. 6s.

How Readest Thou? A Series of Practical Expositions and Thoughts. By Rev. F. B. PROCTOR, M.A. This day. Crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW GIFT-BOOKS FOR THE SEASON.

The TWO MISS DAWSONS. By the Author of 'The Balmers,' 'Christie Redburn's Troubles,' &c. This day, price 6s. handsomely bound.

"A pretty South Sea story."—Morning Post.

CONSECRATED WOMEN. By Claudia.

Including Catherine of Siena, Suzanne Wesley, Amelia Seabring, Fanny Truvel, Fiddie Fiske, &c. Crown 8vo. 6s. cloth extra.

The CUP of CONSOLATION; or, Bright

Messages for the Sick Bed, from the Two great Volumes of Nature and Revelation. By an INVALID. With an Introduction by J. H. MACLEOD, D.D. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The GENTLE HEART. By Alexander

MACLEOD, D.D. Being a Second Series of "TALKING to the CHILDREN." Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. handsomely bound.

NEW EDITIONS.

BY THE EDITOR OF 'THE BOY'S OWN PAPER.'

ALL TRUE: Records of Peril and Adventure. Wonders of Nature, Remarkable Escapes and Deliverances, &c. By Dr. MACGILL. Fifth Thousand. Beautifully illustrated and bound, price 3s.

OLD-FASHIONED STORIES. By Thomas

COOPER. Author of 'The Purgatory of Solitude,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition, price 3s. 6d. cloth.

"A volume of quiet, vigorous sketches."—Athenæum.

The VOICE and PUBLIC SPEAKING: a

Book for all who Read and Speak in Public. By J. F. SANDLANDS, M.A. Second Edition, enlarged, price 2s. 6d.

HENDRICKS the HUNTER; or, the Border

Farm. A Tale of Zululand. New Edition, Five Illustrations, 6s.

"A delightful book of travel and adventure."—Athenæum.

TALKING to the CHILDREN. By Alex-

ANDER MACLEOD, D.D. Eighth Edition, 3s. 6d. Uniform with 'The Gentle Heart.'

NEW AND CHEAP EDITIONS OF THE CHRISTIAN EVIDENCE LECTURES.

Delivered at the request of the Christian Evidence Society.

MODERN SCEPTICISM. 552 pp. cloth, 2s. 6d.;

paper covers, 2s.

FAITH and FREE THOUGHT. 486 pp. cloth, 2s.;

paper covers, 1s. 6d.

CREDENTIALS of CHRISTIANITY. 292 pp. cloth,

1s. 6d., paper covers, 1s.

POPULAR OBJECTIONS to REVEALED TRUTH.

366 pp. cloth, 1s. 6d., paper covers, 1s. 3d.

STRIVINGS for the FAITH. 302 pp. cloth, 1s. 6d.;

paper covers, 1s.

A List of the Lectures in each Volume may be had on application. The Lectures include the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, Carleton and Winchester, the Deans of Canterbury and Ely, Thomas Barry, Bala, Cress, and Mowley, Sir David Fraser, Prof. Hamilton, Dr. Gladstone, Dr. Alison, Dr. Lindsay Alexander, and many others.

STANDARD WORKS.

UEBERWEG'S HISTORY of PHILOSOPHY, from Thales to the Present Time. With Additions by NOAH PORTER, D.D., LL.D. Second Edition.

Vol. 1. ANCIENT and MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY. Royal 8vo. 15s.

Vol. 2. MODERN PHILOSOPHY. Royal 8vo. 21s.

"We have several histories of philosophy, some of them of great value; but we know of none that for completeness and accuracy can all approach the work of Friedrich Ueberweg."—Contemporary Review.

NEW AND CHEAP EDITIONS OF

PRESENSE'S EARLY YEARS

of CHRISTIANITY. In 4 vols. price 7s. 6d. each, handsomely

The Volumes may be had separately, as follows:—

1. The APOSTOLIC AGE. With Portrait. Crown

8vo. 7s. 6d.

2. The MARTYRS and APOLOGISTS. Crown

8vo. 7s. 6d.

3. HERESY and CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE. Crown

8vo. 7s. 6d.

4. LIFE and PRACTICE in the EARLY CHURCH

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

JESUS CHRIST: His Times, Life, and Work. By R. DE PRESENSE, D.D., Author of 'The Early Years of Christianity,' &c. Seventh Edition, Unabridged, price 7s. 6d.

"This work has been described by Canon Liddon as a most noble contribution to the cause of truth," and by the Contemporary Review as "one of the most valuable additions to Christian literature which the present generation has seen."

HISTORY of the RISE of the HUGUENOTS. By H. M. BAIRD, Professor in the University of New York. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 15s. with Maps.

"He tells his story so well that it cannot fail to interest the reader."—Saturday Review.

The STORY of the EARTH and MAN. By T. W. DAWSON, LL.D., F.R.S. Sixth Edition, 10 Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

"A very able and interesting sketch of geological science."—Quarterly.

HOMILETICAL and PASTORAL

LECTURES Delivered in St. Paul's Cathedral, by the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, DEAN PEROWNE, the BISHOP of CARRISLE, and others. With a Preface by Right Rev. C. J. WELLDOTT, D.D., Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. cloth.

The SUPERHUMAN ORIGIN of the BIBLE INFERRED from ITSELF. By HENRY ROGERS.

Author of 'The Eclipse of Faith,' 'Essays Contributed to the Edinburgh Review,' &c. Fifth Edition. 6s.

The ATONEMENT. By R. W.

DALE, M.A. Sixth and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"There will be little difference of opinion as to the power and originality with which the theme is treated."—Literary Chronicle.

Rev. WILLIAM JAY'S WORKS.

An entirely New Re-issue now ready, in eight handsome volumes, crown 8vo. Roxburgh binding, price 5s. each, comprising—

Morning and Evening Exercises. Weekly Prayers. 1 vol. 5s. 4 vols. 6s. each. Short Discourses. 3 vols. 6s. each. 1 vol. 6s.

The LIFE and TIMES of JOHN

WESLEY. By Rev. L. TYRMAN. Fourth and Cheaper Edition.

3 vols. price 7s. 6d. each, with Portraits.

"The work has made a high reputation for itself, and that reputation is well deserved."—Scotsman.

London: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row.

R. J. MITCHELL & SONS'

SPECIAL LIST OF RECENT PURCHASES OF IMPORTANT WORKS,

Many RARE and CURIOUS, Now on SALE at the Nett Cash Prices affixed.

Autographs. — A Collection of over

Seven Hundred Original Letters and Phrases of Royalty, Nobility, Statesmen, Clergy, Poets, Musicians, Philosophers, Naval and Military Celebrities (including a very amusing Letter by Pierce Penna a copy of one of Shakespeare's Love Letters, and the Diploma from the Academy at Milan granted to C. J. Mathews, Architect, afterwards Comptroller, with his Signature at foot, 3 vols. small folio, half-calf, 12s. 12s.)

Anecdotes of the late Samuel Johnson, LL.D. during the last Twenty Years of his Life, by N. L. Ford, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

A Pacquet of Advice and Animadversions sent from London to the King of Persia, contained by a beautiful Pamphlet, illustrated. A Letter from a Prince of Quality to his Friend in the Country, 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

A Treatise of the Rights of the Crown, describing how the King of England may support and increase his Annual Revenue, by W. Owen, 12mo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Æsop Naturalized, in a Collection of diverting Fables and Stories from Æsop, La Fontaine, Poggio, and others. Seventh Edition, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Bloomfield (Robert), Rural Tales, Ballads and Songs, First Edition, large paper, Portland, morocco, 12s. 12s.

Burnet (John), F.R.S., Treatise on Painting (consisting of the Education of the Eye and Practical Hints on Composition, Chiaroscuro, and Colour) illustrated by Knapton from the Vatican, Vercina, Florentine and Dutch Schools, large paper, 12s. 12s.

Caulfield (J.), Portraits, Memoirs, and Characters of Remarkable Persons from the Revolution in 1688 to the End of the Reign of George II. 12s. 12s.

Chappell (W.), F.S.A., Popular Music of the Olden Time, a Collection of Ancient Songs, Ballads, and Dance Tunes, also Miscellaneous Old Melodies, 7 vols. royal 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Clark (J.), A Series of Practical Instructions in Landscape Painting in Water Colours, illustrated by 40 beautifully Coloured Views from Nature, Descriptive of Objects, &c., mounted in imitation of drawings, 4s. 4s.

Clark (N.), D.D., The Way of Truth; or, a Study of Intimacy, Consistent with the Doctrine of the Church of England, crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Cooke (John), Monarchy no Creature of God's Making, wherein is proved by Scripture and Reason, that Monarchical Government is against the Mind of God, crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Cunningham (J. W.), A.M., A World without Sin, 12mo. Edition, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Drake (N.), Essays, Biographical, Critical, and Historical, Narrative of the Father, Son, and Grandson, Portland, Second Edition, 3 vols. 12mo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Dramatic Time-Piece; or, Perpetual Memory being a Calculation of the Length of Time every Art takes in the performing in all the Acting Plays at the Theatre Royal of Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and Haymarket, by J. Rowlandson, 12mo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Declaration of His Majesties Royall Pleasure, in what Sort He thinks fit to Manage, or reserve His Majesty's Right of Banishment, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Eclipse. — Philosophical Dissertation on the Duration of Eclipses, explaining the Physical Cause thereof in such a Manner as a few Words on the Pythagorean System and an Inquiry into the Nature and Laws of Comets, by Thomas Penna, M.D., 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Evil Consequences of Attending the Race Course. — A Sermon in which is contained a Discourse on a Race Course. The Race Course considered as Contrary to Christianity, preached by Col. Bury during the Gloucester Races, &c., 12mo. half-calf, 6s. 6s.

Foreign Field Sports, Fisheries, Sport-ing Anecdotes, &c. from Drawings by Horst, Atkinson, Clark, &c. with a Supplement of New South Wales, containing 10 beautifully Coloured Plates, small folio, morocco, 12s. 12s.

Galloway (J.), Commentaries upon the Revelation and other Prophecies immediately refer to the Present Times, containing the Prophecy of the Book of the Revelation, the Prophecy of the Book of the Revelation, the Prophecy of the Book of the Revelation, &c., 12mo. half-calf, 12s. 12s.

George the Third. — Pedigree of King George the Third, usually deduced from King Alfred, but also from the House of York, compiled by R. Wootton, 12mo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Greenwich Hospital, a Series of Naval Sketches descriptive of the Life of a Man-of-War's Man, with Double Set of Plates by George Cruikshank, 4to. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Herne (Samuel), Domus Carthusiana; or, an Account of the Charter House, near Southwark, before and since the Reformation, crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Hogarthiana. — Illustrations of Hogarth from Penna in Authors he never read and could not understand, 12s. 12s.

Hone (William), The Queen's Letter to the King, signed Queen B. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Hunt (Leigh), Juvenilia; or, a Collection of Poems, written between the Ages of Twelve and Sixteen, published by Richardson, Fourth Edition, 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Husbandrie. — Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry, as well for the Champion or Open Country as also for the Woodland or several mixed in every Mouth with Husbandry over and under the Books of Husbandry, &c., fourth by Thomas Tusser, partly in MS., 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Important Collection of over Six Hundred Pictures, Drawings, Engravings, &c. attributed to some of the greatest of Old Masters, viz. Rembrandt, Vermeer, Poussin, Boucher, &c., 12s. 12s.

Infernal Conference; or, Dialogues of Devils on the many Vices which abound in the Civil and Religious World, by John Macdonald, various Frontispieces, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Ireland. — My Pocket-Book; or, Hints for a Myths, Morris and Country Tour of 'The Stranger in Ireland' in 1845, by a Knight of the Garter, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Jardine (Sir W.), Naturalist's Library, complete, containing valuable Works on every branch of Natural History, by the most eminent Naturalists, with upwards of 1,500 beautiful Coloured Plates, 40 vols. 8vo., crown 8vo. half-calf, 12s. 12s.

John Gilpin, Set to Music by W. A. 12mo. and illustrated by Cruikshank, 12s. 12s.

La Fontaine, ses Œuvres Complètes, avec des notes par Walther, 12mo. Edition, printed by Didot, with Frontispiece and numerous highly-finished Engravings, 8 vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

L'Estrange (Roger), Caveat to the Cavaliers, Fourth Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Lever (Christopher), History of the Introduction of the Catholic Faith, wherein are added Observations on the Catholic Faith, and on the various Antiquities, 12s. 12s.

Life and Extraordinary Adventures of Vidéus, the French Jonathan Wild, illustrated by Pierce Penna and others, 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Life in London; or, the Day and Night Scenes of Jerry Hawthorne, his and his dearest Friend, Christopher Tom, surrounded by his Logic, the Quaker, and his Friends, and his Friends, &c., 12s. 12s.

Military Adventure of Johnny New-comb, with an Account of his Campaigns on the Peninsula and in the East, by an Officer, with numerous Coloured and Numerous Illustrations by Richardson, 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Miscellaneous Aurea; or, the Golden Medley, consisting of a Voyage to the Mountains of the Moon, a Description of New Athens, Visitation of Cardinal Alberoni, &c., 12s. 12s.

Mystagogus Poeticus; or, the Muses Interpreter explaining the Historical Mysteries, and Mystical Histories of the Ancient Greek and Latin Poets, by Alexander Rom, 12mo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Old Nick's Pocket-Book; or, Hints for "A Myth to Poetize and Mangling" Publication, called "My Pocket-Book," various Old Frontispieces, 12mo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Passages from the Poems of Thomas Moore, illustrated by the Junior Working Club in St. Peter, small folio, cloth, 12s. 12s.

Penn (G.), The Bioscope; or, Dial of Life, explained, Second Edition, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Pierce Egan's Account of the Trial of John Threlwell and Joseph West with an Appendix, containing some extraordinary Parts, exclusively in the possession of the Editor, with Frontispiece and many other Engravings, 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Pomet (Monsieur), A complete History of Drugs, Vegetable Animal and Mineral with their uses in Physics, Chemistry, Pharmacy and several other Arts with Additions by M. de Lamoignon and Tournefort over 800 Illustrations, carefully done from Life and an explanation of their different Names, Places of Growth and Properties from whence they are brought, Second Edition, small 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Pope (Alex.), Works, Complete, with the Commentary and Notes of Bishop Warburton and his Translation of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, 12 vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Roscoe (William), The Nurse: a Poem, Translated from the Italian of Luigi Tassili, illustrated by J. H. B. 12s. 12s.

Rose (Rev. H. J.), B.D., General Biograph-ical Dictionary, the Articles contributed by the most eminent Scholars of the Day, Edited by Rose, containing upwards of 10,000 Names, 12 vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Sala (George Augustus), a Sketch on the late Frederick Robinson, 12mo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Sala (George Augustus), Essays on William Shakspeare, the Man, the Work, and the Time, illustrated, crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Sala (George Augustus), A Trip to Bar-bary by a Gentleman, 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Sharp (T.), D.D., The Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer and the Canons of the Church of England, 8vo. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Skelton (John), Poetical Works, with Notes, and some Account of the Author and his Writings, by the Rev. A. Upde, 3 vols. 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Spencer (Edmund), Poetical Works, complete with Illustrations of various Characters, Notes, Life, and Commentary, by R. J. Todd, 8 vols. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Spirit of Law (The), Translated from the French of M. de Montesquieu, 12mo. Edition, 12s. 12s.

Tales of My Grandmother, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

The Cautious Lady; or, Religion the Chief Happiness in a Married State, 8vo. 12mo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

The Observant Pedestrian Mounted; or, a Dandy Tour to Brighton, crown 8vo. half-morocco, 12s. 12s.

Tom Tell-Truth; or, a Dialogue between the Devil and the Pope, 12mo. cloth, 6s. 6s.

Trial of Lord Paget for Crim. Con. with Lady Charlotte Wilmot, by Ramsey and Mansfield, 8vo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Visions of Don Francisco de Quevedo Villagosa, Knight of the Order of St. James, or a Story on 12mo. Edition, 12s. 12s.

Walton and Cotton's Complete Angler, 12mo. Edition, 12s. 12s.

Wiseman (Cardinal), Lectures on the Omnipotence between Science and Revelation, delivered in Rome, Fourth Edition, 3 vols. 12mo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

Withy (R.), The Laws and Customs, Rights, Liberties, and Privileges of the City of London, 12mo. cloth, 12s. 12s.

LIBRARIES PURCHASED, ARRANGED AND CATALOGUED. OR VALUED FOR PROBATE.

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT AND PARLIAMENTARY BLUE-BOOKS SUPPLIED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

Address, 50 and 36, PARLIAMENT-STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.

W. SWAN SONNENSCHN & ALLEN'S
NEW CHRISTMAS
AND PRIZE BOOKS, 1880.

2s. 6d. SERIES, Fully Illustrated.

Crown 8vo. extra bound cloth gilt, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. each.

A NEW HANS ANDERSEN.

RICHARD GUSTAFSSON'S STORIES.

"These stories are genuine stories, their fancy is delicate and original, and shows a true vein of poetry. The book is far above the average of such works, and should please all minds and tastes."—Times.
"It is well that so charming a reviewer should at last have found welcome in England. Indeed, we could ill have spared him tales. Those children with whom Andersen finds favour will assuredly like Gustafsson too, for in manner as in matter he strongly resembles that author. It is their freshness, their poetry, their delicacy that give them charm. In addition to being masterfully bound, the volumes contain many excellent illustrations. Evidently the publishers have spared no effort to make the book attractive."—Academy, November 13.

CHIT-CHAT by PUCK. Tea-time Tales for Young Little Folks and Young Old Folks. From the Swedish of R. GUSTAFSSON. 2s. 6d.

ROSELEAVES; being a Second Series of Tea-time Tales. By R. GUSTAFSSON. 2s. 6d.

WOODLAND NOTES; being a Third Series of Tea-time Tales. By R. GUSTAFSSON. 2s. 6d.

CAPTAIN'S DOG, The. By Louis Enault.

With numerous Original Illustrations, 2s. 6d.
"All dog lovers must heartily sympathize with the faithful hero of this pathetic story."—Graphic.
"Well illustrated and beautifully bound."—Journal of Education.

FABLED STORIES from the ZOO. By ALBERT ALBERG. 2s. 6d.

"A lively companion for a ramble in the Regent's Park, in which the birds, beasts, and reptiles tell their experiences and opinions of mankind."—Graphic.

FISHERMAN of RHAVA, The; or, Djal-mah's Voyage to Eilan. By C. R. ROUEN. 2s. 6d.

"This allegory is prettily told, and contains salutary examples of self-control and perseverance."—Graphic.

SHERWOOD'S (Mrs.) JUVENILE LIBRARY. 3 vols. Each volume complete in itself, and containing Four Tales, illustrated, 2s. 6d. each.

2s. 6d. SERIES, Fully Illustrated.

Crown 8vo. extra bound cloth gilt, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. each.

BRAVE BOYS WHO HAVE BECOME ILLUSTrious MEN of our TIME. By J. M. DARTON. New Edition. Illustrated by Harrison Weir. 2s. 6d.

CHARLYN—RINKIN—THOMAS EDWARD—Dr. ARNOLD—J. BRIGHT—S. MORLEY, &c.

FAMOUS GIRLS WHO HAVE BECOME ILLUSTrious WOMEN of our TIME. By J. M. DARTON. New Edition. 2s. 6d.

HARRIET MARTINEAU—FREDERICKA BREMER—PRINCESS LOUISE—DUCHESS of SUTHERLAND, &c.

GRANDMAMMA'S RECOLLECTIONS. By GRANDMAMMA PARKER. 2s. 6d.

"A handsome volume, containing amusing incidents and moral maxims judiciously combined."—Journal of Education.

WOODLAND NOTES. (See 2s. 6d. Series.)

Crown 8vo. with Plates and Cuts, cloth extra gilt, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

ALICE, and other Fairy Plays for Children. By KATE FRELIGHATH-KROEKER. Second Edition, including a Dramatic Version, under sanction of Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland and 'Through the Looking-Glass,' and three other Plays. 4s. 6d.

Crown 8vo. illustrated, cloth extra, gilt edges, 6s.

NEW BOOK BY J. M. DARTON

The HEROISM of CHRISTIAN WOMEN of our TIME. What they have Done and are Doing. By J. M. DARTON. 6s.

SISTER DORA—MARY CARPENTER—FRANCES HAVERGAL—LADY HOPKIN, &c.

Extra demy 8vo. rich cloth gilt, gilt edges, with many fine Illustrations, price 7s. 6d.

ASGARD and the GODS: Tales and Traditions of our Northern Ancestors. Edited by W. S. W. ANSON. 7s. 6d.

"Will be as valued by grown-up men and women as it will be by boys and girls."—Scotsman.

Double 8vo. folio, rich cloth gilt, gilt edges, 42s.

GLIMPSE of BIRD LIFE, portrayed with Pen and Pencil. By J. E. HARTING and L. P. ROBERT. 20 Full-Page Chromo-Lithographic Plates, in the highest style of Pictorial Art, by Leveque & Co. 42s.

"We hail with delight the advent of an artist who can produce such work as this. The plates are far in advance of anything of the kind that has hitherto appeared in England."—Zoologist.

"Mr. Robert has been very happy and has managed to infuse a good deal of character into his portraits. . . . Particularly vigorous and lifelike drawings."—Times.

W. SWAN SONNENSCHN & ALLEN, Paternoster-square.

NEXT WEEK,

PRE-HISTORIC EUROPE: a Geological Sketch.

By JAMES GEIKIE, LL.D. F.R.S., &c.,

Of Her Majesty's Geological Survey of Scotland, Author of 'The Great Ice Age.'

Medium 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations.

"The object of these pages is to give an outline of what appear to have been the most considerable physical changes experienced in our continent since the beginning of the Pleistocene or Quaternary period. Several general works, by some of our most accomplished geologists and archaeologists, have already dealt with the subject in part, but none quite cover the ground I have endeavoured to occupy. While some of my predecessors have examined the evidence principally from the point of view of the archaeologist, and others from that of the paleontologist, my aim has been to describe in a more systematic manner than has hitherto been attempted that succession of changes, climatic and geographical, which, taken together, constitute the historical geology of Pleistocene, Post-glacial, and recent times."—Extract from Preface.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

IN A FEW DAYS,

THE COAL-FIELDS OF GREAT BRITAIN:
THEIR HISTORY, STRUCTURE, AND RESOURCES; WITH NOTICES OF THE COAL-FIELDS OF OTHER PARTS OF THE WORLD.

By EDWARD HULL, M.A. F.R.S.,

Director of the Geological Survey of Ireland, Author of 'The Physical Geology and Geography of Ireland.'

Fourth Edition, demy 8vo. with Map and Illustrations.

"This edition has been largely rewritten. It contains an entirely new chapter on Carboniferous Plants, kindly drawn up by Professor Williamson, F.R.S., of Manchester. The classification of the Carboniferous Series of Beds has been modified in accordance with the views enunciated in my paper on this subject, read before the Geological Society of London in 1877. The account of the various coalfields has been modified in accordance with more recent investigations as far as my information extends, and the statistical portions have been brought down to the date of 1878."—Extract from Preface.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

JUST PUBLISHED,

LIFE AND HER CHILDREN:
GLIMPSES OF ANIMAL LIFE FROM THE AMOEBA TO THE INSECTS.

By ARABELLA B. BUCKLEY,

Authoress of 'The Fairyland of Science,' 'A Short History of Natural Science,' 'Botanical Tables for the Use of Junior Students.'

Crown 8vo. with upwards of 100 Illustrations, cloth gilt, gilt edges, 6s.

Extract from Preface.

"The main object is to acquaint young people with the structure and habits of the lower forms of life, and to do this in a more systematic way than is usual in ordinary works on natural history, and more simply than in text-books on zoology. For this reason I have adopted the title 'Life and her Children' to express the family bond uniting all living things, as we use the term 'Nature and her Works' to embrace all organic and inorganic phenomena, and I have been more careful to sketch in bold outline the leading features of each division than to dwell on the minor differences by which it is separated into groups. I have made use of British examples in illustration wherever it was possible, and small specimens of most of the marine animals figured may be found upon our coasts at low tide."

CONTENTS.

- | | |
|--|--|
| CHAP.
1. LIFE and HER CHILDREN. | CHAP.
8. The MAILED WARRIORS of the Sea, with Ringed Bodies and Jointed Feet. |
| 2. LIFE'S SIMPLEST CHILDREN: how they Live, and Move, and Breathe. | 9. The SNARE-WEAVERS and their HUNTING RELATIONS. |
| 3. HOW SPONGES LIVE. | 10. INSECT SUCKERS and BITTERS, which Change their Coats but not their Bodies. |
| 4. The LASSO-THROWERS of the PONDS and OCEANS. | 11. INSECT CHAWERS and HIPPIERS, which Remodel their Bodies within their Coats. |
| 5. HOW STARFISH WALK and SEA-URCHINS GROW. | 12. INTELLIGENT INSECTS with HELPLESS CHILDREN, as Illustrated by the Ant. |
| 6. The MANTLE-COVERED ANIMALS, and How they Live with Heads and without them. | |
| 7. The OUTCASTS of ANIMAL LIFE, and the Elastic-ringed Animals by Sea and by Land. | |

By the SAME AUTHORESS, uniform in size and price,

THE FAIRYLAND OF SCIENCE.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEARLY READY,

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE:
READINGS IN NECESSARY KNOWLEDGE FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN.

Edited by Rev. J. P. FAUNTHORPE, Principal of Whitlands College.

Dedicated by permission to his Grace the Duke of Westminster, K.G.

Post 8vo.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

FULL CATALOGUES SENT ON APPLICATION, POST FREE, TO ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

Containing Standard Works of European Literature in the English Language, on History, Biography, Topography, Archæology, Theology, Antiquities, Science, Philosophy, Natural History, Poetry, Art, Fiction, together with Dictionaries, Atlases, and other Books of Reference, comprising in all Translations from the Anglo-Saxon, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Scandinavian, Latin, and Greek. The Volumes are of a convenient size, and are well printed on good paper.

3s. 6d. or 5s. per Volume (with exceptions). Sold separately. A COMPLETE SET, in 623 Volumes, price 139l. 10s. 6d.

ADDISON'S WORKS. With the Notes of Bishop Hurd. A short Memoir, and a Portrait. 8 vols. 2s. 6d., sold separately.

- Vol. 1. FORMS—PREFACE—DIALOGUES on MEDALS—REMARKS on ITALY.
2. TATLER and SPECTATOR.
3. SPECTATOR.
4. SPECTATOR—GUARDIAN—LOVE—STATE of the WAR—TRIAL of COLONY TARIFF—WIG EXAMINER—PREFACE.
5. PERRINOLINE—CHRISTIAN BELIEF—DRUMMER, or MAUNTED HOUSE—VARIOUS SHORT PIECES without exception—LETTERS.
6. LETTERS FORMS—TRANSLATIONS—OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS, &c.

BAUMONT and FLETCHER; their finest Poems, Lyrics, and other beautiful selections. With numerous illustrations by LEON MUNT. 2s. 6d.

BREMER'S (FREDERIKA) WORKS. Translated by MARY HOWITT. With Portraits. 4 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
Vol. 1. THE NEIGHBOURS—HONEY—TWINS—SOLITARY—COMFORT—SUPPER—and THALIMAN.
2. THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTERS. 3 Parts.
3. THE HOME, or LIFE in SWEDEN and STRIPS and PEACE.
4. A DIARY—The M—FAMILY—ARL and ANNA.

BROWN'S (Sir THOMAS) WORKS. Edited by SIMON WILKIN. With Dr Johnson's Life of Brown, a Supplementary Memoir, and a Portrait after Watts. 4 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
Vol. 1. VULGAR ERRORS.
2. RELIGIO MEDICI, and GARDEN of CYCLOS.

BURKE'S WORKS. 6 vols. 3s. 6d. each.
Vol. 1. NATURAL SOCIETY—THE SUBLINE and BEAUTIFUL—POLITICAL MISCELLANEOUS.
2. FRENCH REVOLUTION—THE BRISTOL ELECTION—FOX'S EAST INDIA BILL, &c.
3. APPEAL from the NEW to the OLD WRIGGS—THE WAGES of ABOUT 5 DENTS—CATHOLIC CLAIMS, &c.
4. REPORT on the AFFAIRS of INDIA—ARTICLE of CHARGES against WARREN HASTINGS.
5. CONCLUSION of the ARTICLES on the AMERICAN WAR—A KNOWING FRASE, THE EMPRESS of RUSSIA.
6. MISCELLANEOUS WORKS, HERE—LETTERS—FRAGMENTS—ABRIDGMENTS, &c. With GENERAL INDEX.

BURKE'S SPEECHES on the IMPEACHMENT of WARREN HASTINGS, and LETTERS. With Index. 3 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

BURKE'S LIFE. By J. Prior. With a Portrait after Reynolds. 2s. 6d.

CHAUCER'S POETICAL WORKS. With Poems formerly printed with his or attributed to him. Edited with a Memoir, Introduction, Notes, and a Glossary by ROBERT BELL. Revised and improved Edition, with a Preliminary Essay by Rev. W. W. ALLEY, M.A. With Portraits of Chaucer. 4 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

COLERIDGE'S (S. T.) FRIEND. Essays on Morals, Politics, and Religion. With Portraits of Coleridge. 2s. 6d.

COLERIDGE'S (S. T.) BIOGRAPHIA LITERARIA, or Biographical Sketches of my Literary Life and Opinions, together with Two Lay Sermons. 2s. 6d.

DEFOE'S WORKS. With Prefaces and Notes, indicating those attributed to Sir W. Scott. 1 vol. 2s. 6d. each.
Vol. 1. CAPTAIN SINGLETON—LIFE of COLONEL JACK. With Portrait of Defoe.
2. MEMOIRS of a CAVALIER. MEMOIRS of CAPTAIN CARLETON—JACKSON CRONKE, &c.
3. LIFE of MOLL FLANDERS and the HISTORY of the DEVIL.
4. ROXANA, or the FORTUNATE MISTRESS, and LIFE of Mrs CHRISTIAN DAVIES.
5. HISTORY of the GREAT PLAGUE of LONDON 1665 (in which is added the STORY of LONDON, from an Anonymous Writer THE STORM (1703), and the TRUE-BURN ENGLISHMAN.
6. LIFE and ADVENTURES of DUNCAN CAMPBELL—NEW VOYAGE ROUND the WORLD, and TRACTS relating to the HANOVERIAN ACCESSION.
7. ROBINSON CRUSOE. With a short Biographical Account of Defoe.

EVELYN'S DIARY and CORRESPONDENCE. With the Private Correspondence of Charles I. and Sir Edward Nicholas, and between Sir Edward Hyde (afterwards Earl of Clarendon) and Sir Richard Browne. Edited from the Original MSS. as written by W. BRYAN F.A.S. 4 vols. with copious Index (118 pages, and 42 Engravings). 4s. each.
"No change of fashion, no alteration of taste, no revolution of science, have impaired or can impair the celebrity of Evelyn. His name is fresh to the mind and his reputation. It is the truest of an Indian Paradise, and will continue to exist, in full strength and beauty, unimpaired by time."—Quarterly Review (January).

FATHER PROUT'S RELIQUES. Collected and Arranged by OLIVER YORKER (Rev. FRANCIS MARONY). With Illustrations by D. MANTON, R.A. Copyright Edition, with the Author's latest Corrections. 2s.

FLAXMAN.—LECTURES on SCULPTURE, as delivered before the President and Members of the Royal Academy by JOHN FLAXMAN, R.A. With an Introductory Lecture and Two Addresses to the Academy on the Death of Thomas Banks and of Antonio Canova, and an Address on the Death of Flaxman, by Sir RICHARD WESTMACOTT, R.A. New Edition, with Index, and brief Memoir of Flaxman. Portrait and 21 Plates. 2s.

FIELDING'S ADVENTURES of JOSEPH ANDREWS and his FRIEND ABRAHAM ADAMS. With Thomas Moore's Biography and George Cruikshank's Illustrations. 2s. 6d.

FIELDING'S HISTORY of TOM JONES, a FOUNDLING. Revised Edition, with George Cruikshank's Illustrations. 2 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
"Upon the author of 'Tom Jones' I have found no writer of fiction among us has been permitted to depict to the utmost a Marquis."—Sir Thomas, in the Preface to 'Fanny Hill'.

FIELDING'S AMELIA. Roscoe's Edition, Revised. With 4 Illustrations by George Cruikshank. 2s. 6d.

GIBSON'S DECLINE and FALL of the ROMAN EMPIRE. Complete and Unabridged, with Variorum Notes including in addition to the Author's own those of Gibbon, Macaulay, and others. 12 vols. 12s. 6d. each.
An ENGLISH CHURCHMAN. 7 vols. with copious Index and 2 Maps and a Portrait of Gibbon. 2s. 6d. each.

GOETHE'S WORKS. Translated into English. 3 vols. 2s. 6d. each.
Vol. 1. 1. AUTOBIOGRAPHY (WARRICK and DITCHING and various LETTERS). Twenty Books. Edited by John Oxenford and LETTERS from ITALY and SWITZERLAND. With Portraits of Goethe.
2. FAUNT. Two Parts. Complete. The First Revised, and the Second newly Translated by Anne Bonwick.
3. NOVELS and TALES. Consisting of Elective Affinities, Sorrows of Werther, The German Emigrants, The Good Woman, and a Novella. Translated by R. D. Boyles.
4. WILLHELM MEISTER'S APPRENTICESHIP. Translated by R. D. Boyles.
5. CONVERSATIONS with SCHERMAN and BERRY. Translated by John Oxenford.
6. POEMS and BALLADS in the ORIGINAL METRE, including HERMANN and DOROTHEA. Translated by R. D. Boyles.
7. GOETZ von BERLICHINGEN, TORQUATO TASSO, ROMONT, IPHIGENIA CLAYTON, WILHELM LORENZ, and FELLOWSHIP. Translated by Sir Walter Scott, Miss Swinwick, and R. A. Stewart, C.B. With Engravings of Goethe von Berlichingen.

GUIZOT'S ORIGIN of REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT in EUROPE. With Index. 2s. 6d.
GUIZOT'S ENGLISH REVOLUTION of 1688. Translated by W. HAZLITT. With Portrait of Charles after Vandike. With Index. 2s. 6d.
GUIZOT'S HISTORY of CIVILIZATION, from the Fall of the Roman Empire to the French Revolution. Translated by W. HAZLITT. With Portraits of Charles, Cromwell, and Napoleon. 12 vols. 12s. 6d. each.
HAZLITT'S TABLE-TALK; Essays on Men and Manners. By W. HAZLITT. 2s. 6d.
HAZLITT'S LECTURES on the LITERATURE of the AGE of ELIZABETH, and on Characters of Shakespeare's Plays. 2s. 6d.
HAZLITT'S LECTURES on the ENGLISH POETS, and on the ENGLISH COMIC WRITERS. 2s. 6d.

GUIZOT'S ORIGIN of REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT in EUROPE. With Index. 2s. 6d.

GUIZOT'S ENGLISH REVOLUTION of 1688. Translated by W. HAZLITT. With Portrait of Charles after Vandike. With Index. 2s. 6d.

GUIZOT'S HISTORY of CIVILIZATION, from the Fall of the Roman Empire to the French Revolution. Translated by W. HAZLITT. With Portraits of Charles, Cromwell, and Napoleon. 12 vols. 12s. 6d. each.

HAZLITT'S TABLE-TALK; Essays on Men and Manners. By W. HAZLITT. 2s. 6d.

HAZLITT'S LECTURES on the LITERATURE of the AGE of ELIZABETH, and on Characters of Shakespeare's Plays. 2s. 6d.

HAZLITT'S LECTURES on the ENGLISH POETS, and on the ENGLISH COMIC WRITERS. 2s. 6d.

HAZLITT'S The PLAIN SPEAKER: Opinions on Banks, Mac, and Thelme. 2s. 6d.

HAZLITT'S BOUND TABLE: Essays on Literature, Man, and Manners. Together with the Conversations of James Mackintosh, B.A., Characters, Characters, and Trifles Light on Air. 2s. 6d.

MANZONI.—The BETROTHED; being a Translation of 'Il Promessi Sposi.' With numerous Woodcut Illustrations. 1 vol. (120 pages). 6s.

"Of Manzoni's celebrated novel, 'Il Promessi Sposi,' 100 English editions have been issued—57 printed at Milan, 14 at Florence, 11 at Naples, 10 at Legnano, 5 at Turin, 3 at Modigliana, 2 at Leipzig, 2 at Maribor, 1 each at London, Florence, Paris, Vienna, Rome, Brunswick, and London. 10 in Paris. Of translations, 17 in German, 19 French, 10 English, 3 Spanish, 1 Greek, Swedish, Dutch, Russian, Hungarian, and 1 Armenian. —Athens, August 18, 1877.

This is the only complete English Translation now to be had.

MILTON'S PROSE WORKS. With Preface, Preliminary Remarks, by A. J. ST JOHN, and Index. 5 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

- Vol. 1. A DEFENCE of the PEOPLE of ENGLAND—THE RECORD DEFENCE—BIRONOKLANTER With Portrait of Milton.
2. TENURE of KINGS and MAGISTRATES—AMBROFAGITICA—LETTERS on the COMMONWEALTH—GORDON'S PEACE—LETTERS of STATE—MANIFESTO of the LORD PROTECTOR. BRIEF NOTES on DR. CRISTOPHER BROWN—OF INFORMATION in ENGLAND—OF METALLOGICAL EPICURUS—REASON of CHURCH GOVERNMENT spread Ages—PRELACE in THIS REIGN, HERBY WHISK FULCRATION—OF CIVIL POWER. 2s. 6d. each.
3. MEANS to REMOVE HINDRANCES out of CHURCH—RE-MOUNTAINS DEFENCE against AMBROFAGITICA—APOLLO, IORRECHTUMS—OCTACHORD, TETACHORDS—COLLATERATION—ON EDUCATION. ELECTION of JOHN III. KING of POLAND—FAMILIAR LETTERS. With Portrait of Archbishop Laud (after Vandike).
4. A TREATISE on CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE, compiled from the Holy Scriptures alone. Translated by CH. R. SUMNER, D.D., Lord Bishop of Winchester.
5. TREATISE on CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE—HISTORY of BRITAIN—HISTORY of MOSCOVIA—ACCORDANCE of—CHILMERE. 2s. 6d. each.

PLANCHE'S HISTORY of BRITISH COSTUME, from the Earliest Times to the Close of the Eighteenth Century. By J. B. PLANCHE, Esq. Member of the Académie des Beaux-Arts. With Index and upwards of 100 Illustrations. 1s.

REYNOLDS'S (Sir J.) LITERARY WORKS. With a Memoir and Remarks on his Professional Character Illustrative of his Principles and Practice. By H. W. BERRY. 3 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

Vol. 1. INTRODUCTION—MEMOIR, and DISCOURSES I.—VIII. With a Portrait (after Stuart).
2. DISCOURSES IX.—XV.—MISCELLANEOUS SHORT ESSAYS on ARTISTIC SUBJECTS—CHRONOLOGICAL and ALPHABETICAL LISTS of PAINTERS, and INDEX.

PEPSY'S DIARY and CORRESPONDENCE. Described by the Rev. J. SMITH, M.A. from the Original Shortland MS. in the Papal Library. Edited, with a Short Life and Notes, by RICHARD LORD BAYLYMOORE. With Appendix containing Additional Letters, an Index, and 21 Engravings. 4 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

STAUNTON'S CHESS-PLAYER'S HANDBOOK: a Popular and Scientific Introduction to the Game of Chess, as exemplified in Games actually played by the greatest Masters, and illustrated by numerous Diagrams of Original and Remarkable Positions, and a Coloured Frontispiece. 4s.

STAUNTON'S CHESS PRAXIS: a Supplement to 'The Chess-player's Handbook' containing the most important modern improvements in the Game as illustrated by actual Games, a Revised Code of Chess Laws, and a Portion of Mr. Murphy's 'Chess in England and France,' critically annotated. (100 pages.) With Diagrams. 6s.

STAUNTON'S CHESS-PLAYER'S COMPANION: comprising a New Treatise on Odds Collection of Match Games, including the great French Match with M. de Amant, and a Selection of Original Problems. With Diagrams and Coloured Frontispiece. 4s.

STAUNTON'S CHESS TOURNAMENT of 1811: a Collection of Games played at this celebrated tournament. With Introduction, Notes, Critical and Explanatory, and numerous Diagrams. 4s.

NEW EDITION, WITH SUPPLEMENT OF 4,000 NEW WORDS AND MEANINGS.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY.

With 1,576 pages and 3,000 Illustrations, 1 vol. 21s.

PROSPECTUSES WITH SPECIMEN PAGE POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST OF NEW WORKS.

NOTICE.—The New and Popular Edition of THE LIFE and LETTERS of DEAN HOOK is now ready at all Book-sellers, in crown 8vo. 626 pp., with Index and a New Portrait, price Six Shillings.

LADY FLORENCE DIXIE'S WORK. ACROSS PATAGONIA.

With Illustrations and Sketches by Julius Beerbohm. Engraved by Whymper and Pearson. In demy 8vo. [In a few days.]

PAST HOURS.

By the late Mrs. BARTON (Adelaide Kemble). Edited, and with a Preface, by her Daughter, Mrs. GORDON. In 2 vols. small crown 8vo. [In a few days.]

THE CORAL LANDS OF THE PACIFIC.

Being an Account of nearly all the Inhabited Islands of the Pacific, their Peoples, and their Products. By H. STONNBERGER COOPER. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations.

A LADY'S TOUR IN CORSICA.

By GERTRUDE FORDE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

THE LIFE OF THE REV. RICHARD HARRIS BARNHAM,

Author of 'The Ingoldsby Legends.'

A New Edition, Revised and Rewritten, by his Son, HENRY HARRIS BARNHAM. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A TRIP UP THE NIGER AND BENUEH.

By ADOLPHE BURDO.

Translated by Mrs. GEORGE STURGE. In demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

THE TEMPLE OR THE TOMB.

By CHARLES WARREN, Author of 'Underground Jerusalem.'

In demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

STUDIES IN ENGLISH ART.

By FREDERICK WEDMORE.

The Second Series.

In crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

TENT WORK IN PALESTINE.

By Lieut. CLAUDE R. CONDER, R.E.

A Popular Edition, in crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

THE GREAT TONE POETS.

Being Short Memoirs of the Greater Musical Composers. By FREDERICK CROWEST.

A New and Cheaper Edition, in crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street, Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

AN ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip,

Dramatic, Narrative, and Descriptive: from the Recollections of an Actor in Australia, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, California, Nevada, Central America, and New York. By EDMUND LAMBERT. 8vo. 15s.

"An Actor Abroad is a bright and pleasant volume—an eminently readable book. Mr. Lambert has the great merit of being never dull. He has the power of telling a story clearly and pointedly."—Saturday Review.

"A readable, rambling agreeable record of the chances and changes of an actor's career in far distant lands. Many of the sketches of character display considerable literary skill."—Evening Standard.

MONSIEUR GUIZOT in PRIVATE

LIFE (1787-1874). By his Daughter, MADAME DE WITT. Translated by Mrs. SIMPSON. 1 vol. 8vo. 15s.

MY JOURNEY ROUND THE WORLD,

via Oeyn, New Zealand, Australia, Torres Straits, China, Japan, and the United States. By Capt. G. H. JONES-PARKY, late 10th Royal Madras Fusiliers. 2 vols. 21s. [Just ready.]

THE VILLAGE OF PALACES; or,

CHRONICLES OF CHILSEA. By the Rev. A. G. L'ESTRANGE. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 21s.

CHEAP EDITION OF YOUNG Mrs.

JARDINE. By the AUTHOR OF 'JOHN HALLIFAX.' Forming the New Volume of HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY. 6s. bound and illustrated.

THE NEW NOVELS.

LITTLE PANSY. By Mrs. Randolph,

Author of 'Gustanella,' &c. 3 vols.

DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of 'ST OLAVEN,' &c. 3 vols.

STRICTLY TIED UP. 3 vols.

"Strictly Tied Up" is entertaining. It is in every sense a novel conceived in a light and happy vein."—Athenæum.

"This novel may be described as a comedy of life and character, and in the changing society to which the author alludes the author shows abundant knowledge of the world."—Saturday Review.

"Strictly Tied Up is a very cleverly constructed novel, as amusing as it is ingenious."—St. James's Gazette.

THIRD EDITION OF LORD

BRACKENBURY. By AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of 'BARBARA'S HISTORY,' &c.

"Lord Brackenbury" is a very readable story. The author has well conceived the story of a high-class novel writing, and succeeded in no small measure in attaining it. There is plenty of variety, cheerful dialogue, and general sense in the book."—Athenæum.

"Most readable from beginning to end."—Evening Standard.

"Lord Brackenbury is an excellent novel that will rank creditably with Barbara's History."—Examiner.

THIRD EDITION OF ROY and

VIOLA. By Mrs. FORRESTER, Author of 'Viva,' 'Mignon,' &c. 3 vols.

"An admirable tale, told by one who can vividly describe the manners and personnel of modern society."—The World.

"Roy and Viola" may be recommended as an interesting story, containing very well drawn sketches of character."—John Bull.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By

SHIRLEY SMITH. Author of 'His Last Stake,' &c. 3 vols.

"A novel of no common merit."—Pall Mall Gazette.

GERALDINE and HER SUITORS.

By Mrs. SIMPSON, Author of 'Winnie's History,' &c. 3 vols. [Next week.]

CHEAP EDITIONS.

Each Work complete in 1 vol. price 6s. (any of which can be had separately), elegantly printed and bound and illustrated by Mr. J. GILBERT, MILLAIS, HUNT, LEITCH, POYNTER, POSTER, TERNER, SANDYS, & MUGGERIDGE, SANDOURN, &c.

HURST & BLACKETT'S STANDARD LIBRARY

OF CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR MODERN WORKS.

Sam. Mick's Nature and Human Nature. By Mrs. Oliphant.

The Crescent and the Cross. By Eliot Warburton.

Nathalie. By Miss Kavanagh.

A Woman's Thoughts about Women. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Adam Ormont. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Sam. Mick's Wise Saw. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Cardinal Wiseman's Roman. A Life for a Life. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Leigh Hunt's Old Court Scenery. Margaret and her Bridemaids.

Sam. Mick's Old Judge. Darius. By Eliot Warburton.

Mr. H. Burke's Family Romance. The Laird of Newlaw. By Mrs. Oliphant.

The Englishwoman in Italy. Nothing New. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Sam. Mick's American at Home. The Valley of a Hundred Fires. Burke's Romance of the Forum.

Adèle. By Miss Kavanagh. Studies in Life. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Grandmother's Money. Jealousy's Hook about Deceit. Marjorie and Ned. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Lee's Extraneous. By Victor Hugo. At Home. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Lost and Saved. By the Hon. Mrs. Norton.

Barbara's History. By Amelia B. Edwards.

Life of Irving. By Mrs. Oliphant.

No Church. No Church. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Author of 'John Hallifax.' A Noble Life. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Disson of New America. Robert, Fugitive. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

The Woman's Kingdom. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Annals of an Ecclesiastical Life. By G. W. Dawson, D.D.

David Rignold. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

A Brave Lady. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Hannah. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

Sam. Mick's American at Home. The taking Word. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

A Rose in June. By Mrs. Oliphant.

My Little Lady. By E. Frances Lytton.

Phoebe Junior. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Life of Marie Antoinette. By Professor C. D. Yocum.

Mr. Gibb's. By George Mac Donald, LL.D.

Sam. Mick's American Humour. Young Mrs. Jardine. By the Author of 'John Hallifax.'

C. KEGAN PAUL & CO.'S NEW LIST.

With 25 Illustrations and Portrait, TENNYSON'S WORKS. The Royal Edition, in One Volume, super-royal 8vo. cloth extra bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 21s.

With Portrait, demy 8vo. cloth, price 16s. SPINOZA: his Life and Philosophy. By FREDERICK POLLOCK.

"Mr. Pollock's book must undoubtedly be placed among the most scholarly and workmanlike performances that we possess in this difficult kind."—Pall Mall Gazette.

With 136 Illustrations, medium 8vo. HISTORY OF PAINTING. From the German of the late Dr. ALFRED WOLFFMANN, and Dr. KARL WORMMANN. Edited by SIDNEY COLVIN, M.A.

Vol. I. PAINTING in ANTIQUITY and the MIDDLE AGES. Cloth, price 28s.; cloth extra, bevelled boards, gilt leaves, price 30s.

Crown 8vo. with 3 Maps and Illustrations, cloth, price 1s. The NATURAL CONDITIONS of EXISTENCE as they AFFECT ANIMAL LIFE. By KARL SEMPER. [Dec. 1.]

* Vol. XXXI. of the "International Scientific Series."

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 1s.

The ATOMIC THEORY. By Professor WURTZ, Membre de l'Institut, Docteur Honorifique de la Faculté de Médecine, Professeur à la Faculté des Sciences de Paris. Translated by E. CLEMMERAW, F.C.S.

* Vol. XXXI. of the "International Scientific Series."

Third and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo. cloth, price 1s.

PHYSIOLOGY for PRACTICAL USE. By Various Writers. Edited by JAMES HILTON.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

SISTER AUGUSTINE: Superior of the Sisters of Charity at the Johanna Hospital at Bonn. Authorized Translation from the German Memoirs of AMALIE von LABAULX.

Large post 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

The HUMAN RACE; and other Sermons. Preached at Cheltenham, Oxford, and Brighton. By the late Rev. F. W. ROBERTSON, of Trinity Chapel, Brighton.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 15s.

A COMMENTARY on the BOOK of JOB. With a Translation. By SAMUEL COX, Author of 'The Genesis of Evil,' 'Salvator Mundi,' &c.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s. 6d.

The THREE SEVENS. By H. T. ADAMSON, B.D., Author of 'The Truth as it is in Jesus.'

New Presentation Edition, with Portrait,

The EPIC OF HADES. By the Author of 'Songs of Two Worlds.' 4to. cloth extra, gilt leaves, price 10s. 6d.

Second and Cheaper Edition,

ENGLISH SONNETS. A Selection by JOHN DENNIS. Famp. 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Dennis has shown great judgment in this selection."—Saturday Review.

"The volume is one for which English literature owes Mr. Dennis the heartiest thanks."—Spectator.

With Portrait, crown 8vo. cloth, price 7s. 6d.

RECORDS, and other Poems. By the late ROBERT LEIGHTON, Author of 'Reuben,' 'Scottish Words,' &c.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

DOROTHY: a Country Story in Elegiac Verse. With a Preface.

1, Paternoster-square.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1880.

CONTENTS.

SIR GAVAN DUFFY'S HISTORY OF "YOUNG IRELAND"	657
FULLER'S MONOGRAPH ON SPINOSA	660
CHERRY'S HISTORY OF THE BOWMAN ARMY	660
VICTOR HUGO'S NEW POEM	670
NOVELS OF THE WEEK	672
LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	673-674
THE VOICE OF THE HILLS; THE LONGEVITY OF EDWARDS; THE "QUARTERLY REVIEW" ON THE NEWSPAPER PRESS; THE BIOGRAPHY OF LUTER; A COPY OF "QUEEN MARY"; BALLE; NOTES FROM CAMBRIDGE	674-676
LITERARY Gossip	676
SCIENCE—LIBRARY TABLE, GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES; NOTES FROM TOBACCO; SOCIETIES; MEMORIALS; Gossip	677-679
FINE ARTS—ART FOR THE FUTURE; NEW PRINTS; NOTES FROM NAPLES; THE ANCIENT PHRASES AT ALEXANDRIA; Gossip	679-681
MUSIC—THE WEEK; Gossip	682-683
DRAMA—Gossip	683

LITERATURE

Young Ireland: a Fragment of Irish History, 1840-1850. By Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, K.C.M.G. (Cassell & Co.)

SIR GAVAN DUFFY'S "fragment of Irish history" turns out to be even more of a fragment than the title-page of the book itself indicates. The dates 1840-1850, which immediately succeed the above description of its contents, should mean that its subject matter embraced the whole or nearly the whole of the intervening time. It is as well to make it known at once that this is not the case. The narrative, so far as the present volume is concerned, stops short about the autumn of 1845, and a fly-leaf fronting the concluding page announces that Part II. of "Young Ireland," "completing the work," is "in preparation."

Whether this discovery tends to create disappointment in so much of the history as is to hand may or may not be the case, but that something approaching to that feeling is likely to be experienced by an ordinary reader before he has perused the seven hundred and seventy odd pages of which this instalment alone consists is but too probable. Sir Gavan Duffy has a story to tell, and in many respects and in many parts a story of great interest, and he is pre-eminently qualified by position, by ability, and by familiarity with the events, for the task he has set himself. He, moreover, advances a further and a just claim to public confidence when he urges that "a larger experience of mankind, the responsibilities of political office, and leisure for reflection" have enabled him to scrutinize the events recorded "from a new point of view, and to revise whatever was rash or ungenerous in earlier judgments." But, unfortunately for his readers, Sir Gavan Duffy is unnecessarily diffuse in telling his tale. The superabundance of quotation and somewhat wearisome legal details, which he introduces and dwells upon excessively, can be interesting only to the few who, as actors in the scenes or as experts, have a special interest in them; they are not likely to secure the sympathy and attention of the reading public generally. There is a common want also of unity of design rather too conspicuous throughout; and the "Birdseye View of Irish History," which he inserts after his first three chapters, is not only a wholly needless and inartistic interpolation, but scarcely characterized by the spirit of forbearance towards political opponents which distinguishes the rest of the work. Had the book been curtailed by one half, or, better still, the two volumes which we are promised melted into the one which we are given, a greater success might have been predicted for the venture.

For the theme is in itself—as has been said—one in many respects of great, and in some of even pathetic, interest. The rôle which that party which was called, rather than called itself, the Young Ireland party set itself to perform in Irish politics was a rôle which in its inception, at all events, was pure and noble. It may fairly be doubted if Sir Gavan Duffy does not somewhat exaggerate its after influence when he ascribes to the controversies of those days "for the most part the opinions which influence the public mind of Ireland at present, or promise to influence it in any considerable degree among the generation now entering on public life"; but that they had a wholesome as well as unfortunate influence on the Irish character need not be denied. To raise the people to political fitness for self-government, and to procure them the opportunity of it, by educating their intelligence instead of merely stimulating their passions; to appeal to them rather by the history of the past than through the hardships of the present; to free them from the slavish dependence upon leaders, either lay or clerical, to which they were only too prone; to evoke the spirit of national pride, and put it in the place of the blind instinct of resentment,—something like this was the ideal that the Young Ireland party set up, and towards the attainment of which it worked with a consistency, ability, and devotion in themselves admirable. The typical Irishman of that day, it should be remembered, did really bear some resemblance to that typical Irishman of the stage with whom the present generation is familiar (there and nowhere else): he of the lower class ragged, reckless, and vindictive, while brimming over all the while with native humour; he of the higher class a swaggering, fox-hunting, dissipated squire, ever in advance of his means and rack-renting his tenants, who nevertheless looked up to him as a sort of chieftain with clannish faithfulness. How sorry a political unit was either one of these types, and how ill fitted to secure the honest working of representative institutions, it needs not to say. The Roman Catholic Emancipation Act had rather lowered than raised the political character in the brief interval since it had become law. In the days of the penal code the bitter bondage in which three-fourths of the inhabitants were held had spared them, at all events, the humiliation of begging from the bounty of their oppressors, by placing the temptation to do so quite beyond their reach. Neither the legislature nor any office of emolument under the Crown was open to them. But after the Relief Bill not only might a Catholic aspire to be a member of the Imperial Parliament, but the becoming so placed at his disposal an amount of government patronage considerable at any time, but especially considerable just at this juncture, when O'Connell was in firm alliance with the Whigs in office. The consequence was that Irish representatives—and their constituents still more—were generally shamefully venal. "The time had not yet come," writes Mr. Sullivan ('New Ireland,' chap. vii.), "when personal integrity and purity of private life and character were weighed in estimating a man's title to public confidence and esteem. The 'popular member' in those days was returned by a combination of patriotic enthusiasm and religious influence, supplemented by the necessary amount of bribery and intimidation." Against this condition of things it was that the Young Ireland party took the field and waged unremitting warfare. All their weapons were at first both professedly and actually of a purely literary nature. Men for the most part of perfectly stainless character, ardent, industrious, and absolutely sincere, in the first bloom of youth (the oldest of the original members was under thirty), they brought to the conflict considerable powers of sarcasm, of reasoning, and of invective, and they were aided by an outburst of genuine national poetry, which flowed in Ireland for the first time for centuries. Their medium of communication with their countrymen was the Nation newspaper, at the commencement their sole medium, though later on some of them took a prominent part in public meetings too. Sir Gavan Duffy gives an interesting account of how this celebrated periodical was projected and started. A casual meeting in the Irish courts of law brought him into communication with two young barristers, ardent patriots like himself, Thomas Davis and John Blake Dillon.

"They put off their gowns, and we strolled into the neighbouring Phoenix Park. I learned that they had abandoned the Morning Register. After a long conversation on the prospects of the country, we sat down under a noble elm, within view of the park gate leading to the city, and there I proposed a project which had been often in my mind from the first time I met them, the establishment of a weekly newspaper, which we three should own and write. They listened eagerly to the proposal, but they had no money to spare, and were unwilling to accept any responsibility which might involve them in debt. I was able to find capital to a moderate extent, and I solved the difficulty by undertaking to become sole proprietor if they aided me in the management, and in this arrangement they gladly concurred."

Duffy was the editor as well as proprietor, but the leading spirit was Davis, a man by universal testimony of a singularly gentle, amiable, and affectionate nature. A single stanza of his—not given in the present work, but taken nearly at random from among the many hundreds of similar ones which he continued to contribute to the Nation, almost to the day of his death, with unflagging energy—may be quoted to show the spirit which he sought to infuse into his party at this time:—

—Freedom comes from God's right hand
And needs a godly train;
Th' righteous men can make our land
A nation once again.

To what extent, and from what causes, these sentiments were afterwards ignored, and the humane and moral policy here foreshadowed was perverted; by what melancholy events the Young Ireland party was hurried into the excesses for which it was responsible later on—for this portion of the narrative we must wait for that second volume of Sir C. G. Duffy's work which we are informed is "in preparation." The present one ends with the death of Davis, a not inappropriate point at which to pause, for with him died the brighter and more conciliatory and less-known phase of the Young Ireland agitation, and the darker and better known one began in which he had no part.

Spinoza: his Life and Philosophy. By Frederick Pollock. (O. Kegan Paul & Co.)

EVER since Lessing said, "There is no other philosophy than the philosophy of Spinoza," the fame of the Jewish thinker has been steadily rising. For this the reasons are not far to seek. In the first place, Spinoza is, as it were, the Dante of philosophers, inasmuch as his life is interesting apart from his thoughts. With the possible exception of Fichte, Spinoza is the only post-Cartesian philosopher whose career has any romance about it, while at the same time it is the ideal of the philosophic life in its renunciation of all external goods. And further, Spinoza has the advantage over martyrs of free thought like Bruno or Vanini, whose fate was more tragic, that the ideas for which he scorned delight were worthy of the sacrifice. His speculation seems to have attained to something of a prophetic strain, and anticipated in a remarkable manner certain of the most striking tendencies of modern thought. By a method which appears at first sight entirely opposed to that of modern science, he arrived at results which curiously coincide with the outcome of two centuries of investigation.

Mr. Pollock's volume does full justice to both Spinoza and Spinozism. To say that it is superior to anything which has hitherto appeared in English would be to give him but scant praise. The essays of Mr. Froude and Mr. Arnold are the only contributions in English at all worthy of the subject, and these are put out of competition by the small scale on which they were designed. If we must indulge in the futile luxury of a comparative estimate, we must seek beyond the Channel for worthy rivals of Mr. Pollock's book. Of the enormous literature which has gathered round Spinoza, two works alone compete with this volume in fulness of treatment and in sympathetic insight: Dr. van Vloten's 'Benedictus de Spinoza naar Leven en Werken' and Kuno Fischer's monograph contained in his 'History of Modern Philosophy' (in the revised form published this year). Mr. Pollock appears to us to have surpassed the latter by his clear insight into the scientific bearings of Spinoza's views, while Dr. van Vloten's treatment is disfigured by an antitheistic bias which obscures his vision on many important points. For the general reader, then, Mr. Pollock's 'Spinoza' is the best book extant, and it contains in addition many important innovations that will attract to it the notice of the professed student of philosophy. Indeed, it would be difficult, and probably impossible, to point to any English book on a philosopher and his writings which can be put on a level with this one. It should be added that Mr. Pollock has prefixed to his book an excellent bibliographical list of all the works on Spinoza which deserve special attention, and in this has shown generous appreciation of the labours of his predecessors.

Spinoza's life and character are treated of in the first two chapters of the book with full sympathy. Too much stress has hitherto been laid on the solitary and isolated character of Spinoza's life; comparisons to "a Dutch picture of still life" or to one of Ruysdael's cold skies are quoted by Fischer, who accentuates the isolation. Mr. Pollock, on the other hand, calls attention to the social side of Spinoza's life, his relations with De Witt, his courageous conduct during the tumult against him, his friendly dealings with his landlord, &c. The point is of some importance as it to some extent prejudices the practical bearings of Spinozism, which is usually regarded as tinged with egoism. Mr. Pollock has done wisely in giving in an appendix the old English translation of Colerus's life, in which these more pleasing traits occur. Admirable as is the portrait given in the text, we have, as it were, a proof before letters in Colerus's frank admiration of the man whose doctrines he abhorred. Something might have been said about a rather repulsive trait mentioned by Colerus, who reports that the philosopher used to divert himself by making spiders fight; the late G. H. Lewes suggested that he was examining the curious inversion of sexual selection among arachnides, and this is confirmed to some extent by the reference to microscopes which follows immediately in Colerus's text. Mr. Pollock might, too, have corrected the misapprehension of Colerus with regard to the conduct of Dr. Meyer, who was with Spinoza at the last. Colerus roundly accuses him of stealing some coins and a silver knife, but Dr. van Vloten points out that they may very possibly have been his fee and a memento given to him by the dying philosopher. Colerus would naturally have little sympathy with the editor of the 'Opera Posthuma.' The second chapter supplements the outer events of the life by supplying the personal details of the letters, and gives the philosopher's opinions on subjects not immediately connected with his own theories.

The next chapter deals with the sources of Spinoza's philosophy. This is a question still sub judice. While Kuno Fischer declares that Spinoza was not only a Cartesian, but never ceased to be one, Dr. M. Joel, of Breslau, attempts to affiliate him to Don Chisdai Crescas and other Jewish philosophers of the Middle Ages, and Prof. Sigwart would trace the germs of Spinozism in Giordano Bruno. Mr. Pollock sides with the last two critics to a great extent: he gives reasons for holding that Spinoza was never a Cartesian, however much he may have been influenced by Cartesian method and physics. An excellent summary of Spinozism is given (pp. 84-88), which shows Mr. Pollock to be completely master of his subject, and then the three chief elements are assigned to their respective sources: pantheism to the Jewish philosophers, monism and the conatus to Descartes. This view appears to be as just as it is novel, and at the same time due care is taken to insist that Spinoza is in reality original in his welding together of the borrowed doctrines. Mr. Pollock has had the good fortune to discover an additional connexion with mediæval Jewish philosophy with regard to the most perplexing part of the 'Ethics,' the "eternity" of the mind. The connexion of this with the Averroistic doctrine of the voûr wougnâts has hitherto escaped even the learned Orientalists who have dealt with the subject. Mr. Pollock traces it to Gersonides, and assumes that Spinoza might have met with it there. There is no need of any "assumption" that Spinoza was "not unacquainted with the writings of Gersonides" (p. 291), since Spinoza mentions him by name in one of the additional notes to the 'Tractatus Theologico-politicus,' discovered by Böhmer and reprinted in Ginsberg's edition. This shows that Spinoza kept up his reading in Jewish philosophy later than 1670, and confirms the general position held by Mr. Pollock. In treating of Spinoza's indebtedness to Descartes's physics, the error of the latter in taking quantity of motion to be constant is pointed out (Prof. Clerk Maxwell was the first to do so, if we remember rightly, in the article "Atom" in the 'Encyclopædia Britannica'), and it is suggested that Spinoza saw its erroneousness towards the last. We may perhaps be allowed to remark that the late Prof. Clifford's influence on his friend has given a reality to Mr. Pollock's criticisms on physical matters which is utterly lacking in the foreign criticisms of Spinoza.

The next six chapters supply an admirable analysis of the 'Ethics.' The subject prevents any criticism in detail of this part of the book, but a word or two must be devoted to the general treatment. Mr. Pollock has overcome the difficulties of expounding the 'Ethics' most thoroughly. He effects this by translating Spinoza, so to speak, into the language of contemporary science. The feat is remarkable in every way. Fischer and Camerer content themselves with a somewhat laborious analysis of Spinoza's views in their original form, but Mr. Pollock is so penetrated by the spirit of Spinozism that he enables his readers not only to understand Spinoza more clearly, but likewise to apply his views to contemporary problems. As a result his account is more full of life, more capable of comprehension, and, above all, more readable, than any we are acquainted with. By this method Spinoza is rendered more modern than any of the classical philosophers; he appears to live again. At the same time the plan has its dangers; and it is difficult to avoid thinking that Mr. Pollock has made Spinoza too scientific, though it must be allowed that he has effected an immense improvement by insisting on the scientific strain in Spinozism. He has, it is true, avoided the temptation to take the doctrine of conatus as an anticipation of evolution, which was, we believe, his view in his earliest essay in the 'Fortnightly Review.' But he has explained away all Spinoza's mysticism by this means; after the manner of the Broad Church theosophists, he has "defecated Spinoza's idea of God" (the phrase is Mr. Mark Pattison's) till it has exceedingly little content. The vital importance of the idea in Spinoza's system is allowed by Mr. Pollock, yet it does not come out as a vitally important principle in his modernization of Spinozism; in this respect the old wine loses its savour in the transference to new bottles. Apart from this, however, Mr. Pollock's exposition is excellent; the treatment of the test of truth, causation, relation of mind and body, and pleasure and pain, may be specially referred to. Again, the exposition of the practical aspects of Spinozism is a distinct advance; Mr. Pollock is here most sympathetic. Altogether this part of the book is quite unique in the power with which the doctrines are presented without their dress of antique phraseology; to use a favourite expression of the philosopher, they are presented "sub specie eternitatis."

The remainder of the book deals with Spinoza's 'Tractatus Politicus,' his relations to theology, and the history of his influence. As regards the first of these subjects, the author of a legal classic can speak with authority, yet we are afraid that Mr. Pollock somewhat overrates the value of the fragment, which he places above Hobbes in philosophic value, though he grants its inferiority in style and subsequent influence. Again, Spinoza's relations to theology are not treated with that sympathy which informs the earlier part of the book. Throughout the work Mr. Pollock deals in somewhat unsatisfactory fashion with the 'Tractatus Theologico-politicus,' which he looks at more in its political aspects. Spinoza is the father of modern Biblical criticism, and no account of him can be complete without adequate recognition of the fact. It may be mentioned that the only serious omissions in the bibliographical list are connected with this subject, viz., Siegfried's 'Spinoza als Ausleger des Alten Testaments' and Dr. Joel's monograph on the 'Tractatus.' For the English reader the omission is not so important, since Mr. Matthew Arnold's essay supplies the deficiency, but the completeness of Mr. Pollock's account is impaired by the inadequate treatment which the subject receives. The neglect of this aspect has somewhat marred the last chapter of the book, on Spinoza's influence. This is altogether too detailed: no individual who can be proved to have been influenced by Spinoza is omitted (some, e.g. Boerhaave, are introduced on very superficial grounds), yet there is no account of the manner and kind of the influence exerted by Spinozism, nor is any attempt made to "place" Spinoza in the general history of philosophy. To sum up our impressions, the book appears to give the best existing account of the Spinozistic tone, the vital principle of Spinozism, and is only inadequate in its dealings with Spinoza's theology.

It would be unfair to part from Mr. Pollock without speaking of the literary merits of his book. His complete sympathy with his subject gives his style at times a dignified fervour which adds life to the exposition. He has besides carefully studied the question, "What is an index?" and given a full answer at the end of his book. Finally, the bountiful translations from the Latin are artfully couched in English that might well be contemporary with Spinoza. It would have been easy for Mr. Pollock to have palmed off his translations as excerpts from a contemporary translation of the 'Opera Posthuma,' which had hitherto remained unknown.

Sketches of Army Life in Russia. By F. V. Greene. (Allen & Co.)

A YEAR ago we reviewed Lieut. Greene's able but somewhat dry record of the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78. The present work may be viewed as a sort of supplement of a much lighter and far more interesting nature. In his official work personal adventures and anecdotes were excluded, but what he then omitted he has collected in the present little volume. Lieut. Greene, though not endowed with great descriptive powers, is evidently a keen and careful observer. He witnessed some of the most stirring scenes of the war, and, owing alike to his official position and the popularity of his nation in Russia, enjoyed great opportunities of intimacy with Russian officers of all ranks and of learning many facts and opinions inaccessible to other foreigners. No wonder, indeed, that he was a persona grata in the Russian army, for he sympathizes with Pan-Slavic ideas and hates England more warmly than the Russians. According to him the Turks possess no merit save courage. The English are selfish obstructives who have vainly striven to arrest the Czar's civilizing mission. Lord Beaconsfield is a second Machiavelli, and "the most crafty and unscrupulous leader that England has had for many generations"; "who never has been troubled by scruples of humanity, or any other scruples to gain his end."

Obnoxious to good taste, however, as is this vituperative style, there is much in the work before us which will be read with the highest interest, though it must be admitted that there is a good deal of padding and more or less irrelevant matter. Two chapters, namely, one on "The Russian Soldier," the other on "Russian Generals," constitute the cream of the book. When the peasant joins the army the first thing he learns is unquestioning obedience, and too often his officers treat him as if he were nothing better than an animal:—

"I have only too often heard officers, particularly of the lower grades, call a soldier on slight provocation a fool, an idiot, a dog, a pig, and follow it up with blows. I have even seen the first sergeant knocked down and cursed by one of the company officers in front of the whole company in line, for some slight misunderstanding of his instructions. Such cases are, of course, rare exceptions, but one of them leaves an impression on the memory not easily eradicated; and the deed is all the more flagrant because an instance of a soldier striking his officer is, so far as I know, wholly unheard of. Yet in spite of this humility in outward forms, it cannot be said that the soldier degenerates into being servile. Side by side with this unbending discipline there exists a peculiar feeling of good-fellowship and mutual dependence between the officers and men. The men are jovial and good-natured among themselves, and have their own glee songs and dances, in which the officers are daily spectators. They freely discuss the movements of the campaign, and try to reason out—often arriving at a very just appreciation—the causes and effects of their marches and battles. The officers, when in good humour, are always offering some banter or jest, and receiving in turn quite as good as they give—the answers being never disrespectful, but often framed with very great cleverness and wit, and so aptly pointed as to bring down shouts of laughter from the men at the officer's expense."

The regimental officers possess many both of the good and bad qualities of their soldiers. Owing to the want of education in the country generally, it is difficult to find 25,000 officers (the number commissioned) all possessing what in other armies is deemed an indispensable amount of mental culture. In fact, a large proportion of the Russian officers of the line are intellectually very little superior to the men whom they command. Now the latter being good machines, but wanting in initiative and individuality, these qualities are even more essential in the Russian than in other European officers. Unfortunately, the Russian officers, partly owing to their want of education, partly to the centralization to which they are subject, are not gifted with the power of dealing with unforeseen emergencies, and often, when placed in novel situations, let things take their course.

The chapter on Russian generals deals principally with the characters and careers of Generals Gourko and Skobelev, whose names came much before the public during the late war. Gourko was forty-nine years of age at the beginning of the campaign. He had been all his life in the Cavalry of the Guard, and had seen service both in the Crimea and in the Polish insurrection. During the Russo-Turkish war he distinguished himself first as commander of the advanced guard which pushed over the Balkans; secondly, when, at the head of an army including forty-four battalions, he captured the redoubts which guarded the communications with Plevna. At the capture of the principal redoubt, garrisoned by 4,000 Turks, Gourko employed 16,000 men, and lost 116 officers and over 3,000 men. This result created a great sensation in St. Petersburg society, for the troops engaged belonged to the Guard. Gourko was so much impressed by his losses on that occasion that during the remainder of the campaign he never led his soldiers to a vigorous assault, always having recourse to turning movements in preference. Lieut. Greene sums up his character as follows:—

"Gourko is the least popular of the Russian generals: his manner is brusque, he is very harsh with his men, and never pays personal attention to their wants. The men worshipped Skobelev as a legendary hero, they loved Radetsky as a kind-hearted father, but they never developed any personal affection for Gourko. He is a man of restless, untiring energy, a high order of abilities, and he has rendered services of the greatest value; but he never made himself one with his men. He has the brains of a leader, but lacks those qualities which gain men's affections."

Skobelev resembles a hero of romance rather than a modern general. He began life in the Guard, saw some service in the Polish rebellion, went through a course at the Staff College, spent two or three years in the Caucasus, and commanded a regiment of Cossacks in the Khivan war, which obtained him the rank of full colonel; two years later he accompanied General Kaufmann in the first expedition against Khokand, becoming at its close, when only thirty, a major-general, and the next year, at the head of an independent force of only 4,000 men, completed the conquest of Ferghana, of which he was made governor. This appointment he retained till a few months before the Russo-Turkish war. At first he had no special command, but at the passage of the Danube he obtained permission to accompany the leading division, and passed the river by swimming his horse across it. This brought him into notice, and his exploits during the remainder of the campaign are well-known matters of history. In the great assault on Plevna he established himself in the Turkish works at a cost of 8,000 men out of the 18,000 under his orders, and was driven out next day. The failure was not his fault, for he simply carried out his instructions, and "from that day his name was spoken of among the soldiers of the entire army in words of fables, as a man whose bravery could not be described. I have heard them speak of him as a general under whom they would rather fight and die, than fight and live under another; for with him they knew they could never come to disgrace, but were sure they would achieve the fame of military heroes whether they gained or lost the day, whether they lived or were killed."

For his exploits at the assault of Plevna, Skobelev was promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general, and given the command of the 16th Division, which soon acquired under his leadership such renown as to be spoken of to this day as "the famous 16th Division." He won the affections of his men not only by his romantic courage and unrivalled skill as a commander, but by his unceasing care for their wants and comforts, and by the profuse liberality with which he advanced money from his own purse for their needs whenever public funds failed.

"In return for his care of his men he demanded of them, first of all, unhesitating, unflinching, unquestioning obedience to his orders. If he ordered a man to do anything, where immediate death was as certain as the sun in heaven, he expected to be instantly obeyed, without so much as even a look of question or surprise. Himself a man of wide reading, speaking many languages, and having travelled in many lands, he gathered about him, in his personal staff, as rough and uncultured a lot of men as I ever saw in officers' uniform; but they answered his purpose to carry orders, and, as he said, if he ordered one of them to ride his horse against the muzzle of a discharging cannon, he would do it instantly."

As regards discipline he was pitiless. If the slightest depredation was committed on the inhabitants, instantaneous and severe punishment ensued. He admitted that he cared nothing for the sufferings of the peasants, but would not allow them to be ill-treated without orders. Speaking of his soldiers, he said, "I want them to feel that they are merely my creatures—that they exist simply by my will." His courage was almost superhuman. Firmly convinced that he should not survive the campaign, he was only anxious to turn his few remaining weeks or months to the most brilliant account. Lieut. Greene says of him:—

"His personal bravery was not only of the most reckless character, but at times it seemed to partake of the merest bravado, in which only extraordinary luck prevented him from reaping in death the well-earned reward of his foolishness. He always wore a white coat, a white hat, and rode a white horse in battle, simply because other generals usually avoided these target-marks. He was perpetually riding at breakneck speed over some fence or ditch, leaving half his staff and orderlies sprawling in it. He never lost an opportunity of displaying courage. He went into battle in his cleanest uniform and fresh underclothing, covered with perfume, and wearing a diamond-hilted sword, in order, as he said, that he might die with his best clothes on. For a long time he wore, with evident affectation, a coat in which he had been wounded, and which had a conspicuous patch on the shoulder. Yet all this was not mere bravado and nonsense, but was the result of thought and almost cold-blooded calculation. It was intended to impress his men, and it did so. They firmly believed he could not be hit, and whenever they saw a white horse, coat, and cap among them, they knew that was Skobelev, and so long as he was there they felt sure that everything was going well."

From the above extracts it is easy to see that Skobelev is a very remarkable man, and, should he be spared, his name will probably occupy a brilliant place in history. Our author anticipates that he will some day be the Russian commander-in-chief in a war on the Eastern Question, and in that case he will be classed with "the five great soldiers of this century, side by side with Napoleon, Wellington, Grant, and Moltke."

L'Ass. Par Victor Hugo. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

To say of this book that it is full to overflowing of poetry and brilliance, eloquence, tenderness, and all kinds of beauty, is almost superfluous, seeing by whom it is written. It is not merely that it dazzles the reader till he fairly sighs for a little dull writing, but every line is as musical and as deeply steeped in colour as though the intellectual substance of the poem had been made to yield to the sensuous expression, after the fashion of Baudelaire and Gautier. This, indeed, is the great triumph in French verse, to grapple with the warring forces of metrical music and of prose precision, and fuse them so masterfully that each seems born of the other. These excellences are specially shown, as might have been expected, in the poet's impeachment of society in regard to its treatment of children:—

Pédagogues ! toujours c'est ainsi que vous faites,
Tout l'esprit humain doit se mouler sur vos têtes;
Péages doit broter dans votre basso-cour,
L'aile morte, et manger de votre foin. Le jour
Où, de votre perruque arrangeant les volutes,
Piers, perchés sur Zola et Bataillon, vous voulûtes
Définir le génie, expliquer la beauté,
Les mauvais estomacs ont dit : Sobriété;
Les myopes ont dit : Boyes ternes; la clique
Des précepteurs, geignant d'un air mélancolique,
A décrété : Le beau, c'est un mur droit et nu.
Donc Rubens est trop rouge et Puget trop charnu;
L'art est maigre; Vénus serait plus belle, déique.
Shakespeare, ce Batan de votre art poétique,
Prodigue image, idée et vie à chaque pas;
La nature, imitant Shakespeare, ne voit pas
Sur une vieille pierre une place vacante
Sans la donner à l'herbe ou l'offrir à l'acanthe;
Le lierre énorme où l'art mystérieux se plait
Emplit Heidelberg comme il emplit Hamlet;
Vous coupez cette ronce auguste qui soupire;
Vous tombez à grands coups de serpe sur Shakespeare,
Maranda, et vous frappez, jusqu'à n'en laisser rien,
Sur le grand chêne où flotte un hymne aérien.

A qui donc croyez-vous persuader, ô cuistres,
Que le beau, que le vrai vous ont pris pour ministres,
Et qu'Horace va dire : Hic laceratus ordo,
Parce que vous tirez des crétins au cordeau ?

N'est-il pas odieux, ô Jean-Jacque, ô Molière,
O d'Anagnin, du droit puisant auxiliaire,
Qui dimais en voyant un roi : Qu'est-ce que c'est ?
Montaigne, ô bon Michel que son père faisait
Éveiller le matin au son de la musique,
Diderot qui raillassa tout le vieil art phibistique,
O libre Hoffmann, planant dans les rêves fougueux,
N'est-il pas désolant, dites, de voir ces gueux
Tatoués de latin, de grec, d'hébreu, ces cancres
Don't l'âme prend un bain dans la noirceur des encres,
Exalter l'enfance en leurs blêmes couverts !
Ne sont-ils pas hideux, ces faux docteurs, savants
A donner au progrès une incurable entorse,
Commençant par l'ennui pour finir par la force,
Du bâillement allant volontiers au bâillon,
Logiques, de Boileau concluant Trestailon,

Vautrait Ronald, couvrant de béates exergues
Piet, Cornet, d'Incourt et Clausel de Cousseigne,
Tâchant d'éteindre l'astre au fond des bleus éthers !
N'est-il pas monstrueux de voir ces magisters,
Oser dans l'horreur de leur lois occultes,
Poser sur l'avenir qui s'envole en tumulte
Avec l'emportement d'Achille et de Roland,
Ayant dans l'œil l'éclair de Vasco s'en allant
Ou de Jason partant pour la plage colchique,
Leur bâton de sergent instructeur monarchique,
Et crier aux esprits : A droite ! alignement !

Even here, however, we see the difference between an intellect such as M. Hugo's—tender, feminine, passionate, and unpenetrative—and the masculine grip of such an intellect as Rabelais's when dealing with the same question—the education of young Gargantua; an intellect that, without any ostentatious, without any of those frantic gesticulations which are best expressed by the word "French," seizes the sophism by the throat, so to speak, and, after choking it, passes on. What a people is this to have once produced a Rabelais!

Indeed, M. Hugo's radical infirmity—and it is the radical infirmity of the modern French temper—is seen in the conception no less than in the structure of this poem. It is an astounding fact that, while other countries grow older, France grows in the matter of subtlety younger. M. Taine is great in generalizations upon national characteristics as the outcome of air, clothing, and food; why did he never light upon this, the most interesting generalization of all? "The Greeks are always children," said the Egyptians. "The French become so with the years" will be the verdict of the future Taine.

That this book—consisting of the arguments of a donkey against Kant, who, it seems, represents the modern temper usually affiliated upon Comte—is being received in France as the perfection of all that is powerful in satire is a striking illustration of the change that has come over the French since the Revolution. They were a humorous if not a subtle people once; but from that ocean of blood and tears France has arisen a new nation: earnest and energetic now as any Teutonic nation can possibly be; brilliant and witty beyond comparison, but humorous no longer. That badinage which serves for humour in France is not humour at all, either in the Rabelaisian or the Moliérian sense; it is nothing but a form of wit—wit in solution perhaps. And the reception of this book is a notable instance of that astonishing simplicity of character which now underlies the French mind, and is at the basis even of its brilliance. It is the great charm of a Frenchman that he never knows when he is ridiculous, as it is the great fault of an Englishman that his morbid consciousness of what an absurd creature the human animal really is makes him shy. None but Frenchmen of the nineteenth century would have dreamed of attacking Kant as typifying the society of our day; none but Frenchmen would have dreamed of putting the attack into the mouth of a donkey; and assuredly none but a French public could read a page of such a satire without smiling—smiling, not with the poet, but at him, as a man possessing power without knowing how to use it.

The conception of the poem is, in fact, an illustration of that obtuseness to the ridiculous side of things which, if his fecundity of wit is considered, makes M. Hugo a phenomenon in literature. That the donkey in the poem is to be taken as typifying unsophisticated man is true; but where is the force, and especially where is the humour, of symbolizing unsophisticated man by the creature which, fairly or unfairly, has been for ages considered the type, not of unsophisticated intelligence, but of stupidity? This is just the kind of mistake into which always falls the man who, without the gift of humour, tries to be humorous. M. Hugo has somehow apprehended the fact that incongruity is at the bottom of humour. Now a donkey is considered the type of stupidity. It is incongruous, therefore, to use him as a symbol of the contrary of asinine stupidity—human common sense; therefore it is humorous so to use him! The poet writes his denunciations against things in general, puts them into the mouth of an ass, and thinks that this mechanical incongruity has made them humorous. Suppose that Shakspeare had clapped the ass's head upon Oberon's shoulders instead of bully Bottom's, and that Oberon's poetical utterances had issued from the ass's mouth, would an incongruity such as that have added humour to the poetry? But here is just the difference between the great humourist and the man who tries to manufacture humour. That wisdom from the mouth of harlequin is humorous Rabelais has shown, but serious and savage invective gains no humour and loses emphasis from being put into the mouth of an ass. M. Hugo does not at all understand the requirements of the form of satire he has adopted. Among satiric methods that of marshalling the actual conditions of civilization as they exist at any place or time, and arraigning them before the bar of an outside intelligence unsophisticated by those conditions, has been a favourite in all literatures. And no wonder: it is a method at once piquant and by a certain kind of satirist easily handled. It is a perfectly legitimate and, indeed, admirable method, involving as it does that kind of incongruity which (according to a definition we once ventured upon in these columns) is essentially the incongruity of humour, as distinguished from the kind of incongruity at the basis of mere caricature. That is to say, the forms of life treated by the humourist after this method are tested by what may almost be called an absolute standard, and not by a relative and conventional one, as is the case in caricature. The distinction we are speaking of is easily illustrated: it is the incongruity of caricature, for instance, which makes the Englishman of to-day (dressed in his frock-coat and chimney-pot hat) smile as much at Elizabethan ruffs as at the fantastic roll collars and pantaloons of the first quarter of this century. But it is the far deeper incongruity of humour which would make an angel or a donkey smile at all English costumes alike. If the imaginary critic is a donkey, he must think like a donkey, not like a man, or where is the humour of calling him a donkey? With regard to the form of satire under discussion, the principal faculties required for its successful production are lightness of hand, entire self-dominance, and, above all, playfulness of temper. The incongruity between the form of life satirized and the ideal standard of the unsophisticated intelligence observing and criticizing it should come out naturally and inevitably, and should seem as little as possible to be an artistic result arranged by a satiric wire-puller. Unless the satirist secures this kind of success he secures no success at all, and his work has that quality of hardness which is the great defect of Edgar Quinet, and which killed the brilliant satirical fancies of Douglas Jerrold as soon almost as they were born.

The goal before the eyes of the satirist should be to appear as unconscious of satire and of a satirical marshalling of the conditions satirized as actually was the real Chinese poet-philosopher Pin, in whose diary are recorded the adventures and the comments on English society of the Chinese embassy to London some few years ago—by far the most deliciously humorous production, we may add, that has appeared in our time, unless perhaps we except the equally unconscious humour of the pictures of English eighteenth century life in 'L'Homme qui Rit,' or the still more splendid sketches of British aristocracy furnished by American interviewers and novelists of the fashionable kind. It cannot be said that in this style of satire the French have ever excelled, in the way that some English writers have excelled, such as Goldsmith in his 'Citizen of the World,' and Hawthorne in the 'New Adam and Eve.' Even La Fontaine in 'Le Paysan du Danube' shows, every now and then, that Gallic eagerness and emphasis which are fatal to this kind of work. Yet it is the best thing of the kind in French. The requisite temper, however, for this method is in its essence Spanish—philosophic, shrewd, lazy, and calm; and perhaps it is only in those French writers where Spanish influence is seen—writers like Molière, for instance, and Le Sage—that we may expect to find even a latent capacity for the kind of humour required in this special form of art. This is not to disparage modern French writers. There is no more interesting person than a Frenchman, but it would be as ungenerous as it would be idle to look for anything Cervantic from him.

In saying so much as this we have pretty broadly hinted that the faculties requisite for the production of the kind of satire in question are exactly the opposite of those for which M. Victor Hugo has become justly famous. His splendid genius is beyond all cavil, but he is nevertheless a standing example of what a powerful factor in literary success is mere emphasis. There is no nonsense so absurd that it will not gain vogue, if promulgated by an emphatic writer. And in real life emphasis rules the world, or did until, of late, irony has begun to supplant it in some countries. Even France herself—who, from some reason or another, has, we say, lost since the Revolution what heaven of the Spanish temper she had under the old régime—seems to be struck now and then with astonishment at the temper, so markedly anti-Spanish, displayed by M. Victor Hugo. As anything other than a purely local satirist he is perhaps the most unsuccessful writer of satire that has ever lived; not, assuredly, owing to any lack of intellectual power and brilliance—much of what is called his poetry is his brilliant wit—but because he is as a satirist born out of his time. Scolding, in short, has ceased to be an effective satirical weapon. Outside France the people of the nineteenth century have become too knowing for the ingenuous scoldings of M. Hugo to rouse in them anything deeper than a smile, whether he scolds on the right side or the wrong. That there have always been two kinds of satire, the radical opposites of each other—the satire of direct invective and the indirect satire of irony—is no doubt true; but we have outgrown the former kind of satire. Man as he gets older ceases to be scared by thunder.

It may not be for good that this change of temper has come about in England; it may not be for good that Macaulay's essay on Barère is instanced now, not as a proof of Macaulay's power, but of his simplicity; but it is obvious that the change has come about, and it explains why it is necessary to pronounce this latest production of one of the greatest poets and one of the most generous souls of our time a failure as a weapon of attack no less than as a work of art. Remembering as we do the nobility of the man and the splendour of the poet, it is pathetic to see the earnestness with which he belabours the air with what he takes to be a formidable club, whereas all that the reader can see is a giant brandishing a flail, whose rebound bruises his own august head, and bruises nothing else.

With regard to his objurgations about Kant, the reader will most likely be perplexed in some parts of the poem as to whether he should not read Comte for Kant. It must not, however, be supposed that the word "Kant" in the poem is anything more than a word of ornament. It is not to be taken as representing any concept in the poet's mind of the Königsberg philosopher. It is no impeachment of Victor Hugo to suppose that he never read a chapter of Kant in his life, or that if he did read one he failed to understand it. There is no reason in the world why he should read and understand Kant. Coleridge tried to do so, and caused all true lovers of poetry to be very angry with Kant. It is true that Alfred de Musset turned to Schopenhauer and metaphysics, studied Descartes, Spinoza, Cabanis, and Maine de Biran, and obtained "un grand prix de philosophie"; but that was when metaphysics was still, like fencing, a fashionable accomplishment of French youth. All that M. Hugo knows of Kant is that he has the reputation of being not only a philosopher, but a German, and that his name, like that of Thales, Wordsworth, Young, Xenarchus, Tiraboschi, and the hundreds of others that adorn his pages, is useful as an ornament of this the latest of his "poetic runs." The phrase "poetic runs" requires to be defined, as we are in hopes it may supply a want always felt by the critic when seeking to classify M. Victor Hugo's more characteristic productions. The Australian bower-bird builds, besides its legitimate nest, a series of long and brilliant "runs" or arcades in which to play, decorating them with every glittering thing it can find—coloured shells, gay feathers, minerals, and, in default of these, with rags and bones; but the bones must always be shiny, and the rags must always be coloured. Then they are as good as gems. It is the same with "poetic runs."

NOVELS OF THE WEEK.

The Trumpet-Major. By Thomas Hardy. 3 vols. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

Sylvestra. By A. R. Ellis. 2 vols. (Bell & Sons.)

Dimplethorpe. By the Author of 'St. Olave's.' 3 vols. (Hurst & Blackett.)

Prince Fortune and Prince Fatal. By Mrs. Carrington. 3 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

MR. HARDY seems to be in the way to do for rural life what Dickens did for that of the town. Like the elder novelist, he finds his characters entirely in the middle or lower middle class. With the "nobility and gentry" he has nothing to do. In one respect, indeed, he is more fortunate than Dickens. Readers who, like the old Scot, would rather hear the lark sing than the mouse squeak, are probably in these days the majority, and for them Overcombe Mill and the downs of Dorsetshire will have more attractions than the neighbourhood of Golden Square or Lant Street in the Borough. But setting aside invidious comparisons, it may be said that in the ten years or so which have elapsed since Mr. Hardy's first anonymous novel raised hopes that the yeoman class had found its sacred vates, his steady progress has fully justified these anticipations. No doubt he still retains one or two of his old mannerisms, notably his tendency to far-fetched similes—as when he compares the ruddy Festus Derriman's teeth to "snow in a Dutch cabbage," and elsewhere to white chessmen hemmed in by the red—and his habit of putting into the mouths of illiterate rustics idioms which we can hardly believe to be theirs, and expressions which are surely not characteristic. His practice, which no doubt has much to justify it, of refusing (in his own words) "to encumber the page with obsolete pronunciations of the purely English words, and with mispronunciations of those derived from Latin and Greek," adds to the unnatural effect of such sentences as these:—

"If Boney could only see ye now, sir, he'd know too well that there's nothing to be got from such a determined skilful officer but blows and musket balls.....You would outshine 'em all, and be picked off at the very beginning as a too-dangerous brave man."

Mr. Hardy has in former books done worse than this, but this is bad enough. Not even his undoubted accuracy of observation in some matters can make us credit that such language as this, even if translated into the correct dialect, would have been within the compass (to use another word of Mr. Hardy's own) of the man-of-all-work in a small Dorsetshire farmhouse at the date when "Boney" was an object of terror. So much for minute criticism. When we come to more substantial matters we have nothing but praise for 'The Trumpet-Major.' It will probably disappoint readers who crave for "sensational," albeit there are plenty of sufficiently exciting incidents in it. The author has not that power of enthralling the reader's interest which is possessed, for instance, by Mr. Blackmore; or if he has it he does not care to exercise it. But he is second to no living writer in the art of making one see his scenes and know his characters. He called one of his earlier books "a Dutch picture." In 'The Trumpet-Major' there are a dozen such. The supper at Miller Loveday's, in the course of which several of the leading personages are introduced to the reader, is simply perfect of its kind; only the reader will wish Mr. Hardy had given a little more of Sergeant Stanner's song. Excellent, too, almost Rabelaisian in its profusion, is the account of the preparations for Bob Loveday's wedding feast; and full of spirit the description of the same Bob's flight from the press-gang. Nor have we ever in the present story to complain of the introduction without due cause of incidents beyond the bounds of reasonable probability. The personages, too, are admirably touched. It is true, no doubt, that the heroine is, not to put too fine a point upon it, a fool, and the gallant Bob Loveday another; and that the reader cannot help feeling more regard for Matilda of the doubtful reputation than for the correct and ladylike Anne. But Mr. Hardy has always inclined to the cynical rather than to the sentimental; and it should be said also that, like a true artist, he never attempts by any indication of his own preferences to bias his reader's judgment. Yet it can be hardly doubted that he likes his hero. John Loveday, the trumpet-major from whom the book takes its title, is the best character that Mr. Hardy has ever drawn. Indeed, there are few figures in all fiction more pathetic, and in a quiet way heroic, than this simple, loyal, affectionate soldier, who no more dreams of breaking a promise made in a hurry to a number of drunken roisterers than he objects to thrashing one of these very roisterers at a later period for impertinence to the girl he loves, or hesitates to receive on his own bare hands a stream of boiling water to save the same girl from a possible scalding. In all he does he is influenced by two motives: affection for his brother Bob, an easy-going sailor, who exercises to the full his sailor's privilege of being on with the new love before he is off with the old, and love for Anne Garland. Between these two poor John is sorely tried; yet, as Anne is obviously unworthy of him, the reader is hardly inclined either to sympathize fully with his trials or to regret the final result. Still, when the poor steadfast and unselfish man goes off "to blow his trumpet till silenced for ever upon one of the bloody battle-fields of Spain," one feels that, to himself at least, his parting joke about "a soldier's heart not being worth a week's purchase" is eminently inapplicable. In conclusion, we may say that 'The Trumpet-Major,' while it is not one of those books which once begun make the reader forget all his duties until he has reached the end, is distinctly one which, having finished, he will be inclined to keep on his table and look back into once and again.

'Sylvestra' is a story of the last century, a period in which, the author appears to think, life was better worth living than it is at the present day. She enforces this view by a frequent repetition of a dictum of Talleyrand's, not observing, apparently, that his remark had reference purely to France, and by a good deal of smart talk about Profs. Huxley and Tyndall, also by a promiscuous use of capitals, and a fondness for such forms as "governour," "publick," "it's," and the like. At the same time she hardly does justice to her favourite period when she ascribes to one of its eminent men, as a "bitter epigram," such a tautology as "My Dean's Trade is Religion, and Religion his Trade," which is much as though one were to say, "Miss Ellis's foible is quotation, and quotation her foible." This, if not an epigram, is strictly true, for every chapter is headed with from two to four passages from French or English authors. As to the story, we confess we have not been able to extricate it from the pages of dissertation, historical and political, through which it meanders. It is a good deal to say of any novel that it is the most unreadable ever written, but certainly 'Sylvestra' (which, by the way, is not the feminine of Sylvanus) goes near to establish a claim to that distinction. The book is charmingly got up.

It would be a great improvement to the works of the author of 'St. Olave's' if she could compress them. Their diffuseness is almost intolerable, and it must turn away many a reader who, if he had patience, would find by the time he reached the middle of the second volume of 'Dimplethorpe,' for instance, that there really was something worth reading in it. The writer seems never to have made up her mind whether she is addressing children or grown-up people. At one time it appears she must have fancied that her readers would be children, only to be coaxed into paying attention by a promising show of arch vivacity tempered with silly little jokes; at another she is not only conscious that her book may fall into the hands of intelligent people, but shows that she is capable of amusing them; and then again she falls away and makes men think like school-girls. She is, therefore, an unequal writer. Nevertheless, she has a firm grasp of her story. In 'Dimplethorpe,' at all events, it is very clearly placed before the reader, when the tiresome introduction to it is once got through. The study of character which the author proposed to herself to exhibit is exhibited without vacillation and with considerable skill. Moreover, she has observed closely the ways and thoughts of the better sort of village people, and describes them with pleasant humour. The unfortunate thing about the book is that the story is that of the hero, and his is the character which is least well done. The women are all much better, and two or three of them are excellent.

In 'Prince Fortune and Prince Fatal' there is certainly much in the first hundred pages or so by which the reader is likely to be favourably impressed. Lady Laure is an earl's daughter, and she has two lovers. One of these, the Prince Fortune, is drawn with a good deal of minuteness; he is pictured as shallow, passionate, frivolous, almost brutally heartless, and yet he wins the love of Laure, who is herself shallow and weak, though otherwise lovable enough. So far all is well. The other lover is hinted at rather than introduced to us in the first volume, but he is clearly the more sterling man of the two. Mrs. Carrington may have decided that it would be too commonplace to give her heroine to the better man; are we doing her an injustice by supposing that this decision was arrived at after she had made considerable progress with her story? However this may be, it is certain that there are all the makings of a villain of romance in the less worthy lover; and there are sundry touches in his portrait which it might have been more artistic to omit in view of the effect which has finally been aimed at. Claude Lorraine, the fortunate hero, does something very like repenting and amending; and this, it may be freely confessed, is the disappointment of the story. Men cast in his mould, with his settled selfishness, callousness, and cynicism, do not repent, and become self-denying and forgiving, especially when all the temptations which it is possible to imagine are heaped and dangled before them. The fact is that Fortune is made to smile on the characters which interest the reader the least, and only when Fortune has made them her permanent favourites do they develop the moral qualities which may seem to adorn high rank and vast wealth. If it were not for this flaw Mrs. Carrington's story would be more decidedly attractive and pleasing than it actually is.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Far Out: Rovings Retold, by Lieut.-Col. W. F. Butler, C.B. (Isbister), as its title indicates, is a reprint of various magazine articles. The author has considerable powers of picturesque description, and brings before his readers with equal ease the desolate North American region, with which he has already made them familiar, the unique wonders of the Yosemite valley, and many fair scenes in South Africa and Cyprus; but his exceptional facility of style and unlimited command of metaphor and illustration form a snare which he does not always avoid. He discusses the political and social action of England in the countries he describes, and his general verdict is very unfavourable. The faults we detect in the American are, he says, only those of the English character under altered circumstances. Our race is always ungenerous to a fallen foe; there is an "innate absence of religion in the Anglo-Saxon mind," seldom even "one touch of sympathy with the prayers of any people or the faith of any creed, hence our rule in the East has ever rested on the bayonet"; we have developed India "only for the usurper," no other race has ever been the better for our rule, and so on. He gives us no credit even for good intentions, and the element of truth in his indictment is weakened by such exaggeration. A slight repetition of the oft-told story of the first Afghan war, ending with the curious misstatement that it was undertaken "in search of a scientific frontier," was hardly worth repeating. His speculations on South Africa are more interesting, and throughout the book there is a fair sprinkling of amusing "personal narrative."

Messrs. LONONANS & Co. send us Faiths and Fashions, by Lady Violet Greville. Lady Violet Greville seems to have been rendered sleepless by the fame of the social essayists of the beginning of the last century, and to have desired to see what she could do in the same kind, but in the more cynical vein fashionable in the present day. Unfortunately her cynicism is so lame, so devoid of the "bite" which truth to nature can alone give, so lacking in literary attractions, that her essays simply have the effect of very commonplace lay sermons of the kind which, were they not lay, a judicious rector would soon request his curate to cease preaching. Certain lady satirists of the present day seem to forget that, except in the case of an extraordinary genius here and there, satire loses all its sting when it divorces itself from truth of observation. There are plenty of things, for instance, to be said against Ritualism, but when Lady Violet talks of the "Ritualistic curate gathering up his skirts as he passes the roiling drunkard in the street," she is talking nonsense, for no human being who knew anything about the matter has ever charged the High Church party with pharisaic neglect of the poor. When she says that in England "it is held gentlemanlike to be in debt, to be hunted down by creditors," &c., she is again simply talking nonsense, and repeating, parrot fashion, the stale satire of an elder time. Nor can we say that Lady Violet's literary embellishments make up for the dulness of her matter. "The loves of the antique Philemon and Baucis," says she, "are respectable enough in Ovid's verse, but in real life Pickwick and Mrs. Bardell only raise a laugh." We really should like to see Lady Violet work out the parallel. Did she never read 'Philemon and Baucis' or did she never read 'Pickwick'? for we must do her the justice to believe that, if she had read both, even in a book so silly as 'Faiths and Fashions' she would not have penned this astounding sentence.

FROM Mr. King's The War-Ships and Navies of the World (Spon)—an admirable and compendious volume—the British taxpayer may gather some slight idea what becomes annually of ten millions or so; and, without the trouble of wading through piles of Blue-Books, he may draw instructive, if not satisfactory, comparisons as to the relative economy practised in our own and foreign dockyards, and gain some insight into the practical workings of the various systems of naval construction and maintenance. The author's experience as chief engineer of the New York Navy Yard and superintendent of construction of U.S. armour-clad stamps him as the best possible authority, and his present work is a most impartial review of the actual state of all modern navies up to the present date. In fact, we have here the most interesting portions of Mr. King's own original reports, made to his Government during a two years' tour of observation through the principal dockyards in the world. The illustrations are ample, and accurate details of measurement are given. It is satisfactory to learn that Sir Robert Spencer Robinson's despondent article in the Nineteenth Century (March, 1880), on 'England as a Naval Power' (in comparison with France), is contradicted. Mr. King, after quoting this article, says—"That the foregoing comparison is a very erroneous and misleading one is apparent to any one at all acquainted with the condition of the two fleets.....In reference to armaments, it may be safely said that the Woolwich guns are superior, weight for weight, to the French in every respect, unless it be in method of loading; while the steel-faced armour with which some of the British ships are plated represents a considerably greater power of resistance to penetration than iron armour of the same thickness. In regard to the other considerations there is a greater, or at least equal, excellence in the British armoured fleet as compared with the French.....The average speed of the British ship is undoubtedly higher than that of the French." Of the Italian navy we learn:—"If the Duilio and the Dandolo prove to be entirely successful, Italy will possess the most powerful ships in continental Europe; and should the still larger ships, the Italia and the Lepanto, turn out as calculated by the designers, Italy will possess a fleet of fighting ships more than a match for any continental power, France excepted. These, in addition to her cruisers of the rapid type, will cause her co-operation to be valued and her enmity to be feared even by England, France, or Russia, and certainly by any other European power." An instructive account is given of the actions in which the Hunsear was engaged with the Shah and the Amethyst, when not a single shot from her (the Hunsear's) 300-pounder gun struck either of her antagonists; and, again, with the Chilean armour-clad, when she was captured, when "out of the seventy-six 300-pound projectiles fired by the two Chilean vessels at the Hunsear only twenty-five struck her, and of the forty heavy projectiles fired by the latter ship only three struck one of her antagonists, and not one struck the other," and this was at ranges from 500 yards to 180 yards only! It is to be hoped that the perusal of this book may open the eyes of Lord Northbrook and his successors at the Admiralty to the urgent necessity of associating with our naval attachés in foreign embassies skilled and practical mechanicians both of the constructive and engineering departments. The naval constructors should also practically study the behaviour and stability of our ships at sea; and, above all, the status of the engineer must be raised, and all the prestige of combatant rank allowed to those who nowadays in reality control the manœuvring and fighting capacity of fleets. The engineer students on board the Marlborough should look forward to having as good a chance of some day commanding an ironclad as the naval cadets on board the Britannia.

MR. WARNE sends us neat editions of Gray, Beattie, and Collins, and also of Percy's Reliques. These "Lanedowne Classics" are well suited to popular use. The same series includes a collection of verse called Gems of National Poetry. The selection seems, with one exception, to be eminently judicious; but the terrible woodcut depicting Arethusa leaping down the rocks should be omitted.

Messrs. BICKERS & SON send us a new edition of the late Mr. Dyce's Shakespeare. For people who are contented with one edition of Shakespeare's works—and most people do well not to trouble themselves with the disputes of commentators—this is the best, and Messrs. Bickers have improved this new issue by putting the notes at the foot of the page instead of at the end of each play.

Messrs. MANSELL & Co. have sent us a number of Christmas cards, which are marked by a good deal of taste. They are more refined than such cards often are, and although the refinement is a little artificial it is pleasing, and they may fairly rank among the better class of Christmas cards.

WE have on our table Some Heroes of Travel, compiled by W. H. Davenport Adams (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge),—Greeks and the Greeks, by the Hon. T. Talbot (Low),—M. Tullii Ciceronis Cato Major sive de Senectute, by the late G. Long (Whittaker),—M. Tullii Ciceronis Lelius sive de Amicitia Dialogus, by the late G. Long (Whittaker),—Geography of Southern Europe, by the Rev. C. E. Moberly (Rivingtons),—Outlines of Physiography, Part II., by W. Lawson (Edinburgh, Oliver & Boyd),—Ideal Chemistry, by Sir H. C. Brodie, Bart. (Macmillan),—Health Lectures for the People, delivered in Manchester, 1878-79-80 (Manchester, J. Heywood),—Early History of the Chinese Civilization, by Terrien de Lacouperie (E. Vaton),—Four Flirts, by E. Warren ('Judy' Office),—Clerical Reminiscences, by Senex (Seeley),—Little Bullets from Batavia, by A. L. O. E. (Gall & Inglis),—The Children's Picture Annual, by Mercie Sunshine (Ward & Lock),—Little Chimes for All Times (Camell),—Hilda and her Doll, by E. C. Phillips (Griffith & Farran),—Princess Myra, by F. S. Potter (Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge),—The Lonely Island, by R. M. Ballantyne (Nisbet),—The Wrath of Ana: a Poem, by E. D. Fawcett (Hamilton),—Bethlehem to Olivet, by J. Palmer (C.E.S.S.I.),—Christ in Joseph: a Reply to "Anglo-Israhelism", by a Watcher (Rivingtons),—The Consolations of the Christian Season, Part I., by G. E. Jelf, M.A. (W. Smith),—Triune Life, Divine and Human: being a Selection of James Pierpont Greaves (Stock).—The Manifest Witness for Christ: being the Boyle Lectures for 1877 and 1878, by A. Barry (Murray).—The Angel-Messiah of Buddhists, Essenes, and Christians, by Ernest de Bunsen (Longmans).—Evening Post Essays in Review of 'The Bible for Learners' (New York, 'Evening Post' Office).—Mythologie de la Grèce Antique, by P. Decharme (Paris, Garnier Frères).—Kurzfassendes Eretisches Handbuch zum Alten Testament, Part XII. Exodus und Leviticus, by D. A. Knobel and Dr. A. Dillmann (Leipzig, S. Hirzel).—Englisches Lesebuch für Höhere Lehranstalten, by Dr. F. J. Wershoven (Leipzig, F. A. Brockhaus).—Der Positivismus im Mosicismus, by S. S. Simchowitz (Vienna, M. Gottlieb).—and Guide to the Study of Political Economy, by Dr. Luigi Cossa (Macmillan). Among New Editions we have Faust: a Tragedy, by Goethe, translated into English verse by J. S. Blackie (Macmillan).—Athalie: a Tragedy, by Racine, translated by D. R. O'Sullivan (Simpkin).—and Life of Field-Marshal Count Moltke, edited by Capt. H. M. Hozer (Sonnenschein). Also the following Pamphlets: John Ruskin: his Life and Work, by W. Smart (Glasgow, Wilson & McCorrick).—An Account of the Persecution of the Protestant Mission among the Jews at Mogador, Morocco, by the Rev. J. B. Ginsburg (E. G. Allen).—and Dress: its Sanitary Aspect, by B. Roth (Churchill).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Abbott's (E.) The Authorship of the Fourth Gospel, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Book of the Psalms, with Explanatory and Critical Commentary by G. H. S. Johnson, C. E. Elliott, and F. C. Cook, 8vo. 16/6 cl.
Burns's (Rev. S. C.) The Prophet Jonah, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Buxton's (Rev. H. J.) The Lord's Song, Plain Sermons and Hymns, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Dalton's (R. G.) Plain Words for Christ, 8vo. 2 cl.
Green's (E. E.) Lessons on the Life and Epistles of St. Paul, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Harris's (H.) Death and Resurrection, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Martin's (Abel F.) Anglican Ritualism, as seen by a Catholic and Foreigner, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Morton's (M. G. E.) The Story of Jesus for Little Children, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Pulpit Commentary: Genesis, Introduction by Canon F. W. Farrar, 8vo. 15/6 cl.
St. Augustine's Manual, or Little Book of the Contemplation of Christ, 16mo. 2/6 cl.
Wallace's (M.) Doctrine of Predestination, &c., 12mo. 2/6 cl.

Law.

- Jenkins's (J.) Laws relating to Religious Liberty and Public Worship, 8vo. 5/6 cl.

Fine Art.

- Happy Moments in Picture Land, 8vo. 4 cl.
Murray's (A. R.) History of Greek Sculpture, 8vo. 21 cl.
Our People, Sketches from Punch, by Charles Keene, 31/6 cl.
Walks through Picture Land, 8vo. 4 cl.
Wedmore's (F.) Studies in English Art, 2nd series, 7/6 cl.
Vanity Fair Album, 12th series, 6/6 cl.

Poetry.

- Langton's (R.) Records, and other Poems, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Planché's (J. R.) Songs and Poems from 1819 to 1879, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Tennyson's (A.) Ballads, and other Poems, 12mo. 3/6 cl.

Music.

- Operas of the Great Masters, illustrated by M. O. Schwind, with Explanatory Notes by Dr. Ed. Hanau, obl. fo. 21/6 cl.

Philosophy.

- Blackwood's Philosophical Classics: Descartes, by J. P. Mahaffy, 12mo. 5/6 cl.

History and Biography.

- Ashe (Major) and Edgell's (Capt. the Hon. E. V. W.) Story of the Zulu Campaign, with Map, 8vo. 16/6 cl.
Dixon's (H. W.) History of the Church of England from the Abolition of the Roman Jurisdiction, 8vo. 18/6 cl.
Duncker's (Prof. Max) History of Antiquity, from the German by E. Abbott, Vol. 4, 8vo. 21/6 cl.
Geiger's (L.) Contributions to the History of the Development of the Human Race, translated by D. Ashe, 8/6 cl.
Gilliat's (Rev. E.) The Dragonades, or Asylum Christi, 6/6 cl.
Guizot's History of France, Vol. 7, edited by Madame de Witt Guizot, royal 8vo. 24/6 cl.
Hill (Sir Rowland), Life of, and the History of Penny Postage, by Sir Rowland Hill and his Nephew, G. B. Hill, 2 vols. 8vo. 32/6 cl.
Life of Sister Rosalie, by M. le Vicomte de Melun, 3/6 cl.
Mason's (C. M.) The Forty Shires, their History, Scenery, Arts, and Legends, 8vo. 8/6 cl.
Menzies's (H.) Thirsk, Old and New, Historical, Geographical, and Statistical, 2 vols. 8vo. 32/6 cl.
Sister Augustine, Superior of the Sisters of Charity at the St. Joannis Hospital at Bonn, authorized translation, 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

- Conder's (C. R.) Tent Work in Palestine, cheap edition, 7/6 cl.
Cooper's (H. B.) Coral Land, illustrated, 3 vols. 8vo. 28/6 cl.
Gallenga's (A.) South America, 8vo. 14/6 cl.

Philology.

- Mitchell's (E. C.) Guide to the Study of the Greek New Testament, 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

- Buckley's (A. B.) Life and her Children, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Smith's (A.) Kingdom, its Diagnosis and Treatment, 3/6 cl.

General Literature.

- Adamson's (H. T.) The Three Sermons, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Ainsworth's (W. H.) Old Court, illustrated, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Besenroth's (Earl of) Endymion, 3 vols. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Boys' and Girls' Book of Science, illustrated, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Carrington's (Mrs.) Prince Fortunes and Prince Fatal, 3 vols. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Day of Rest (The), Vol. 1880, 7/6 cl.
Dickens's (C.) Flackwick Papers, 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Dowling's (R.) Under St. Paul's, 3 vols. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Fell's (A.) Gold and Gilt, or Maybee's Puzzle, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Following of the Flowers (The), or Musings in my Flower Garden, 18mo. 3/6 cl.
Francis's (B.) The Child's Zoological Gardens, 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Golden Hours, Vol. 1880, royal 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Greenup's (W. E.) Stories for Standard Six, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Gullistan (The), or Rose Garden of Sheikh Muslin'd-din Sadi of Shima, translated by E. B. Eastwick, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Hamilton's (H. L.) Holiday Times, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
History of Don Quixote de la Mancha, translated from the Spanish by Moxton, edited by Lockhart, with 16 etchings, 8vo. 4 vols. 30/6 cl.
Hogge's (James, The Strick Shepherd) Tales, Library Edition, 2 vols. 8vo. 18/6 cl.
Life and Adventures of Lazarillo de Tormes, translated by T. Roscoe, and Life and Adventures of Guzman d'Alfarache, by Mateo Altamir, from the French by J. H. Brady, with Etchings, 2 vols. 15/6 cl.
Lynton's (E. L.) With a Bilken Thread, and other Stories, 2/6 cl.
Maid Marjory, by the Author of 'Little Hinges', 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Parr's (Mrs.) Dorothy Fox, 8vo. 6/6 cl. (Bentley's Favourite Novels).
Pearce's (J.) The Merchant's Clerk, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Poor Nelly, by the Author of 'Tiny Houses', 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Randolph's (Mrs.) Little Pansy, 3 vols. 8vo. 31/6 cl.
Saunders's (J.) The Tempter Behind, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Skinner's (J.) Stock Exchange Year-Book, 1881, 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Vaughan's (E. M. C.) Finalore Pictures and Rhymes, illustrated, folio. 3/6 cl.
Verne's (J.) The Steam House: Part I, The Demon of Cawnpore, 8vo. 7/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Harvard (H.) La Hollande à Vol d'Oiseau, Baux-fortes et Gravures par Maxime Lalanne, 25fr.
Viel-Castel (H. de) Collection de Costumes, Armes, et Meubles, pour servir à l'Histoire de la Révolution Française et de l'Empire, 1789-1815, 140fr.

History.

- Gindely (A.) Geschichte des Dreissigjährigen Krieges, Part 2, 10m.
Hanserecense, Div. I, Vol. 5, 20m.

Philology.

- Forchhammer (P. E.) Die Wanderungen der Inachostochter, 10, 3m.
Telfy (J. B.) Opuscula Græca, 2m. 80.

Science.

- Aeby (C.) Der Bronchialbaum der Säugethiere u. d. Menschen, 10m.
Hoff (L. Graf) Mathematische u. Physikalische Entdeckungen, 5m.
Pierre (L.) Flora Forestière de la Cochinchine, Part 1, 30fr.
Techner (F.) Phonetik, 15m.
Vulpian (A.) L'Action Physiologique des Substances Toxiques et Médicamenteuses, Vol. 1, Part 1, 8fr.

General Literature.

- Malot (Hector) La Bohème Tapageuse, Part 3, Corymbre, 3fr.
Sainte-Beuve (C. A.) Le Clou d'Or—La Pendule, avec une Préface de M. Jules Troubat, 3fr. 50.

THE VOICE OF THE HILLS.

WHAT power is this? What witchery wins my feet
To peaks so sheer they scorn the cloaking snow,
All silent as the emerald gulfs below,
Down whose ice-walls the wings of twilight beat?
What thrill of earth and heav'n—most wild, most sweet—

What answering pulse the guardian senses know,
Comes leaping from the ruddy Eastern glow
Where, far away, the skies and mountains meet?

Mother, 'tis I once more: I know thee well,
Yet thy voice comes, an ever new surprise!
O Mother and Queen, beneath the olden spell
Of silence gazing with that deep earnestness!
Dumb Mother, struggling with the Years to tell
The secret at thy heart through helpless eyes!

THEODORE WATTS.

THE LONGEVITY OF EDITORS.

339, High Street, Edinburgh, Nov. 16, 1880.
In his "Words of Farewell" to the public by Mr. S. C. Hall, the following sentence appears: "I do not think the history of literature supplies a parallel case—that of an editor commencing a publication, continuing to edit it during forty-two years, and retiring from it when it had attained vigorous age, its value augmented, and not deteriorated, by time."

In penning these words the venerable journalist must have forgotten the existence of my uncle, Dr. William Chambers, who started Chambers's Journal nearly forty-nine years ago, and still continues to conduct that magazine with unabated energy.

While by no means disparaging Mr. S. C. Hall's long-continued literary services, I think it is only fair to my uncle and to all who are interested in the history of literature that the foregoing fact should be publicly stated.

ROBERT CHAMBERS.

THE 'QUARTERLY REVIEW' ON THE 'NEWSPAPER PRESS.'

Hall, Nov., 1880.

THE article in the last number of the Quarterly Review on 'The Newspaper Press,' although conveying a great deal of information, and better than most similar articles, is not perfect. The writer is correct in repeating that the history of the newspaper has yet to be written, and it is in order to make his own contribution of more value than I venture to make a suggestion and one or two corrections. In accounting for the great increase of British newspapers since 1834 the author mentions the repeal of the stamp duty, but makes no mention of the repeal of the paper duty and the duty on advertisements or the removal of registration difficulties. The increase of newspapers in 1861 from 562 to 1,102 was due, in part at least, to these causes, and to the abolition of the paper duty on the 1st of October in that year. More penny dailies started within a few months of that date than within a like period during the last fifty years, although it is to be remarked that several well-known provincial dailies were started just before the repeal of the paper duty took effect, simply in order to get into the field. Another circumstance that contributed to the increase of newspapers at about that period was the reduction in the price of paper consequent upon the use of esparto grass and other cheap material in its manufacture, whilst in addition the introduction of comparatively low-priced foreign paper had much to do in stimulating newspaper enterprise. The general extension of railways and the application of telegraphy to news are also circumstances which cannot be overlooked in considering the subject of the development of the newspaper press.

In referring to the improvements in the mechanical processes of printing, the writer is considerably behind events in his description of stereotyping. The heating of the "forms" for taking the matrix has been abandoned in many offices, and will be abandoned by all the others before long, as that process injures the type, and is attended by other disadvantages. There are now several processes of cold stereotyping. In my office that patented by Messrs. Byles & Allan has been in use for nearly twelve months. By this process the matrix is taken from the "forms" cold and dried in an oven. In the Daily News and some other offices it is dried on a heated surface.

Passing to a somewhat different branch of the subject, the reviewer in noticing the Central Press, originated by Messrs. Saunders & Spender, the proprietors of the Western Morning News, for the purpose of supplying that paper with London and general news, is quite right in saying that it was carried on at the corner of Charles Street, Hatton Garden; but he is wrong in saying that a change of owners led to the removal of the business to 112, Strand, the office of the Globe. No. 112 was never the office of the Globe, but of the Sun during many years of Mr. Murdo Young's proprietorship and that of his successor, Mr. Charles Kent. Mr. Spender's connexion with the Central Press from an early date in its existence was simply editorial. The Central Press was removed from Hatton Garden for the convenience of the business, and at 112, Strand, the Sun was for some time published by Mr. Saunders, the proprietor of the Central Press before, as the reviewer says, the "Central Press became the pro-party of a committee of Conservatives." The news collection and telegraphing portion of the business was separate from the supplying of newspapers with news in MS. and stereotype, and was carried on by Mr. Saunders at No. 2, Telegraph Street. The Central News is the continuation and extension of this service. Mr. Saunders was one of the founders of the Press Association, but separated from it because he did not consider that it attached sufficient importance to the collection and distribution of general news—that is, news from all parts of the United Kingdom. The wisdom of this view has been amply justified by the result. The Central News business has grown from the first, and had to remove from Telegraph Street to 107, Fleet Street. It is now located in Ludgate Circus and in the hands of a limited liability company, consisting of Mr. Saunders and those who have worked for him in the development of the business. In addition to providing London and general news, supplied by some hundreds of correspondents in all parts of the kingdom, it sends reporters and correspondents to every place at home and abroad where events of public interest are occurring. Thus the Central News correspondents were in South Africa during the war, with the Prince of Wales in India, in North Wales directly after the last great colliery explosion, and they are now in Ireland reporting the present crisis. This agency has recently commenced an interchange of news between England and America, sending and receiving news regularly to and from the United States. It had previously supplied news to continental and colonial papers.

As regards the Press Association, the reviewer puts it that it was "launched" under the exclusive care of Mr. John Lovell. This was hardly so. The builder launches the ship, and he was not the builder, but rather the able and clever captain who has sailed it with as much of skill and smartness and tact that cannot be over-estimated. The Press Association originated thus: so far back as 1864 newspaper proprietors began to be so much dissatisfied with the supply of telegraphic news by the telegraph companies that meetings were held to discuss the situation, and in that year the leading Scottish papers associated to seek an improvement. In 1866 and 1867 this movement was extended to England, and meetings of daily newspaper proprietors in England, Ireland, and Scotland were held in Manchester and London. I was present, and a party to these meetings, and therefore write from personal knowledge. The companies' service of news was deemed wholly unsatisfactory. Mr. J. E. Taylor, of the Manchester Guardian, presided on several occasions. Amongst other proposals submitted to us was one for the erection of wires all over the country for the use of the press, and I remember a civil engineer reporting on the subject. In 1868, however, the acquirement of the telegraphs by the Government came to be regarded as feasible, and newspaper proprietors began to hope for relief in that direction, and after conferring together they gave evidence before Parliament and otherwise worked for that end. When it became evident that the Government would take the telegraphs and send news which the newspaper proprietors themselves collected, the Manchester meetings turned their attention to the collection of news. Thus the foundation of the Press Association was primarily laid at a meeting at the United Hotel, Haymarket, London, in July, and still more formally at the Palatine Hotel, Manchester, on the 15th of September, 1868, at which the following gentlemen were present: J. E. Taylor and P. Allen, Manchester Guardian; J. Fowler, Manchester Courier; A. Ireland, Manchester Examiner; J. Matland, Liverpool Mercury; J. Law, Nottingham; W. Saunders, Northern Daily Express; A. Ritchie, Leeds Mercury; W. Hunt, Eastern Morning News, Hull; A. Feeny, Birmingham Post; and F. D. Finlay, Northern Whig, Belfast. Under this arrangement a secretary, Mr. Irvine, was appointed, and an office opened at 112, Strand; and in the Newspaper Press for December 1st, 1868, we read: "The organization of the new Press Association (Limited) is progressing favourably. The first members are Messrs. Taylor, of the Manchester Guardian; Jaffray, of the Birmingham Daily Post; Saunders, of the Northern Daily Express; Harper, of the Huddersfield Chronicle; Clifford, of the Sheffield Telegraph; Wescomb, of the Edinburgh Courier; Ireland, of the Manchester Examiner; Fowler, of the Manchester Courier. The Board of Directors comprises the same names, to which are added Dr. Cameron, of the North British Mail; Sir John Gray, M.P., of the Dublin Freeman's Journal; F. D. Finlay, of the Northern Whig; Belfast; J. Glover, of the Royal Leamington Spa Courier; and B. W. Naylor, of the Cambridge Chronicle. The Committee of Management consists of Messrs. Taylor, Jaffray, Saunders, Harper, and Clifford." It was after this (in October, 1868) that the committee advertised for a manager. Mr. Lovell, who was then with Messrs. Cassell, Potter & Galpin, was one of the many applicants. The other strongest men were Mr. Dymond, late editor of the Morning Star, and Mr. J. M. Le Sage, of the Daily Telegraph. Mr. Lovell was appointed manager and entered upon the duties, and, as the reviewer remarks, conducted the business with great ability and excellent judgment until a few months since, when he joined the Liverpool Mercury as its editor. For some years previous to the spring of 1868 Mr. Lovell had been connected with the Birmingham Daily Post, and was well known to Mr. Jaffray, who was a diligent and influential member of the Press Association Committee. Your readers will admit, I think, that these facts help to make the reviewer's article of increased value as a contribution to the much-desired history of the newspaper.

WILLIAM HUNT.

THE BIOGRAPHER OF LOCKE.

99, Southview Gardens, Nov. 15, 1880.

I ANTICIPATED the tenor as well as the tone of Mr. Fox Bourne's answer to my remarks in the Athenæum of November 6th, which are quite in accordance with my previous experience of his accuracy and his courtesy.

The "points on which he touches" are, however, simple matters of fact and not questions of memory, and I repeat most emphatically, what I can readily verify, that Mr. Fox Bourne "had the benefit of all my private notes and memoranda" while writing his 'Life of Locke.' True, I had collected most of these from our State Papers and other sources which are open to any one; but the search and discovery of them cost many hours of my own private time, for I hoped, as before stated, to gratify an "ambition" to write myself a life of the great philosopher.

My giving up these notes to Mr. Fox Bourne, and my rendering him assistance "in clearing away difficulties, identifying handwritings, and such other work as his long and wide acquaintance with manuscripts made easy to him" (these are Mr. Fox Bourne's own words), must have been a very great saving of time and labour to him, even if he knew where to find the MS. materials he made use of, which he certainly did not.

Mr. Fox Bourne—who has himself been one of those officials of whom he now so courteously speaks—knows very well without my telling him, and your readers will, I am sure, discriminate whether such "duties" require any acknowledgment simply because they are performed by a public official. At all events, I can conscientiously assert that, during thirty-three years of official life, Mr. Fox Bourne is the one solitary instance of any want of courtesy to myself, and therefore, I suppose, I have thought the more about it; nevertheless, I should not have intruded upon the columns of the Athenæum had not Mr. Fox

Bourne made accusations in them against Prof. Fowler which I submit can more justly be made against Mr. Fox Bourne himself.

While thanking you for allowing my remarks to appear in the columns of the Athenæum, I wish to add that it is not my intention to again encroach upon them in reference to this subject, of which I suspect your readers have already had quite enough.

W. NOEL SALISBURY.

A COPY OF 'QUEEN MAB.'

48, Marlborough Street, Nov. 16, 1880.

THE copy of 'Queen Mab' mentioned in your issue of the 13th inst. has no bearing on the question (scarcely a question) whether Medwin and Middleton described one and the same book. The copy now lying at Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's rooms is, so far as the manuscript marks are concerned, a simple transcript of the volume described in my appendix to which you refer. The writing is not Mrs. Shelley's, and does not bear the faintest resemblance to Mrs. Shelley's. I cannot at this moment say whose it is: but whoever performed the task of transcription was a very painstaking person, for all the erasures, queries, numberings, and even faces drawn by Shelley, are carefully reproduced. The transcriber has tried to place every manuscript mark in its exact position, but has made no attempt to disguise his handwriting, which could probably be identified if it were thought worth while. I shall be happy to show the original to any one who may become possessed of this transcript.

H. BUXTON FORMAN.

SALES.

THE sale of a portion of the extensive library of Mr. William Bragge, F.R.S., was commenced on Wednesday, November 10th, at the rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, and concluded last Saturday with a collection of liturgical manuscripts from the Cistercian Abbey of Chiaravalle, near Milan. Amongst the rarer articles were the following: Bible in German, printed in 1483 by Koburger, 17l. Heures d'Anne de Bretagne, 25l.; Goya's Etchings, 17l. 10s.; Mouradja d'Ohason, Tableau de l'Empire Ottoman, vols. i. and ii., on large paper, 30l. 10s.; Paris Saep. Caricatures, 25l.; Roberts's Holy Land, 20l. 10s.; Fry's Reprint of Tyndale's First Testament, on vellum, 13l. 10s., &c. Most of the Cistercian manuscripts brought high prices, e.g., Missale Cisterciense, 17l. 5s.; Graduale Cisterciense, 15l. 10s.; Graduale Cartusianense, printed in 1578, on vellum, 51l.; Antiphonarium Romanum, 17l.; Apocalypsis cum Commentario Pascani, 12l., &c. The entire sale produced 1,804l. 16s. 6d.

The sale, at Messrs. Hodgson's rooms, of the entire stock, copyrights, and plant of Messrs. W. Tegg & Co., which we mentioned last week, presents some features of interest to the publishing and bookselling world. The stereotype plates and copyright, irrespective of the stock, of Dr. Adam Clarke's well-known Commentary on the Old and New Testaments, in 6 vols., imperial 8vo., was knocked down for 1,100l., the sum originally paid for the copyright only by the late Mr. Thomas Tegg being 6,500l. The "Family Library," originally published by Mr. Murray at five shillings per volume, comprising 16,129 volumes, realized only 180l., the woodcuts and casts of the series not being sold. The stereotype plates and steel plates of Albert Smith's Christopher Tadpole, not including copyright, were knocked down at 40l. The stereotype plates, the stock being sold separately, of King's Interest Tables realized 206l. Hone's Works, consisting of a small stock of oddments and the stereotype plates and woodblocks, produced 510l. The less important lots may be said, on the whole, to have produced fair prices.

NOTES FROM CAMBRIDGE.

Cambridge, Nov. 17, 1880.

ALTHOUGH the Senate's rejection of the report of the "Greek Syndicate" has been announced in the daily papers, a few details may have an interest for your academic readers. It will be remembered that the report, together with selections from the evidence collected from schoolmasters and others, was circulated and discussed in the May term. After the long vacation no material addition was made to the arguments on either side. On the part of the agitators it was still urged that the existing obligation to satisfy the examiners in the Previous Examination or Little Go in two dead languages excludes from the university many young men educated either in modern schools or in the modern departments and classes of classical schools, to the serious injury not only of the universities, which are deprived of promising students, but also of the students themselves, who lose the advantage of an academic training, and of the schools and departments of schools which are left beyond the range of the universities' influence. On the other side it was still argued that in the interests of learning it is necessary that the study of Greek should be artificially encouraged; that to all students, and especially to students in theology, the modicum of Greek which is required in the Previous Examination is valuable in a degree disproportionate to its amount; and that, even in the case of boys who do not proceed to the universities, there would be a serious educational loss if Greek, being no longer indispensable at Oxford and Cambridge, were to drop out of the curriculum of schools in which it is now taught. Neither last term nor this has the proposal to establish a "scientific degree" found much favour here, as we cannot bring ourselves to regard mathematics as art or as science, according as it is or is not accompanied by a smattering of Greek.

Till the very day of the Congregation many of the reformers continued to be sanguine of success. It was thought that the practice of bringing up non-residents, often not specially versed in academic questions, to overpower the resident vote had, in educational matters at all events, fallen into disuse. The non-residents, however, mustered in force, and although a few of them, schoolmasters or parents of boys who had hoped to take advantage of the proposed relaxation, had come to support the Syndicate's scheme, a very large majority took their seats on the "non-placet" side of the Senate House. With our curious method of voting, which is as slovenly as it is tedious, it is impossible to construct any exact analysis of the votes; but there can be no doubt that the academic residents who voted in the minority far outnumbered the academic residents who voted in the majority. I conjecture that the academic residents who voted for the report were at least twice as many as the academic residents who voted against it; even with the addition of the non-academic residents, the report would, in the absence of the strangers, have been confirmed.

It has been said that "the classicists" formed a considerable element in the majority. If the term is taken to include all who attach a great value to a small knowledge of Greek, it may of course be applied to all who voted in the majority. But if it is restricted either to the teachers of classics or to those who have taken high degrees in classics, the statement is most certainly erroneous. A very large majority of the classical teachers and of the classical first-class men who voted on Thursday were on the defeated side, and it may be worth while to note that in the list of the memorialists classical learning is well represented, and that of the twelve syndics who signed the report, seven are first-class men in classics, and either are or have been classical teachers.

I observe that some of your contemporaries condemn the details of the report. The relaxation, they say, should have been granted to pass men as well as to honour men, and the substitute for the dead language omitted should have been one modern language, not two. It is fair to say that four of the syndics limited their assent to the principle of the report, and that, had the result of the vote upon the principle been different, many of the members of the Senate who supported the principle would have voted against the details of the scheme. X.

Literary Gossip.

THE coming week will be unusually interesting from a literary point of view, as Lord Beaconsfield's novel and the Laureate's poems will both be published before Saturday next. 'Ballads and other Poems' is the title of Mr. Tennyson's volume. It will contain ballads, sonnets, and translations. 'The First Quarrel' is the title of the opening piece.

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S new tale, which will fill the orthodox three volumes, as 'Lothair' did ten years ago, commences in the years immediately preceding the first Reform Bill, and covers a space of about a quarter of a century. The chief characters are said to be the young Endymion and his sister Myra. The trade has already subscribed for seven thousand copies. This is among the many signs of improvement in the book-selling world. Another is that the entire impression of Mr. Charles Keene's pictures from Punch entitled 'Our People' has been taken up. Sir Gavan Duffy's book has also gone off well.

A new edition of Mr. Matthew Arnold's poems is in the press. May we express a hope that some poems omitted in the last "complete" issue will find their place—such, especially, as 'Men of Genius,' which appeared in the Cornhill many years ago?

IN the new instalment of Mr. Meredith's story, 'The Tragic Comedians,' he has added a second title, "a new version of an old story." It may be interesting information to some of our readers that the old story referred to is the tragic end of Ferdinand Lassalle, the great Socialist leader. We reviewed last year "Clothilde's" version of the affair.

THE third and fourth volumes of Mr. T. H. Ward's 'English Poets' will appear in about a fortnight. Vol. iii. goes from Addison to Blake, and thus covers the whole of the eighteenth century; vol. iv. begins with Wordsworth, and goes down to Sidney Dobell. Among the contributors may be mentioned Mr. Matthew Arnold, who has dealt at some length with Gray and Keats; Mr. Swinburne, who has taken Collins; Mr. Mark Pattison, who treats of Pope; Dean Church, who has written on Wordsworth; Dean Stanley, who deals with the Wesleys and Keble; Lord Houghton, who deals with Landor; Mr. Goldwin Smith, who writes on Scott; and Sir Henry Taylor, who has treated Southey, Rogers, and Campbell. To Mr. J. A. Symonds has been assigned Byron; to Mr. Pater, Coleridge; to Mr. Frederic Myers, Shelley; to Mr. Courthope, Addison, Johnson, and Crabbe; to Mr. Comyns Carr, Blake; to Mr. Gosse, Lady Winchelsea, Moore, Beddoes, and Emily Brontë, with some minors auctores; to Mr. Austin Dobson, Prior, Gay, Hood, and Præd; to Prof. Nichol, Swift and Dobell; to Mr. Saintsbury, Thomson, Blair, and Young; to Prof. Minto, Allan Ramsay and the Scotch song-writers who preceded Burns; to Mr. W. E. Henley, John Byrom and Kingsley; to Miss Mary Robinson, Mrs. Hemans and some others. Mr. Theodore Watts has written on Chatterton; Dr. Service, of Glasgow, on Fergusson and Burns; Mr. W. T. Arnold on Mrs. Browning; and the editor on Cowper and Clough.

M. ÉMILE DE LAURENT will publish shortly a volume embodying his views on the agrarian question in Ireland.

Mrs. GOSWICK, already known as a writer on German literature, is preparing for publication a book entitled 'German Culture and Christianity.' It is intended to give in outline a history of the main controversy in which, for more than a century, German culture—especially in philosophy and Biblical criticism—has been engaged in opposition to certain Christian tenets. The chief aim of the book is to show that the attack, masked at times by various auxiliary movements, has always been directed mainly against the central tenet of Christianity. The history begins shortly before the time of Lessing, and ends with the date 1880.

Messrs. MACMILLAN & Co. have in the press and will shortly publish, under the title of 'The Life's Work in Ireland of a Landlord who tries to do his Duty,' a collection of papers bearing upon the Irish Land Question, which have been contributed during the last twenty years to various newspapers and periodicals by Mr. W. Bence Jones, of Lisselan. The volume will include the two articles which have appeared during the present year in Macmillan's Magazine.

A DAUGHTER of Mr. Frith, the well-known R.A., is going to publish a volume of poems. A son of Dr. Charles Mackay is treading in his father's footsteps, and has just brought out a volume of verse, to which, however, he does not put his real name. Dr. Mackay himself is writing a pamphlet called 'The Liberal Party: its Present Position and Future Prospects,' which will be published shortly.

Messrs. GEORGE BELL & SONS are about to publish an illustrated work on 'Book-binding of all Ages,' in which examples will be given from the libraries of Maioli, Grolier, Henry II. and Dians of Poitiers, President de Thou, and other noted collectors. It will also contain specimens of the workmanship of various noted binders. The work is edited by Mr. Joseph Cundall, who read his first essay on bookbinding at the Society of Arts just thirty-three years ago.

Mr. WEMYSS REID, the editor of the Leeds Mercury, who has just returned from a visit to the East, is now publishing the result of his inquiries into the political situation in a series of articles under the title of 'The Turks of To-day.'

Messrs. T. & T. CLARK will publish in December 'The Incarnate Saviour: a Life of Jesus Christ,' by the Rev. W. E. Nicoll, M.A. The new life will give special prominence to the Incarnation and Atonement.

UNDER the title of 'In the Derbyshire Highlands,' Mr. E. Bradbury has in the press a volume of sketches descriptive of the wild and picturesque parts of the Peak country that lie out of the beaten tourist track.

THE death is announced at an advanced age of Mr. Daniell, a well-known bookseller at Uppingham, who for many years wrote a 'Poor Richard's Almanack.'

MR. RASAM has returned to Momboul from Van.

M. CROWLSON, of St. Petersburg, has prepared for publication a collection of Hebrew inscriptions in the square character, with the sepulchral inscriptions found in the Crimea and elsewhere.

THE issue of typographical and illustrated works of a costly and "luxurious" character is as yet too perilous an enterprise in Spain to be of frequent occurrence. Publishers are chary of risking capital in such speculations. Still, the presses of Madrid and Barcelona have turned out illustrated works of considerable artistic as well as typographical merit. It is proposed to publish at Madrid an edition of some of the poems of Señor Nuñez de Arce, illustrated by Domingo, Jimenez y Aranda (José), Raimundo Madrazo, Melida, Palmeroli, Plasencia, Pradilla, and Sala y Viera. The poems proposed for illustration will be 'Miserere,' 'La Selva Oscura,' 'La Vision de Fray Martin,' 'La Lamentacion de Lord Byron,' and others inedited. It is also proposed to issue the poem of Campoamor entitled 'El Rio Piedra,' illustrated by Villegas. It is to be hoped that these attempts to unite the sister arts may prove such a success as to induce further ventures in the same direction.

DR. HAUPT, of Göttingen, is preparing a Reader of the Sumerian or Accadian cuneiform inscriptions.

THE first part of the fifth volume of 'The Cuneiform Inscriptions of Western Asia,' consisting of thirty-five lithographic plates, is almost ready for issue.

SCIENCE

The Zoological Record for 1878. Edited by J. C. Rye, F.Z.S. (Van Nostrand.)

WE are sorry to learn from the preface to this volume that Mr. Rye's time is now so much occupied that he will be unable in future to undertake the large share of the 'Record' relating to the Insecta, which has hitherto been prepared by him with so much advantage to entomologists. In the present part he undertakes the Coleoptera only, and next year the whole Insecta will be divided between Mr. W. F. Kirby, of the British Museum, and Mr. McLachlan, F.R.S., who, as usual, reports on the Neuroptera and Orthoptera. The work on the Arachnida is omitted from the present volume, but will be recorded in the next issue. Steps are being taken by the Zoological Record Association to expedite the publication of the annual volume, and if possible to bring out the record of one year's work during the succeeding year. It is confidently expected that the 'Record' of 1879 will be published in the beginning of 1881, notwithstanding the necessary gradual increase in bulk of the Records year by year. Mr. E. R. Alston, the zoological secretary of the Linnean Society, records as especially to be noted amongst the separate works on Mammalia published during the year 1878, Dobson's 'Catalogue of the Chiroptera,' the first parts of Elliot's 'Monograph of the Felidae,' and Feilden's appendices to Sir G. S. Nares's 'Voyage to the Polar Sea.' Mr. Howard Saunders contributes the part on birds, Mr. O'Shaughnessy that on reptiles, which by some extraordinary oversight is made to include the Amphibia. It is, indeed, startling to find at this period of the nineteenth century the Batrachia ranged with the crocodiles, snakes, and turtles under the heading Reptilia. Prof. von Martens records as to the Mollusca and Crustacea, and, as usual, pays more attention to embryology and general biology than his colleagues. Amongst the Crustacea may be noted as one of the most important results recorded the confirmation, by P. Mayer, of Mr. J. F. Buller's curious discovery that in the Cymothoidae each individual is in its early stage male and afterwards female. Prof. Jeffrey Bell reports on the Vermes; Prof. Lütken on the Echinodermata and Coelenterata; and Mr. J. O. Ridley, of the British Museum, on the Sponges and Protozoa.

Studies from the Morphological Laboratory in the University of Cambridge. Edited by F. M. Balfour, F.R.S. (Williams & Norgate.)

THIS publication consists of various papers on animal development, reprinted from the Quarterly Journal of Microscopical Science and the Proceedings of the Cambridge Philosophical Society. Three of the papers contained in it are by the indefatigable editor himself, and a fourth by him in conjunction with one of his pupils. The value of his researches is too well known to need comment here. He has made for himself a world-wide reputation amongst biologists. All the papers, however, embody valuable observations of a novel character, and, taken as a whole, they testify to the importance of the additions to the knowledge of animal morphology contributed at Mr. Balfour's laboratory. Mr. Adam Sedgwick contributes three papers to the work; and another, 'On the Early Development of the Common Newt,' is by two American naturalists who have been studying under Mr. Balfour, Messrs. W. R. Scott and H. F. Osborn, of Princeton, New Jersey.

Blackie's Comprehensive School Series.—Animal Physiology. Book I. (Blackie & Son.)

THIS little anonymous work is intended as a school-book for the use of children preparing to satisfy the requirements of H.M. inspectors in the special subject, animal physiology. It is misnamed, since it treats almost entirely of human anatomy, and only secondarily of physiology. The woodcuts are very good, and the names of the various bones, &c., are printed on them in red, which makes matters very plain. The pamphlet is, on the whole, satisfactory, but not without errors. It is annoying to find the spinal cord described as consisting of whitish marrow, and as extending down the whole length of the vertebral column, and to find the elephant, horse, sheep, rhinoceros, and ox placed together as a class of animals. The usual picture of the distortion of the ribs by tight-lacing is given, and no opportunity of inculcating moral lessons is lost. It is, however, quite labour lost to teach boys that cracking nuts and biting anything hard should be avoided, as well as too many sweets; and we fear girls will hardly be deterred from beautifying themselves by the picture of the misshapen thorax.

COL. PRJEVALSKY happily reached Urga at the beginning of this month. In the course of last summer he surveyed a portion of the basin of the Upper Hoang-ho and the environs of the Kuku Nor. On his return journey he once more passed through Alashan.

Herr R. E. Flegel, instead of at once going up the Binus, will first explore the Niger as far as Say, and visit Sokoto and Kuka. The latter town he will make his basis of exploration, and his principal object will be to determine whether there exists any communication between the Shari and Binus, which would enable steamers of small draught to reach Lake Chad. The presumption is against such a connexion, and we much regret that want of means should have prevented Herr Flegel from carrying out his original plan of exploring the Upper Binus.

J. M. Larsson's Karta öfver Sverige-Norge, Danmark och Finland (Stockholm, Hjalmar Linnströms Förlag), is drawn on a scale of 1:3,000,000, with inset maps of the more densely-peopled portions of Scandinavia on an enlarged scale, and an index of 3,000 names. It is evidently based upon trustworthy materials, and if its somewhat too gaudy colouring be offensive to an æsthetic mind, it certainly helps to render clear the political divisions. There are no altitudes, and the delineation of the hills leaves much to be desired, but for general purposes of reference the map will prove useful.

Corn's Cosmos publishes a lengthy report on Dr. Hayden's explorations in the Rocky Mountains, accompanied by a neat map of the Yellowstone Lake.

The first part of the Boletín de la Comisión del Mapa Geológico de España is published. It contains a geological survey of the province of Cordova, a 'Nota Geológica referente á la Isla de Tenerife,' 'Reseña Física y Geológica de las Islas Ibiza y Formentera,' and 'Formación Cretácea de la Provincia de Oviedo,' with descriptions of fossils. The lithographed plates which illustrate the fossils are remarkably well executed.

The Comprehensive Atlas of Modern, Historical, Classical, and Physical Geography (Collins & Co.) consists of one hundred and twenty maps, and is prefaced by a treatise on physical geography by Dr. James Bryce, and followed by an index of 50,000 names. The maps have been published before, but this edition of them possesses an undoubted advantage above previous ones, inasmuch as the maps have been enlarged by photo-lithography, and are thus much easier to decipher. Unfortunately Messrs. Collins have neglected to get their maps and letter-press revised by some competent person and brought up to date. Even in their own neighbourhood, in Western Scotland, the publishers fail to give the information we have a right to expect. On the railway map of Scotland we look in vain for the new Highland line to Oban, opened last season, and if thus untrustworthy on their own ground, what can be expected in the case of foreign countries! There is a physical map of Africa which altogether ignores the discoveries of Stanley and Cameron! These physical maps more especially require careful revision. They are supposed to indicate by brown and green tints the extent of "Highlands" and "Lowlands." These, of course, are somewhat elastic terms, and it would have been better to adopt a contour of a given height as a line of separation. But what are we to think of the compiler of the map of Asia, who covers Lake Balkash, which undoubtedly forms part of the "lowlands," notwithstanding its being close upon 800 feet above the level of the sea, with a brown tint, whilst he buries the lofty mountains which are close to the eastern shore of the Caspian under a tint of green! The atlas is certainly handsome in appearance; it will form a useful drawing-room ornament, and prove of service in numerous instances; but until its maps have been carefully revised we cannot recommend it.

Mr. Alex. Forrest's Journal of Expedition from De Grey to Port Darwin has been published at Perth, Western Australia, by the Government of that colony. It is in the form of a Blue-Book in boards, with coloured lithographs of scenery and incidents of travel, and a large map. Fine grassy tracts were discovered along the course of the Fitzroy river, and Mr. Forrest believes that "auriferous areas will be discovered sooner or later" towards the head of that river. The views of King Leopold Range convey a fair idea of rocky hills as rugged, tortuous, and difficult as a mountaineer or cragman could desire.

NOTES FROM TOKIO.

ABOUT the middle of last year the Athenæum mentioned the establishment in Tokio of a Japanese Geographical Society. It may interest many of your readers to learn that the infant institution has passed through its first year with considerable success. The report which has recently been issued shows that there are now 143 members, of whom about half a dozen are foreign residents. The number and amount of donations and voluntary subscriptions show the warm interest which the wealthy and influential class take in the objects of the society. As one of the "signs of the times," it may be mentioned that the largest donation is made by the head of one of the Buddhist sects.

The Transactions of the year are contained in ten small pamphlets, which, if bound together, would form a very respectable volume. The event of greatest general interest during the year was the banquet to Baron Nordenskiöld and Capt. Palander, under the auspices of the society. A complete report of the proceedings on this occasion, together with an account of the Vega's voyage, occupies one of the numbers. Turning to the papers, we find, as might have been expected, that they deal chiefly with the geography of the countries of the extreme east of Asia. Among the principal are travels in Manchuria and Mongolia, the extent of China under the Yuen dynasty, the official system of China, Russian harbours on the Pacific (translated from Col. Venjukoff's work), the geography and history of the Loochoo archipelago. The papers, however, which, if translated, would doubtless prove of most interest in England are those on Corea, of which there are four. Our knowledge of the geography of this, the last of the isolated kingdoms of the remote Orient, is confined to the meagre accounts of the few Jesuit missionaries who have succeeded in escaping from the country, more especially to Monsignor Ridel, whose pamphlet, published after his recent release from captivity, is little known beyond his own order. The Japanese are the only people at present permitted to reside in Corea, and they seem to be using diligently their opportunities for adding to our knowledge of that strange country. Z.

SOCIETIES.

ASTRONOMICAL.—Nov. 12.—Prof. Cayley, V.P., in the chair.—Messrs. H. A. Severn, H. F. Cobb, and the Rev. F. B. Allison were elected Fellows.—The Astronomer-Royal described an instrument of Flamsteed's, of which he possessed an engraving that appeared to be unique. He stated that he believed this instrument marked an epoch in the history of astronomy. Before the invention of clocks which could be relied upon for the determination of time over periods of a day or longer, right ascensions had to be measured by the triangulation of stars; there was never any difficulty in determining the polar distances of stars with a graduated arc in the meridian. Having determined the polar distances of two stars, the distance between them was measured with a movable arc, and the difference of right ascension found by calculation. Tycho possessed an instrument for measuring such distances, but it was only provided with sights, and it was mounted on a vertical axis. The instrument of Flamsteed's was mounted on a polar axis, which projected beyond its bearings. On the top of the axis was a movable T head, carrying the graduated arc with two telescopes. The movable T head could be inclined by a rack and screw motion, so as to enable the observer to measure the distance between two stars which differed in declination. The instrument was only used for determining the places of the principal stars, and a clock which would go pretty well for some hours was used for determining the difference of right ascensions of smaller stars as measured from the larger ones. Flamsteed was succeeded by Halley, who relied entirely upon the places of principal stars as determined by Flamsteed, and filled up the interstices by means of observations made with a curious transit instrument, with axes of unequal length. The great reform in the method of determining the positions of stars was brought about by Graham, the clockmaker, who invented the dead-beat escapement and the gridiron pendulum, which enabled right ascensions to be determined all round the heavens

by observing the times of transit with a meridian instrument.—Mr. Knott read a paper entitled 'Observations of Ceraick's new Variable Star in Cepheus.' The star is of the Algol type, and comes to its minimum every two and a half days; it remains constant in brightness for the greater part of the period, and then suddenly decreases in brightness, remaining for a short time at its minimum brightness, and then rapidly increases again.—Mr. Common read a paper on the method of mounting his great 3-ft. reflecting telescope.—Mr. E. J. Stone read a paper 'On a Determination of the Coefficient of the Parallactic Inequality in the Expression for the Moon's Longitude'; and Capt. Noble read a note 'On a Phenomenon of Jupiter's Satellites.' He mentioned that on recently observing the planet when the shadows of two satellites were projected upon the disc, he had noticed that one of the shadows was of a chocolate brown colour, while the other appeared perfectly black.—Mr. Campbell corroborated Capt. Noble's observation with respect to the difference in tint of the two shadows.

ASIATIC.—Nov. 15.—Sir H. C. Rawlinson, President, in the chair.—Sir W. R. Robinson, Mr. S. S. Thorburn, Capt. R. Gilt, R.E., and the Rev. M. Argles were elected Resident Members; and the Bishop of Lahore, Lieut. H. E. McCallum, Dr. S. W. Bushell, and Abd-er-rahman Nouvie Syed Non-Resident Members.—Prof. Monier Williams read a paper 'On Indian Theistic Reformers.'

LINNEAN.—Nov. 4.—Prof. Alliman, F.R.S., President, in the chair.—Messrs. Edw. Brown, H. E. Dresser, and F. Phipps were elected Fellows of the Society.—Mr. H. C. Sorby showed drawings of some British sea anemones, with habitat on the upper fronds of long seaweeds in deep water; and he recorded having seen a solitary cream-coloured Cetacean on the English coast.—Mr. Arthur Bennett drew attention to a new British Chara (C. stelligera), remarkable for the presence of stellate bulbils on the stems.—Mr. E. M. Holmes exhibited two marine Algae new to Britain, viz., Darya Gibberna from Barwick-on-Tweed and Elcecarpus terminalis from Weymouth; and also species of Callithamnion with antheridia and trichophore on the same branchlet. Prof. T. S. Cobbold exhibited a remarkable Trematode from the horse, discovered by Dr. Sonnini at Zagazig during the Egyptian plague, with which outbreak, however, the parasite had no necessary connexion. The worm (Gastroduca Sonnini) appears to be an aberrant Amphistome furnished with a singular central disc, whose concavity was lined with about two hundred small suckers, altogether having a tessellated aspect. In this respect its nearest approach was a worm infesting a genus of spiny-finned fishes (Cataphractus) belonging to the Triglidae. According to Prof. Leuckart's recent anatomical investigation doubts, however, are thrown on its amphistomid affinities.—Mr. G. F. Angus showed the leaf of Illecebre gigantea, an umbelliferous plant of the Cape, used as tinder by the Hottentots.—Mr. E. A. Webb exhibited a monstrous bramble (Rubus fruticosus), with flowers represented by elongated axes covered with minute pubescent bracts and apices fasciated.—A paper by Dr. Geo. Watt, 'Contribution to the Flora of North-West India,' was read. He divides the district into three areas. The first range, Havel-Baan, with forests of Odrus decandrus on its northern slopes, has on the southern ones vegetation with an Indian facies, being barely outside the humid influence of the tropical rains of the plains. The second range, comprising Pangt, Lower Lahore, and British Lahore, has a flora altogether changed, dry short summers and snow-capped mountains giving a climate and plant life of quite a different cast. In the third range the flora assumes a Tibetan type. Some three hundred species of plants are noted, four being new.—A paper 'On the Laphnoidæ of South Australia,' by J. G. Otto Tepper, was read. The butterflies of this part of Australia are comparatively few, and sombre colours prevail.—Notes on a Collection of Flowering Plants from Madagascar was read by Mr. J. G. Baker. The flowering plants are less known than the ferns from this interesting island; two new genera are now denoted, viz., 1. Kitchingia, belonging to the Crassulaceæ, a succulent herb with fleshy sessile leaves and large bright red flowers in lax terminal cymes; 2. Buddwoodon, a lilaceous plant with red flowers and peculiar spurred bracts; it comes between Muscaria and Urginea. Thirty new species are described.

MATHEMATICAL.—Nov. 11.—C. W. Merrifield, Esq., President, in the chair.—After the Treasurer's and Secretaries' Reports had been read and adopted, the meeting proceeded to the election of the new Council.—Mr. G. Roberts, the new President, having taken the chair, Mr. Merrifield read his valedictory address, 'Considerations respecting the Translation of Series of Observations into Continuous Formulae.' On the motion of Prof. Cayley the address was ordered to be published in the Proceedings.—Mr. H. M. Jeffery read a paper 'On Bieircular Quartics, with a Triple and Double Focus and Three Single Foci, all of them Collinear.'—Mr. Tucker read parts of a paper by the Rev. C. Taylor, entitled 'Further Remarks on the Geometrical Method of Barycentrics.'

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Nov. 9.—Dr. E. B. Tylor, President, in the chair.—A paper was read 'On Anthropological Colour Phenomena in Belgium and Elsewhere,' by Dr. J. Beddoe. Within the last few years the numerical method had been extensively applied to the determination of ethnological colour-types, the Anthropometric Committee of the British Association having set the example. The continental nations were, however, now far ahead of us. In Germany Prof. Virchow had prepared the tabulation as to the colour of the eyes and hair of all the school population, with the exception of Hamburg, which had proved Philistine in this matter as in so many other instances. In Switzerland Dr. Guillemin, of Neuchâtel, had obtained school statistics. For Belgium an elaborate monograph had been written on the subject by Prof. Vander Kindere, who, by the aid of the National Geographical Society, had induced the Minister of Public Instruction to include questions on the colour of the children's eyes and hair in the educational census. The results obtained have been of considerable importance, and bring out a remarkable contrast between the Flemish and Walloon provinces of Belgium.—Mr. J. F. Rowbotham read a paper 'On Different Stages in the Development of the Art of Music in Prehistoric Times.' Musical instruments, though their varieties may be counted by hundreds, are yet readily reducible under three distinct types: 1. The drum type; 2. The pipe type; 3. The lyre type; and these three types are representative of three distinct stages of development through which prehistoric music passed. Moreover, the stages occur in the order named; that is to say, the first stage in the development of instrumental music was the drum stage, in which drums and drums alone were used by men; the second stage was the pipe stage, in which pipes as well as drums were used, the third stage was the lyre stage, in which stringed instruments were added to the stock. The three stages answer respectively to rhythm, melody, and harmony. And as the geological history of the globe the chalk is never found below the coelites nor the oolite below the coal, so in the musical history of mankind is the lyre stage never found to precede the pipe stage, nor the pipe stage to precede the drum stage.—A paper was read 'On Neolithic Implements in Russia,' by Prince P. Potiatine. From the evidence of certain finds on his estate the author came to the conclusion: 1. That the Slav Scythians existed there in the stone period; 2. That they possessed instruments resembling those of the Celt Scythians and burned their dead; 3. That the old iron period of that neighbourhood was a continuation of the stone period; 4. That they supported themselves partly by hunting; 5. That they understood corn growing.

NEW SHAKESPEARE.—Nov. 12.—J. N. Hetherington Esq., in the chair.—Dr. Nicholson read papers on five points in 'Hen. V.' 'On the Emendation of "Gudea" for "Gard" on "IV. ii. 61" (strongly condemning the emendation); "On "Qualite culms culms me," IV. iv. 4' (contending that the changes of the first two words to "Qualite culms" were necessary); "Did Pistol my "Doll" or "Nell" in V. i. 74" (contending that Pistol called his Nell "Doll" as a name of endearment); "On Quickly's "a parted on it between Twelve and One, cu'n at the turning o' th' Tyde," II. ii. 12, 13, contending that the tide was that of the Thames, and not that of the day, as Staunton suggested.—The former interpretation was supported by the Chairman, whose mother knew a case in which a man was very near dying, and a woman in the room sent for an almanac to see when the tide turned that day, and told the bystanders they need not be afraid, the sick man would not die till the tide turned.—Mr. Furnivall read some Notes by Mr. J. Spedding on Deane's introduction to the "Familiar Texts" of "Henry V." contending that in the Quarto the night scene of III. ii. was meant to be moved forward to IV. ii., and made consistent with "the sun is high" tag to IV. ii. Mr. Spedding also urged that certain Quarto corrections of the historical mistakes in the Folio were due to the licenser of the volumes from which the Quarto was abridged. He also justified, as dramatic improvement, Shakespeare's unhistorical change of making the Dauphin present at the battle.

INSTITUTION OF SURVEYORS.—Nov. 9.—The President, Mr. E. Ryde, opened the season with an address.—Mr. B. Karis was elected a Member.

PHYSICAL.—Nov. 12.—Prof. W. G. Adams, President, in the chair.—Mr. Bouquet read a paper 'On the Nature of the Sounds occurring in the Bats of Consonances,' and gave the mathematical theory of the curves drawn by the harmonograph.—Mr. J. M. Gray read a long paper 'On the Mechanical Nature of the Forces called Attractions,' and explained them on the hypothesis of a universal ether pressure.—Prof. Arton and Perry read a note controverting the chemical theory of "contact" electricity enunciated by Herr Exner.—Prof. Minchin showed by experiment the photo-electric current set up by a beam of light falling on a sheet of tinfoil immersed in a solution of acid carbonate of calcium, the system forming a new photo-electric cell.

FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.—Nov. 12.—Mr. H. C. Coote, V.P., in the chair.—The Chairman read a paper 'On certain Stories in the "Thousand and One Nights." The tales referred to were 'The Two Envious Sisters,' 'Prince Ahmed and the Fairy Pari Bano,' 'Aladdin,' and 'Ali Baba.' The originals of these four tales have never been found, but as they unquestionably breathe the genuine Oriental spirit, they cannot be taken to be pure inventions of the French translator, M. Galland, brilliant as he was. Mr Coote held the opinion that they were taken down by Galland from oral recitations in Constantinople and Smyrna, in both of which cities he long resided. Mr. Coote supported his view by showing that identical stories are still orally told in Greece, from which country he believed they found their way long ago into Italy, where they are all favourites among the peasants. 'The Two Envious Sisters' has been probably current in Italy before and since Straparola's time, and the original is a well-known Hindoo story.—The Rev W. S. Lach-Szayma read a paper 'On Folk-lore Traditions of Historical Events.' The paper was divided into two portions: 1. English, and especially West of England, traditions of historical events and personages of importance; 2. Slavonic traditions of a similar character, which were compared with the English. Two of the most remarkable personages in Cornish folk-lore, Job Milton and John Tregagle, were real persons, around whose true history ancient Aryan myths had clustered. The traditions of Vikings, of the Jews in Cornwall, of the Spaniards and the Armada, and of several events in English history, were examined. A great deal more might be done on this subject, not only in England, but on the Continent, where the traditions of the French, the Italian, and especially the Greek peasants, if collected, would form curious fields of study. The conclusions suggested were that—1. These folk-lore traditions mainly refer to a period between the fall of the Western Empire and the First Crusade, the legends of the Cornish saints and the Arthurian myths belonging to an epoch which also is particularly fruitful in Slavonic legendary lore; 2. The true Middle Ages are singularly poor in existing folk-lore traditions of a secular character; 3. This comparative silence of popular tradition about the Middle Ages is the more striking when we consider the richness of the Renaissance epoch in folk tales. The cases of Drake, Milton, and Tregagle were compared with Faust and Twardowski. Most of these sixteenth or seventeenth century legends gather round stories of magicians.—Among those who took part in the discussion of these papers were Rev. J. Long, Messrs. Vaux, Nutt, Trousdale, and Gomme.

ARISTOTELIAN.—Nov. 8.—S. H. Hodgson, Esq., President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. W. A. Casson on 'Francis Bacon.'

NOTATION FOR THE READING: WEST

- [illegible]

Science Lesson.

PROF. J. J. SYLVESTER, at present of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, is well known as an industrious, highly ingenious, and profoundly learned mathematician, merits which the Council of the Royal Society recognized by the award of a Royal Medal in 1861. They have now conferred on him the highest distinction in their gift—the Copley Medal. Mr. Huggins, who has also had a Royal Medal, and who has done so much good spectroscopic work in his observatory on Tulse Hill, determining the radial component of the velocity of the heavenly bodies relatively to our earth, mapping the photographic spectra of stars, and showing that it is possible to detect the heat of the stars, is to have the Rumford Medal. The Davy Medal goes to Prof. Charles Friedel, of Paris, for investigations ranging over widely remote fields of chemical inquiry. Capt. Andrew Noble is to have a Royal Medal, in recognition of his mathematical researches and his application of them to physical questions of great importance, particularly his experimental inquiry (jointly with Mr. Abel) on explosives. And a Royal Medal is allotted to Prof. J. Lister for his numerous and valuable contributions to physiological and biological science, extending over thirty years. The presentation will take place at the forthcoming anniversary meeting of the Society.

Mr. GRANT ALLEN is about to republish in a collected form his papers on natural history which have been appearing in the St. James's Gazette. The volume will be entitled 'The Evolutionist at Large,' and will be published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus.

THE late Mr. J. Miers, F.R.S., during his residence in Brazil made a large collection of the insects of that country. This collection has been deposited in the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford, and is now being classified by Prof. Westwood.

As Faye's comet is still visible under favourable circumstance with a moderately good telescope, we give its approximate place from Prof. Axel Moller's ephemeris during the next fortnight, after which the increasing moonlight will again interfere with its observation:—

A. maculosa (Berthelin 1841).

Date.	R.A.	N.P.D.
Nov. 27	25 13 17	91 53
" 28	25 14 36	91 59
" 29	25 15 55	91 55
" 30	25 17 13	91 56
" 30	25 18 41	91 55
" 27	25 20 6	91 57
" 28	25 31 33	91 57
" 29	25 25 1	91 57
" 30	25 24 31	91 57
Dec. 1	25 26 2	91 56
" 2	25 27 35	91 56
" 3	25 29 9	91 56
" 4	25 20 44	91 56

It will be noticed that it is now in the constellation Pisces, and on the meridian about seven o'clock in the evening. It is not likely that much more will be seen of it after the last of these dates until the next appearance, in the year 1888.

THE small planet, No. 217, discovered by M. Coggia at Marseilles on August 30th, has received the name of Eudora, one of the Hyades.

Institut du Progrès et de la Vulgarisation Scientifique is the name given to an institution now in progress of formation in Paris by M. Léon Jaubert, who brought his scheme in the first instance before the Académie des Sciences in 1878. Investigators, students, and the public generally are to find an observatory with several telescopes and other instruments, a photographic laboratory, another for general physics, and a workshop for the construction of instruments ready for their use. Since December last this project has been in the hands of an influential committee, and M. Léon Jaubert has presented them with a list of the instruments which he engages to supply. All who desire to help this liberal scheme are requested to communicate with M. Léon Jaubert, Trocadéro, Paris.

MR. JOHN TROWBRIDGE, of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., has published some very interesting results respecting the behaviour of the earth's surface as a conductor of electricity, and its capacity for transmitting electric signals without the aid of a conducting wire. The experiments were made between Boston and Cambridge. It is stated that, on completing the circuit through a telephone and the ground, the existence of an electric current was plainly apparent from the ticking which the making and breaking of the circuit produced in the telephone, and that the time signals of the observatory clock were distinctly heard. Mr. Trowbridge concludes that theoretically it is possible without a cable to telegraph across the Atlantic Ocean.

MR. J. H. COLLINS has in the eighteenth part of the Mineralogical Magazine a valuable paper on the wood tin and tin capels of Cornwall, illustrated by good engravings.

M. AURN is attracting much attention in France by his new process of converting iron into steel, and producing an illuminating gas by the process. The iron is heated to 900° Cent. in a retort with coke or charcoal; fatty matters are then injected, and dry steam forced over the heated mass; thus steel of high quality is formed and carburized hydrogen gas evolved.

M. FAYE brought before the Académie des Sciences on the 2nd of November a memoir on volcanic thunderstorms. He refers them to the vast ejection of steam during the paroxysms of eruptive activity, in many respects resembling the discharges from the electrical steam boiler of Armstrong.

M. JANSSEN has placed all the instruments in the observatory at Meudon at the disposal of Prof. Bell, for the purpose of determining if the photophone is applicable to a study of the sounds which are supposed to occur on the surface of the sun. The result of some preliminary experiments is stated by M. Janssen to be hopeful in his notice brought before the Academy of Sciences on the 2nd of November.

Dr. F. BATTAGLIA-RIZZO invites the attention of naturalists to his recently published account of the finding of a large undescribed fossil bivalve at Termini-Imerese, Sicily. As seen in the lithographs which accompany the page of text, the strange relic resembles a gigantic oyster; the dimensions are 8 in. by 10 in.

The Journal of the Liverpool Polytechnic Society is devoted to a report of the sixth meeting of the forty-second session, which was occupied by a most valuable statement of experimental trials on 'The Strength and Ductility of Iron and Steel and other Materials,' by Mr. J. Armstrong, of Birkenhead. 144 pages are devoted to the publication of tables, the result of experiments with a testing machine, by consulting which the engineer will be enabled to avoid the use of uncertain material.

FINE ARTS

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is now open at THOMAS MILES Gallery, 5, Haymarket, next the Theatre—Admission including Catalogue, 1s.

WANDOVER GALLERY, 47, New Road Street Entrance from Madison Street - NOW OPEN the WINTER EXHIBITION of OIL PAINTINGS by English Artists, and of Original Drawings and Sketches for Poets.

DONN'S ORNATE WORKS, CHRIST LEAVING the PLATONIUM, CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM and MORE before PHARAOH, each 36 by 22 ins., with Legend of Pilate's Wife, Soldiers of the Cross, A Day Down, Rainbow Landscape (Lach Carron, Scotland), etc., at the DUNDEE GALLERY, 24, New Head Street, Inlay, Ten to Six.-1s.

ART FOR THE NURSERY.

Ups and Downs, All Smiles, No Frowns. By M. J. Tilsley. (Gardner, Darton & Co.)—This is a collection of coloured "cuts" with baby verses, suited for little children. The illustrations are weak, still they are rather pretty. The same may be said of the verses. The colouring of the cuts is more acceptable than the drawing. All the painted children are too small for the furniture and other accessories of the designs.

Another popular book comes to us with new illustrations; it contains Little Britain, The Spectre Bridegroom, and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, all by Washington Irving, with designs on wood by Mr. C. O. Murray. The cuts are numerous, very pretty in execution, spirited, and well adapted to the letter-press, to which they give additional brightness. The volume is published by Messrs. Low & Co. The same publishers have issued Pretty Peggy and other Ballads, illustrated by Miss Rosina Emmet. The cuts are printed in low-toned colours of a nondescript character; the greater number of them were designed with much animation; they abound in character, and little touches of humour occur here and there which are welcome. It is a capital book for a little girl or boy.—The Two Bears (Waterston & Sons), an illustrated legend, will suit children; the cuts are a little too showy and crude in colour, but they are not without a considerable share of spirit.

Among the gift-books with coloured illustrations none has yet come before us more agreeably than Afternoon Tea: Rhymes for Children, with illustrations by Messrs. J. G. Sowerby and H. H. Emmerston (Warne & Co.). It is a gracefully got-up little volume, enclosed in a pretty and very original cover. But the affectations of the writing, comprising false archaisms in what may be called the Icelandic manner, are regrettable. A considerable number of initial letters, in the Irish, Scandinavian, Anglo-Saxon, or some similar manner of design, are as pretty as they are elaborate.

In The Merry Ballads of the Olden Time, illustrated (Warne & Co.), some of the designs are very commonplace, although the birds and foliage which abound in them are commendable. Generally speaking, the coloured plates are crude and garish. Our Little World of Child-Life (same publishers) may be criticised in the same terms. The verses are better than those in the former volume. The pictures differ in execution. From the same publishers we have Aunt Louisa's Magic Modeller, two parts, a book of coloured cuts intended to be pasted on blocks and thus serve as models. The examples are good in their way, and would be likely to amuse very young children.—Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons send us Little Lottie's Picture Gallery and Papa's Picture Album, small books filled with very common woodcuts besides a few of superior quality.—Messrs. Griffith & Farran have published The Bird's and Insect's Post-Office, by Robert Bloomfield. This contains "letters" by the author of 'The Farmer's Boy' and his son, with nice little drawings of birds, some of which are first-rate, e. g., the sparrows and duck facing p. 48, the magpie facing Letter I. From the same firm we have received thirteen little books for children, copiously illustrated with wood engravings of unequal merit, and entitled Our Boys' Little Library and Our Girls' Little Library. The cuts seem to have been picked up at random, and provided with a few lines of description for each. Although rather "goody," infants will be thankful for the books.—Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons have also sent us With the Birds, poems by Mary Howitt, with capital drawings of animals and some pretty vignettes by Mr. Giacomelli. Songs of Animal Life is by the same author, published by the same firm, and deserves equal praise.—We heartily welcome Mr. R. Caldecott's spirited and pretty designs for The Three Jovial Huntsmen and Sing a Song of Sirpence. The designs are first-rate, full of grace and character, piquant in their wilful, "old-fashioned" freakishness. They contain very graceful and original motives, are capitally drawn, coloured with delicacy, and marked throughout by good taste. They are published by Messrs. Routledge & Sons, who have likewise issued a numerous collection of sketches made with ink and called Splashes of Ink, explained by G. and J. Lallie. Some of the landscapes thus for-tuitously produced are capital. The book will amuse girls and boys.

NEW BOOKS

We have received from Mr. Lefevre a proof on vellum, with the re-marks of the first state, from a plate etched by M. Rajon after Mr. Alma Tadema's beautiful water-colour picture called 'The Bath.' As the painting will be fresh in the memory of those who saw it at a recent exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours there is no need to describe the design. With characteristic skill M. Rajon has reproduced the draughtsmanship proper to his model—that is, the large style of drawing and modelling, the finely balanced tones of the flesh, clear and richly varied as they are, the flatness of the marbles, the strength of the contrasting bronze, and the perfect keeping of the carnations, the statues, and the wall. Nor has he been less happy in expressing the animation of the attitudes; the vivacity of the face of the lady who stoops while she looks up, enjoying the briskness of the little cascade which tumbles from her back, is of the truest quality; the morbidez of the nudities is perfectly reproduced. This is a real triumph of draughtsmanship. The re-marks in this case are the heads of the painter, his wife, and two daughters, and that of M. Rajon himself; the first wears a fillet, the last has drapery, something like part of a toga, cast over his head. The second re-mark consists of the heads of Mr. Tadema, his wife, and the damsel in the centre at the foot of the plate; the engraver's head and that of the damsel on our left having been removed. The third re-mark consists of the girl's head at the foot only. Of the first and second states there are, we are told, twenty impressions; of the third twenty-five; after these one hundred ordinary artist's proofs were taken. Then followed the prints.

We have received from M. Rajon himself a proof on India paper of the portrait he has recently engraved of Mr. Smiles, taken, we believe, from life, a successful portrait, full of character and animation, delicately and learnedly drawn and modelled, showing a fine sense of the contrasts of the flesh, semi-luminous as it is, with the texture and tint of the whiskers, the solidity of the tones of the coat. The "colour" of the print could not be better. We have likewise from the artist a similar portrait of the late Sir Rowland Hill, which, by its sharp and marble-like solidity, the firmness, crispness, and precision of the forms, and the monochromatic quality of the flesh, suggests that the type of the likeness was a sculptured bust. Another fine portrait is that which the same engraver has reproduced from Mr. G. F. Watts's half-length figure of Herr Joachim, which, being painted some years ago, represents the musician in his middle age. The picture is well known as expressive and painter-like; it is one of a class which includes as many as may be of the noteworthy men of letters and art of this time. We have already named most of this noble group of portraits. Herr Joachim holds a violin with one hand, while, slowly drawing the bow with the other, he evokes notes from the instrument to which, in their profound sedateness, the attentive features seem to listen, and the absorption of the senses is marked upon the face. A fine and sober piece of chiaroscuro in the mode of Tintoret, the solemnity of the picture is in harmony with the solemnity of the design, of which that chiaroscuro is an essential part. The massive face and its rapt air pertain to the design. M. Rajon, by subtle and careful study of this chiaroscuro, has preserved the motive of the work while he reproduced the peculiar technique of the painter, which combines some of the softness of Guercino with the thoughtful type of Robusti's art. Set as they are, and absorbed in the music, there is mobility in the ample lips and bulky, meditative brow. It is a work of art which grows upon us while we study it. It is one of the most "musical" of portraits. The re-mark is a portrait head on our right, a sketch of village and mill on our left.

Messrs. R. Tilley & Co., 118, Talbot Road, Bayswater, have sent an artist's proof of a plate etched by M. L. Richeton as a portrait of Mr. Spurgeon. It resembles a picture by one of those painters whose productions so terribly exercised the mind of Hogarth. Basso in his most murky mood was never a "darker master" than the etcher of this piece of false "effect." Lack of power, superficial reading of character, crude and uncultivated draughtsmanship, mar a work to which the printer has imparted tone, and in which ink does duty for force and subtlety. Of drawing properly so called there is none to be seen.

An artist's proof of a mezzotinted plate by Mr. S. Cousins has been sent to us by the Fine Art Society. It reproduces with exceptional success the pretty head of a little girl called 'Ninette,' which was painted by Greuze, and is more than usually enjoyable because the picture is quite innocent of those under-meanings which are but too frequent in Greuze's girls. This child is as naive of aspect as childhood could make her, and the painter's power was never better employed or more effectually proved than by this example. The print charms with its candid eyes, pure lips, and air of absolute repose in simplicity. From the same publishers we have a re-mark proof of a plate, being a portrait by Mr. Herkomer, taken from a picture for which Mr. Ruskin sat to him. It is an excellent and successful representation of the features of the critic when meditating and in repose. The last characteristic is seldom seen in Mr. Ruskin's energetic and excessively mobile countenance, which reflects the workings of an ever-active, combative, and sensitive mind. There is, therefore, something unusual in the expression of the face, and this, while it is not untrue, interferes with the satisfaction of the observer. Except a portrait which was long ago produced by a very distinguished painter, but never engraved, this plate is, it appears, likely to supply posterity with an answer to the question, "What was Ruskin like?" As an engraving, it is essentially a mezzotint. The workmanship demands almost unmixed praise; it is clear, solid, luminous, broad in effect; the eyes, in differing, are especially well drawn, but we think the side-long position of the mouth is somewhat exaggerated; the handling of the shaded side of the face is capital. The scale of the plate, being unusually large, gives exceptional importance to the publication. The re-mark, on thirty impressions, is a finely-drawn figure of Justice, seated, and bandaging or uncovering her eyes; the artist's proofs are signed by him, and seventy-five in number. One hundred autograph proofs bear Mr. Ruskin's signature.

NOTES FROM NAPLES

Naples, Nov. 8, 1880.

EXCAVATIONS have been carried on for some months in the ancient Sybaris, the results of which have from time to time been very rich. It is announced now that three plates of gold of different dimensions, with inscriptions in Greek, have recently been discovered there. They are now in the National Museum in this city, and having been examined by Prof. Comparetti, the inscriptions are supposed by him to be a sacred hymn relative to the condition of the souls of the dead. They are founded on the mystic Orphic doctrine, and seem to be part of the sacred book of the initiated in those mysteries, which were much in vogue in the last years of Athens when she was free, and were rapidly diffused, first in Magna Græcia, afterwards in Etruria, and finally in Rome, where they were severely and rigorously opposed by the government.

I must not omit to speak of excavations which are being made in the Island of Capri, where the subsoil is one mass of ruins. The results in this instance are not of any artistic importance. A native of the island, wishing to build a house on a small property belonging to him, on turning up the ground discovered a vasca, or reservoir, 42 palms in length, 17 palms in width, and of a considerable depth, which it is difficult to measure as it is full of debris. It belonged to an ordinary dwelling-house, of which the traces of several chambers remain, but no mosaic floors have been found, and few marbles. The only object of art worth mentioning is a small statuette, or bust rather. Little vases of terra-cotta were matters of course. As it was evidently not a house of the first order, every one must be struck with the provision made for the water supply, thus marking a broad distinction between modern Italians and their ancestors. Close to the site of which I have spoken are the remains of a Roman villa, which have for some time been laid open. Much yet remains to be done in the same ground; and, judging from the rich marbles which have already been discovered there, the labour of the archaeologist would be well repaid. H. W.

THE ANCIENT PHAROS AT ALEXANDRIA.

Cairo, October, 1880.

Since sending my former note upon the site of the Pharos, I have seen on the first page of Prof. Ebers' 'Egypt' an engraving of the tower as it stood entire. I am curious to know whether this engraving has any historical value, or is a mere fancy sketch from Abdellatif's description. But there are two points which deserve notice: First, that the position and shape of the doorway in the engraving correspond with those of the doorway in the keep of Kaitbey's fortress at present; secondly, that the walls of the basement story of the Pharos are represented as "battering," and that the walls of the keep also batter. I have seen no other instance of battering walls in Arab architecture, and if the engraving is really historic, the conclusion would seem to be that the keep of the fortress was actually the basement story of the Pharos. Perhaps Prof. Ebers or his publishers can resolve the doubt.

But another interesting question has occurred to me. Before I received the engraving, I was one day looking at a minaret in Cairo, and having Abdellatif's account of the Pharos fresh in mind I was struck by the remarkable coincidence between the details of the minaret before me and those of the Pharos in his description. He says the Pharos stood at that epoch in four stories, the first square, 121 cubits in height, the second octagonal (81 cubits), the third round (31 cubits), and, lastly, a "lantern" (10 cubits). The minaret also rose in four stages, square, octagonal, round, and on top a lantern or small cupola. Since then I have noticed dozens of other minarets with the same four divisions in the same order, and have no hesitation in saying that Abdellatif's description of the Pharos is, in all except absolute altitude, the typical description of the early minaret. In fact, it is quite exceptional in Cairo to find an early minaret which does not reproduce in miniature the colossal tower of Sostratus. So singular and so universal a coincidence cannot be the result of accident. It must be remembered that the Mohammedan conquest of Egypt took place shortly after the Hegira. There is historic evidence that the Pharos existed for at least six hundred years subsequently, and I have no doubt whatever that it served as a model for Mohammedan architects. The Pharos is the origin of the minaret.

ALFRED J. BUTLER.

FINE-ART SOCIETY.

THE private view of the exhibition of cabinet pictures in oil, Dudley Gallery, is appointed for to-day (Saturday), the gallery will be opened to the public on Monday next.

THE International Committee which is trying to influence public opinion in favour of the preservation of St. Mark's, Venice, has issued a statement and list of those who have agreed to support its objects. These are stated in an eloquent circular written by Mr. Street, which recounts the unfortunate fate of the Fondaco dei Turchi and that church of Sta. Maria at Murano which was second only in interest to the Fondaco itself. The former, which was dear to all who saw it as well as to those who read 'The Stones of Venice,' has been entirely rebuilt; the church has been so restored that its facade has lost almost all its charm of colour. Now no one cares to see either building. The basilica of St. Mark has suffered in various ways from the same kind of treatment; the northern facade has been refaced, and all its architectural charms, all its historical value, have been effaced; the southern facade has met with the fate of its neighbour; the old pavement within has been renewed, the mosaics of the baptistery have been almost entirely replaced by new, and each of these operations has had the effect of making the new work unlike the old work and wanting in nearly all the qualities which gave it interest. Further operations on St. Mark's were, for a time at least, stayed by the memorial in which English and French artists and statesmen united to deprecate the attempt to change old lamps for new. To endeavour to avert by all possible means the continuance of these deplorable proceedings is the object of the Committee, who wish to promote the sympathetic co-operation of those numerous and influential Italians who hold the same views as their own, to maintain all possible respect to the sentiments of the Italian nation, without taking exception to what are plainly necessary repairs to St. Mark's. The names of the Committee include those of MM. Alma Tadema, T. Ballu, and Baudry, Membres de l'Institut; C. Blane, W. Bode, F. W. Burton, Châtelain-Lacour, Cecchetti, Director of the Archives, Venice; Chardon, Membre de l'Institut; E. Christian, Dohme, C. Garnier, J. L. Gérôme, J. J. Henner, J. P. Laurens, J. E. Leprieux, J. R. Lowell, W. Von Lübke, J. L. E. Meissonier, G. W. Reid, J. Ruskin, M. Thannung, O. Voemmer, J. Tourniquet, C. Yriarte, and the Conte Zorn, whose able pamphlet on this subject was epitomized in these columns soon after its publication. The secretary is Mr. H. Wallis, 9, Buckingham Street, Strand.

MR. ALMA TADEMA has just received from the Berlin Exhibition a small and extremely brilliant picture, which, with others, he proposes to exhibit in London during the next season. It is a new and improved revision of the famous 'Claudius,' of which M. Rajon made an etching. Considerable changes have been introduced. The trembling emperor has been placed with greater effect and expressiveness amongst the folds of the curtain; the action of the saluting legionary is more demonstrative; more figures have been introduced, thus giving a more forcible representation of the subject. A new and telling element of the background consists of a row of busts of the earlier Cæsars placed against the wall, and crowned with laurel. A prodigious improvement has been effected by dispersing the light and shade in a stronger contrast, with greater brilliancy of lustre and colour. The chiaroscuro has been strengthened by subtle combinations of the local colouring with the lights and shadows, thus enhancing the effect and vigorous tonicity of the picture in a most remarkable manner. The same artist has likewise in hand two pictures, showing differing modes of treating the same subject, the parting of a Roman youth and his mother. The backgrounds differ in materials as well as in motives; the effect of one picture is independent of that of the other; the schemes of colour vary an-tirely. The attitudes of the figures are nearly alike, but there is a considerable change in the expressions.

MR. WHISTLER has returned from Venice, after an absence of more than a year, with a series of etched plates, which will be on view to-day (Saturday) at the Fine-Art Society's gallery, 148, New Bond Street.

THE session of the Society of Antiquaries of London will open on Thursday next, the 26th inst., when Mr. John Evans, F.R.S., F.S.A., will give some account of the Prehistoric Congress at Lisbon, where he attended as a delegate of the Society. The Rev. J. E. Warren, B.D., will give a description and exhibit seven photographs of the famous Stonehenge. Miss Rom Wallis's coloured drawings of the Ashburnham Book of the Gospels will also be on view.

NOT only on Thursday evening, but during the whole of next week, Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries and their friends will have an opportunity of seeing at Burlington House, between the hours of ten and four, the famous old tapestry from St. Mary's Hall, Coventry—30 feet long by 10 feet deep—which has been sent up to London to clean and repair. This tapestry has been fully described by Mr. George Scharf, F.R.S., in the Archæologia, vol. xxxvi. p. 438. The historical portion of it is supposed to represent Henry VI.—or, as some think, Henry VII.—and his Queen and Court. On its removal from Burlington House, this tapestry will be exhibited at the South Kensington Museum.

THE autumn exhibition of the Arts Association of Newcastle-upon-Tyne closed on the 4th inst., after having been open two months. About 700 pictures were exhibited, of which 135 were sold in the district for 5,200l.

AS if to confirm the fears expressed in Paris and repeated in our columns lately, a fire, happily of no great extent, broke out in one of the official chambers under the Louvre on Sunday week. It was soon extinguished.

M. DUPRE has nearly finished an elaborate monograph on the life and works of Martin Schoengauer, illustrated by numerous photographic reproductions by M. Durand. Among these are some examples of great rarity which are now in the British Museum.

THE death is announced of M. de Sauley, a Senator under the Empire and a Member of the Institute: he died of apoplexy. M. de Sauley's fame as a numismatist was world-wide. His amiable character won the affection of all who came in contact with him.

AN amusing story is related by some of the continental artistic journals, which we may translate without attesting its truth. Herr Munkacsy was not long ago walking in one of the streets of Karlsruhe, when, in the window of a picture-dealer's shop, he noticed a horrible daub bearing his own name. Entering the shop, he demanded of the proprietor his authority for naming the painting. An off hand reply brought a few hot words from the artist, and after these, "with a vigorous shove he sent the Jew rolling to the bottom of his shop." The police then appeared.

MR. JOHN COLLIER is engaged upon a Primer of Art, which will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co.

HERE is a note, from Gray Road, Colchester, on Constable's picture.—"Perhaps the last ten years' history of the picture by John Constable, R.A., lately removed from the church of Nayland, Essex, to undergo the trying ordeal of restoration, may interest your readers. A description of the picture may be found on p. 21 of the 'Memoirs of the Life of John Constable,' by C. R. Leslie. It was painted in 1809, and was placed in an oak reredos, where it remained till its removal in 1869, at which time it was in an excellent state of preservation. Our history begins with its removal: it was then decided to erect a Cæsar stone reredos, and the picture was to be consigned, perhaps, to the limbo of oblivion. But the parishioners decidedly objected to the proceeding, and demanded the restoration of the painting. The late Mr. Humphrey Baker, architect and stonemason, of Colchester, was entrusted with the designing and execution of the reredos, and the picture was placed in the stone in the manner of glass between the mullions of a window, quite unprotected at the back from damp. I had occasion to visit the church towards the completion of the job, and at once pointed out to the vicar the value of the painting, and the fact that certain and speedy destruction awaited it. I could not gain much attention, and it was left to its fate. At the time of the gathering of Constable's works at the International Exhibition I wrote to the vicar, again pointing out the damage the picture must sustain, and asked that it might be removed from its dangerous position and lent for exhibition, assuring him that it would command great interest, and offering to fill the space, free of cost, with a suitable design during its absence. I received a post-card with a very curt reply, that 'the picture could not be spared for the International under any circumstances.' Again, a year later, I wrote, enclosing a promised extract from the before-mentioned 'Life of Constable,' and implored him to remove the picture, offering to superintend the removal and to provide a zinc or lead case to lap over the back and edges of the picture as a protection from damp. This time I received a reply, thanking me for the enclosure, promising to have it copied and placed in the church chest, and promising to act on the advice given for the preservation of the picture. No steps were, however, taken, and, the vicar shortly removing, the picture was left in its place to rot. I trust that it may yet come fairly well through its danger, and find a resting-place secure from its enemy. Might it not, however, be placed upon the walls of South Kensington Museum for a short time, as an interesting specimen of our great countryman?—CHARLES E. BASKETT." We have received several letters from possessors of portraits by Constable. The statement that Constable painted only two portraits was made by the local paper we copied, and not by us.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Mrs. MARIOTTI's.—'Lucretia Borgia' and 'Il Barbiere.'
CRYSTAL PALACE.—Goetz's Pianoforte Concerto.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Mr. Cowen's First Concert.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—The Popular Concert.

MADAME GIOVANNONI ZACCHETTI's impersonation of Lucretia Borgia on Thursday week did not result in any improved estimate of her qualifications, but it was, on the whole, a creditable if not a great performance. The artist's vocal and dramatic powers are adequate, she has no marked defects, and it seems probable that she will give a fair amount of satisfaction in any part she may undertake without creating that special ferore which it is only in the power of the greatest singers to evoke. Signor Runcio has little of the ensuiter in modo, and his Gennaro is more remarkable for energy than for refinement. His voice has greatly improved of late, and it would be worth his while to give a little attention to the art of phrasing, and the production of the mezzo voce. Signor Ordinas is roughly effective as the Duke, but his style of singing is very coarse and unpolished. Madame Trebelli was the Maffio Orsini on Thursday, but at the repetition performance on Monday the part was taken by Madame Amadi, a new-comer. This latest of Mr. Armit's débütantes has an excellent mezzo-soprano voice, but appears to lack the most elementary knowledge of vocalization. The forcing of the chest register was most painful, and if persisted in will result in irretrievable injury to the voice. The audience on Monday was the smallest of the season, and it would seem that the public no longer takes any interest in Donizetti's ridiculous opera.

Rossini's 'Il Barbiere,' the only one of the composer's Italian operas which is likely to endure, was given with a poor cast on Friday week. Mlle. Elise Widmar cannot render justice to the music of Rosina, though her faults are due chiefly to inexperience, and she may be reasonably expected to improve. Signor Vizzani's Almaviva was little short of a caricature. His unmanageable voice compelled him to sing most of the florid passages in falsetto, and his intonation was often painfully inaccurate. On the other hand, Signor Aldighieri gave a reading of the part of Figaro superior to any we have witnessed of recent years. This gentleman is one of the most cultivated artists now on the lyric stage, but he mars the effect of his performances by his evident self-consciousness. He addresses the audience instead of his companions on the stage, and the slightest applause induces him to advance to the footlights and bow his acknowledgments. Signor Aldighieri is comparatively a stranger here, and it is but kindness to inform him that although these things may be still tolerated in Italy they are offensive to the better portion of London audiences.

The only important novelty at the Crystal Palace last Saturday was the first performance of Hermann Goetz's posthumous Pianoforte Concerto, which has lately been published. It was originally arranged that the work should be played at the second concert of the series by Herr Ernst Frank, of Hanover, the composer's intimate friend. The illness of Herr Frank, however, prevented his intended visit to this country, and the performance was postponed till another player could be found. It would have been a cause for much regret had the concerto not been given; for it indisputably ranks among the best and most poetical of the lamented composer's works. In regard to form it gives us but little that is new; for Goetz, though a most individual thinker, was no revolutionist; and, we think very wisely, he has contented himself with the classical model of a concerto, as established by Mozart and Beethoven, and enlarged by Mendelssohn and Schumann, rather than attempt to strike out a new path for himself. In this he has followed the examples of his great predecessors; for with them artistic forms are the result of gradual organic development, not of a spontaneous or arbitrary growth. The only departure from the usual form is the placing an introduction before the finale; and for this a precedent may be found in Mendelssohn's Concerto in e minor. Goetz's concerto is distinguished more especially by two prominent features—the extreme freshness and charm of the melodic ideas, and the skill of the polyphonic writing for the orchestra. So important, indeed, is the orchestral portion of the music, that the work might almost be described in many parts as a symphony with pianoforte obbligato. The general tone of the music is distinctly romantic; the themes, especially in the first and second movements, are of great beauty, and are admirably treated. The solo part was played by Mr. Charles Halle, one of the safest pianists now before the public. His performance was characterized by his usual finish and refinement, but he might with advantage have infused a little more warmth into his rendering. The rest of the concert, which was uniformly good, requires no detailed notice.

The first of Mr. Cowen's four orchestral concerts, which have been already announced in these columns, took place at St. James's Hall last Saturday evening. An excellent orchestra of about sixty performers, led by Mr. V. Nicholson, was engaged, and the programme which Mr. Cowen offered his patrons was in every respect admirable. In addition to such familiar works as Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, and the Overtures to 'Aurora' and 'Ruy Blas,' three pieces were performed for the first and one for the second time in London. Among these a new Overture (to 'Corinne'), by Mr. Julian Edwards, claims the first notice. One of the most praiseworthy features of Mr. Cowen's scheme is his promise to produce at least one new work by an English composer at each concert, and to examine and select from the works submitted to him without reference to the artistic reputation of the composers. Mr. Julian Edwards, whose name is entirely new to us, is, we learn from the programme, a young man of twenty-two, and his Overture to 'Corinne' is the prelude to a three-act opera of the same name. It shows undoubted talent, and a fair amount of originality; but it is the truest kindness to Mr. Edwards to tell him in the plainest possible terms that, as regards the technique of composition, he has nearly everything to learn. His ideas of form and of thematic treatment seem to be of the vaguest description; whilst his instrumentation is far too noisy—a very common fault with young composers, who would do well in writing to remember that "speech is silver, but silence is golden." The greatest effects are often produced with the fewest notes. We do not know whether Mr. Edwards has received any regular instruction in composition—from his overture we are inclined to think he has not—but the wisest thing he can do is to put himself under a good master for a thorough course of training. A second novelty was M. Benjamin Godard's Concerto Romantique for the violin, played for the first time in England by M. Ovide Musia. Two of M. Godard's compositions were introduced by Mr. Ganz at his last series of concerts in St. James's Hall, and were received with much favour. The new concerto is not less interesting than the other works which we have heard from the same pen. The work is somewhat irregular in form, containing four movements instead of the customary three, the additional number being a cannonetta placed between the adagio and the finale. The concerto is thoroughly French in its style, and its subjects give evidence of considerable individuality of thought. The first allegro and the cannonetta are the most interesting portions of the music, the adagio being slightly dry and considerably spun out, while the finale, though by no means without merit, is, on the whole, less striking than the movements we have named. M. Musin gave an intelligent rendering of the music, but his tone is not remarkably fine, while frequently his intonation was painfully faulty. The third novelty of the evening was a selection from Brahms's new set of Hungarian Dances for pianoforte duet, played by Mr. Oscar Beringer and Mr. Cowen. These graceful little pieces are similar in style to those in the earlier set, now so well known, and will probably become popular. Mr. Oscar Beringer's Andante and Presto for piano and orchestra was noticed by us on the occasion of its recent performance at the Crystal Palace. We have nothing to add to what was then said, and must content ourselves with once more eulogizing Mr. Beringer's admirable and most artistic playing. The orchestral performances, under Mr. Cowen's direction, were marked by great correctness of detail; yet they can hardly be called wholly satisfactory, as there was a want of life and spirit in them. The effect was somewhat similar to that which would be produced by a very fine piece of machinery. The vocalists of the evening were Mrs. Osgood and Mr. Santley, both of whom were warmly and deservedly applauded. We heartily wish Mr. Cowen success in his excellent and spirited enterprise.

The programme of the first Saturday Popular Concert was attractive, including Schumann's Quartet in A, Op. 41, No. 3; Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata, played by Mlle. Janotha; Mendelssohn's Sonata in D, Op. 58, for pianoforte and violoncello; and Molique's Saltarella in A, Op. 55, for violin, played by Herr Straus. Madame Antoinette Sterling was the vocalist. On Monday Mendelssohn's Posthumous Quartet in F minor headed the programme. This work, for obvious reasons, is less popular than its companions, and this was only the third performance at these concerts. For musicians the quartet must ever possess a melancholy interest, as being the last concerted work of importance written by the gifted composer; and though it bears scarcely a trace of the vivacity and geniality most characteristic of Mendelssohn, it is emphatically a creation of genius, the adagio being especially fine. Mlle. Janotha gave a truly superb rendering of Chopin's Polonaise in F sharp minor. The Polish pianist is not invariably equal in her performances. Sometimes she adopts a dreamy and abstracted manner, which to the superficial listener may easily be mistaken for coldness of style. But on Monday she displayed unaccustomed power, and a more charming and effective interpretation of Chopin's beautiful work could not be imagined. Signor Piatti gave Valentini's Sonata in E, Op. 8, which he introduced last season; and the concert ended with Mozart's melodious Trio in E. Miss Annie Marriott contributed songs by Handel, Schumann, and Schubert.

Musical Gossip.

WALTER SCOTT'S 'Bridal of Triermain'—a story of chivalric and supernatural adventure, with a nucleus of the legend of the Sleeping Beauty—has been made the subject of a cantata. The composer is Mr. Emanuel Aguilar, and the work was produced at the Bedford Musical Society's concert of October 27th, and was received with marked favour.

As already announced in these columns, M. Alphonse Duvernoy's prize cantata, 'La Tempête,' was produced at the Châtelet theatre, Paris, last Thursday. The performance was private, only those invited by the Municipal Council of Paris being present. The work is to be repeated to-morrow, at one of M. Colonne's ordinary concerts at the Châtelet, and we shall give an account of it in our next issue.

At M. Paudeloup's Popular Concert last Sunday week a new violin concerto, by an almost unknown Belgian composer, M. Balthazar-Florence, was produced with much success by Mlle. Marie Tayau.

It is stated that M. Gounod has been offered the sum of 10,000 marks (500l.) to conduct two performances of his own music at Berlin, but that he has declined, on the ground that the rehearsals of his 'Tribut de Zamora,' which he is superintending, will render it impossible for him to leave Paris.

The celebrated flautist Jean Rémusat died in September last at Shanghai, at the age of sixty-five. He was one of the most brilliant pupils of Tulou, and for many years held the position of first flute at the Opera and at the Théâtre Lyrique in Paris. He composed a large number of pieces for his instrument.

Weber's 'Euryanthe' was revived at the Stadttheater, Leipzig, on the 7th inst. The principal parts were sung by Frauen Sachse-Hofmeister and Reicher-Kindermann and Herren Lederer, Schelper, and Wiegand. In spite of the nonsensical libretto, the opera, which most musicians agree in considering Weber's masterpiece, produced a great impression.

CARL FRIEDRICH WHITMANN, one of the most distinguished German musical theorists and historians of the present generation, died in Berlin on the 7th inst., at the age of seventy-two.

The committee of management of the Cincinnati (U.S.) musical festival have offered a prize of 1,000 dollars for the best composition for chorus and orchestra. Only native or naturalized Americans will be allowed to compete. The umpires will be Messrs. Theodore Thomas, Carl Reinecke, and Camille Saint-Saëns.

DR. OTTO BACH, director of the Mozarteum at Salzburg, has been appointed conductor of the orchestra to the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna.

HERR OTTO, of Leipzig, a member of the orchestra of the Gewandhaus Concerts, has constructed a new kind of double-bass, with five strings, the lowest of which is tuned down to C, thus avoiding the necessity which sometimes exists in modern music for double-bass players to alter the tuning of their instruments.

BURNSTEIN'S opera 'Der Dämon' was produced at Hamburg on the 3rd inst., under the direction of the composer. In the current number of the Musikalisches Wochenblatt the work is severely criticized, as undramatic, ineffective, and tedious.

DRAMA

LYCEUM THEATRE.

SOLE LESSEES AND MANAGERS, MR. HENRY IRVING
The CORICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.20 LOUIS and PARISIAN DRI FRANCHI Mr. IRVING at 12. 'BYGONES'
Revue opens at 7. MORNING PERFORMANCE OF THE CORICAN
BROTHERS, SATURDAY November 20th and SUNDAY November 21st at 12. Box Office (Mr. Irving) opens 10 to 5. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

Dramatic Gossip.

HOLCROFT'S comedy, 'The Road to Ruin,' has been revived at Sadler's Wells, Mr. Charles Warner resuming the character of Harry Dorn-ton, in which he has been previously seen at the Vaudeville. Mr. Warner's method is more suitable to comedy than to romantic drama, and the gaiety and recklessness of the young spend-thrift and his outbreaks of fierce penitence are distinctly shown. In the demonstrations of love for Sophia Mr. Warner is less successful, and the performance lacks balance. Mr. Lyons was good as old Dornton, and Mrs. W. Sidney struggled bravely with the unsympathetic rôle of Widow Warren. Miss Isabel Bateman was Sophia.

MR. H. A. JONES'S new comedietta, 'An Old Master,' which serves as l'essai de rideau at the Princess's Theatre, is well written and pleasantly conceived. A character of a footman who is at once conventional and impossible displeased, however, the audience, and the reception of the play was not altogether favourable. Mr. Jones's idea in the introduction of this character is good, but from the dramatic standpoint difficult of comprehension. Mr. Calhaem played with some pathos as the old master.

A REVIVAL at a Gaiety Matinée of 'Chrononhotonthologos,' a burlesque of Henry Carey, first produced at the Haymarket in 1754, had little interest. Such very moderate amount of mirth-giving power as the piece possesses needs for its expression a kind of acting wholly unlike that exhibited by the Gaiety company, some of the members of which are not at the trouble to speak correctly the names put into their mouths. If Mr. Hollingshead seeks to prove that the burlesque of past days is inferior to that of to-day, it is possible he may carry his point with the public. It is but fair, however, that the productions which are to be held up to derision should have an exposition equal to that assigned those it is sought to exalt at their expense. Though the original cast of 'Chrononhotonthologos' is lost, it is known that actors like Quick, Dowton, Lee Lewis, Parsons, Edwin, Luston, and the elder Mathews have taken part in the play. The present revival is the only performance since 1815 we can trace. With the burlesque Douglas Jerrold's 'Black-Eyed Susan' was given in two acts.

THE promised appearance of the Saxe-Meiningen dramatic company on the 30th of May next, at Drury Lane Theatre, will constitute the first visit of German actors to London since 1852. In the summer of that year a troupe headed by Herr Emil Devrient, and including Herr Kuhn and Herr Westphaler, played, with success so indifferent no temptation was offered to a renewal of the experiment, a twelve nights' engagement at the St. James's. Among the plays they then produced were Schiller's 'Robbers' and his 'Kabale und Liebe'; Goethe's 'Faust' and his 'Egmont'; Schlegel's version of 'Hamlet'; and a comedy by the Duchess Amelia of Saxony, entitled 'Der Majoratserbe.' 'Julius Cæsar' is, it is stated, to be the piece with which the new-comers will open.

AMONG the latest novelties at the Parisian theatres may be counted 'L'Article 7,' a three-act comedy of MM. Louis Bataille and Henri Feugère, at the Athénée Comique, in which Madame Macé-Montrouge reappeared, after a long absence from the stage; 'Le Mannequin,' a three-act vaudeville of MM. Gifford and Brébant, at the Déjazet; and 'Bestille-Madeleine,' 'revue omnibus en trois actes et six stations,' at the Fantaisies Parisiennes. The piece last named marks the commencement of the season of revues in Paris.

THE death is announced from Paris of Saint-Agnan Choler, a dramatist of some capacity, whose fame has, however, been swallowed up in that of his more prolific brother, M. Adolphe Choler.

M. WORMS, of the Comédie Française, has assumed the functions of Professor of Declamation at the Conservatoire, in place of M. Monrose, who has resigned.

A NEW adaptation, by MM. Elzéar and Leclerc, of the 'Bug Jargal' of M. Victor Hugo has been produced at the Théâtre du Château d'Eau.

M. GROFFROY has reappeared at the Palais Royal in 'Une Corneille qui abat des Noix.'

'LES BRAVES GENS' is the title of a new comedy of M. Edmond Gondinet, which is to follow 'La Papillonne' at the Gymnase Dramatique.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. H.—G. S.—B. S.—P. M.—P. B.—J. A. W.—received.
W. T. D.—We cannot answer such questions.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Just published, 62 pp. 8vo. sewed, price 1s. 6d.

A VISIT TO EASTERN CHURCHES.—A PASTORAL LETTER from the Right Rev. the Bishop of GIBRALTAR to the CLERGY and LAITY of the DIOCESE.

Oxford and London: James Parker & Co.

Just issued, 62 pp. 8vo. sewed, price 1s.

THE SCREW PROPELLER: Who Invented it?
By ROSE WILSON, F.R.S.E. Second Edition, with Appendix and Illustrations.
Glasgow Murray & Son. London: E. & F. N. Spon.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, price 1s. 6d.

TIT BITS for the TABLE. Excellent Recipes Collected during Thirty Years. By a LADY With Hints of Care for Public and Private Dining, and Useful Hints for Young Housewives.
London: Hutchinson & Co., Imperial Buildings, Ludgate-church, and all Bookellers.

PROFESSOR WACE'S RAMPTON LECTURES.

New ready, 8vo. 8vo. price 1s.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF FAITH, considered in EIGHT SERMONS preached before the UNIVERSITY of OXFORD in the Year 1879, at the Lecture founded by JOHN RAMPTON, M.A., Canon of Salisbury. By HENRY WACE, M.A., Professor at Lincoln's Inn, Prelate of Ecclesiastical History in King's College, London.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S MANUAL. A Little Book of the Contemplation of Christ, with borders round each page. Square fcap. cloth, 2s. 6d. A Fac-simile Reproduction of the Edition of 1877.

WARWICK, ARTHUR.—SPARE MINUTES; or Revised Meditations and Promissory Reminiscences. With Introduction by Rev. W. J. LOFTIE. Price 1s. 6d., prettily bound in gilt cloth, uniform with 'Divine Breathings.'

PALMER, W.—COMPENDIOUS ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY. New Edition. 18mo. cloth, price 6s.
Pickering & Co. 180, Piccadilly, W.

S. W. SILVER & CO.'S COLONIAL HAND-BOOKS, &c.

SOUTH AFRICA, including the Cape, Natal, Orange Free State, &c. Illustrated. With Coloured Map. Third Edition. Just out. 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND; including the Fiji Islands. Third Edition, just ready. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo. limp cloth, 40 pp., price 6s.

CANADA. With Coloured Map of the Dominion. Cloth, 4s. (In the press.)

THE AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S GUIDE. No. 1. SHEEP. Crown 8vo. limp cloth, 3s. 6d.—No. 2. CATTLE. (Shortly ready.)

AUSTRALIAN DICTIONARY OF DATES and MEN of the TIME. By J. H. KEATON. Royal 8vo. 80 pp., price 12s. 6d.

UPS and DOWNS: a Story of Australian Life. 32 pp., price 2s.

SOUTH AFRICA POCKET-BOOK. With Sheet of Sketches of Cape Somers. Season's Chart of the World, &c. Price 2s.

WEST INDIA POCKET-BOOKS. No. 1. LEEWARD and WINDWARD ISLANDS, and TRINIDAD, with Coloured Season's Chart of the World. No. 2. JAMAICA, MARTIN, CURA, the MARANAS, &c., with Season's Charts, &c., &c. No. 3. Price 4s.

THE COLONIES and INDIA, 20 pp., every Friday Evening, price 6d. contains Articles on Colonial Questions, Summaries of Latest News from the various Colonies, Special Correspondents' Letters, Colonial Inquiries and Answers, &c.
A complete List of Colonial Handbooks and Maps, post free on application to S. W. Silver & Co. 54, Abchurch-lane, London.

Just published, Second Edition, 8vo. cloth, gilt, price 6s.

DANTZICK; and other TALES. By ALBERT M. MENCKE, M.A. F.R.S.E. Call. Oxford.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"It is difficult to say which of the pieces is the best, but they are well and carefully composed, are very readable, and are quite interesting. 'Silent Love,' the longest poem, though not a new title is novel in its treatment and will be duly appreciated. We have pleasure in recommending the book."—Green

"There is an element of political, as well as of poetical interest in this volume of verse, entitled 'Dantzig.' The author responds to the theory that the true friends of Britain are the continent are Germany and Austria. It is not however necessary to assent to this view to be able to enjoy the spirited and musical verse in which the writer tells the story of the stirring episode in the history of Dantzig."—Scotsman

"There is an admirable rendering of Heine's poem, 'The Hogue of Burgoyne,' in 'Dantzig,' and other Tales.'—Graphic
"Many striking touches cluster round the history of Dantzig, but none more full of interest than that of John Van Eyck's marvellous picture, so long preserved in the Museum. The poet's founder is written with between of the living which is rationally ripe to a point of great merit, while the legitimate transformation of incident is carefully kept in view throughout. The language is quoted enough to show that the Dantzig tales, as told by Mr. Mencke possess much literary excellence."—Scotsman

Staple, Marshall & Co. Stationers' Hall-court.

READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

In 2 vols. 8vo. 6d.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART:

AN ACCOUNT OF THE WRECK OF THE SAILING SHIP WALKERSHIRE.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL,

Author of 'John Holdsworth, Chief Mate,' 'The Wreck of the Grosvener,' &c.

Vanity Fair.

"If one could conceive readily of such a queer combination as a great artist and stylist grafted upon an intelligent merchant seaman, we should get a good image of Mr. Russell's literary personality. We can only promise those who read the novel a few sensations such as they cannot often have had before. Along with all this artistic accomplishment, 'A Sailor's Sweetheart' is a healthy, honest, innocent book."

Graphic.

"It is possible that our estimate of Mr. Clark Russell's stories may seem extravagant to those who have not yet read them. It is, therefore, almost necessary to say that it is out of no inclination to give one grain of praise without ample cause that we have no hesitation in giving to the author of 'John Holdsworth, Chief Mate' and now of a 'Sailor's Sweetheart' the very highest place among all authors, living or dead, who have written of sailors and the sea. We are anxious not to qualify the thoroughness of our estimate by a single limitation. There are few things finer in the whole range of English fiction, from the days of Defoe downwards, than the account in the work before us of how the sailing ship Walkershire doubled Cape Horn. It is not like a powerful picture, but is a tremendous reality. If its author were half as good on shore as he is off it, and as much at home in love affairs as he is in sea-craft, his hands would be stronger than any one man's have a right to be."

New York Times.

"The time of the Marryat sea-novel has passed away, and 'Searcy' might find few readers to-day, for a sea-book such as Mr. Russell only writes has taken their place. Very certainly 'A Sailor's Sweetheart,' like 'The Wreck of the Grosvener,' will be read in many a drawing-room, as it will be devoured under the fore-hatch of more than one merchant-man."

Morning Post.

"Nobody who has not read this story can form any conception of the many wonderful episodes which cluster around the main facts, and all that remains to be said is that every reader with a healthy mind will find Mr. Clark Russell's latest novel one of the most exciting and engrossing of which it is possible to conceive."

American Literary World.

"Four years ago there appeared in England an anonymous story of sea adventure, entitled 'The Wreck of the Grosvener,' the exceptional merits of which the Literary World was the first, as far as we know, to discover and announce in this country. The like of it we did not expect soon to see, certainly not from the hand of the same author, so many are our disappointments over 'second books.' But we must say that in 'A Sailor's Sweetheart' Mr. W. Clark Russell has surpassed even 'The Wreck of the Grosvener,' and told a tale which, for originality of plan, inventive skill, descriptive power, and romantic interest, comes near to being the most remarkable marine novel we have ever read. The profound realism with which it is conceived, the technical accuracy with which its details are wrought out, the vividness of its pictures of storm and shipwreck, the individuality with which its characters are drawn, and its succession of exciting incidents, from the fog in the English Channel to the overhauling of the Eagle in the South Pacific, combine to produce a work of extraordinary power. In one sense, no narrative could be more sensational, but its style is so simple and straightforward that it reads like a veritable history. Indeed, the author assures us it is founded on actual facts. But only a consummate art could present such facts with such intensity of imaginative form. The scenes of this story live in our minds with the vividness of personal observation. The portraits of all the people on board are wonderfully well done. The interest of the story intensifies as it proceeds, and culminates by a remarkably ingenious succession of highly dramatic events. Not the least remarkable feature of this story is its incidental descriptions of marine landscape—especially the aspects of skies and clouds, some of which are so full of brilliancy and power as to make the reader think instinctively of the triumphs of Turner's pencil. We have purposely given but a bare outline of 'A Sailor's Sweetheart' in order not to spoil it for its readers, who, we trust, will be many. In its field it is a singularly successful performance, and, coming as it does after 'The Wreck of the Grosvener,' fixes its author's place in the front rank of nautical novelists in the English language."

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE & RIVINGTON, Crown Buildings, 188, Fleet-street, E.C.

G. BELL & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

TRADE, POPULATION, AND FOOD:

A SERIES OF PAPERS ON ECONOMIC STATISTICS

By STEPHEN BOURNE, F.R.S.,

Of the Statistical Department of H.M. Customs.

Demy 8vo. 12s.

MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS, IN CAPTIVITY:

A Narrative of Events from January, 1560, to December, 1566, whilst George, Earl of Shrewsbury, was the Guardian of the Scottish Queen.

By JOHN DANIEL LEADER, F.R.A.

Medium 8vo. 31s.

HORACE'S ODES.

Englished and Imitated by various Hands.

Selected and Arranged by C. W. F. COOPER.

Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

"This is an extremely good idea well carried out."

Notes and Queries.

"A very interesting compilation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SYLVESTRA:

STUDIES OF MANNERS IN ENGLAND FROM 1770-1880.

By ANNIE RAINE ELDER.

Author of 'Marie,' 'Marlette,' &c.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 31s.

With Frontispiece by H. Glacemell, and numerous Illustrations by J. D. Watson, A. W. Mayes, W. Friedrich, and others, handsomely bound in cloth, 700 pages, Imperial 18mo. price 3s. 6d.

AUNT JUDY'S ANNUAL VOLUME.

Edited by H. K. F. GATTY.

Containing a Serial Story, 'Princess Alertha,' by the Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.; and Contributions from J. H. EWING, ABIGAIL E. HOPE, C. S. CALVERLEY, F. A. FRANKS, M. F. O'MALLEY, Major EWING, the Author of 'Snap's Two Homes,' and others. Songs, with Music, by A. S. GATTY—Fairy Tales—Biographical Sketches—Verses—A Christmas Extravaganza, by A. S. GATTY—Competition Stories—Translations from the German—Book Notices, &c.

* Former Volumes may still be had, some at Reduced Prices.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. EWING.

WE AND THE WORLD.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

With 1 Illustration by W. L. Jones, and a Pictorial Design on the Cover. Small post 8vo. 3s.

NEW VOLUME by F. M. FRANK, Author of 'The Rose Garden,' 'Cartouche,' 'Unaware,' &c.

MOTHER MOLLY.

A STORY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

With 1 Illustration, by Chas. Green, and a Pictorial Design on the Cover. Small post 8vo. 3s.

OUR PETS AND PLAYFELLOWS

AIR, EARTH, AND WATER.

By GENTRUDE PATMORE.

With 4 Illustrations by Bertha Patmore. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Stories about animals if written with simplicity and vivacity are always pleasant reading, and Miss Patmore's history of household pets is one of the pleasantest."

St. James's Gazette.

4, York-street, Covent-garden.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW AND FORTHCOMING WORKS.

ETCHING and ETCHERS. By P. G. Hamerton. New Edition, Revised, with 45 Plates. Cumberley 8vo. [Immediately.]

The text of the New Edition has been thoroughly revised, and increased by one-fifth. Several new Chapters and a new Preface have been added, whilst matter which had become unnecessary or disproportionate has been removed to make room for studies of more importance.

LIFE of WILLIAM BLAKE. With Selections from his Poems and other Writers. Illustrated from Blake's own Works. By ALEXANDER GILCHRIST. A New and Enlarged Edition. With additional Letters and a Memoir of the Author. 3 vols. medium 8vo. [Immediately.]

The CHURCH of the FUTURE: its Catholicity—Its Conflict with the Athanasian—Its Conflict with the Deist—Its Conflict with the Rationalist—Its Dogmatic Teaching—Practical Counsels for its Work—its Cathedral. By ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Archbishop of Canterbury. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

RIQUET of the TUFT: a Love Drama. By Stopford A. Brooke, M.A. Small 4to. 6s.

"The author has a real power of poetic expression, and a vein of genuine melody."—Athenæum.
"The author of this little work shows himself considerably superior to the average of verse-writers. There are passages which even powers both of perception and description."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"We can, unhesitatingly, declare his work to be a poetical gem of the purest water. It is, in its way, unique."—Examiner.

The IRISH LAND LAWS. By Alexander G. Richey, Q.C. LL.D., Deputy Registrar of Feudal and English Law in the University of Dublin. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FOOD for the INVALID, the CONVALESCENT, the DYSPEPTIC, and the GOUTY. By J. MILNER POTTERGILL, M.D., Author of 'The Practitioner's Handbook,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

A VISIT to WAZAN, the SACRED CITY of MOROCCO. By ROBERT SPENCE WATSON. With Maps and Illustrations. 8vo. 10s. 6d.
"Is decidedly interesting and pleasantly told.....As a record of an independent and unprejudiced observer his little book is of value."—Times.

ISLAND LIFE; or, the Phenomena of Insular Faunas and Floras, with their Cause, including an Entire Revision of the Problem of Geological Climates. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Author of 'The Malay Archipelago,' 'The Geographical Distribution of Animals,' &c. With Illustrations and Maps. Medium 8vo. 18s.
"Island Life" is a work to be accepted almost without reservation from beginning to end....Whoever reads his book must be charmed with it."—St. James's Gazette.
"The work throughout abounds with interest."—Athenæum.

The ARYAN VILLAGE. Modern Village Life in Bengal.—The Agricultural Community in Ceylon—Supposed Rise and Growth of the Indo-Aryan Village System and Social Grades. By Sir JOHN PHILIP. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. [Immediately.]

The LIFE and LETTERS of M. T. CICERO. Being a Translation of the Letters in Mr. WATSON'S Selection. With Historical and Critical Notes by the Rev. G. M. JEANS, M.A. 8vo. 10s. 6d.
"Mr. Jeans's translation deserves to take its place side by side with Davies and Vaughan's 'Republic' and Church and Brodribb's 'Tusculan.'"
"The translation gives evidence of a great deal of labour and careful scholarship. The style is lifelike, and shows literary power; nor is it superfluous to add that it is for the most part really English and idiomatic."—Academy.

ENGLISH MEN of LETTERS. Edited by John Morley. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LOCKE. By Professor FOWLER.
"In the case of Locke's biographer we venture to say that Mr. Morley has been exceptionally fortunate. A pen more competent than Professor Fowler's for this particular work might have been sought and sought in vain."—Examiner.

WITH TWENTY FIVE ILLUSTRATIONS BY WALTER CRANE.
The NECKLACE of PRINCESS FIORIMONDE; and other Stories. By MARY DE MORGAN. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.
Also an Edition on hand-made paper. The Illustrations on India paper, limited to ONE HUNDRED COPIES. Fcap. 4to.
"The stories display considerable originality, and Mr. Crane's characteristic illustrations combine, with Miss De Morgan's pretty fancies, to form a charming gift-book."—Graphic.

A CHRISTMAS CHILD: a Sketch of a Boy-life. By Mrs. MOLESWORTH, Author of 'Carrots,' 'The Quacko Clock,' &c. Globe 8vo. Illustrated by Walter Crane. 4s. 6d.

PANSIE'S FLOUR-BIN. By the Author of 'When I was a Little Girl,' &c. Illustrated by Adrian Stokes. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.
"Worthy to be classed with 'Alice in Wonderland,' and in some respects is better adapted to juvenile comprehension."—Morning Post.

GUIDE to the STUDY of POLITICAL ECONOMY. By Dr. LUIGI COSSA, Professor in the University of Pavia. Translated from the Second Italian Edition. With a Preface by W. STANLEY JEVONS, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

STUDIES in DEDUCTIVE LOGIC: a Manual for Students. By W. STANLEY JEVONS, LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Political Economy in University College, London. Crown 8vo. 6s.
"It is indispensable to the many students of the higher logic."—Athenæum.

NEW NOVELS READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

By GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel' and 'Mirage.'

The HEAD of MEDUSA. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"The striking feature of this novel is the character of Count Cesco Lalli, a type of the modern Italian. ... We have some quarrels, indeed, with Mr. Fleming, which, did occasion serve, we might urge. But we prefer to take leave of this really fine work of art with an expression of sincere admiration and pleasure."—Pall Mall Gazette.

By WILLIAM BLACK.
WHITE WINGS: a Yachting Romance. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"Mr. Black can translate his vocabulary into an infinity of tints and tones. Nor do we know any living novelist who has more completely the gift of awakening the bodily senses through the medium of printer's ink."—Times.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
HE THAT WILL NOT WHEN HE MAY. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31s. 6d.

"There is a great amount of beautiful work in this book."—Athenæum.
"This is a novel which no one can read without pleasure."—Spectator.

By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.
LOVE and LIFE: an Old Story in Eighteenth Century Costume. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.
"This is a study in grey and amber, with just enough tint of a shadow in one corner to give brightness to the prevailing hues."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Now ready, 44 pp. 8vo. 1s.
CORRECTIONS, together with NOTES, CRITICISMS, RECENT MEASURES and DISCOVERIES, &c., to the HANDBOOK of DOUBLE STARS. The Bibliography has also been brought up to date.

A HANDBOOK of DOUBLE STARS. With a Catalogue of Twelve Hundred Double Stars, and extensive Lists of Measures. With additional Notes bringing the Measures up to 1879. For the Use of Amateurs. By EDWARD CROSSLEY, F.R.A.S., JOSEPH GLEDHILL, F.R.A.S., and JAMES M. WILSON, M.A. F.R.A.S. With Illustrations. 8vo. 21s.

"The volume is one which may be expected to find its way to the shelves of most amateurs and students of astronomy."—Nature.

"This is a truly delightful work, and one which will admirably supply a want. Into the hands of able, more impartial and painstaking observers and compilers than the authors its preparation could not have fallen."—Astronomical Register.

"Will be welcomed by all who take an interest in the subject of double stars."—Academy.

"The names of the authors, noted authorities on the subjects treated of, will lead the reader to open this volume with the feeling that in it he has a treasure of lore on the knowledge brought to light in the last hundred years respecting the relative motions of physically connected stars, nor will he be disappointed."—Athenæum.

"One of the most valuable additions to the library of the amateur astronomer that has been made for many years. It is full of information of perennial interest to the student and the practical observer, and assuredly ought to be upon the table of every single observatory in the United Kingdom, and of all those in other parts of the world where the language in which it is written is intelligible."—English Mechanic.

"The book is well and clearly printed, and we heartily recommend it to our readers as a most valuable contribution to the literature of double-star astronomy."—Observatory.

KEY to EXERCISES in EUCLID. By I. TODHUNTER, M.A. F.R.S., Honorary Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

The STORY of ACHILLES, from HOMER'S ILIAD. Edited, with Notes and Introductions. By the late J. H. PRATT, M.A. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Assistant Master at Harrow School; and WALTER LEAF, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

MACMILLAN'S PROGRESSIVE FRENCH COURSE. Third Year. Containing a systematic Syntax and Lessons in Composition. By G. EUGÈNE FASCHNACHT, Author of 'Progressive French Reader,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY LIBRARY.

The Directors do not consider it necessary to add to the following list of newly-published Works, for the sufficient reason that every book which Subscribers can reasonably demand is promptly supplied. This rule of the establishment applies not merely to English publications in the different departments of History, Biography, Travel, Fiction, and General Literature, but also to the extensive and constantly increasing Foreign Library, as well as to the Library of Vocal and Instrumental Music. At the same time, Standard Works of Reference which are never found in Circulating Libraries are daily added to the Reference Library.

The rapidly increasing List of Subscribers is a convincing proof that the public appreciate an institution which gives them, in addition to all the best features of a Circulating Library, the numerous advantages of a High-Class London Club.

ENGLISH SECTION:—

The Life of Sir Anthony Panizzi, by Louis Fagan—The Early Life of C. J. Fox, by G. O. Trevelyan—Italy and her Invaders, by Thomas Hodgkin—Baird's Rise of the Huguenots—Two Worlds are Ours, by Hugh Macmillan—Séguin's Country of the Pannon Play—Early Man in Britain, by W. Boyd Dawkins—Some Heroes of Travel, by W. H. D. Adams—Ingram's Life of Edgar Allan Poe—A Ride in Petticoats and Slippers, by Captain Colville—Rest Awhile, by Dean Vaughan—Travels in Albania, by E. F. Knight—A Trip to Manitoba, by Mary Fitzgibbon—Japan, by Miss Bird—The Ode of Life—A Visit to Wazan, by Robert S. Watson—Sketches of the Women of Christendom, by Mrs. Charles—Memoirs of Madame de Rémusat—Pictures from Ireland, by Terence McGrath—Soldiers of the Victorian Age, by C. R. Low—Senior's Conversations—The Evangelical Revival, by Rev. R. W. Dale—The New Truth and the Old Faith, by a Scientific Layman—Up the Amazon, by E. D. Matthews—A Tramp Abroad, by Mark Twain—New Guinea, by L. M. D'Alberty—Guizot in Private Life—Round About a Great Estate—Parker Gilmora's Ride through Hostile Africa—Renouf's Origin and Growth of Religion—Sketch of the Life of Elihu Burritt—Dr. Stoughton's Introduction to Historical Theology—Glimpses through the Cannon Smoke, by Archibald Forbes—Thoughts in My Garden, by Mortimer Collins—Mind in the Lower Animals, by Dr. Lindsay—Parables of Our Lord, by Dr. Calderwood—Byron, by John Nichol—Faiths and Fashions, by Lady Violet Greville—Mackenzie's History of the Nineteenth Century—Campaigning in South Africa, by Capt. Montague—Renan's Hibbert Lectures—History of Japan, by Sir E. J. Reed—Justin McCarthy's History of our Own Times—Memoirs of Sir James Outram—The River of Golden Sand, by Captain Gill—History of the Zulu War, by Frances Colenso—Browning's Dramatic Idylls—Kinglelake's History of the Crimean War (New Volume)—and all the Newest Works of Fiction as they appear.

FOREIGN SECTION:—

